New Center Underway

By NANCY ROONEY

The appearance of the Villanova campus has been altered dramatically by the rise of the new University Center located east of Kennedy Plaza. Construction of the long-awaited facility began in May and is expected to be completed around December, 1979, at a cost of approximately six million dollars. In addition to the building itself, site development and landscaping are planned to integrate and beautify the area.

Covering 70,000 square feet (approximately the size of 35 houses lined together) the University Center will be the hub of campus social and cultural activity. The facility will include a large multi-purpose room capable of accommodating 300 to 1200 people; a 200-seat movie cinema; an art gallery; a formal reception area; three meeting rooms for non-academic purposes; several student lounges; a game room equipped with billiards, table tennis and various electronic games; an informal sales area; a rathskellar featuring a huge fireplace, entertainment and dance stages and an attractive eating area; and administrative offices. Several student organization offices originally planned to be located in the building will not be included.

The position of University Center Director has been created by the University to coordinate the construction of the building. Newly appointed Director Marc Tuchman will supervise the interior design of the building during construction and will be responsible for the building's management. Several other professional staff members will also be hired to aid in the management and programming of the facility. In addition to the professional staff, there will be numerous student employment opportunities in the Center.

According to Tuchman, "The building itself will be nothing more than concrete, block and steel without the proper programming and planned activities." He believes the University has made a firm commitment to improving the quality of student life at the University and expects the University center to meet the cultural, social, educational and recreational needs of the entire campus community. He hopes the Center could be open from 7:30 a.m. to midnight with a full schedule of events and activities. Ideally, he envisions the Center "as a come-together kind of place for faculty, staff, and students."

Library Closes Stacks

By BILL GUERIN

One of the last quiet places to study is gone.

The bounded periodical section of Falvey Memorial Library, popularly known as the "stacks," has been closed to the student body as a study area.

As the sign on the shut door to the stacks indicates, this student retreat has been closed for "security reasons." According to the periodicals librarian, Mrs. Anne Marie Cunningham, they were forced to close the stacks primarily because of vandalism.

"Thousands of pages were being torn from the magazines by thoughtless individuals," Mrs. Cunningham stated. "Although this measure is an unfortunate one, it is necessary for the preservation of the periodicals for everyone's use."

Mrs. Cunningham stated further that many students were creating a fire hazard by violating the no smoking regulations. The comsumption of food and beverages in the stacks was also attracting unwanted insects.

Although the stacks are closed as an area for studying, the periodicals themselves are still accessible. These back volumes,

A&S Dean Selected

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

The Rev. John P. O'Malley, O.S.A., dean of the division of humanities at Merrimack College, has been appointed dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences at Villanova University, it was announced by Father Driscoll.

The appointment of Father O'Malley, 49, thus completes a six month search and selection process for a dean of the university's largest college.

Father O'Malley replaces Rev. Lawrence Gallen, O.S.A., who has been serving as acting dean since the resignation of Father Breslin last fall.

"It came as a complete surprise when Father Driscoll asked me if I was ready for the position," confides Dean O'Malley. "I accepted the job mainly because I consider the post to be a crucial and challenging one in any college or university."

Father O'Malley possesses a strong and diverse educational background in both teaching and administration. Three years after receiving his bachelor of arts degree from Villanova in 1950, he was ordained and assigned a position as instructor to Archbishop Carroll High School in Washington, D.C., later becoming chairman of the English department there.

He also taught briefly at Austin Preparatory School in Reading, Mass. and at Catholic University in Washington, D.C., where he received his doctorate (history and philosophy of education) in 1969.

That same year Father O'Malley joined the faculty at Merrimack where for seven years he was active in both student and faculty life serving as Dean of Student Activities, Moderator of the Student Government Association and yearbook, and member of the Student Personnel Committee.

In faculty affairs at Merrimack Father O'Malley was vice-president of the Faculty Senate for two years and a member of the academic congress.

Hopkirk To Head Poli-Sci

by MARIANNE LAVELLE

Dr. Priscilla G. Hopkirk, newly appointed chairman of the political science department, said that this year she hopes to provide a greater opportunity for political science students to know the faculty and each other.

Dr. Hopkirk assumed the responsibilities of department chairman when Dr. Robert W. Langran stepped down from the position last spring. Langran, who was chairman of the department for ten years, continues to teach political science.

One of Dr. Hopkirk's goals this year will be to overcome "the tendency for students not to identify with the department as such," she said. Her plans include open-houses, trips to Washington, D.C., and the formation of a poli-sci club for interested students.

A member of the Villanova faculty since 1967, Dr. Hopkirk teaches both graduate and undergraduate courses of state and local government, political parties, and urban problems.

Her educational background includes both graduate and und graduate work at Harvard Univ sity, where she specialised American government.

She has taught at seve colleges and universities, cluding Wooster, Wilson, a Skidmore, and was a member the planning staff of the New Yo Department of Commerce befo moving to Pennsylvania. Here, sh taught some classes at the Cam den brach of Rutgers Universit and Widener College befor coming to the Main Line.

Dean O'Malley Arrives

In 1976 he was appointed dean of the humanities division at Merrimack.

Besides his numerous roles as teacher and administrator, Father O'Malley acts as consultant to Harcourt, Brace, Jovanovich book publishers where he aided in the planning and development of a series of English textbooks.

In his three weeks at Villanova Dean O'Malley has been working hard to re-acclamate himself with a somewhat different Villanova from the one he left as a student in the early Fifties.

"I have been meeting both fo mally and informally with facul and administration," he said."I a particularly impressed with t enthusiasm, dedication, a background of the faculty."

Father O'Malley comes to V lanova with some definite a positive thoughts concerning t role of the arts and sciences pursuing a career in today's co petitive job market. Citing recent Time magazine survey co ducted at the University Rochester, and echoing his a dress at orientation, O'Mall reveals that he, along with t people polled in the surve strongly advocate pursuing A&S background. Orientation: A Learning Experience...

By TERRY O'TOOLE

More than 1500 first-year Villanova students took part in last week's Orientation program, the annual three-day introduction to University life sponsored by the Student Activities Office.

"We felt the program went very well this year," said Chris O'Neill, a senior civil engineering major and chairman of the student-run organization.

"Generally speaking, this is one of the best programs in the country," O'Neill added.

During the Labor Day weekend, 107 upperclassmen Orientation Counselors (O.C.'s) and 20 Administrative Assistants (A.A.'s) returned to campus for three days of leadership training and preparation for work with incoming freshmen and transfer students. Last Tuesday, new students met with their O.C.'s in groups of approximately 15 students to begin their indoctrination into Villanova.

Also offered this year was a separate Parent's Orientation, directed by senior Jane Scharle. Designed to meet the needs of parents while their son or daughter met with the O.C.'s on Tuesday, the program was called a success.

During the three days before the start of classes, new students were exposed to Villanova, by attending activities ranging from academic orientation and how-to-study workshops to a comedy team and live band in Mendel Field.

O'Neill cited senior chemistry major Tom Fox, in charge of the A.A.'s, as one of the primary forces behind the success of Orientation '78. Fox was largely responsible for control of the group's $30,000 budget.

Orientation is a self-supporting program relying on a $25 fee paid by incoming students for funds. This year, however, because of an experimental summer orientation, the Student Life Office will add some support to the group.

In the past, Orientation was an outgrowth of the Students Activities Office, but this year the group is applying for recognition as an autonomous student organization. A constitution has been drawn and submitted for approval, and O'Neill expected the change in status to come through in the near future.

O'Neill, who ran the program with the help of a 14-member steering committee, felt that Orientation has grown to a healthy size, and saw the need for the chairman to be a paid summer-worker in the near future.

"We have a student run organization," he said. "The freshmen are better able to associate with the O.C.'s, because they're in much the same position.

"The program we have now is really four days long," O'Neill added, referring to the Bowling Green football game, where the Student Activities office purchased tickets for the entire freshmen class, allowing them to attend with their O.C. groups.

O'Neill also praised the work of senior accounting major Tom Degnan, who directed the O.C.'s leadership training.

"This has been a learning experience for me," O'Neill commented. "I thoroughly enjoyed being in charge of this program."

...For Fewer Freshmen

By JOSEPH B. FINIO

Statistics obtained from the office of the Director of Admissions indicate a decline in the number of incoming freshman students this year at Villanova.

With 5,937 applications and 4,213 acceptances, only 1,463 students will comprise the Freshman Class, which is 163 less than last year's 1,628. Commuters number 504 compared to 603 in the fall of 1977. The resident population dropped by 79, leaving a total of 959 in the 1978 freshman class.

But in actuality the statistics do not reveal the true number of students in the above mentioned categories.

According to the Rev. Harry J. Erdlen, O.S.A., M.A., director of admissions, the number of on campus residencies last year and this year is 900. The discrepancy in the figures is due to the number of students that were unable to obtain on campus residences but who stayed in the area to attend Villanova.

Of the 38 foreign students who will attend Villanova this year as incoming freshman, 10 are foreign transfer students, said Father Erdlen.

When asked about admissions policy concerning time limits, the Rev. Robert M. Burke, O.S.A., assistant director of admissions, said that upon acceptance, those freshman desiring to live on campus should enroll as soon as possible.

Since there may be less available space in Commerce and Finance than in Arts and Sciences, the prospective freshman will be in a position of having to choose whether or not to come to Villanova at an earlier date, according to Father Burke.

Father Burke also said that a freshman commuter might have more time to decide about coming to Villanova since he or she will not be occupying space in the dormitories.

Some freshmen said that they came to Villanova because it had a good reputation and academic program and because it was far from home.

Villanova has a good academic and athletic image and students come to Villanova because they believe that they will get a good education, Fr. Burke said. Set apart from the inner city, the physical beauty of the campus also attacts prospective freshmen, but the students are the best selling point, according to Father Burke.

Driscoll To Head State Board

President To Lead College Association

VILLANOVA, PA — The Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., president of Villanova University, has been elected president of the Pennsylvania Association of Colleges and Universities (PACU).

Headquartered in Harrisburg, the PACU has a membership of 118 public and private colleges located throughout the Commonwealth. Together the member institutions enroll more than 500,000 students.

Father Driscoll, 54, is in his fourth year as president of Villanova. He was vice president for academic affairs for the ten years prior to his election as the university's chief administrative officer in June, 1975.

Since its founding in 1896, PACU has provided a forum in which college and university leaders can discuss their common concerns. Standing committees and special task forces of the Association operate to assess the impact of various proposals for funding and coordinating the delivery of higher education services within and throughout the state of Pennsylvania.

The new position will require Father Driscoll to speak on matters of public policy for the state's higher education community, and direct the many and varied activities of the association.

He brings to the presidency of the PACU a wide breadth of experience, both within the association and in related activities. Father Driscoll has served as vice president and member of the Executive Committee for the Association.

He is a member of the National Association of Boards of Education and the International Federation of Catholic Universities, and serves on the Board of Directors of the World Affairs Council of Philadelphia.

Before coming to Villanova, Father Driscoll was Vice President and Dean of Marrimack College in Andover, Massachusetts. He is a member of Phi Kappa Phi, the American Society of Christian Ethics and the Catholic Theological Society of America.

Father Driscoll's educational field is philosophy. He has both the master's degree and the Ph.D. (philosophy) from Catholic University. He is a native of Philadelphia.

UPDATE: CAMPUS POLICIES

Alcohol, Visitation, Vandalism

By CHUCK CULMAN

Visitation, the alcohol policy, and vandalism charges are three areas in which the student population should be especially interested.

The hours for visitation will be from 6 p.m. to 1 a.m. on Fridays and noon to 1 a.m. on Saturdays. The Sunday hours of noon to six have disappeared from the schedule. But according to Assistant Dean of Men Anthony Martin, this situation is only temporary.

Martin explained that this is the last year of the visitation "experiment." It will be the subject of evaluation by the Board of Trustees.

If found to be a success, this experiment (originally proposed by Father John Deegan, vice-president for student life) could lead to a weekly limited visitation policy. Unlimited visitation is not "in the foreseeable future," says Martin.

The major concern of the dean's office is vandalism and the question of security within the dorms. Of special interest are parties within the residence halls.

Ideally, each dorm should petition through their residence hall council, and submit a plan for any proposed social functions in that dorm. These plans must include some methods of insuring adherence to the visitation hours and providing adequate security measures.

"Student participation and student involvement are the main things," said Martin.

Last year the administration indicated its intention to review the University's alcohol policy. According to Martin, this pertained mainly to large gatherings in individual rooms.

"We do tolerate individual students, and few friends, drinking in moderate amounts," he said, but added that for larger parties, the students should make a request to the dean's office for the use of one of the lounges, and then ask for an exception to the policy for that event. He also emphasized the fact that the drinking age in the State of Pennsylvania is still 21.

This summer, about $21,000 was spent on repairing the damage done to the men's dorms alone. Most of this damage occurred in the individual rooms. The dean's office requests that a resident "gives us back the room as we gave it to him," said Martin. The students' best defense against charges for damage incurred before his occupancy is the room check forms, passed out last week.

Filling out these forms should be a joint effort, involving both roomates and the Resident Assistant. "The R.A. should have as much or more input to the form than the student," says Martin.

Charges assessed to the students of various halls for vandalism to public areas are here to stay, according to the dean. He feels that these charges should help establish peer pressure among the students, decreasing vandalism in those areas to the point where it would be insignificant.

When the maintenance department makes a repair in one of the dorms, a report is filed noting the location, time of repair, and whether or not the damage was obviously due to vandalism. In those cases where the dean's office agrees that those damages were the work of vandals, the residents of that particular area are charged for the repair. These charges are then periodically reported to the students involved.

The hope of the dean's office is to eventually bring down vandalism to the minimal point, at which time those repairs can come under the budget heading of "wear and tear."

The Fellowship Committee is now receiving nominations of members of the Class of 1979 for Danforth, Fulbright, Marshall, and Rhodes Fellowships and members of the Class of 1981 for the Harry S. Truman Scholarship.

The Danforth offers financial support to selected college seniors and Ph.D. candidates who seek to become college teachers. Some criteria include evidence of: motivation and discipline; personal characteristics contributing to effective teaching; academic accomplishments and intellectual power; concern for ethical and moral values. The Danforth Foundation requires GRE's. They may be taken on October 21 or December 9.

The Fulbright Fellowship is open to seniors, graduate students or recent graduates who are citizens of the U.S. and who plan a program of continued academic studies abroad. The proposed country must be an integral part of the planned study program. Adequate language proficiency is required.

The Marshall Scholarship offers to 30 college graduates the opportunity to study for two years at a British university. The selectors will look for distinction of intellect and character as evidenced by the candidate's scholastic accomplishments and by their other activities and achievements.

The Rhodes Scholarship offers to 32 Americans the opportunity to study for two years at Oxford. The basis of selection: literary and scholastic achievements; physical vigor; moral force of character and of instinct to lead; truthfulness, courage, unselfishness.

All nominations must be received in the Honors Office, Corr 101, by Friday, September 22. All students nominated for these Fellowships will be interviewed by the Fellowship Committee in October. Nominees must submit credentials required for these fellowships to the Honors Office by September 29.

Additional information, nomination forms, and nominees' credential forms are available in the Honors Office.

GRE Guide

PRINCETON, N.J. — Many minority students, entering their junior or senior years of college or already possessing undergraduate degrees, may be thinking about continuing their education in graduate school.

If so, Educational Testing Service (ETS) and the Graduate Record Examinations Board can help identify opportunities for advanced study.

Through the Minority Graduate Student Locater Service, developed by ETS and offered by the GRE Board, college juniors, seniors and graduates who are members of racial and ethnic minorities in the United States can make their intentions known to graduate schools seeking such applicants. There is no cost to students for this service.

Students sign up by completing the registration form contained in the GRE/MGSLS Information Bulletin. It is the same form used to register for the Graduate Record Examinations. The GRE are comprehensive aptitude and advanced tests used in the admissions process by many of the nation's graduate schools. Students need not take the GRE to use the Locater Service.

Because of the interest among graduate schools throughout the nation in attracting qualified minority students, it is likely that a student's name will be sent to a number of institutions. Because a graduate school may not wish to contact all students whose names it receives, students are not informed of the identity of those institutions to which their names have been forwarded.

Information students supply for the Locater Service file is treated confidentially and is released only to participating graduate schools and scholarship programs.

The Information Bulletin explains all students must know how to participate in the service. Copies of the Bulletin can be obtained at most colleges or by writing to MGSLS, box 2815, Princeton, N.J. 08541.

Grin And Bear It

At last, construction on the long awaited university center at Villanova has begun. The center is scheduled to be completed by January 1980 and will benefit the University community of the future.

But what about the community of today? We suffer through endless truckloads of dirt, concrete, stone and lumber not to mention the inconveniences the construction produces.

Already students are experiencing longer walks to class, congested sidewalks, and even fewer parking spaces than before. The question remains in many of our minds, what will happen when the Philadelphia monsoons arrive (or have they already) and the blizzards of 1979?

Some of us will sit now and wonder, is it all worth it? We at the VILLANOVAN have concluded that despite all of its inconveniences, downfalls and just plain dirt, the new University Center is a good thing.

Villanova students will finally have a place to go and "hang out," grab a quick sandwich (or hopefully a beer) or sit by a fire.

During the day commuters will be able to enjoy the relaxed atmosphere of several lounges, many eating places and a game room. In the evenings, resident students will have some place to go other than their room and the library.

All in all the new center when completed will benefit the Villanova community in a hundred ways, it is just a shame that some of us won't be around to see it.

J.C.B.

Dazed And Confused, But Hangin' In There

Last Thursday, shortly before noon, a tired and worn Orientation Counselor stood in the midst of the pit, his yellow shirt somewhat stiff and aromatic from three days of wear. People swarmed around him — some 1500 freshmen were joining half the resident population of Villanova for lunch — and in the madness he had lost his charge, the 15 campus newcomers who were experiencing the "joys" of college life first hand.

He stood and searched through the crowd for a familiar face, his hot sausage sandwich radiating heat onto his parched and thirsty body. Somewhere in the distance a plate was dropped. A girl screamed. The O.C. was staring off towards Austin Field when he realized that a slender young man had been standing next to him for some time.

Wearing his fashionable "Go For It" shirt and a bewildered look, the young man spoke to the O.C.

"Excuse me, sir." Someone lobbed a peach through the air, but the O.C. did not flinch. He was too weary to move.

"Yes," he looked at the freshman.

"Can you tell me how to get out of here?"

The freshman meant the cafeteria, of course, but the O.C. could not help but laugh, for he was wondering the same thing. Not that the physical layout of Dougherty Hall was baffling him, but the question of how to get out of here, out of Villanova, with his mental health intact had been plaguing him for several minutes.

He had schedules to keep, meetings to attend, forms to file, drop-add slips to sign, books to buy, bills to pay, friends to call, parties to visit, stories to write, deadlines to meet. His phone didn't work, his car leaked oil, he had 8:30 classes five days a week and he couldn't find his Orientation group.

"Can you tell me how to get out of here?"

Still, standing in the middle of the chaotic pit, he knew he would make it. He knew that he was learning, discovering how to cope with life, becoming involved, making friends, deveoping and growing as a person. That was what college was all about — becoming an individual and not a stereotype — and that thought made it all worthwhile. It was a good feeling to be back at V.U. He looked forward to the challenges of the upcoming year.

The O.C. directed the freshman to an exit and bid him farewell and good luck. Later that afternoon, two of his freshmen would drench him with water balloons.

WKVU'S New Image:

HOT OFF THE PRESS

By SUZANNE TAVANI

WKVU in an effort to really get the news "hot off the press" has purchased an Associated Press (A.P.) Newswire.

Although the station has attempted to acquire a newswire for the past three years, the real need for one presented itself last winter when the campus was without outside news during a three-day snow emergency.

Acquisition of the wire which costs approximately $1900 and is contracted for one year with two cut-off periods as determined by WKVU, was approved by Fr. Robert Martin, O.S.A., Dean of Student Activities.

Jim Coyle, WKVU news Director says that the wire is available for use to everyone in the University, and encourages all to see it. Coyle expects the wire to be the principle service of information for events happening outside of Villanova, to be reported on WKVU. Previoulsly all news stories were copied from local newspappers and then reported over the air.

One of the more interesting features on the wire is the "bell". Depending on the degree of emergency from one to five bells ring alerting the News Director to the story. Also, since WKVU acquired a special radio-wire, phonetic pronunciations of names accompany stories to facilitate pronounicing names over the air.

Villanova should appreciate the fact that it has a major newswire since the majority of colleges and universities do not have one. The wire should add an extra degree of professionalism to WKVU and the VILLANOVAN.

Professionalism is an important factor at WKVU these days. Coyle says, "the newswire will help also with a new identity of professionalism WKAU is striving to achieve. A degree of professionalism will help improve WKVU's efforts and its image on campus."

Center for Concern

By VICKY PARENTI

The Center for Concern, located in 208 Dougherty Hall, ext. 760, is a resource center providing information, reference materials, speakers and programs that deal with the issues of world peace and social justice. The Center was founded in the fall of 1976 upon the recommendation of the Vice President for Student Life, as a means of providing an opportunity for the students to develop a sense of social responsibility.

The new director of the Center this year is Ellen Kemeza, a graduate assistant in Religious Studies who is working for her Masters in Theology.

Ellen told the VILLANOVAN that she feels that the Center for Concern is a good place for students to round out their education by becoming familiar with the problems that affect the world around them.

Ellen continued, "It seems to me that the world is bigger than Villanova and that a student's education can't be just in accounting or corporate law, or just in theology; rather, it has to be related to the larger inter-dependent world. Part of being an educated Christian person involves making choices about values. If you are educated to the fact that people are being treated unjustly."

One of the major projects that the Center is planning for this year is a Social Action Awareness month to take place in November, the purpose of which is to educate and involve students in such human rights issues as world hunger, the question of priorities in defense spending, labor relations and racial injustice.

Ellen felt that students involved in the Peace and Justice Concentration will find much of the material at the Center has a direct correlation to their course of study and that the material will be useful to them.

Ellen encourages all students to visit the Center to pick up literature about various human rights issues, or simply to discuss these issues.

Also, Ellen will be writing regular feature articles dealing with human rights issues that the Center is involved with in the hope of initiating student interest and involvement.

As a final thought, Ellen added, "I realize that no one can have the same zeal about all issues, but I feel that the students would want to be exposed to these issues to see if at least one touches them and either do something about it, or at least learn about it."

Mari-Nay: A Ghost of V.U. Past

Mari-Nay Diner mural depicting Main Line colleges of the past.

By VALERIE FENDRICK

Did you know that the Mari-Nay diner on Lancaster Ave. in Overbrook was once as popular as Sally's bar?

"Thirty years ago the Mari-Nay was a school diner," explains co-owner William Shannon. Because it was open all on a 24 hour basis, it soon became a prime spot for Villanova, Haverford, Bryn Mawr and Main Line students to meet.

Villanova men dominated the Mari-Nay.

With Mair-Nay clientele being mainly college students, co-owner Shannon contracted a New York artist by the name of Valentino to create a mural representing the four schools.

Valentino labored eight months on the $2000 mural. The artist [illegible] New York to Pennsylvania every day to sketch various college buildings in the area. With the sketching phase completed, Valentino returned to New York to paint the canvas that decorates the diner's walls.

Greeting all customers as they walk in and out, William Shannon relates events which took place under the 31-year old mural.

"We used to have three fights a night," grins Shannon. "Villanova and Haverford were rivals; if a Haverford boy came in here, he would have been 'killed' by Villanova classmen."

"About 24 years ago we had a boy take off his pants in here," Shannon adds. "We had him locked up and he was expelled."

Today the Mari-Nay no longer draws college crowds. Instead of 24-hour service, the diner shuts its doors at eight p.m.

When asked if he would ever open the Mari-Nay to campus night owls, Shannon shakes his head and says there are too many headaches.

Still he is reminiscent of the exciting years past. Says Shannon, It was a laugh. You never knew what would happen next."

Improving Study Skills

By CAROL GOLDFARB

Do you take notes in class, then can't remember what they mean? Do you become so anxious before a test you sometimes "freeze?" Do you have difficulty expressing yourself in writing?

Studies indicate that even the most intelligent students do not know the most effective ways of studying.

Study skills such as note-taking reviewing and making schedules must be learned, then put into practice.

Research has shown that budgeting time and coping with unfamiliar methods of work are the main difficulties in beginning a course.

The freedom of college life allows you to do as you please in your free time between classes. It is up to you to decide how much work you will do and when you do it.

The fact is that regularity and self-discipline are required by any college course.

Efficient work habits mean getting the maximum learning and retention for the least expenditure of energy and effort. Efficient study habits are important to learn not only for the time spent at Villanova, but because good work habits will stay with you all your life.

In order to survive college life, Villanova is offering a 5-week study course "Efficient Reading Study Skills." According to Mrs. Brachman, Coordinator of Reading and Study Services, the purpose of the course is "to make students independent, to teach them to budget their time and to enable students to take advantage of all aspects of college life."

The course is geared to the individuals' needs. The students write out their goals and then assess what they have accomplished. Emphasis is on developing the most efficient skills in handling the diverse and extensive reading one must do to succeed at the college level.

The course is open to any student at Villanova and is free of charge. Anyone interested may contact Mrs. Brachman, 108 Corr Hall, Ext. 548.

Volunteer Programs

Villanova students have traditionally responded to requests for assistance from local institutions, centers and agencies. As volunteers, students often spend about three (3) hours a week tutoring, coordinating or supervising recreational activities, or in various other capacities. These experiences have proven to be rewarding to the agencies and volunteers alike.

Villanova students have been volunteers at:

- St. Edmund's Home for Crippled Children
- Haverford State Mental Hospital
- Mill Creek Community Center
- Overbrook School for the Blind
- Pennhurst State School and Hospital
- Wayne Presbyterian Church-Tutoring

Amidst hysterical, frustrated cries of O.C.'s desperately attempting to give their Freshmen a "meaningful" orientation experience, ON CAMPUS asked several Villanova newcomers a question which some of you Villanova veterans may still be asking yourselves — Why did you choose to come to Villanova?

Kathleen Stickel, New Providence, N.J.
Liberal Arts/Communications Concentration

"There are lots of reason I came to Villanova. Some kids I know come here and after doing a little investigating, I found the school has a good reputation. I'm interested in Communications as well as a well-rounded education so I can find a public relations job after graduating. I think the campus is really nice in size in comparison to others. Villanova just hit me right so here I am!"

Mark Graves, Accokeek, M...
Chemical Engineering

"In the eighth grade I sa... football game between ... University of Maryland and ...lanova University. The s... was Maryland 55 to Villa... zip. But ever since then I ... impressed by the band an... course, the cheerleaders. S... years passed in high scho... began looking into Villa... and found the location and ... was perfect."

Greg Tracey, Upper Saddle River, N.J.
Liberal Arts

"Well, my dad came here but still I wasn't pressured to come. I applied to Boston College, here at Villanova and at Fairfield. From what I heard there's a real feeling of community at Villanova. Boston College had a city atmosphere which I didn't find too appealing. I like the architecture of the buildings here, and I wasn't too impressed with Fairfield. I like the way students put time in classes and then socialize.

Caroline Sigismondi, Middleton, N.J.
Liberal Arts

"Villanova is in a good location. The size is good and I just liked the school when I visited. It also has a Law School attached to it and I am kind of interested in that."

Orientation Conquers Freshman Fears

By PATRICK FLYNN '82

Freshman orientation at Villanova University can best be described as "comprehensive." For the class of 1982, the period between September five and seven was a time of racing around campus trying to learn in a brief time all there is to know about V.U. life.

Orientation is a time when fear and anxiety are constant companions of the freshman. His mind is filled with thoughts of home and worries that he may have made a drastic mistake by leaving there.

Perhaps the most anxious moment of all is when the trembling, insecure newcomer meets his new roommate (an equally trembling, insecure newcomer). For months now, he has expected to be matched with a vulgar social outcast who will most certainly become the destruction of his campus happiness.

I was lucky enough to perceive immediately that my roomie was neither a card-carrying Nazi, nor a MOVE advocate, nor any other undesirable type. We've gotten along rather well, and that surely is a relief.

After this came the real commencement of the orientation program. The policy this year must have been, "Keep them busy, or at least keep them standing in line." Freshmen were able to while away hours at a time waiting for meal tickets, room keys, ID cards, etc.

But that was the exception. The general rule of orientation was three days of total enjoyment, ranging from energy consuming games to informal discussions with Orientation Counselors and groups to formal presentations about various aspects of campus life.

Above all, the O.C.'s were always there to smooth out any difficulties that may have arisen and to make the freshmen feel welcome at Villanova.

In these capacities, the O.C's did a terrific job.

For the great majority of freshmen, the past week has been the first chance to associate with people from all over the nation.

It took me only several hours to learn that everyone on campus has an accent except myself, that New Englanders in particular speak a language of their own, and that there are far too many Yankee fans here for a Baltimore boy to bear.

The most remarkable aspect of Freshman Orientation was the occupation of the minds of the new students. The problems of homesickness, adjustment to the rigors of college work, and the loss of privacy that accompanies dorm life were pushed aside in favor of smaller worries: How are the pennant races going?, Where can I get a newspaper?, and What time is lunch?

Orientation went a long way toward alleviating the difficulties of being away from home for the first time. However, these problems are not easily erased.

But eventually, a feeling began to grow inside and the freshman started to realize that he is now a part of that place where he will spend the next four years of his life, where every day will bring numerous joys and frustrations, where friendships will be made that might last forever.

He is home now.

By FR. RAY JACKSON, OSA

"Beginnings" have a way of creeping up on us almost unnoticed and unexpected. Here it is September again, the beginning of another school season. For some it's a return to familiar turf; for others, a whole new ball game.

The locations and experiences of the past few months of my life were varied and unique. Thanks to the generosity of some friends I was hunting and fishing in the Austrian Alps, toured some key cities throughout Italy, and by a fortunate set of circumstances even had some meals with Albino Luciani a few days before he was chosen as the new Pope. He has long been a friend of the Augustinians and decided to stay at our college in Rome before the papal election. As luck would have it, our paths crossed and we shared a common table for a few days. Needless to say, I was surprised when the announcement of his election came after my return to the States. Imagine, breakfast with the Pope!

Anyway it's back to the world of campus life with its new opportunities for work, study, and friendship. The routineness of school life has a way of offering some stability as long as we avoid letting the routine become dull and uninteresting. Hopefully, this new beginning of school will provide a variety of experiences that will add insight and goodness to our lives.

The last remark brings me to the point of all this meandering. Back in April, I had only the vaguest notion of what my summer would be like. Looking back, it was filled with a richness that I'll long remember. But, suppose it had been otherwise? Suppose there'd been some unexpected trouble-or as the cartoon suggests, an unwanted cross? Most of us, I suspect, are like the befuddled guy who isn't quite ready for a cross. Yet Jesus urges us to accept the problems of life as opportunities for spiritual growth. May we be open to whatever comes along this year.

Vasey Theatre

"The Importance of Being Earnest"

Rich Devine as John Worthing.

By RON TRIOLO

Vasey Theatre could have offered no better production to bridge the gap between the summer and autumn seasons than its delicious rendition of Oscar's Wilde's classic, The Importance Of Being Earnest.

The play chronicles the totally absurd circumstances which surround the courtships of two English "gentlemen" of the late nineteenth century. In its course, no social convention is left unscathed, no tradition is left unsinged by Wilde's sardonic wit. Marriage, birthright, and class distinction, romance and social pretense all fall victim.

And the production, which closed last Sunday night to a less than capacity crowd, never failed to do justice to the genius of its author.

The plot pivots around John Worthing (Richard Devine) and Algernon Montcrieff (David Warner) and their alteregoes — the imaginary counterparts each invents to escape the trap of his own name. Worthing, posing as his ficticious brother Earnest, is frustrated in his attempts to marry Montcrieff's cousin Gwendolyn (Maureen Fagan) by her fetish for the pseudonym, his own questionable lineage, and the bellowings of her mother, Lady Bracknell (overacted beautifully by Terri Fimiano). A comedy of confusion results when Montcrieff also assumes the identity of Earnest to win the heart of Cecily (Natalie Strauss), a ward of Worthing's with a similar attraction to the name.

The entire cast handled the job of depicting Wilde's people to life admirably well. Mr. Devine and Ms. Fagan both turned in strong performances. Mr. Warner was the perfect cad and an excellent foil for Worthing. Ms. Fimiano was impressive in the role of Lady Bracknell in sheer volume alone, and one could listen to the melody of Ms. Strauss' impeccable British accent all evening.

Technically, the production was equally admirable. What the Vasey people do with their microscopic stage for every show they produce is always amazing, but the set of The Importance Of Being Earnest was exceptionally extraordinary. No less credit must also go to the costumes and wardrobers for their successful efforts.

Under the direction of Bill Foeller and with sets, costumes and lighting designed by J. Kent Dorsey, Myrna Lee and Peg Schofield, the presentation maintained an atmosphere so amusing that the sagging of the second act was hardly noticeable.

Also worthy of notice was the music of Joe Leopen which proved to be the icing on an extremely enjoyable evening.

Many freshmen were treated to a taste of the unusually fine production during their Orientation. Anything less than seeing the entire show, however, is only a tease.

The theatrical season will continue at Vasey with The Water Engine And Mr. Happiness in October, and The Marriage Of Figaro in November. If Earnest is any indication of things to come, it should be a season of which Villanova Theater can be justly proud, and Villanova theater goers more than pleased.

Bruce Springsteen

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

Last May Bruce Springsteen bounded onto the stage of the Spectrum, fist raised, as he blasted out "Badlands," the opening rocker of Darkness on the Edge of Town. I know no better symbol to introduce this album. Two and a half years after Born to Run, Springsteen brings back the old stubborn spirit of Rock and Roll.

A feeling of relentlessness would best describe the theme for his album. "Some people just give up living, and start dying piece by piece/ Some guys come home from work and wash up/ And go racing in the streets." Springsteen builds the album upon this idea. Adam raised a Cain. Some people spend their time "waiting for a moment that just don't come," sings Springsteen. Bruce and friends, however, will "keep pushing till these badlands start treating them good."

Springsteen keeps pushing. He literally tears into the guts of "Something in the Night." "Candy's Room" is sweet — a short, great song. The ballad "Racing in the Street," closing side one, is poetry.

On side two, Springsteen "blows everything down/ that ain't got the faith to stand its ground" with his own faith in "The Promised Land." "Factory," which Springsteen wrote for his father, is the weak cut, but then explodes into "Streets of Fire." For a finale, "Prove it All Night," the clean rocking single, is followed by the outstanding vocals of "Darkness on the Edge of Town."

Some sigh because Bruce Springsteen, well, he just is not what he used to be. True, Bruce no longer writes about Sandy, Johnny, or Rosalita. Still keeping his style of street life portrayal, he questions our meek lives deeply, his guitar riffs are more penetrating. It doesn't sweep you away like "Backstreets" or "Born to Run" did. "Springsteen sold out!" the latter-day music critics cry. Understandable. In a time when we are enchanted by the simple rhythms of disco and the one-beat melodies of punk rock, it is not easy to swallow 100 proof Rock and Roll.

Take your time before judging this album. Listen carefully. The Boss hasn't lost his guts. Bruce Springsteen damns the darkness on the edge of town.

Along the Red Ledge
Daryl Hall and John Oates
RCA (AFL1-2804)

Along the Red Ledge is the latest work of Daryl Hall and John Oates as they evolve into one of pop/rocks strongest forces. This recording is an uptempo continuation of last year's magnificent "Beauty On a Back Street."

This Lp comes off much "harder" than previous Hall and Oates contributions. A primary reason for this is that the band has gone under major personnel changes The new additions include Kenny Passarelli on bass guitar, Caleb Quaye on lead guitar and Roger Powell beating the drums. All three of these top-notch musicians are ex-members of Elton John's entourage.

The truth is, that there is not one bad cut on the album. Expert instrumentation, varied melody lines, inspired lyrics and well blended harmonies are not unusual, in fact they dominate throughout.

While every song is at least good, there are a few that reach a level of excellence. They include, "It's A Laugh," the albums opener and AM single disc. "Melody For A Memory" is very smooth and adds another touch of class. "The Last Time" is reminiscent of the early 1960's. "I Don't Want To Lose You," is receiving heavy airplay on local disco stations, and is the Lp's best number. And finally, "Alley Katz" and "Pleasure Beach." "Along The Red Ledge" is superb and should not be overlooked.

Laura Mars Looking Good

By JOHN ZAGARELLA

The intruder ruthlessly awaits his victim. The ice pick sharply pierces the air, violently plunging into the eyes of its unsuspecting victim.

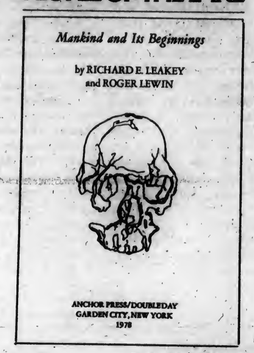
The above lines describe the opening scene of one of 1978's finest motion pictures, Eyes of Laura Mars. Faye Dunaway plays the lead role of Laura Mars, a photographer who advertises her line of cosmetics in a series of sensually violent photographs. The plot centers around the main character's ability to see through the eyes of the psychotic killer. As some of Laura's most intimate friends meet their demise in this murderous cold-blooded sport, she realizes that she is the eventual prey. Who is the villain? Do the eyes of Laura Mars "see" her own unmerciful slaying? Go to your neighborhood theatre and let your own eyes see for themselves.

Miss Dunaway offers a strong performance here and should be mentioned when the Oscars are handed out in the spring. Tommy Lee Jones also gives a fine performance as Laura's private detective and eventual lover. Rene Auberjonois is the films source of comedy as the promoter and personal friend of Laura Mars.

Also featured are some chic high-fashion models who pose to the fascinating disco sounds of such artists as K.C. and the Sunshine Band, Odyssey and The Michael Zager Band, with Barbara Streisand singing the haunting love theme of the movie.

The film was directed by Irvin Kershner and produced by Jon Peters. Everyone involved should be commended on putting together a very clever and gripping yarn of terror.

BOOKS



By JANNA SQUIRES

Richard E. Leakey and Richard Lewin, authors of their recent best seller, Origins, now bring us, People of the Lake, in which Leakey and Lewin concentrate on how our ancestors lived as gathererhunters for 2-1/2 million years before the emergence of modern man.

People of the Lake describes a human legacy of cooperation and sharing. In this book, Leakey discusses man-like creatures who lived in complexed socialized bands composed of 25 individuals. Only those between the ages of 15 and 60 worked, and for less than 2 hours per day.

In a most intriguing and orderly fashion, Leakey examines "the outrageous sexuality of humans . . . the only primates for whom sex as an activity is such a consuming preoccupation." From pre-historic competition among males for bearers of their offspring, to the logic of women's liberation, as women become less bound by child-rearing, are a range of topics delved into quite remarkably by the two authors.

Ten years of research that was done by Leakey and Lewin at Leakey's Koobi Fora project at Lake Turkana, in Africa, is summed up with the conclusion that cooperation and sharing are the characteristics that have nurtur mankind's hold on life for mo than 2-1/2 million years.

"War and global conflict are n inevitable; rather, viewed in t light of pre-history, they are a c tural invention that can and mu be avoided unless mankind is become yet another blind alley evolution."

Richard E. Leakey is the n nowned anthropologist who h expanded our awareness of ma kind's ancestry to eight milli years. He has been the director the National Museum of Ken since 1968 and is also Chairman the Foundation for Research in the Origins of Man (FROM), ju to name a few.

Leakey has an internation reputation as the originator of new multidisciplinary approach fossil hunting, stressing the soci life and economic activity as we as the appearance of our a cestors.

NEW SOUND

By JOHN ZAGARELLA

The Cars: The Cars
Elektra (6E135)

The town that gave us Aerosmith and Boston now unleashes on the public The Cars. The group consist of five members, all of whom hail from the city of Boston. To say the least, their debut album, simply entitled The Cars, is accented with an unusual flavor. It consists of the basics of rock with heavy punk overtones.

Side one also contains t strongest punk rock track, "I'm Touch With Your World." It also undoubtedly the albu deepest pitfall. It is monotonously repeating melo that is not complimented rather flat vocals.

Side two, however, offers a f more bright spots: "Bye B Love," "Moving In Stereo," a "All Mixed Up." "Bye Bye Lov is the compositions that is n available in a 45rpm record. contains a well balanced mixtu that will please AM listeners a not disappoint FM fans. Fina we get to "Moving In Stereo," t album's finest cut. It sounds lik leftover from Davis Bowi Heroes, and has a driving b with strong emphasis on the p cussion section. In addition to t albums attractive covers, this t makes the album worth buyi The recording winds up with " Mixed Up," another example the groups ability to harmon quite effectively.

On the whole, The Cars are group with talent, but have might have been misplaced.

Side one opens with "Good Times Roll," and is the only song that does not contain a message concerning romantic relationships. As a matter of fact, it does not contain a message at all. The recording that follows is the one that introduced the band to the FM airwaves, "My Best Friends' Girl." This is one of the few highlights on this otherwise poor initial musical outing. It features very distinct and pleasant harmonies and an easy going beat.

First Opener Win Since '71

By TERRY O'TOOLE

Mike Wright fell to the grass in llanova Stadium Saturday after- on, underneath the clear and ny skies, and looked far, far y — past the cheering Wildcat wd, past the jubilant Villanova m, past the band and the cheer- ders and the photographers.

Wright had just led the Bowling en offense 79 yards in 57 onds, taking the ball at his own yard line and driving to the ldcat one before the final gun nded, allowing Villanova to ape with a 35-28 win and their t opening day victory since 1.

With the Wildcat secondary k in a prevent defense, Wright on four of six passes, the final a 24 yard strike to split end n Shetler, who was pulled down t short of the goal line as time out. Co-captain Steve Plastek de the initial hit on Shetler, eiving help from cornerback l Pachuta and rover Bernie ber, who earlier in the game set Villanova's first touchdown h the first of two fumble overies.

The last minute drive was a fit- finish to the high-scoring bat- which a visiting scout from the adian Football League called of the most exciting college es he'd seen in years. After wling Green jumped to a 6-0 lead at the end of one quarter on the first of four touchdowns by junior tailback Doug Wiener, the lead changed hands eight times. Vince Thompson's six-yard touchdown run with less than six minutes remaining put the Wildcats on top for good.

Thompson returned to form with his trademarked up-the-middle drives, scoring twice and gaining 55-yards on 15 attempts. The rushing leader for Villanova, however, turned out to be sophomore quarterback Pat O'Brien, who also scored a pair of touchdowns while running for 106 yards out of the wishbone.

The Falcons came out on top in the total offense statistics, running up 521 total yards to Villanova's 296. O'Brien hit on only 3-of-11 passes for 45 yards, while his Bowling Green counterpart completed 21 of 37 for 283 yards. The visitors appeared to be in control early on, marching to the Wildcat one on their second possession when, with a fourth and one for the touchdown, the Villanova defense stopped Wright on an option to the right. One minute later, however, the Falcons recovered a Greg Bedesem fumble on the hosts' 11, scoring in two plays. After a missed kick, Bowling Green led 6-0.

The Wildcats couldn't seem to get their offense in gear during the first quarter. Their first two possessions both ended on third downs when Bowling Green recovered fumbles, and the third and fourth possessions of the period ended on punts. One encouraging sign for coach Dick Bedesem and staff early on had to be the punting of freshman Joe Borajkiewicz, who booted kicks for 50 and 47 yards in the opening quarter.

Hober's fumble recovery at the 20-yard line. A quick cut to midfield, however, and his return Bowling Green 14 on the first play of the second quarter allowed Villanova to get on the scoreboard when Thompson scored his first on a one-yard run. The two clubs then took off on a see-saw battle of give-and-take (the game saw the Falcons lose 4 fumbles, Villanova 3, with one interception for each team) with Bowling Green taking a 21-15 lead into the lockerroom at the half.

As in any high-scoring game, big plays were plentiful. Bob Angelini, a sophomore running back-turned-defensive back, received the kick-off after Bowling Greens' second touchdown deep in his endzone. Racing up the left sideline, Angelini seemed sure to be tackled before reaching his own 20-yard line. A quick cut to middfield, however, and his return became a 72-yard race to the Bowling Green 28, setting up the Wildcats second score.

Big defensive plays allowed Villanova to rack up the points despite a slow-starting offensive attack. Three of the Wildcats touchdowns came after turnovers, while Bowling Green reaped its share of opponent's mistakes with two scores after fumble recoveries.

Cat Clippings — Coach Bedesem states, "The defense just gave up. Lou (Coach Ferry) really tore into them at halftime. They did much better in the second half." ... Bernie Hober was named ECAC Defensive player of the week ... Chet Zalesky and Bernie Huber were named outstanding offensive and defensive players of the game by the St. David's Inn. ... Joe Borajkiewicz was selected to the ECAC All-Star team.

Trackcats Have Grand Summer Capture IC4A Crown

By NATE COOPER

t was one of the Trackcats bet- outdoor seasons. Coach mbo" Elliott added another ference title to his long list of mpionships and although the m lacked the man power for a ional title they made a grand pression on the summer track field scene.

Maryland brought another well nded team to the Inter- legiate Amateur Athletic As- istion of America — (IC4A) mpionships that seemed un- table by such a small legion m the Main Line. Yet in the l quality won over quantity as Cats scored a 99-98 victory. team 28 points.

"You can't tell me that from 107 schools there is not another runner better than Villanova's fourth best miler,"stated Terp coach Frank Costello. "My team was super. I couldn't ask any more from them. But where is the rest of the IC4A schools?"

Mark Belger fought off five weeks of illness to win his first IC4A outdoor 800 meter title. Freshman Anthony Tufariello was third.

Tim Dale; 45.8, Glenn Bogue; 46.1, and Keith Brown; 46.4, finished 2-3-4 in the 400 meters. Alfred Graves joined the trio for a 40.64 400 meter relay team that placed fourth. Jimmy Flynn ran 14.17 in the 3000 for third place.

In the field events, Nate Cooper leaped 53'11" a personal, school and meet record in the triple jump. Derrek Harbour went 25'01/2" in the long jump for third.

Villanova stole the show at the first annual Sun Devil Relays in Tempe, Arizona. The sprint medley and mile relay teams showed why Track and Field News picked Villanova as the number one relay school in the nation.

The victorious medley team clocked 3:16.5, one of its best performances of the season. Keith Brown led off with a 20.8, followed by Tufariello: 21.2, Al Graves; 47.7, and Mark Belger; 1:46.9.

The notorious mile relay team of Brown; 46.5, Bogue; 45.8, Tufariello; 45.4, and Dale; 46.5, clocked 3:03.8, but the quartet from Southern California was five tenths of a second faster in 3:03.3. These were the two fastest times set in the world for 1978.

The victory was highlighted by an unprecedented 1-2-3-4 sweeps in the 1500 meters by Don Paige; 3:45.2, Sydney Maree; 3:45.4, Dean Childs; 3:45.3, and John Burns; 3:46.1, a feat that earned Villanova could not deal with the strong western teams at the national championships, but their eight place finish was aided by some sparkling performances.

Nat Cooper went 54'51/2" in the triple jump preliminaries, another personal and school record. He finished fourth with a 54'2" leap. Anthony Tufariello finished third in the 800 meters with a personal best of 1:46.4. Don Paige; 3:38.9 and Sydney Maree; 3:39.1, finished fourth and fifth in the 1500 meters.

Six members of the Trackcats went to the AAU Champoinships, but none fared as well as Sydney. He ran 3:89.9 in the metric mile only to be beaten at the tape by NCAA champ Steve Scott. Belger returned to form to place third in the 800 with a time of 1:46.2. Cooper finished tenth in the triple jump. Dale and Brown folded in the 400 meter preliminaries as did Tufariello in the 800 meters. Paige injured his back and was not able to finish the 1500.

As the American season came to a close Belger and Paige headed to London for the European circuit. Tufariello made the United States Junior team that toured West Germany and Russia, but the rest of Villanova's team were content to relax for the remainder of the season.

Rugby

The Villanova Rugby Club is holding tryouts for the fall season beginning Monday, Sept. 18 through Thursday, Sept. 21. Almost all of last year's A and B squads are returning this fall. The pre-season polls have labeled Villanova as one of the teams to beat in the East. All are invited to come out to practices, which are held on the rugby field opposite the field house beginning at 3:30 p.m.

Booters Drop Opener To University of Mexico

By ED McASSEY

The naive might have mistaken the Villanova Stadium as the site of a World Cup soccer match last Sunday. After all, there was a bus marked "Especial" in front of the Field House, the Mexican national anthem was played, and there was a team on the field with names like Sergio, Enrique and Gilberto.

This was a contest between the Villanova soccer team and the University of Mexico School of Law, which the visitors won 3-1 before 1,500 spectators. That is the largest crowd the Wildcat booters have seen in a while. Villanova was the sixth stop on a ten game tour of the United States for the Mexican team, which is considered the best student team in its country and boasts of several Olympians.

It was the first loss of the '78 calendar for 12 year coach, Howard Graff, and his team. The Cats had a bad case of opening jitters as the Mexicans dominated the first half by scoring all three goals. They amassed 26 shots on goal compared to the Cats' 7. Villanova got a good physical work out from the Mexican squad, which demonstrated excellent passing. Strategic passing and sharp ball handling are the trademarks of Mexican soccer.

Enrique Gaona dumped one in five minutes into the first half. He was followed by teammate Enrique Comacho, who tallied midway through the half. Ruben Garcia further disamed the Cats' victory hopes with the third goal with 1:25 still ticking awa.

"I never raised so much hell in 16 or 17 years as I did at half time," admits Graff. Villanova was obviously intimidated by the idea of playing a powerhouse like the Univesity of Mexico. "Our guys were very nervous playing a team of that caliber," Graff explains. "Instead of playing our game they were watching them play theirs."

The Cats returned like a different team in the second half, as they started to take charge of the contest. Villanova's defense halted the Mexican attack, while the offense started to become more evident. The charge on the visitors' goal was led by Randy Soriano, Steve Frey, and Dave McHugh. McHugh provided Villanova's only score midway through the second half with the assistance of Mike Hankins and Jay Collier.

Freshman goalie, Bill Schamp, made a respectable debut in the nets, accumulating ten saves. Protection was provided by the fullback line consisting of co-captains John Czipo and Tim Armstrong along with John Gallagher.

The visitors took home game jerseys as souvenirs of their Main Line victory, while the Wildcats picked up some valuable experience. Graff will have no problem with depth this year as the "bootcats" tackle this year's agenda. He has 40 players out for the team before cuts. Virtually everyone has returned from last year's squad, which will be a big plus. In addition to the veterans, Graff has brought in several talented freshmen like Schamp, Alan Grimes and John Pollio.

"Right now the defense is strong (Czipo, Armstrong and Gallagher); however, the offense is weak," Graff comments. "We have Randy (Soriano) up there scoring, but he'll need help." That help will most likely come from Steve Frey, Dave McHugh and Jay Collier. Don Swete, who didn't play Sunday because of a foot injury, should also add to the scoring. Swete is the most improved player in Graff's opinion. Brian Purcell and John Leitner will be the halfbacks.

Dave McHugh (7) scored Villanova's only goal against the University of Mexico last Sunday.

Things are even more promising with Bill Schamp minding the nets. "He was nervous today in his first college game, but he should be tremendous after a couple of games," Graff predicts.

This year's schedule is toned down from last year's; however, it still remains 17 games and includes some powerhouses like Trenton State, Textile and Penn.

The team will travel to Trenton State's tournament this weekend, where they will meet teams like New Haven, Davis and Elkins, as well as Trenton State, all Eastern powerhouses. The regular season will kick off next Wednesday with Textile on Villanova's field at 3:30. "Textile isn't as strong as it has been in the past, but it's still good," Graff comments. "We'll be ready for them. I think I am going to yell at our guys before the game so that I'll know they are ready."

Though some people may joke, the Villanova soccer team tripled its successes last year, finishing 3-14 compared to the previous 1-16. Look for that trend to continue this year, as the Cats field a more experienced team on a more realistic schedule.

By MARY GRACE MURRAY

Women's Fall Athletics will be depending on experience from the returning players to post victorious seasons. Most of the teams lost very few players so with the addition of some promising freshmen the future looks bright for the women.

FIELD HOCKEY

The 1978 field hockey team hopes to improve last year's record of 10-6. The biggest asset of this year's team is the return of the three top scorers, Sandy Arena, Lisa Alderfer and Debbie Smith.

Denise Grieg will be the toughest player for the team to replace. As goalie, Denise was responsible for seven shutouts last year.

With the offensive power returning and defensive support from halfbacks Virginia Horsell and Janice Lynch, the team is ready for the '78 opener on Friday, September 22 against Bryn Mawr.

TENNIS

Women's tennis begins a long season on Tuesday, September 19. The 21 match schedule has an additional five matches this season. Therefore durability will be a key factor as the season wears on.

Seniors Kathy Stetler, Mary Jo McWilliams and Jayne Schreiner hope to contribute to another winning season with their past years experience.

VOLLEYBALL

The women's volleyball team hopes to bounce back from last year's disappointing 10-12 season. The schedule has been expanded as the team enters its first year in Division II of PAIAW Volleyball Conference.

Kathy Straccia, Karen Hannah, Ann Murray and Kathy Morris are the top returnees for this year's team which begins its season, September 25.

CROSS COUNTRY

The 1978-79 Women's Cross Country team held its first official practice last Friday and coach Jim Thompson is very optimistic of his new squad. This year's harriers are a mixture of youth and experience.

The returning lettermen to this year's team are Maryellen Borkowski, Joanne Dahm, Brigid Leddy, and Maryann Moon.

Brigid Leddy is one of the top collegiate runners on the eastern seaboard at the 1500 meters. Leddy finished a close second to Penn State's Kathy Mills in the Penn Relays last spring and is considered one of the team's most promising leaders.

The team's first meet is the Penn State Invitational on September 24.

Fall Challenge Meet New Foes In '78

By HARRIET SMITH

In his twenty years as a head coach, Dick Bedesem has had many successes and few disappointments. He has always more than met the challenge. If last year was one of his disappointments, then surely this year must be considered one of his biggest challenges. Coming off a disheartening 4-7 season last year, Bedesem must rebuild a defense that graduated three seniors and lost two more because of disciplinary action. The offense looks a good deal stronger with soph QB Pat O'Brien returning from a wonderous rookie year, anchored by All-American candidate Vince Thompson at fullback.

U. MASS.

On September 16, the Cats travel to U-Mass to take on the Minutemen. The Wildcats will have a slight edge against a team that has just recently been reclassified Division I-A, and a team that begins the season under a new head coach. The Minutemen boast of a stingy defense that features four returning lettermen that picked off a total of ten aerials amongst them. Offensively the Minutemen have good depth in the line, but are a bit skimpy in the backfield due to the loss of three starters through graduation.

On September 23, the Cats meet William and Mary. Last year Villanova was unable to subdue the Indian's ball control offense. Returning this year is multi-talented QB Tim Rosantz, who gave VU defense fits last year and All-ECAC wide reciever Joe Manderfield. The Indian's defense looks extremely adept in the line as three two-year lettermen return. The secondary returns one starter, and four other lettermen are fighting for the other three spots.

CLEMSON

Next, Bedesem and his boys travel to Clemson South Carolina for what promises to be the Cats toughest challenge. On offense a trio of returnees, QB Steve Fuller, tailback Warren Ratchford and All-American candidate Jerry Butler provide an exciting attack. The defense has a few gaps and is perhaps the Tiger's weakness, but only in the linebacking department. The secondary returns three starters whose combined effort stole nine passes last year.

The Spiders of University of Richmond travel to the Main Line with high hopes of improving on a dismal 3-8 season last year. Defense appears to be the spiders strong point as they return ten of eleven starters. Defensive end Ray Chase led his team in QB sacks last year and is an awesome against the run. Free safety Jeff Nixon, a likely pro prospect, has picked off ten passes in his last two seasons. On offense Richmond returns seven starters including a host of good dependable running backs. The line looks a bit skimpy and must replace two starters, but overall looks sound.

COLGATE

Colgate University comes to the Main Line on October 4 for Homecoming. Colgate topped the nation in total offense last year, but has since been desimated by graduation. Only a handful remain on an offense that averaged 486 yds/game last season. Defense looks to be the Red Raider's strong point this season with six veterans in the secondary and All-American candidate Ray Finn at linebacker. Also linebacker Paul Lawler was tops in the nation with seven interceptions.

On October 21, the Cats travel to New Brunswick to tangle with the Scarlet Knights of Rutgers University. Decimated by graduation, Frank Burns must fill the void of 10 starters in order to enjoy the success he has in his last five seasons. The offense is anchored by veteran Glen Kehler who chalked up 1630 yards on the ground in his last two seasons. The rest of the offense is sparse with the exception of tight end George Carter who is exceptional as a receiver and blocker. The defense is headed up by returning linebacker Jim Hughes who was All-East in 1976. Rutger's youth and inexperience; however, can be deceptive as the Scarlet Knights battered Penn State all the way before succumbing in the fourth quarter.

YOUNGSTOWN

Youngstown State always seems to give the Cats problems, and this year should be no exception as they return ten on offense and eight on defense. Heading up the offense is quarterback Kieth Snoddy, who totaled 1122 in total offense last year. Tailback Marshall Brunfield and Robby Robinson round out the backfield. A sturdy line returns with Division II All-American center Ed McGlasson. The defense does not appear to be as potent, but are returning eight, including linebacker George Fitzpatrick who is the Penquin's leading tackle.

The Eagles of Boston College return to the Main Line on November 4, dreading a repeat performance of their last trip here in which the Cats upset the Eagles. BC returns six on offense and only four on defense, but their size and speed are their strong points. The offense is headed by All-American guard John Schmedding, who is a likely number one draft pick. Also back on the offense is leading ground gainer Dan Conway, who rushed for 613 yards on 137 attempts. Another likely candidate for the pro draft is defensive standout Fred Smerles. As always, though, BC has produced some excellent replacements and, despite playing the toughest schedule in the East, is a possible brawl candidate.

DELAWARE

On November 11 the Cats travel to Newark, Delaware, to resume their oldest series against the Fighting Blue Hens of Delaware. Last year VU overwhelmed the Hens' injury ridden defense, and surely they are looking for revenge. Jeff Kombo returns as signal caller, as does rushing back Ivory Sully, a fleet-footed 500 yard rusher. Leading rusher Craig Carroll, who is the "Key Man" in the famed Delaware Wing T, also returns. The defense appears inexperienced except for the linebackers, who can be awesome with the likes of Glen Fantosh, an All-East candidate last year.

TEMPLE

The last game of the season, on November 25, is of course with cross-town rival Temple. The Owls boast of an extremely competent offense, returning all starters including speedster Anthony Anderson, and bruising runner Chuck Dixon. The line looks fairly solid and anchors what could be one of the most versatile offenses in the East. The defense is also loaded, returning three of four starters on the line, and two of three linebackers. If the defense has Achilles Heel it is in the secondary. The Owls had a disappointing 5-5-1 season last year, but Wayne Hardin is most optimistic after playing head-to-head with Penn State only to lose in the closing seconds.

Bedesem's Boys most surely have their work cut out for them, but after starting off on the right foot, they look to be a good deal better than last year's 4-7 disappointment. With a few breaks going the Wildcat's way, Bedesem will refute disappointment and once again will meet the challenge.

Diamond Veterans To Play 25 Games

By PETER J. RYAN

According to head coach Larry Shane, Wildcat baseball fans can look forward to cheering on a team with "a healthy group of veterans." The squad will compete in a 25 game exhibition season so that coach Shane and his staff can determine each man's best position for the spring schedule.

Offensive power will be provided by Jim Ambromitos, Tom Harrison, Kevin Cooke and Dom Melillo. Recent completed tryouts should also provide the Wildcats with a few more steady bats as the season progresses.

Returning pitchers for the fall campaign are Mike Venesia, Eddie Sysmansky, Phil Sartori, Steve Skammer, and Joe Ruth.

Coach Shane will focus on cutting down on the number of errors that were costly in last year's 11-17 spring slate. Injuries and unsteadiness at the shortstop position were factors in this defensive problem.

For the most part, the fall baseball season allows a coach to shift his players from position to position during the course of a game situation. This becomes more evident with the use of the "free substitution" rule.

The exhibition schedule shows 21 home games to be played on the diamond behind the Fieldhouse.

LCB Talks, But Nobody Listens

By TERRY O'TOOLE and NANCY ROONEY

Before last spring, the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board (LCB) enjoyed a relatively obscure relationship with Villanova, vaguely associated by many students with controlling the Commonwealth's system of state stores and regulating bars and taverns.

While the student body recessed for mid-term break, however, the LCB visited University officials to advise them of apparent discrepancies with state liquor laws, skyrocketing the agency to notoriety on campus and spurring faculty, administrators and student leaders to revise Villanova's alcohol policy.

Last Thursday's raid by LCB agents on the first Cat's Eye of the fall semester has added a new fervor to the University's already large number of LCB arguments, discussions and, perhaps most plentiful, rumors.

"You were hearing a lot of rumors, people saying, 'Something's going to happen'," said Edward B. Portnoy, acting assistant supervisor of the LCB's Philadelphia office. "Something finally happened.

"It's not that the LCB is picking on the University," Portnoy said in an interview Monday. "There are people who live in a neighborhood. There are parents who are worried. We're working where we can see a lot of complaints. We only go where the complaints are."

As Portnoy spoke, the four kegs confiscated from last Thursday's Cat's Eye sat in the corner of his office. He explained that charges would be filed against the individuals running the party, charging them with selling liquor without a license. A misdemeanor, the penalty for a first offense is a fine ranging from $100 to $500 dollars and a 1-3 month jail sentence if the fine is not paid. Conviction for a second offense carries a steeper fine and a mandatory 3-month to 1-year jail sentence, Portnoy said.

"First of all, you have to be 21," Portnoy said. "There are no two ways about it. The age is 21, no ifs, ands or buts."

"You can't sell without a license, whether in a private house, a club, or wherever," he added. Selling tickets, which include entertainment, food and other refreshments as well as beer, still violates the law, Portnoy explained, calling such action "subterfuge."

Cat's Eye Raided

By JOAN BARNISH and NANCY ROONEY

The Union's first Cat's Eye ended abruptly last Thursday after three Liquor Control Board (LCB) agents confiscated four kets of beer for allegedly dispensing alcohol without a license.

The three men, dressed in jeans and plaid shirts, entered the Day Hop Cafeteria at 9:15 p.m. shortly after posing as Villanova Alumni to obtain admission, said Lucy Gorski, student activities program director.

After admission, the agents asked that the music be turned off, lights on and the students leave. At that time the men took the names of four students and explained the alleged charges, said Rev. John Deegan, O.S.A., vice-president for student life.

The LCB agents then proceeded to load the four kegs in a car and said they were not allowed to comment on the situation without their supervisor's permission.

Early Friday morning, a spokesman for the LCB said, "We have had so many conferences out at that school with the president, vice-president student activities and student groups that we're tired of going out to tell them what the law is. The LCB has been more than cooperative with the University, but some people out there seem to think we are jokes. They just don't seem to understand that we mean business."

"Obviously, we can't sponsor something that is illegal," said Fr. Deegan. "We are just disappointed that they didn't call before hand. Our policy here is to uphold the law of the Commonwealth."

The visit was prompted by several phone calls to the LCB's office on Thursday, said Fr. Deegan. "My question is, who wants it stopped?"

Rev. Robert Martin, O.S.A., dean of student activities, said he believed the University was operating in compliance with the laws relating to the sale of alcoholic beverages.

Comparing this event to the graduation party held last spring, Fr. Deegan said the University followed the exact procedure, selling tickets before hand and carding students at the door.

"We are trying to make it for those who are 21, a controlled educational type of thing, but they

C&F Preps For Accreditation

By BILL GUERIN

The College of Commerce and inance has begun preparing for accreditation review by the merican Association of ollegiate Schools of Business.

This resurvey is the routine view which all AACSB accredited schools must undergo ery five years. Although the tual resurvey will not take place two years; the association will se its analysis upon figures comled from the 1978-79 school year.

According to Alvin A. Clay, an of the College of Commerce d Finance, there are certain eas of Villanova's business hool which must be closely tched in order to insure that the llege will retain its accreditaon.

"One of the association's imary concerns is that we have culty and resources proortionate to the number of dents in our college," Clay stated. "At the end of last year, we had slightly more students than we should have had. To help counteract this, we have accepted fewer freshmen than last year.

"In the area of resources, the AACSB insists that we have a certain number of terminally-degreed professors in each department," Mr. Clay continued. "In addition, we are expected to provide faculty offices which are conducive to student consultation and academic research."

He further explained that the acquisition of the proper resources is often restricted by the lack of available space on campus and by the university budget.

"Our chief difficulties reside in affording the faculty and in finding enough room for both students and faculty," the dean noted. "Although we have the faculty and resources for our current student population, our needs for the future could necessitate the expansion of Bartley Hall," he confided.

The accrediting association will also be reviewing the admission requirements and the curriculum of the College of Commerce and Finance.

"The AACSB requires that our admission standards be equal to or better than those of the other undergraduate colleges," Dean Clay stated. "In regards to our curriculum, the association sets forth strict guidelines as to what courses should be offered, and at what level these courses are to be taken."

Dean Clay admitted that the standards established by the AACSB are extremely rigid and pervade all aspects of the business school. He feels that at times some of these guidelines seem trivial, yet they are still valid.

Despite the strict demands

Liquor Officials Speak

"You have to divorce this situation away from the University itself," Portnoy said. "Students are students. They do this type of thing. They know they are wrong."

"If your security fails," he continued, "it kind of falls back on us. The kid who sold the ticket is liable, as is the person who threw the party. If the University gave them permission to have the party, it ties them in.

"If additional information is received, who knows where this could end up."

Portnoy explained that the LCB worked on both preventive law enforcement and actual enforcement. The agency has the power of arrest to enforce the liquor code, and can enter any building, private or public, dormitory or classroom, without a warrant if they have probable cause, Portnoy said.

"We do not make the law, we only enforce it," he said. "We only work on complaints, doing a lot of work on anonymous complaints. We have our men out there on the streets.

"If we find it, we find it; if we don't find it, fine."

"We don't freelance universities," Portnoy said. "If there are no problems, if it doesn't disturb anyone, we won't hear about it. We respond to all complaints."

Portnoy said that the agency received a complaint about Thursday night's Cat's Eye, and that this was the LCB's first enforcement situation at Villanova "recently." LCB agent Thomas Buchanan sat down with University officials near the end of last semester to appraise them of any irregularities on campus, and agent Norma Murphy, a Villanova graduate, helped the school coordinate its commencement party last May.

"We sat down several times and explained the facts of life to them," Portnoy said. "It has been passed down two or three times to University officials, to the student government.

"We try to handle things in their proper perspective," he continued. "The University has been very cooperative. There apparently seems to be a group of individuals who won't adhere what the University says."

The LCB administrator plained that, since Villanova w school of learning, the only lice it could apply for would be a c liquor license, which allows liq to be sold to members of the c only. Each member must be 21 older. The University of Pe sylvania Mask and Wig club this type of license, and Port said that LaSalle was applying one at this time.

Portnoy knew of no such plication by Villanova.

Also available is a special casion permit, used by many ch ches, which allows a once-a-y fund-raising activity to alcohol to adults.

When asked if the LCB has problems with other area colleg Portnoy said, "There have be problems, maybe not as bad. T Philadelphia police departm had a problem with fraternities Penn, but they solved it."

"I think the University (V lanova) has been very coope tive," Portnoy remarked. "T want information. They've cal our office for our help, and we gotten it to them.

"I think the University ru may be changing. They're not i mune from the law."

Dorm Improvements

By JOSEPH B. FINIO

Many renovations and additions to the security systems have recently been made to several Villanova residence halls.

Included are new furnishings, carpeting, curtains, renovated bathrooms, a snack shop, more secure outside doors in and a sensor security system.

According to Allan B. Wechsler, M.A., dean of men, offices will be removed from the downstairs of Sullivan Hall, and replaced with a new snack shop and game room complete with booths. A new entrance will be made in the front of the building. Work is scheduled to be completed by the second week of October.

Renovations can't improve some rooms

Renovations made to Stanford Hall consist primarily of paint and maintenance, although the game room was furnished with tables and chairs according to Wechsler.

Corr Hall was completely remodeled over the summer. Rooms were repainted and recarpeted, new curtains were put up and the bathrooms were renovated. New furnishings that include bunk beds, desks and dressers specially ordered by Villanova are due in the first week of October.

Dean Wechsler also said that new outer doors with core locks were added to Sullivan Hall over the summer. Once locked these doors will open only with a resident's key.

According to Rebecca S. Drury, M.S., dean of women, new security systems have been added to Sheehan, Alumni and St. Rita's Hall. If the doors are propped open or the windows are opened past a certain point, a warning will be set off on a main control panel that can be monitored from either inside the building itself or maintenance.

Sheehan Hall — girls' dormitory

This system, which was added to Sheehan Hall last January and to St. Rita's Hall and Alumni Hall over the summer, can be monitored anytime of the day or night.

At present, the system is being monitored only in Sheehan Hall from 11:30 p.m. to 7 a.m.

Monitoring of the system will begin in the near future in Alumni Hall. Simpson Hall has new core locks as does St. Rita's Hall but there are no plans to begin monitoring. Dean Drury said that the help of the security patrol would be relied upon instead.

When asked about a rumor that closed circut television would be added to the women's dorms, Dean Drury said, " . . . it's news to me."

SENATE OUTLOOK

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

The University Senate opens the floor for the first time of the 1978-79 year today.

Most notable on the agenda is a question raised by Student Body President Joe Cassidy: should students be charged for credits earned while they are enrolled in the intern program.

Also open to debate will be the Social Action Committee proposal banning the sale of cigarettes on campus.

Dr. James Cleary, Vice-President for Academic Affairs will make a motion on behalf of the Faculty Affairs Committee to prohibit full time faculty members who are tenured or on a tenure track from taking courses within their own departments for credit.

The Budget Committee will submit a report, and there will be a discussion of the evaluation of the Senate Social Action Committee.

The Student Government Association, preparing for the Senate Meeting, hopes to "keep student fees down while maintaining the academic quality of previous years," said Cassidy.

Cassidy emphasized the need "to keep communication lines open, especially with the board of trustees."

Cassidy mentioned that last year's Senate motion to have a used book store on campus was voted down by Father President John Driscoll, due to a lack of facilities and staff.

A recent concern of Villanova students has been the alcohol policy. Cassidy said that this "is a case not within the jurisdiction of the SGA."

Cassidy has chosen Tom Platt to be his vice-president. Cassidy's first choice for this position, Jack Acardi, will not be returning to the university this year. Dave Blachly will be the new Student Caucus Vice-President. The SGA Assembly Vice President will be chosen this week.

Joe Cassidy, S.G.A. President

New Trustees Named

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

In the past eighteen months three new members have been elected to the Villanova Baord of Trustees. The new members now bring the board count to 22 members. They are:

Dr. Marguerite M. Farley, director of radio and television for the School District of Philadelphia. Dr. Farley is active in women's community organizations and serves as President of the Chestnut Hill College Alumni Association. She holds a Ph.D.(1974) from Temple University in Educational Media.

Arthur Kania, a Philadelphia attorney; he is a graduate of the University of Scranton and Villanova Law School. Kania is prominent in the area of real estate development.

Thomas Labrecque, formal naval officer and graduate of Villanova University in 1960 (Arts). Labrecque is executive vice-president of the Chase-Manhattan bank in New York. Mr. Labrecque has also completed graduate work at both New York and American University.

"Three more vacancies will probably develop in this coming year," explains Eugene J. Ruane, director of public relations, "which would bring the Board to a maximum 25 members." This is a marked increase from the seven members the University Charter provided for in 1969 and is indicative of Villanova's tremendous growth over the past decade. The University by-laws now hold that the Board must consist of no less than 11 and not more than 25 members.

Of those 25 members, no less than one third at any time will be members of the order of St. Augustine (Villanova Province).

There has been much discussion in recent months about placing a non-voting student member on the Board of Trustees. (Last Fall University of Pennsylvania accomplished this, but only after major student protest and with great difficulty). The idea has been rejected by both Thomas E. Devine, chairman of the board of trustees, and the board itself. There is little likelihood that the board's position will change. Mr. Devine reiterated his position in a phone conversation this week.

A possible explanation for the Board's adamancy on the issue was given by Mr. Ruane: "The Chairman and the Board are of the general feeling that there is a need to keep pure their objectivity, and by granting a student or faculty member Board status, members of the organization they represent, might create certain pressure."

Ruane did point out that there are several standing committees where there are student and faculty membership. There are 5 such bodies and what follows is a breakdown of their membership:

The Academic Affairs Committee consists of 1 administrator, 1 faculty member, 2 students, and 2 members of the Development Council.

There are 7 trustee members, 2 administrators, 4 members of the Development Council, 4 students, and 2 faculty members on the Building and Finance Committee.

Five Board members, 1 administrator, 1 faculty member, 2 students, and 6 members of the Development Council comprise the Development and Public Relations committee.

The Student Affairs Committee consists of 5 Board members, 1 administrator, 1 faculty member, 2 students, and 2 members of the Development Council.

The fifth and final standing committee is The Investment Committee which possesses a total of 15 members — 4 Board members, 3 administrators, 1 Faculty, 2 students, and 5 Development Council members.

Board members serve a general term of 5 years, with the exception of a position like a University President and other positions commanding respect or incumbency. A trustee may be elected to a second term, but must wait for a period of 1 year before serving a third. In effect, a member can serve for 10 consecutive years and then must wait for a period of one year before re-election.

The Board of Trustees meets regularly on the second Tuesday of each September, December, February, and April or as near to those dates as possible. Special meetings may be held at other times or when deemed necessary by the Board Chairman. Board meetings are closed to the general community.

> "The Chairman and the Board are of the general feeling that there is a need to keep pure their objectivity, and by granting a student or faculty member Board status, members of the organization they represent might create certain pressure."
> Mr. Eugene Ruane

Accreditation

imposed by the association's standards, Mr. Clay feels that their accreditation is worth protecting at all costs. Since there are only 205 AACSB-approved schools in the country, Villanova's College of Commerce and Finance is in the same league as that of Ivy institutions.

"Our accreditation by the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business forces us to maintain a level of quality we did not previously have," he concluded.

(LCB) are forcing the University not to do anything for the students," said Fr. Deegan.

On Tuesday, Edward B. Portnoy, acting assistant supervisor of the LCB's Philadelphia office, said that charges have been filed and that the Delaware County's district attorneys reviewed and approved them.

But, when contacted, Michael Coll, assistant district attorney handling the case, said no charges ever entered his office, and if they did they would be thrown out.

"They (LCB) can prosecute them (Villanova) for underage drinking, but it would be di minimis," said Coll. Di minimis is a Latin term meaning the law does not care for matters of very small consequences.

Fr. Deegan hopes that in future the LCB will give a li more clear direction as to w the University is allowed to do what it, isn't.

A liquor license is a possibil for the new University center, until then the liquor policy remain at a stand still, said Deegan.

Engineering Minority Opportunities

Villanova, PA. — A program to increase the number of minority students in engineering brought 44 high school students to the Villanova University campus July 10 to July 28.

The students were sponsored by the Philadelphia Introduction for Minorities to Engineering (PRIME), a cooperative program begun three years ago by local industries, school districts, universities, and colleges to help open up the engineering field to its non-traditional groups.

Over 1,000 students from the Philadelphia, Delaware County and Camden school districts participate in PRIME. They are gifted students of the post eighth grade level to the post twelfth grade level, chosen for the program by their teachers.

Drexel, Temple, Widener, and the University of Pennsylvania, in addition to Villanova, also host PRIME students. A set curriculum is taught at each location during a summer session to one of the five grade levels.

The post eleventh grade level studied engineering design at Villanova. The first week of the program introduced the students to design in the chemical, civil mechanical, and electrical engineering fields. The last two weeks, when the students lived on campus to get a feel for college life, were centered around developing problem solving skills, and creating an original design. Courses in pre-calculus mathematics and communications skills were also taught.

Supplementing the college instruction are special courses, career seminars, and field trips for the PRIME students at their local school districts.

PRIME, which is purported be one of the most successful pr grams of its kind in the natio was begun to attract and giv academic preparation to minori students who might not normal think of engineering as a caree possibility. A study done by th Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, th largest financial backer PRIME, showed that less than o percent of all engineers come fro minority groups. PRIME hopes even out that inbalance distribution.

The efforts of PRIME have a parently been successful. Of th 81 students in its first graduati class, 64 entered the engineerin field, 28% of whom enrolled PRIME-related schools.

Dr. William B. Fergusso Associate professor of civ engineering, is director of th PRIME program at Villanova.

VILLANOVA, PA. — A group of nearly 80 students in the College of Commerce and Finance at Villanova University have organized a consulting facility for small business persons in the area who may have business-related problems.

What Good Is A Winning Season...

If Nobody Shows Up For The Games?

After getting off to a slow start in the fall of 1976, Villanova's varsity football squad rallied to put together a six-game undefeated string at the end of that season, giving the Wildcats their first winning record (6-4-1) since Mike Siani's senior year in 1971.

Promises of good fortune were plentiful last September as the 'Cats prepared to kick-off their season — the recruits were the best in years, the team was psyched, the momentum of that unbeaten streak was still alive. And then came the season of disappointment, of a 4-7 record, of Homecoming in the rain and a loss to Dayton, of unrealized dreams.

Perhaps, in view of that performance, one can see why only 6,244 fans showed up for the squad's opener against Bowling Green two weeks ago, less than half of the Villanova stadium capacity of 13,400. Some 1500 tickets to that contest were purchased by the Student Activities office for free distribution to the freshman class, taking a large chunk out of the legitimate attendance figures.

Tomorrow, however, we find the Wildcats returning home with a 2-0 record, their best start since 1964. In their last two ball games, Villanova has kept its fans on the edge of their seats until the final gun sounded, offering wide-open college football action. A victory over William and Mary, a team which trounced the 'Cats 28-8 last year, would set the squad up for their September 30 meeting with Clemson, a national power.

V.U. football seems to be on its way back. With the relatively slow on-campus social life, the four remaining Wildcat home games promise to be a high point of the fall — but only if the student body chooses to show up, to support the team. It may sound cliche, but there is something about college football in the fall, about going to see your school play.

At $2.50, it's not a bad way to spend an autumn afternoon.

On Campus

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

In lieu of the recent Liquor Control Board visit to the Villanova Campus last week, "On Campus" polled some students to find out their thoughts and reactions to the question: "What do you think about the alcohol situation on campus?"

"I think if students are mature and responsible enough to handle it, then why not? I don't think that there were any major problems at Cat's eyes last year, Student Government should be able to help make policy for campus. I can understand the LCB position but we should have a little more say in the matter." Kathy McNamara

"It's archaic — it turns out like prohibition. Where I come from (Maryland) everybody drinks when they are 18. If you treat people like children then they are going to act like children."

"There should be more campus sponsored events instead of small unsupervised parties where things can get out of hand." Jim Stohlmann

"It's a shame it is so behind the times. But rather than kids doing anything about it they are becoming apathetic and moving off campus which shouldn't be. The alcohol policy is too strict. It should be more campus oriented." Phyllis George

"I don't understand it. Since Villanova is a private institution we should have our own policy. Just because we are in Pennsylvania the LCB shouldn't have the only say. The administration should have final say and stick up for the student more." Peter Cahill

The Free U. Has Something For You

By CAROL ANN BARRALE

Has the recent U.S. contact with Egypt or maybe Steve Martin's version of that age old classic "King Tut" inspired you to learn the art of belly dancing? Can your limited culinary expertise in boiling water use a little enrichment? Or maybe you're tired of the same old wine you're served at wine and cheese parties and wish to savor the "golden" vintages that still lie un-tasted in hopes of impressing that "special someone" when ordering win on your next dinner date?

If any of these areas have not struck your fancy, there are many more of equal variety and interest and all are offered by Villanova's Free University.

The Free University is a program that has no grades, no credits and almost no tuition. Although there is sometimes a small fee for materials, depending on the course.

"The Free University," explains Gene Schaefer, resident program director from the Dean of Men's office and coordinator of the Free University, "is an attempt to bridge the gap between formal curriculum and ideas and courses that students may want to take, but that aren't included in the University curriculum."

"What it is basically is a skills exchange or interchange, where people come together to share and learn from one another."

The varied learning opportunities afforded by the Free University — begun in the middle 60's under a different title and reinstated last year — are unique in that anyone with a "viable" skill or talent can teach a course.

A "viable" skill is discerned through an interview with Program Director Schaefer. "Faculty members," he says, "are assumed to possess the skill in the area they wish to instruct. With students, I check their background experience in the area as well as conducting the interview. But mainly, I make the assumption that if someone has the skill and wants to teach, he/she must be confident in their own skill and direction."

Response has been encouraging. "So far," continued Schaefer, "we haven't had an overwhelming response among students to teach courses. We would like an equal representation between faculty and student teachers."

There are 16 courses so far this year. There is still time to create your own Fall or Spring course.

If you have some talent, don't be selfish, share it! Hey girls, this is your chance for equal opportunity. The Free University is lacking in women instructors; so go show them what you've got to share. Schaefer says it is not so important that one be an "expert," but more importantly, one should have a "working knowledge and a desire

Well, it looks as though the lovely Pennsylvania weather has returned, bringing those great hot, sticky and cloudy days that we all missed so much this summer at the shore . . . The infirmary is delighted, business hasn't been better in years . . . two weeks into the semester and people are already dropping like flies . . . and, no, you can't use the last two hundred pages of Anthology of English Lit, as tissue, you might actually read it someday . . . the football team is off to its best start in 14 years' . . . but unless home attendance picks up, they won't be able to tell if they're in practice or if they're actually playing before a crowd . . . no, that's not a used car lot between Stanford and Good Counsel . . . actually they're getting ready to sell Christmas trees . . . The RSA delivered refrigerators this week . . . it's a shame the LCB won't let us put anything in them . . . housekeeping is complaining that they're losing sheets by the hundreds in dorms . . . TOGA? . . . in view of all these campus activities Animal House is spawning, it's a shame we don't have any sorority houses . . . WKVU's AP wire has done a lot for the station's news, keeping them up-to-date with the Camp David Summit and other national news . . . it's just a shame nobody else can hear about it . . . according to residents of Stanford and Sullivan, the best thing about President Carter's speech Monday night was that it didn't pre-empt Monday Night Football . . . The tunnel under the Paoli local tracks seems to be unusually dark and rough this year . . . maintenance, it's not that we mind that so much, but the bats and alligators are pushing it a little bit . . . ever wonder where that dirt they're taking out for the Center goes . . . they're piling it behind Stanford, reportedly as a playground for Arts majors . . . Center construction has forced curtailments of power and water service to several dorms . . . but seriously, guys, we don't think the teacher of that 8:30 will buy "I'm really sorry, but they shut the power off again last night" more than three times in two weeks . . . In an effort to keep power in Dougherty, considered one of campus' vital spots (how else could they boil everything in the pit), a temporary generator has been brought in between the Pie Shoppe and Vasey . . . so if you saw those transformers and wires and thought the psychology and biology departments were getting ready to pull off some more experiments, rest easy . . . or if you thought that it was a new disciplinary device installed by security, wrong . . . okay, now that Orientation is over, let's be honest — how many O.C.'s told their groups the smokestack story? . . . or about Al Capone and the Fieldhouse? . . . huh, I thought so . . . but who knows?, who cares?

The Villanova Community: Where Do You Belong?

★★★ ANS ★★★

By VICKY PARENTE

If you are a commuter who has been sitting around complaining that non-residents don't have the opportunity to get involved in campus life, stop complaining, get up off your chair in the Pie Shop and do something about it — join the Association of Non-Resident Students.

The ANS is a commuter organization that encourages non-residents to participate in campus affairs so that they will feel more at home on campus. The president of ANS this year is John Garbarino, a junior accounting major.

When asked about the problems that commuters encounter Miss Steckläir told the VILLANOVAN, "From my own experience, it's hard to get used to being a commuter. The residents have their rooms to go back to after classes, but the commuters only have the Pie Shop. Also, it's hard to get to and from social events — it makes you feel left out."

This year the ANS has organized itself into four major committees:

The Social Committee - which will plan parties and general activities. The committee plans to have a number of TGIF's; and a tailgate party before the football game on Parents' Weekend. The committee also hopes to line up a series of speakers,

The Communications Committee — which is in charge of publicity and will edit the ANS newsletter which will inform association members about meetings and activities.

The Athletic Committee — which will organize ANS intramural sports. A football team has already been formed and is still looking for members.

The Academic Committee — which will be on hand to help commuters with any academic problems. If a student has a problem or grievance the committee will direct him to the appropriate dean or department.

Garbarino and Miss Tecklair felt that one of the major problems confronting commuters this fall was the shortage of parking spaces and so they spoke to Security about this matter. Security informed the ANS that students may park on the lot in front of the stadium and from there pick up the bus that travels all around campus and from Villanova to Rosemont College. Schedules for the bus may be obtained from the ANS office.

Security also told ANS that fewer students purchased parking stickers this year, and warned that they will soon begin to tow all cars that do not have stickers. ANS is also trying to organize commuter car pools which would be another solution to the parking problem.

Another commuter problem that ANS is looking into is the need for student lounges where commuters can go between classes. The association is planning to put together an ad hoc committee to work on getting commuter lounges put in to the new University Center.

Garbarino told the VILLANOVAN, "The major goal for ANS this year is to membership and get active member who will really do something, after all, just talking about things won't get them done."

The first association meeting has already been held earlier this week, but another meeting is scheduled in two weeks. All meetings are held in the afternoon and commuters are advised to keep an eye open for posters announcing meetings and events. Also, students are encouraged to stop by the ANS office (Dougherty, 213) and sign up for a committee.

The ANS has many plans in the works, especially for the spring semester, but the success of these plans depends on how much support they receive from the commuters.

As a final throught, Garbarino added, "The ANS is a growing organization looking for new ideas and the only way to get new ideas is through a large and active membership."

The R.S.A. (Resident Students Association) initially began as part of the Student Government Association. Two years ago the R.S.A. broke off and formed the Campus Council, which was made up of presidents of all the dorms on campus.

Last year committees were started to supplement residential life. Committees advertised for organizers in order to begin planning for this year's activities.

According to R.S.A. President, Colleen Corcoran, a meeting will be held next Thursday for the presidents of all the dorms to plan various programs.

The Educational Development Committee, headed by Maura Zumwalt, deals specifically with area chair people and area representatives to program activities geared to each individual dorm.

The Educational Committee, coordinated by, Rose Marsico, runs a tutorial service with volunteers from each dorm, to help students with any courses they are having trouble with.

The Educational Committee also contacts speakers of various interest to lecture resident students. Also, this committee works with the Free University Program, in conjunction with the Dean of Men's Office under the direction of Gene Schaefer.

The Food Service Committee runs a promotion to stop waste in the cafeteria. Under the direction of Leslie Carranza, they will deal with the food department in order to improve the food service, provide menu changes and expand the meal program to provide a continental breakfast.

Beginning Monday, October 2, the Food Service Committee will begin an all-out campaign to stop food waste in the cafeteria.

Carmen Chiong and Neal Aton are the coordinators of the Social Committee, which compliments residential life in a social atmosphere. There will be trips, ice-skating, concerts and a special theme parties, such as a '60's party and a Halloween party.

The Cultural Committee, headed by Kathy Van der Zwaal, will run various trips to historical Philadelphia, jazz concerts, Super Sunday, Longwood Gardens and Broadway.

Also, the Cultural Committee programs activitis in the dorms, such as art shows, with students contributing their works of art.

The R.S.A. puts out a newsletter under the direction of their Communication Committee. Headed by Cathy O'Lanich, the newsletter is published twice a month and lists all the activities resident students are doing.

The Intermural Committee, coordinated by Janice Lynch and Kevin Curley plan various sports activities not in Villanova's sports program. There will be frisby, golf and badgmenton tournaments, ping-pong, tennis, skateboard and exercise leagues for joggers.

The Publicity Committee publicizes all the activities to be held for resident students. The Committee headed by Janine Dunn, posts the coming events in the cafeteria or on the bulletin boards in the halls.

Vice-President Brian Fox, Vice-President/Treasurer Helen Haney and Executive Secretary Alex Oliveri oversee the individual committees and dorms.

According to Coleen Corcoran the R.S.A. "is growing each year. We will be constantly running programs. Because we're young and growing each year, everything is an accomplishment."

"Pit Food"— Delectable or Detestable?

By PAUL VIGGIANO

No one can worship God or love his neighbor on an empty stomach.
— Woodrow Wilson

Food fight!!!
— John Belushi

The Setting
Time: around 5:00
Place: The "Dougherty Chains"
The Dialogue
He: "Hey, what's for dinner tonight?"
She: "I'm not sure. I think it was roast beef."
He: "Oh, mystery meat again."
She: "Whatever it was, it was bad."
He: "Who knows, someday we might get real food."
She: "Yeah, someday."

This conversation must occur at least once every day of the scholastic year. The topic is food or the reasonable facsimile of it. Why have students given the name "The Pit" to the Dougherty Hall dining facility? Can someone commit suicide just by eating a slice of meat loaf?

J. Leslie Gies, Director of Food Services, does not seem to think so. He states, "Our goal and objectives are to provide the finest food and services to the students within financial borders."

The university has hired three dieticians, under the leadership of Mr. Gies and Head Dietician Mrs. Endicott, to plan the meals and provide the students with three "squares" each day. They see to it that various protein and vitamin requirements are met with each cooked meal. They also strive to provide the students with a variety and an assortment of foods.

Some students disagree. "They have the same things all the time," stated an individual, "and whatever they do have is mainly starch." Another student complained that the food is always too greasy. And still another individual commented that small portions are usually served. "Just the other day, I was given one piece of brocolli. When I asked for more, all I received was a mean and dirty look from the lady."

Were there any favorable comments concerning the delectable delights served in "The Pit?" A young girl spoke out, "Yes, the shrimp is fantastic. The seafood is very good and most of the guys usually go crazy when steak is served." Many students argue that the meals in certain dorms (such as St. Mary's) are much better than the meals in other dining halls. What the students may not realize is that there is a certain relationship between living quarters and eating habits.

Director Gies states that every dining hall has at least one floor manager (Dougherty has two) to settle any individual grievances with respect to food quality. These people should be seen first before approaching anyone else.

As the immortal Ben Franklin once said, "Eat to live, and not live to eat." Now will somebody please pass the . . .

Social Science Data Center

By SUZANNE TAVANI

Villanova University, a member of the Philadelphia Federation for the Social Sciences composed of the University of Pennsylvania, Bryn Mawr and Swarthmore Colleges, has opened a branch of the Social Science Data Center (SSDC) for use by faculty and students in the Computer Center in Mendel Hall.

U of P, which serves as the headquarters for the Philadelphia Federation, receives social science studies from the Inter-University Consortium for Political and Social Research at the University of Michigan. These studies done around the country by researchers, teachers, students, and nationally recognized polls, such as Gallup and Roper, are made available to U of P in the form of machine readable (computer) data and in turn make them available to other members of the Federation.

Bruce Conforto ('74 BA, '76 MA), a Ph.D. candidate in Political Science at the University of Chicago, has been hired as a liaison between the Computer Center and the Social Science departments to provide information on th computer organization of data and to instruct those interested in how to research these materials.

It should be noted that the Center does not do research but instructs to show the data may be found.

Conforto emphasizes the fac that in research it is important fo one to use all possible up to dat resources and by miracle of th computer members of th Villanove community can do thi Also important is the technic knowledge needed to use the com puter.

Says Conforto, "I had my fir course where I had to use com puters about six years ago

Back then the use of computer can be compared to the Stone Age, as a graduate student began to improve, and this Cent is just another stop in t progression. Now we have t means to do research in certa fields and also we have access research already done."

Conforto adds, "Right now t University of Chicago's facilit are more sophisticated than th at Penn, and Villanova is hea toward being superior to Penn

Some time in the near futu Conforto hopes to hold a semi to instruct students in how to u the SSDC for their resear When more data arrives, facu and students will be able to t through a catalogue, Guide Resources and Services, and al needed materials. Conforto someone at the Computer Ce will then check to see if the formation is available. If so, a of the data is given and research is a step closer to b complete.

Billy Joel will appear at the Spectrum Sept. 28 and 29.

Billy Joel - No Stranger to the Spectrum

By JEANNE SALVATORE

Billy Joel, talented performer, composer and rock star will be appearing at the Spectrum September 28 and 29 at 8 p.m. He is currently touring the United States and his concerts have been enormously successful. Tickets sold immediately and only a few rear view seats are still available.

Billy Joel was raised in a strictly middle class section of Long Island. He has been referred to as a "stylish hood" because he was much more fashionable, than violent or rough. He hung out with a local group of hell raisers and never officially graduated from high school. He has an attractiveness that enticed "Virginia" while posing a threat to the world of her mother.

It is his ability to write this and other experiences that gives him magnetism. "Piano Man", his first big commercial success, was derived while being financially forced into playing cocktail music. The content of his songs and ballads is essentially realistic, yet are filled with imagination. The Stranger, his latest and most successful album, brilliantly mixes a touch of sadness, humor and sentiment. Yet he also explores the insurmountable hurdles of middle class life in songs like "Scenes from an Italian Restaurant."

Billy Joel's new album 52nd Street should be released soon. It will be interesting to hear some of his new material and his concert should prove to be an exciting and entertaining experience.

Dartmouth Depicted in Animal House

By TOM McCORMACK

If you like the insane comedy of NBC's Saturday Night Live don't miss National Lampoon's Animal House. The film is a spoof on college life in the 1960's and stars John Belushi, one of Saturday Night Live's Not Ready For Prime Time Players. The hypothetical institution involved in this film is Faber College and the action centers around the activities of the members of the college's notorious fraternity, D.T.X., (Delts). The shenanigans performed by the frat reflect the Dartmouth dares of the 60's.

The entire cast of Animal House is excellent in portraying the variety of personalties one might encounter while in college. John Belushi, as the Delt member nicknamed Bluto, is simply too much. Bluto is a devious derelict who symbolizes what the D.T.X. fraternity is all about. Tim Matheson, who plays Eric Stratton, also turns in a fine performance as the suave member of the D.T.X. fraternity. Among other accomplishments, Eric Stratton lures the wife of the Dean of Faber College into his plush apartment located in the midst of the dilapidated D.T.X. fraternity house. Bluto and Eric Stratton along with the other members of the D.T.X. manage to turn Faber College and the surrounding town into a shambles.

For those of you haven't seen Animal House at least once by now: go see this movie. Animal House should be seen by all college students, because to a certain extent the film can be directly related to one's own college experience. For example, food fights and now, Toga parties, which are depicted in the film, are already part of the experience here at Villanova, as they were at Dartmouth 15 years ago. The only fault I found with the film was that some scenes became too bizarre. Nevertheless, I highly recommend Animal House.

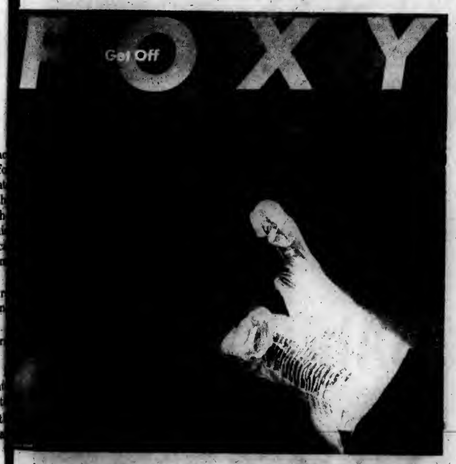
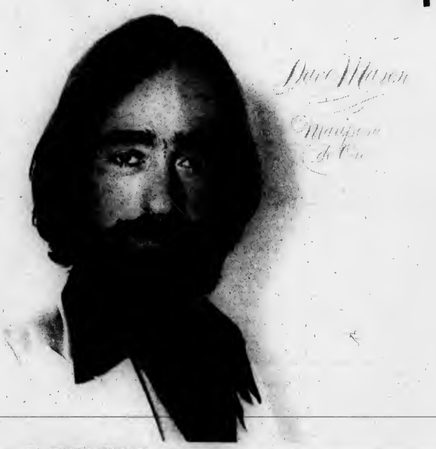
John Belushi, . . . as Bluto, is simply too much.

New In Sound





By JOHN ZAGARELLA

Everybody put on your dancin' shoes and high-step to the beat of Foxy! Foxy's latest album, Get Off, is a slick mix of disco, soul, funk, and the Latin rhumba sound. The album opens with "Tena's Song," an uptempo number with a style similar to the big band/disco efforts of Dr. Buzzard's Original "Savannah" Band. Like most songs on this album, "Tena's Song" is smooth and done with class. Side one continues with "Ready For Love," an easy-going disco melody. "Ready For Love" is followed by "Mademoiselle," the inspiration of which is surely rooted in soul. "You" closes the first side, and the timbre here alternates successfully between disco and Latin styles.

Side two begins with the title track, "Get Off," a presentation of Foxy at their best. The single has been riding the top of the charts for some time now, and can account, in part, for the groups growing popularity. This song is guaranteed to be the hit of the party. While it is far from sedate, it is sharp as a tack, always hitting the mark of quality. "Get Off" is done with a professional touch and is further proof that disco music is worthy of the attention it has been getting. When "Get Off" is over, don't touch that needle! "Lucky Me" follows and will keep the party going strong. "Lucky Me" is centered on the theme of happiness, and its danceable arrangement justifies this theme. "Goin' Back To You" soulfully slows down the pace after all the commotion. This shows Foxy as a competent vocal group as well as a tight instrumental unit. The LP closes with a very satisfying conclusion entitled, "It's Happening," a potent and colorful dancing encore that paves the way for an interesting sequel.

Overall, Get Off is an impressive and very well constructed album. Even if you do not like to dance, this musical endeavor by Foxy always exhibits polish and is highly recommended.

Armed with eleven songs and a twelve string guitar, Dave Mason sits down to produce his latest album, Mariposa de Oro, named after a Villa in California where some of the recording was done.

Together with three of the members of the band that recorded Certified Live, his latest album, and joined by extras such as Stephen Stills and Graham Nash, the L.P. is loaded with the harmonics and guitar leads which distinguish Dave Mason from anyone else.

In contrast to Certified Live, Mason produces an easy-listening, slow-paced album that will capture the ears of every music fan from the rock to disco.

The design on the album cover emphasizes the change of pace. Certified Live pictured Mason in an array of colored lights playing an electric guitar. M. de O. pictures Mason standing quietly in a white suit.

Side one of the album has six cuts that are individually capable of becoming hits. "Don't It Make You Wonder," the first song on M. de O. leaves the listener with no doubt that the album is on its way to becoming a success. "All Gotta Go Sometime," "Warm Desire," as well as the first track follow the tyle of easy listening complimented by superb harmonics nd guitar leads.

Stephen Stills joins the band to make "Warm and Tender Love," a complete vocal success. Side one nds with Mason performing a Carol King hit, "Will You Still Love Me Tomorrow," which is proven excellent by its AM and FM radio appearances.

Side Two continues to enhance he tone of the album adding songs hat combine various styles of music enjoyable to everyone. 'Bird on the Wind," tells the istener "if you want to fly/like a bird on the wind/you've got to give everything." These lines xpress Mason and the boys putting all their talent together to cut hit L.P.

"Share your Love," "So Good To Be Home," and "Words," slow own the tempo of the second side nly to step up the meaning of M.de O. A feeling of coming home o old friends and family after ying around free as a bird only to nd love that will never end, can um up the theme of the album.

"No Doubt About It," the last, ut definitely not the least, song n M. de O., leaves one with the esire to turn the album over and sten to it again. There truly is o doubt about it that M. de O. is estined to become a best seller. ook for Dave Mason to be appearing at the V.U. fieldhouse oon.

Kenny Loggins

By TERRY O'TOOLE

Since his split with partner Jim Messina, Kenny Loggins has enjoyed some success in his solo career. But for many of those boys who brought the rock world tunes like "Danny's Song," "House at Pooh Corner" and "Angry Eyes," it just hasn't been the same.

Nightwatch, the latest release from Loggins, should put worried fans at ease. While "Whenever I Call You Friend," co-written with Melissa Manchester and sung with Fleetwood Mac's Stevie Nicks soared to the top of the charts this summer, the album has eight other excellent songs which make this a very worthwhile buy.

The days of early Loggins and Messina are apparently over for the latter half of the duo. Gone are the folk-inspired acoustic melodies of Sittin' In as this work fits more in the Hall and Oates category of finely-produced, horn backed slick white soul. Produced by Bob James, Nightwatch is a brilliantly engineered album which does justice to Loggins' music.

The title cut opens side one, a haunting tale of search and desire. Next is one of two songs not written by Loggins, "Easy Driver," which is perhaps the best on the album. It's one of those upbeat songs you need to hear bopping down the highway in the car — basic good-times rock and roll. "Easy driver, pull up beside her and roll down the window on this fine machine." The third track is "Down and Dirty," an earthy story of a search for, if not love, at least a little companionship. "Don't you think it's goin' on time we see, if you're gonna' come with me. I bet you, I get you . . ." The side closes with Joe South's "Down in the Boondocks," a harmonica-laced honky-tonk rocker.

Nightwatch's tales of love, illicit, secret, sensual and casual, continue on side two, which opens with "Whenever I Call you Friend."The next song, "What a Little While," hurries along over a boosa-nova type beat, while the third cut, "What a Fool Believes," sounds like it could be off the latest Hall and Oates album. Loggins does not seem to be cheaply copying their successful formula — he makes it work. The next tune, "Somebody Knows," doesn't let the pace of the album slow down at all. "Angelique," the six-minute long close to side two, wraps up the collection well with an almost mystic feel.

Loggins performs well on Nightwatch, putting his voice through a variety of styles, and the album is backed well by the six-man band he has assembled.

Greg Kihn Band

By DAVID FIORENZA

On September 11 and 12, the Bijou Cafe, as usual, presented another extremely talented show in their fall line-up. Headlining the bill was The Greg Kihn Band with comedian-magician Bob Dudac opening the show.

The special effects weren't fancy lights or costumes but very creative rock and roll. Greg played selections from his three albums, including his latest release, Next of Kihn. Highlights of the set were: "Cold Hard Cash," "Remember," "Museum," and "Everybody Else."

They also performed a version of Bruce Springsteen's "For You," which was much better than Springsteen will ever do. This is due to the fact that Greg's band is so tight on-stage. Dave Carpender on lead guitar is very impressive. The rhythm section includes Larry Lynch on drums and Steve Wright on bass.

MODERN AMERICAN SCENES FOR STUDENT ACTORS:

Scenes and Monologues by Important Contemporary American Playwrights for Two-Men-Two Women-One Man, One Woman

Edited by Wynn Handman

★★ FROM CLIFFORD ODETS TO SAM SHEPARD ★★

MODERN AMERICAN SCENES FOR STUDENT ACTORS

DIRECTOR-PRODUCER, THE AMERICAN PLACE THEATRE

$2.95. Drama. 318pp. Pub. Date: September 1, 1978 (ISBN 0-553-12027-1.)

By A. LEOPOLD

Wynn Handman has taught theatre for almost thirty years. His classroom began in The Neighborhood Playhouse School of the Theatre in New York, moved to The Yale School of Drama, and is now back in N.Y. at the American Place Theatre, where he also directs and produces plays. Among his more famous pupils are Michael Douglas, Mia Farrow, James Caan and Burt Reynolds.

His book, Modern American Scenes for Student Actors, is a collection of over fifty scenes that have two things in common; they are from American plays produced in the last three decades and, to use his term, they work.

For the reader's benefit, he introduces each scene with a synopsis of the play and instructions as to how the actor can effectively portray his character and avoid the common pitfalls of his role. He also lists twenty-six acting points and reminders that he has found most useful in class.

The book, however, provides more than instructions for the student actor. It depicts the major trends in American theatre since the 1940's and illustrates the relationships of these movements to the shifts in American society as a whole. MOdern American Scenes for Student Actors is an educational anthology tha can benefit not only the actor, but the audience as well.

Gridders Share Room And Football Talent

Steve Slagle and Howie Long relax in their Stanford room.

By PETER J. RYAN

Aside from playing shoulder to shoulder on the Villanova defensive line junior Steve Slagle and sophomore Howie Long also occupy the same room in Stanford Hall. According to Steve the two became roommates, oddly enough, because of the friendship that developed when they split time at the same position last year.

Steve Slagle comes to Villanova via Elkton, Maryland where he earned All-State honors and the Cecil County defensive M.V.P. award. On top of his football credentials Steve also lettered in baseball as a catcher for four years while netting All-State honorable mention status. These athletic accomplishments were rewarded by scholarship offers from Maryland, Delaware, and Villanova. Academically, Steve is an Education major and plans to teach history after his college years while staying close to football by becoming involved in the coaching aspect. During the off-season Steve enjoys playing basketball and baseball. He also has the distinction of being one of the few football players in a fraternity; LKD.

Howie Long hails from Milford, Massachusetts where he captured All-County, All-State and All-American honors in football. Howie also holds many track and field records for the state. These accomplishments earned him scholarship offers from Kentucky, Maryland, B.C., Michigan and U.S.C. Howie chose Villanova because he felt that he wasn't big enough at the time. Besides football, Howie also competes on Villanova's successful boxing team in the Northern Collegiate Championships. Ultimately, he would like to give pro football a shot, pursue a career in the communications field.

"The center of the offense is Rozantz. He may be the best quarterback in the East, and he'll be the best we will have faced to date."

While the offense has been slow to warm up, the defense has been in mid-season form, allowing only two field goals in two games. "They're a more aggressive and hard-hitting club," cited assistant coach Ken Baker in comparison to U. Mass. "They really come up to get you and their starting lineup is just about the same as last year. Their linebackers are especially active and quick."

Those linebackers are local area players senior Jim Ryan (6-1, 210) from Bishop Eustace High and Bellmawr, N. J. and junior Steve Shull (6-1, 205) from Neshaminy and Levittown, Pa. Tailback Andy Banks, formerly of Radnor High, may see a lot of action, too.

Even placekicker Steve Libassi has performed to peak efficiency. The only field goal he's missed in four attempts has been a 53-yarder which was just short.

About the only thing that William & Mary has done wrong is anger the officials. They were thrown back 125 yards in yellow flags in the 27-3 win against Connecticut.

All-American Eaters Need High Performance Food

By ELMORE SMITH

In the land of the Golden Dome, where the culinary delectations of the Fighting Irish rival those of the great "Diamond Jim Brady" or "King Louis XIV", it is but another chapter in the saga of Notre Dame Football. On the Villanova campus, however, we are beginning to sprout such legendary figures of our own at the Wildcat's training table.

Contrary to the customary diet in the "the Pit" the the menu usually consists of steak three times a week, with filet mignon on game days.

Consensus has it that Pat McAvoy, Chet Zalesky and Howie Long are vying for All-American honors in most return yards to the training table. "Pat McAvoy has them all beat. He's the first one here and the last one to leave," as the training table attendant put it.

Training table is an important asset to every athlete's diet. Lots of protein and few carbohydrates are a necessity to athletes in training. An analogous situation would be to that of a finely tuned automobile. A low octane gas would provide poor performance, whereas a high octane premium would provide a much more pleasant ride. The athlete is much the same way, a finely tuned body must have a high performance fuel to perform up to its maximum potential.

Contrary to the custumary diet in "the Pit" the menu usually consists of steak three times a week, with Filet Mignon on game days. Gallons of milk and pounds of fresh vegetables supplement the Cats' diet.

They basically get the same meal as in the cafeteria with the exception being that the portions are bigger and the quality is perhaps a bit better. Sophomore Howie Long has become somewhat of an architect since he has mastered the art of fitting more food on one plate than anyone thought possible, although Coach Mike Donaher is running a close second.

Although the Cats eat most of their meals with us mere mortals, they eat their dinner meal in the East Lounge after practice. Between the hours of 6:30 and 8, mass (and I do mean mass) quantities of food are consumed with such gusto that even a Schlitz beer drinker would be envious.

In all due respect, however, a proper diet is but one small aspect of an athletic program that leads to a winning season. With a 2-0 record, perhaps Coach Bedesem's program has gotten on the right track and with legendary figures of our own it looks as if training table is paying off.

Two football players enjoy a sumptious meal at the training table.

Injuries Plague Booters Drop Two Over Weekend

By CHRIS BRENNER

This past weekend Villanova's soccer team participated in the Trenton State soccer tournament, where two Division II schools, Trenton State College and New Haven College, scored wins of 4-0 and 7-0 respectively, lowering the 'Cats' record to 0 and 3 thus far in season. Injuries compounded the dismal style of the team's play in both games.

In Saturday's 4-0 loss to tourney host Trenton State, play was even for the first twenty minutes until the opponents' initial goal, which precipitated a swift breakdown of Villanova's entire game.

Sunday's game with New Haven College was dominated by the northern school from start to finish. Definitely the more aggressive team, NHC kept the Wildcats under fire until the final gun stopped the barrage at seven to nothing.

Injuries to linemen Randy Soriano and Don Swete, as well as to halfback Brian Pursel and fullback Don Czipo, weakened Villanova's attack significantly.

"We got the bad game out of our system," assured coach Howard Graff Monday afternoon. "Everyone's back and I'm very confident that we'll do much better from here on in."

That is certainly good news since the boosters have to face national powerhouse Philadelphia Textile in their next match.

"We have the nucleus of a good team," continued Graff. "The next couple of games should evidence that." Look for that optimism to kindle momentum and hopefully a win for the soccer team this week.

Fratello Gets Offer He Couldn't Refuse

By JERRY KNAFO

Assistant basketball coach Jake Fratello has turned down numerous coaching offers since he first came to Villanova three years ago, but finally ran into an offer he couldn't refuse. The dynamic, 31-year-old Fratello will travel to Georgia in early September where he will assist in coaching the Atlanta Hawks professional basketball team.

"I was on cloud nine for a while," Fratello said. "I called Billie right away in Puerto Rico. I explained the entire situation to him, told him the chance might never come along again for me to coach in the NBA. He understood. He knew he would. He's always been someone very, very special in my life."

Fratello will be working under Hawks' NBA's 'Coach of the Year,' Hubie Brown, with on the Hawks' staff. Fratello's assistant coaching duties will include scouting the Hawks' opponents.

"Hubie and I have been friends ever since he was coach at Fairlawn High School in 1965," Fratello said. "We remained close ever since, but I never expected this."

"Mike is an excellent teacher and scout and a very sound evaluator of talent," says Hubie Brown. He adds, "What I like is having a young guy available to communicate with my very young team — Fratello will bring us a refreshing approach."

Fratello is the fourth Big Five coach to make the leap to the NBA, joining Dr. Jack Ramsay and Jack McKinney who comprise the Portland coaching staff, and Chuck Daly, the assistant coach of the Philadelphia 76ers.

The departure leaves an immediate opening to be filled at Villanova. Enthusiastic young assistant Mitch Buonagura has done a commendable job of filling in some of the blanks and will undoubtedly play a key role in this years exciting Villanova basketball team.

Whatever Happened To...

Mike Siani Clearly A Winner

On October 30, 1971, Mike Siani turned in one of the finest Wildcat gridiron performances ever in a game against Xavier. Siani caught 12 passes for 288 yards and five touchdowns, scoring 30 of Villanova's 33 points.

In his three year career, Siani garnered All-America recogniton from The Sporting News (1st team) and UPI (1st team), as well as All-East honors in both football and baseball from the ECAC. Six years after his graduation, Siani still holds virtually every major Villanova pass receiving record.

In the spring of 1972, Siani was selected in the first round of the NFL draft by Oakland. As a member of the Raiders' outstanding receiving corp, Siani performed well at flanker while seeing limited duty, Late this summer, the Baltimore Colts acquired Siani in exchange for All-Pro Tight End Raymond Chester. Most recently, Siani has been in the news for his remarks concerning the abusive use of drugs in the NFL.

They'd (Dr. Robert Rosenfeld) inject me so I could play, just to kill the pain," Siani said. "I was injured at the time, and it (the injury) should have been taken care of the right way."

A first round pick of the New York Yankees at shortstop in high school, an All-American in college, and a respected receiver in the NFL, Mike Siani is clearly a winner.

Meet William and Mary Tomorrow

Another Comeback: Cats Beat U Mass

By TED WOLFF

Don't you believe this team can't win!

For the second straight week, the Villanova Wildcats used up all nine lives, reached into their pockets for miracles and cashed in on spectacular individual efforts in eking out a 25-21 victory over Massachusetts (0-1) last Saturday at Alumni Stadium in Amherst, Mass.

The Blue and White reduced the Minutemen to a team that would lead the game all but the last minute. Villanova, now 2-0, believes that the party is over this Saturday when the William & Mary Indians (2-0) enter Villanova Stadium for the first time since 1972.

But a replica of the week before, Massachusetts, though dominating the statistics, could forge ahead only 14-0 at halftime. Dennis Dent, a flanker who gave the Wildcat secondary flashbacks on 58 and 53-yard reverse touchdowns, gave the hosts the lead. The lead could have been larger, but soccer-style placekicker Sandro Vitiello missed two field goals.

Being outgained 249-74 yards in the first half, Villanova looked like they were on the wrong end of a rout. When Mike Gold lost a handle on the football with 1:38 gone in the third quarter and the ball resting on the VU 38, all one could hear was moans on the Villanova side of the field.

However, the VU defense inspired a comeback after Dave Martin blocked the ensuing punt at midfield and was credited with a 66-yard return for a touchdown. Quarterback Mike McEvilly's fumble led to Chuck Bushbeck's first field goal, a 40-yarder, and Villanova crept to contention at 14-10.

Suddenly, a roughing-the-passer penalty and a hip swiveling swing pass and run by Dent, who finished the game with 222 yards for his team, and U. Mass. went up, 21-10.

"When they scored that touchdown (at 1:49 of the final period), we were really down," confessed Bedesem. "But no matter what they did to us, those kids kept coming back."

The whirlwind finish was sparked by midfield position with 7:10 left. Abandoning the rushing game, QB Pat O'Brien found an unusual target in halfback Greg Bedesem. A 26-yard catch and a leaping grab between two defenders in the end zone put Villanova within five. A two-point conversion between O'Brien and Bedesem, and the Cats were three behind.

An onsides kick failed. Nevertheless, Villanova got the ball back on four downs. A combination of two receptions and a pass interference on tight end Paul Columbia, and the game revolved around a fourth-and-six at the U. Mass. 10.

Bedesem crisscrossed with Charlie Gross as O'Brien's thrown spiral descended towards the sideline. Bedesem soared to receive the aerial, landing just inbounds. Bedesem had caught his fourth pass at the one. Two plays later, Shawn Passman dented the U. Mass line from a yard, and Villanova had its win with 44 seconds left to play.

So much for histrionics. Coach Bedesem and his staff know that the team cannot live on a steady diet of fourth period rallies. And that William & Mary may be just the team to slap his players from their euphoric state.

"We were embarrassed by them last year (28-8 loss)," remarked Bedesem, "and if we don't improve on last year's performance, it will be another embarrassment."

The Indians have very much the same team they had when they totally controlled the game down in Williamsburg last October. Villanova's ball-control wishbone took a back seat to the veer option "I" as the Tribe gnashed out drives of 94, 80 and 43 yards for scores while controlling all but nine minutes of the second half.

Absent are the rushers responsible for most of 329 ground yards last year. Buc back is Tom Rozantz, the quarterback. He is feared because of his ability to scramble the young Wildcat defense with his play-action selection.

The defense will have their work cut out for them tomorrow as the C meet William and Mary.

Sailors Face Poor Winds

Villanova's Sailing Team traveled 12 hours to Notre Dame this past weekend to compete in an intersectional regatta. The Cats were representative of the Middle Atlantic Intercollegiate Sailing Association. It was the first even of the 1978 season.

The races were held on a lake 15 miles from the campus in two man Flying Junior Class sailboats. A weak wind turned most of the races into drifting matches. Michigan took first place.

The Cat sailors were plagued by middle of the fleet finishes and skippered the "A" Division boat along with Greg Lambert for 56 points. Jim Schuster and Rob Sonz sailed in the "B" Division races for 53 points.

Villanova's women sailors earned a fourth place finish in Laser racing on the Schuylkill River last Saturday. Carolyn Murray and Maureen Backe found the sailing difficult due to strong shifting winds. The girls' light weight proved to be a disadvantage in this event, as boats frequently capsized.

The next event is a regatta at St. Mary's College of Maryland on September 30.

Flag Football To Start
Reckless Abandon Looks Best

By TOM McCORMACK

The 1978 intramural football season is underway with approximately fifty teams registered and ready to compete for the first place trophy. The fifty teams will be divided into eight leagues, including a separate fraternity league consisting of ten fraternity teams. Each team will play eight games and from each league the two teams with the best records will enter the playoffs. The playoffs will begin in late November.

The hot pre-season news was that the first and second place teams of the 1977 season, Win, Lose or Draw and The Bearded Ballbusters respectively, had merged. This team will be called Reckless Abandon and will be loaded with established veterans. The offense will feature quarterback Chip Mastie and wide receiver Phil Caruso, while the defense will be spearheaded by linebackers Guy Stofman and Gary Villapiano. Reckless Abandon looks like the team to beat in 1978.

Returning teams who will be looking to knock off Reckless Abandon are: Jaws, Fedigan Pub, and The Outlaws. Jaws are a sound, experienced team and they will be looking for their quarterback, Tony Pasquale, to provide the spark on offense. Fedigan Pub will boast a powerful offense with Marty Badewitz in the backfield and The Outlaws will be relying on stellar running back and captain Rich Sestak to lead their team. All of these teams are expected to be in the playoffs in late November.

In the fraternity league, D.T.D. is favored to repeat as champions. D.T.D. is a well-rounded team with veteran standouts Ken Palladino in the backfield and captain Terry Coughlin anchoring the line. D.T.D. should battle it out with a tough D.P.E. team for bragging rights in the fraternity league.

The intramural football games will be governed by the N.C.A.A. football rules. In the 1978 season, the intramural football league will also adopt the N.F.L. rule of no chucking of an offensive receiver five yards beyond the line of scrimmage. Commissioner Joe Groglio and head referee Terry Byrne have included this rule in order to prevent the outbreak of fights.

Any group of Villanova students can form and register their own team. There are many new teams participating in the league this year and they could provide some surprises. The games are played Monday thru Thursday at Mendel and Austin fields at 3:30 and 4:30. So come on out and support your friends.

Intramural football action is underway.

Robinson Has Goals
Records Should Fal

By MARY GRACE MURRAY

After having a fairly successful freshmen year, Pat Robinson believes she can do even better.

College was not quite what Pat expected. She says, "It was a different setting from high school and the competition was stiffer." Now being mentally prepared and motivated she has high hopes for the upcoming season.

If that is true then Pat's sophomore year should have great results. Setting certain goals, Pat believes she is capable of running the 200 meter run in 26 seconds and the 100 meter dash in 11 seconds. Records should continue to fall all season for Pat if she can fulfill her pre-season goals.

Pat's speciality events are the 100 and the 220, but by running cross country this season she hopes it will benefit her. Running the preliminary heats and trials for the final events can be both physically and mentally exhausting. Therefore, cross country will build up the endurance and strength needed for the indoor and outdoor track seasons.

Pat also gives credit to Villanova success to coach J Thompson. She calls Thompso "the best coach I've ever had." P describes Thompson as naturally quiet guy who shows cares and gets you to motiv yourself.

Since running is basically an i dividual sport, any device or su port from teammates at practi or during the meets is also e couraging. According to Pat the is a closeness with the team whi enables them to help each oth running.

Although Pat is happy she cho Villanova, she believes the co ditions for women athletes cou be better. Being granted a schola ship did not guarantee a room campus for Pat. Therefore, livi off campus is a drawback when comes time for training.

Pat is very optimistic about t upcoming year and if everythi goes right, more records are ca able of falling and the women track team has chances of being powerful squad.

Harriers Meet Hoya

By JAY COOK

In what assistant coach Elliot Baker called "one of the best time trials in recent years," the Wildcat harriers showed that they possess both depth and strength as they prepare to open the season against the powerful Hoyas of Georgetown Saturday, at Belmont Park.

The team will be headed by a host of new faces. Amos Kip Korir, a Transfer from the Community College of Allegheny via Kenya, paced the harriers through last Saturday's trial in a fine time of 26:54. Senior John Burns, the only member of last season's team to finish in the top seven was five seconds behind.

Canadian freshmen Rob Earl and Kevin Dillon crossed the line in third and fourth place respectively. The duo come to the Main Line with outstanding credentials. Earl was second and Dillon eight in the World Junior Cross Country Championships in 1977.

The real surprise, however, came in the fifth, sixth and seventh spots where sophomore Frank Shanan, Freshman Brad Geis and two-year man Chris Rose edged positions on the varsity team. In a gutty display of tal and determination the three wa ons were a pleasant surprise to coaches, but not to seve scholarship athletes who had pected to fare better.

Sophomore Sidney Maree paced the Cats to a third pl finish in the IC4A last year delayed in leaving South Afr and missed the time tri Canadian Dean Childs and Ch Shafer were also absent due minor injuries. All three sho race this weekend.

The following weekend Georgetown, Villanova will the Eastern Atlantic Associa Championships at Belmont P This is a virtual rematch of year's IC4A meet featuring winner Massachusetts, third p Villanova, fourth place Rut Duquesne, Pittsburgh and po ful Penn State.

The Wildcats normally ar slow starting team. They have won an opening meet since I The Hoyas have beaten the Ca their last two meetings.

The race is expected to get dor way at 11:30 a.m. on Bel Plateau.

LCB Charges Four Students

By JOAN BARNISH and NANCY ROONEY

Charges were filed in Radnor unicipal Court Tuesday morning ing four Villanova students for sale of alcoholic beverages thout a license. The charges a result of the recent Liquor ntrol Board (LCB) raid of the t's Eye.

Cat's Eye, a Villanova Union onsored social event offering re-shments and entertainment to llanova students over 21 years age for a general admission ce of two dollars, was ended ab-ptly Thursday evening, Sep-mber 14, after three LCB agents nfiscated four kegs of beer for ged non-adherence to state ws pertaining to the sale of uor.

The four students were notified ednesday morning by certified il of the charges filed against m. Those charged were directly olved in the administration of Cat's Eye affair. One student d sold the admission tickets to agents, another had collected tickets and proofed the LCB icer at the door, and the others arged had served cups of beer to agents.

Villanova University has not en named in the charges. Ed-rd B. Portnoy, acting assistant pervisor of the LCB's Philaphia office, explained that fficient evidence was not avail-e to prove any University in-vement with the Cat's Eye.

"At this time, the University s not been named in the charges cause we have no information at the University ok'd the affair; however, if at the hearing, we receive additional information stating that some faculty was involved, we will be glad to file additional charges," Portnoy stated.

The University, however, plans to defend the charged students and will seek to have responsibility for the Cat's Eye shifted from the students to the University.

According to the Rev. Robert Martin, O.S.A., dean of student activities, "We will work with the students charged and go to Court and defend them. We will act in a supportive kind of role and are behind the students one-hundred percent. In addition, the University will ask to have a motion drawn up to have the charges placed against the University rather than the students. We still believe we were all operating in good faith."

Union President Kevin Smith refused to comment on the student charges or the University's handling of the affair but did state, "The Union will continue programming without alcohol in an effort to keep activities for students available on campus."

A preliminary hearing on the charges has been scheduled for October 10 at 11:00 a.m. in the Radnor Township Building before Justice Nicholas Sellers. The alleged liquor code violation, a misdemeanor, carries a penalty of a fine ranging from 100 to 500 dollars per individual and a 1-3 month jail sentence if the fine is not paid.

Morris Estates Purchased

By BILL GUERIN

After 15 years of meetings and negotiations, Villanova University has finally purchased the Morris Estates.

According to Rev. Thomas M. Mahoney, O.S.A., vice-president for financial affairs, the University paid $750,000 to acquire the 38-acre estate. Located behind St. Mary's; the property encompasses five homes, including the 35-room Dundale House.

During the transactions Villanova also obtained the right of first refusal on the house currently occupied by Dr. Morris. His estate covers an additional four to five acres.

Father Mahoney stated that the houses on the Morris Estate will be used as dormitories if the University receives the proper zoning from Radnor Township. Last year, Villanova's bid for having the estates zoned was refused by a four-to-one vote.

Should the University be granted the zoning, the houses will accommodate about one hundred students. Some repair work, however, must be done to the houses before they can be occupied.

"These houses were not originally built to survive modern-day college living," Mahoney stated. "The houses will have to be rewired and new plumbing installed."

He further explained that through a new program established by the United States Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, the University has applied for one million dollars in aid. This money would be used to help pay for the purchase and refurbishing of the houses.

According to Mahoney much of the newly-acquired acreage will be used as athletic fields.

"With the loss of Sullivan Field through construction for the new University Center, the land on the Morris Estate will be valuable for athletic purposes" Mahoney said.

Mahoney stated that the purchase of the Morris Estates last week is the culmination of the work begun by his predecessor, Rev. John Curran, O.S.A.

"The Morris Estates have always been considered to be very desirable property because they are directly adjacent to the university," Father confided. "They're our land bank for the future."

Political Union Debates Paraquat Spraying

By MARGUERITE ESMONDE

Villanova's Political Union onsored its first debate of the ar on Tuesday, September 26. e topic for debate was: esolved: This house opposes U.S. action in poisoning xican marijuana fields with raquat."

Guest speaker Rev. William Deane, state coordinator for the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML), spoke in favor of the resolution. Rev. Deane maintained that paraquat spraying in Mexico, which is designed to rot the marijuana crops, is not effective since the pot is often harvested before the paraquat can take effect. Paraquat usually needs one to ten days of exposure to the sun to rot a plant. However, if the pot is caught early enough, the only effect the chemical may have is to contaminate all of the pot and to turn some types a yellow color. If enough paraquat is smoked, it can result in fibrosis of the lungs, a disease that prevents oxygen from being absorbed through the lungs.

Deane stated that the problem arises when the paraquat pot is still marketable, despite contamination, and when the yellow pot is often sold as Columbian gold, a more expensive type of marijuana. As a result, some pot smokers in the U.S. are being poisoned. U.S. tests have estimated that about 20% of the marijuana imported from Mexico is contaminated, although the results of these tests are being questioned.

"It's not our job to give them money to poison us," Deane said, referring to the fifty million dollars the U.S. gives Mexico for the program, which was implemented during the Nixon administration in 1973.

Originally, paraquat was thought to be harmless, yet when its true effects were discovered, the program was not stopped. NORML did file a suit against the U.S. government, and as a result the government was ordered to file an environmental impact statement, but allowed to continue the program.

Rev. Deane said that the paraquat may also affect those who don't smoke pot. The chemical is water soluble, and is sometimes washed into the soil when it rains. It could then affect anything later grown in that soil, such as food products. The paraquat may cause deformity in babies of parents who have been affected by paraquat. Some of the chemical may also affect those who eat fruit and other

Educational Opportunities for Women

By MARITA ZAJAC

If you've noticed an increasing number of older women in class with you it could be because of the work of Beverly H. Schorr and V.I.E.W. (Villanova's Individualized Education for Women).

About nine years ago, Schorr herself was one of these women. Now she has a degree of Bachelor of Arts in Humanities and a Masters in counseling.

In going back to school Schorr encountered all the problems and fears of women who, used to years of being a wife and mother, was suddenly involved in a competitive, unfamiliar situation, and created a counseling service for women in similar situations.

V.I.E.W. helps each woman discover what skills she has. In her counseling Schorr looks for the area in which each is most proficient at home. For instance, for a woman who handled the family finances, accounting or business would be a natural area to pursue. A woman who is able to handle sick children might have an aptitude for nursing.

All it takes for these women to find out what they can do is for someone to point them in the right direction.

V.I.E.W. helps schedule classes at times compatible to wives and mothers. V.I.E.W. caters to the increasing number of women being thrust into the single life after years of marriage. There is a great need for a service such as V.I.E.W. to guide women who not only want education, but need it to support themselves and their children.

Most of the women on campus have had some contact with V.I.E.W., either by going to Ms. Schorr for counseling or by hearing about the service after taking a few courses. Any w interested in going back to s or desiring more information attend a meeting on October the North Lounge of Doug Hall from twelve o'clock to o'clock.

Bookstore Prices Compared

By ANTHONY C. ONOFRIETTI and PATRICK FLYNN

At this time each semester, complaints concerning the high cost of college textbooks can be heard from campus to campus — and Villanova is no exception.

The policies governing the pricing of books at VU have been investigated by The Villanovan and compared with those of other local college bookstores.

The Villanova University Shop is a one million dollar per year operation. The man in charge of the bookstore is Director John Bauman.

According to Bauman, approximately eighty per cent of the store price of a textbook covers the wholesale cost of the book. Another three to five percent is attributed to cartage and overhead. The rest of the price," says Bauman, "goes toward the salaries of our personnel and our losses due to pilfering."

Bauman contends that the price of a textbook is consistent between different college stores. The publisher generally establishes the price of a textbook," he stated.

However, there is a logical explanation for a small degree of difference between college shops. "If we have a book in back stock, and LaSalle has to order it new, our price would be a bit lower, due to the differential in publisher's wholesale cost," Bauman noted.

Bauman's stand is supported by Jane Bransfield, supervisor of the LaSalle bookstore. "Books are priced accroding to inventory. No college bookstore prices are cheaper than others." There are certain exceptions, though, as reported by a source within the LaSalle organization: "Books are prepriced and sold through our store. All texts over five dollars are increased five percent, however, which may make our store a bit more expensive."

The University of Pennsylvania, was contacted about the pricing of their texts. Jerry Ritchiee, manager of that store, contends, "Books are marked at suggested retail prices. On occasion, a text costing eight dollars will be marked up to ten dollars. However, our overall profits add up to less than one percent on books."

"Books are priced according to inventory. No college bookstore prices are cheaper than others." LaSalle Bookstore Manager

In addition, St. Joseph's bookstore responded with the same general information, adding the fact that on occasion, books left over from previous semesters are increased to match new editions. Surprisingly, when questioned as to their system of pricing, Temple University had no comment.

How about independent stores? Many of the textbooks that are sold in the University Shop may be found in local full service bookstores. "There would be a larger margin of profit," said Bauman, "so the same book, with a different desk cover, would sell for a higher price."

About seventy percent of the bookstore's business is in textbooks. The rest comes from clothing and items such as notebooks. These products work at a greater percentage of profit, but according to Bauman, "the unit price is so low that the actual profit is marginal."

Any profit earned by the bookstore goes back into the general fund of the University for use in whatever programs need assistance.

Bauman also addressed the issue of the so-called used book store that is operated for scholarship athletes. Essentially, these athletes receive their books for free, with the understanding that they return the books at the end of the year. This idea has been questioned by some factions of the Villanova population as being unfair advantage for athletes.

So how does the University Shop react to this? "We have nothing to do with it," said Bauman, "The Athletic Association buys those books from us, then it's up to them what happens. To us, they're just another customer."

Bauman also added that the ROTC program runs a similar service for its people. When asked why no such policy is set up for the rest of the students at Villanova, he explained, "I understand it has been tried by the SGA in the past. How successful it was, I don't know."

Addressing the suggestion that the University Shop run such a program, Bauman said, "Under our present circumatances, we aren't interested because of the increase in our staff and physical plant that this would necessitate. It isn't envisioned in our near future."

Senate Opens Season

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

In one of their shortest recorded meetings, the University Senate voted last Friday that effective spring term, 1979, all full-time faculty members who are tenured or on a tenure track be prohibited from taking courses within their own department for credit.

Most of the hour and fifteen minutes of the meeting was debate over this motion from the Faculty Affairs Committee, submitted by Dr. James Cleary, vice-president for Academic Affairs.

Joe Cassidy, student body president, proposed that the motion be changed to include all faculty members. Cassidy withdrew this proposal, however, when some senators questioned the position of graduate students who teach courses. Dr. Cleary's original motion was approved unanimously with one abstention.

The Social Action Committee made a motion to prohibit the sale of cigarettes on campus. Dr. Joseph Betz, speaking for the Committee, said that the University should not supply and make money from the sale of cigarettes, "as part of our educative mission." Dr. Louise Fitzpatrick, however, commented, "You can't legislate health behavior." The motion was defeated, three voting for the motion, and 28 against.

An evaluation was made of the Social Action Committee, and a motion was made at the meeting to eliminate the Committee as a Senate sub-committee. Most of the Senators spoke against this motion. Citing the Social Action Committee as the public conscience of the University, the Senate unanimously opposed dispensation of the committee.

Cassidy's motion that credits earned by students while participating in the Internship Program be subsidized by the University was sent to Academic Policy committee for more revie before it will reach the floor.

Astronomers Sight Nova

By LUCY GAGLIARDI

Did an exploding star form the earth and other stellar systems? The answer is still uncertain. However, since September 14 astronomers at Villanova have been observing an exploding star or nova, after receiving an astronomical telegram with news that the nova was in view.

What is a nova? The Chinese called them "guest stars" since they come out of nowhere, shine a few weeks and vanish. Today, science informs us that they are stars which undergo a sudden violent event which increase their brightness temporarily by a million times.

In our galaxy, this phenomena occurs three or four times a century. Thus the recent discovery of such an explosion by Villanova astronomers is a rare and exciting one.

Observing the nova are astronomers Dr. Guinan, Dr. McCook, and Mr. Steven Tomczyk. By the process of photo electric photometry, they are measuring the star's brightness. The nova is usually faint but once an explosion occurs, the star reaches a maximum brightness of 100 million times. This happens in a few days. The expanding gas causes the star's brightness to decrease, and this fluctuation will be observed until January or until it sets.

"The importance of this observation," says Dr. Guinan, "is that you're studying the death of a star's life and interaction of a star's atmosphere when gas expands. It runs into material and forms a shock front, which could form new planets and stellar systems."

Tomczyk, an astronomy major commented on the study of the nova, "It represents a dynamic aspect of the field of astronomy which people aren't aware of."

More information on this exciting field of study is available in the Astronomy Department on the 4th floor of Mendel Hall.

Archaeologists Return from Italian Expedition

VILLANOVA, PA. — A group of students and professors returned this month from a four-week archaeological expedition to Italy sponsored by Villanova University.

Leading the project was the Rev. Joseph C. Schnaubelt, O.S.A., and the chairman of Villanova's department of art and art history, Dr. GeorgeT. Radan, who served as archaeologist.

Members of the group came from colleges and universities all over the United States, including two Villanova students.

Their destination was San Leonardo al Lago, an ancient hermitage inhabited by the earliest members of the Augustinian religious order. Located five miles west of the medieval city of Siena, it was probably founded before or around 1119.

The purpose of the trip was to investigate the development of a medieval hermit movement, which resulted in the establishment of the Augustinian Order in 1252. The residence at San Leonardo al Lago, a key site because of its antiquity, is one of many hermitages whose members united to form the order.

Exploration of the monastery uncovered ancient foundations of buildings erected before the present structure. A major find was a "pozzo," a kind of garbage pit, whose yields held great significance. A coin bearing the likeness of Pope Clement V and the legend, "Supreme Pontiff — He Gave to the Poor," provided a means for approximately dating other unearthed objects. Clement was known to have ruled around 1305, indicating that articles found deeper in the pozzo had been put there before that year.

Documents giving the exact description of the hermitage as it appeared in 1650 were also discovered. They will serve as decision aids for digging future shafts.

The fates of 70 Black Death victims, mentioned in various medieval documents, may be determined in following exhumations. The group found a collection of caskets, made of wood and lead, probably buried by Augustinians who had fearlessly ministered to the needs of the ill during the plague years 1348-49.

The Villanova-sponsored trip also included visits to other hermitage sites, as well as San Gemignamo, Florence, Piza, and Monterigioni, where other historical artifacts were viewed.

A high point of the pilgrimmage came in Rome, where the 20-member group visited excavation sites under St. Peter's Basilica, and came as near as possible to the relics of the church's first pope, St. Peter.

Fr. Schnaubelt is the director of the Augustinian Historical Institute, housed at Villanova University. The Institute researches and publishes the history of the Augustinian Order and maintains an exceptional collection of books, manuscripts and micro-copies on that topic.

Irish Conference Sponsored

VILLANOVA, PA., 1978 — A symposium on human rights in Northern Ireland will be held at Villanova University, Saturday, October 7, beginning at 10 a.m.

It is believed to be one of the first conferences in the Philadelphia area on that topic, according to the Rev. Ray Jackson, O.S.A., director of Villanova's campus ministry office. Campus ministry is co-sponsoring the program with the Ad Hoc Committee for Human Rights in Northern Ireland, a locally-based group composed of prominent Philadelphia area politicians, educators, religious and businessmen.

The program's four speakers are all noted figures in Northern Ireland's political problems. Included are Kevin White, deputy chairman of the Irish Section of Amnesty International; authors Dr. Rona Field and Fr. Raymond Murray, both of whom have done extensive study on violence in Northern Ireland; and Jacqueline Kaye, civil rights activist for the rights of Irish prisoners in England.

Committee member William Gallagher says that the purpose of the program is to affirm continued American interests in the rights of all residents of Ulster.

"People interested in Ireland have witnessed a bloody decade since 1969," says Mr. Gallagher. "We cannot forget our obligation to assure a democratic future to this area where such great sacrifices have been and still are being made for personal, religious and civil liberty."

The conference will be held in room 30 of Villanova's Law School. Admission is free, and a light lunch will be served.

Historical Society Sponsors Symposium

VILLANOVA, PA.--Over 300 scholars from across the United States and Canada will meet at Villanova University for a weekend symposium on medieval history and culture beginning tonight.

The program, "Patristic, Medieval and Renaissance Studies," is sponsored by the Augustinian Historical Institute, housed at Villanova University. It will examine many aspects of the era's scholarly work and outstanding personalities, as well as its society and culture.

Leading the programs' 41 sessions are scholars representing a large cross-section of North American Universities and colleges including the State University of New York, the University of Alabama, the University of North Carolina, Columbia University, the University of North Carolina, Columbia University, the University of Toronto, Loyola University, and the College of William and Mary.

Dr. Deno J. Geanakoplos, a history and religious studies professor at Yale University, will open the three-day conference with a presentation on the contributions of emigrated Byzantine scholars to Western Europe in the 15th Century.

Other topics include the role of women in the Middle Ages, medieval and renaissance literature, art, drama, law and politics, Chaucer, St. Augustine and notable kings and nobles of the period.

Proceedings from the 1976 conference are now available from the Augustinian Historical Institute, featuring 13 of the best presentations made at the program, including its major address by the Reverend Edmund Colledge, O.S.A.

For registration information, call ext. 877.

After The L.C.B...

All The Rights, But One

In the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, you can fight in a war, vote for the President of the United States, be tried as an adult on criminal charges, own your own business, elope without your parents consent and even serve liquor at the age of 18, but you can't have a beer at Cat's Eye.

It sounds like a script from a bizzare movie or television show, but in reality it is the law of the Commonwealth.

This is the law that presides over the Villanova Community and seems to be the one questioned by not only the students and administrators but by the legislators themselves.

Last week several agents from the Liquor Control Board (LCB) raided the first Cat's Eye of the semester on charges that the University was selling liquor without a license.

But later in the week the saga continued with contradicting stories from the LCB and the Delaware County's district attorney's office.

The LCB said they filed charges and the district attorney's office reviewed and approved them.

The district attorney's office denied ever seeing such charges.

Now the story continues with four students being charged by the LCB, who distinctly said that the previous week they had already filed charges.

No matter what the story may be, Villanova is dry.

After everyone is finished trying to figure out who is the blame, the fact remains that Pennsylvania residents who are 18 and older have the right to do just about everything except drink alcoholic beverages.

And until the Law of the Commonwealth is changed, the Villanova Community will have to adhere to the strict LCB regulations.

V.U. Pride

To the Editor:

School pride is a curious thing. Perhaps the majority of us who stroll this campus are not even aware that we have it. Recall all those hours spent in the Pie Shop or library where you loudly proclaimed your dissatisfaction with the Villanova social life, the administration, the lack of facilities, the food (yes, even the food!). Everyone has their own specific complaints and their own peculiar vision of how the school should be run. But a strange thing occurs when you go home. Just let one of your friends from Rutgers or Penn State or wherever question you about what life is really like here and suddenly you are the reincarnation of the first guy to ever wear that funny wildcat suit.

How are your classes? ..... "no problem", you say. The girls? ..... "best collection I've ever seen". The food? ..... "almost as good as Mom's." The parties? .... "you've seen ANIMAL HOUSE, haven't you."

No matter how much we may knock the place among ourselves, we all try to project a positive image of Villanova to the folks back home. There is a definite pride in Villanova among the Villanova student body. All of which brings me to the whole point of this article. Can anyone tell me why in God's name some students are wearing those "Villanova — Notre Dame of the East" T-shirts? I am personally in favor of mailing anyone seen wearing these shirts to South Bend, Indiana and know hundreds of students across this campus willing to help me pay the postage. We are our own school — we have our own name and our own good reputation. Why should we be reduced to identifying with any other school? Is anyone willing to help me send several hundred "Notre Dame — Villanova of the Midwest" T-shirts to the middle of Indiana so that some sort of balance might be achieved?

Sure, they play great football out there, but we've beaten them in basketball and last year only lost by a point on their infamous home floor. And let's face it, when it comes to track Notre Dame can't even carry our shoes. To be perfectly honest, I don't even like Notre Dame (is that sacreligious?) but that, my friends, is beside the point. The point is to have pride in Villanova because it is Villanova, not because you may think that it is the "Notre Dame of the East." (and it isn't — our football team has a winning record.).

Where Do We Go?

In the wake of the LCB's recent campus visit, we seem to be sitting in a vacuum of on-campus social activity. Gone are the Cat's Eyes, the RSA parties, the wing and floor parties in dorms, replaced by an unsure period of anticipation, of unanswered questions.

The void is perhaps most acutely felt by the on-campus resident. While activity continues at local houses and apartments, the student who is stuck in a dorm without a car is really left with little to do. Non-alcohol related programming is now being tried in the residence halls, but its success has been sporadic.

The programming people in the Union, the RSA and the Office of Student Activities have long recognized the need for alcohol-free activities and have sought to offer the most appealing and varied social functions possible. Yet, their success is judged, to a great degree, by student turn-out, and no matter how innovative the programming may be, it is ineffective if no one shows up.

Perhaps it is time to reassess our needs as a student body. An insistence that an activity be alcohol-related to be successful has some frightening social implications, and the failure of several well-conceived cultural activities raises some questions about our values as an educational community.

The nature of on-campus social activities is a hard subject to editorialize, and one can only sympathize with students and administrators responsible for programming. Still, the law is the law, and until the University's position with state authorities is clarified, we must endure.

The Saga of Phillie Phyllis

Since the Phillies are almost assured of a play-off berth in the upcoming World Series, THE VILLANOVAN felt that this article depicting the trials and tribulations of a Phillies usherette would be an appropriate offering for this week's paper.

By VALERIE FENDRICK

The following is the toilful saga of Phyllis the Phillies' usherette. She, while you sunned and funned and/or put in a decent day's work for a reputable firm this summer, was grading meat in a supermarket: superior, prime, choice. (Phyllis remedies this situation by attempting to impress the customer with efficiency and professionalism.)

Flirtatious commentary received by Phillies' usherettes come in degrees ranging from flattering through annoying, and on to obnoxious. Interestingly enough, tips are inversely proportional to such feedback.

The price of one's ticket is a fairly accurate indication as to what type of Phillies fan is found where.

The 500, 600 and 700 seat levels of the Vet command ticket prices of five, four and two dollars, respectively. The fan on such upper levels is the average blue collar worker who under tips (Phyllis has averaged merely $1 per game), over drinks, and tends to be most obnoxious.

"Hey honey, it's my birthday, how about a kiss," is a characteristically upper deck line.

The 300 level seat demands a five dollar fee. In this category, obnoxious patronage falls off and the annoying personality arises. "These are the crabby, average tipping (about $5 per night) people," says Phyllis.

"For instance, if the Phillies are losing, these fans take it out on me," she emphasizes. "If the stadium radio is too low, if someone is cheering too loud, if hotdog venders don't frequent enough, I hear about it."

The cost of a 200 level seat ticket is six dollars. These easy-going people rarely present any problems and prove to be reliable tippers (about $8 per game).

"Here, the male patron has the same instincts as the lower animal forms on upper decks, but they have more class than to show it," Phyllis states. "Their comments come under the category of flattering."

Delux Box or 100 level seats hold the cream of Veterans' Stadium spectators. These boxes are seasonally purchased by companies and very wealthy families.

Such people are most profitable to work for (she makes $12 per game). Customers here are slightly snobbish and for this reason make little or no comment to the usherette.

"Veterans' Stadium was a thoroughly enjoyable summer experience," says Phyllis, "and I hope to participate in its excitement next year."

Is she crazy?

Who's Who and Why

By CAROL GOLDFARB

Although the school year has barely begun, preparations for graduation are well under way. Seniors are busy having graduation pictures taken, preparing resumes and applying for various positions.

Another important aspect of graduation is the selection of students to be honored in Who's Who Among Students In American Universities and Colleges. Who's Who is a recognised institution which honors students destined to become future leaders.

Criteria used for nominating students are: (1) senior class status (to graduate in December or May); (2) minimum cumulative average of 3.00; (3) good disciplinary standing; (4) proven involvement in extra-curricular activities; (5) proven leadership ability.

Based on these guidelines, students are nominated by members of the faculty or members of the administration.

According to Fr. Martin of the Student Activities Office, 180 seniors have been nominated. A committee at Villanova, composed of faculty members, students and headed by chairman Fr. Martin, will choose 48 students to be cited for this honor.

Recognition of the Who's Who honor entitles students to a lifetime use of the National Placement Service, letters of recommendation to employers, local and national publicity and the students complete biography presented in this year's edition of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges.

Some previous Who's Who awards have gone to Birch Evans Bayh, U.S. Senator from Indiana, John Connally, former Secretary of the Treasury and Bob Richards, former U.S. Olympic Champion.

Fr. Daniel Berrigan, S.J.

On Saturday, September 23, Fr. niel Berrigan, S.J. spoke on the ic "Religion and Civil Rights" an interested audience of about persons at the University of nsylvania's Christian Association.

ather Berrigan has been in the lic eye since May of 1968 when took part in the napalming of ft records at a draft board in ntsville, Maryland. This int began a series of arrests for Berrigan for similar acts of est, particularly with regard the presentation of the military in government spending priorities.

In his speech on Saturday, Fr. Berrigan cited the Bible, and especially the Book of Revelations, to explain intolerance, bigotry, prejudice, and other "anti-human forces." He noted that these forces are somehow "super-human" and said that Revelations refers to them as a "beast" that devours the human spirit. The state, and even the Church, when and where it becomes a highly mechanized, self-interested class phenomenon, is a part of this "beast" and, says Berrigan, "the danger for humans is not extinction but absorption."

Fr. Berrigan quoted St. Paul (Galatians 3:28) to illustrate the nature of the Church as the community where you could be free to be yourself in the love of Christ — without stigma of any kind. Father Berrigan learned that during the Vietnam War much of the Church had become a fortress for the American status quo and had lost sight of its prophetic calling. "I learned that the demons were then in the sanctuary," he said.

What can one do to stop the beast? Father Berrigan said that Revelations outlines two tasks for [illegible]. The first is simply the call to tell the truth — cry it out, for the truth is "capable of unmasking the duplicity of the demons." The second is to "do something — modestly, and in human form." Small acts can have great spiritual import for a large number of people, but we must have a realistic view of human change. Jesus did not turn the world around", he continued, "the record with regard to human rights is not much better today than it was back then." Father Berrigan told the audience that change is costly, slow and requires great sacrifice; but many persons taking just one step toward change can be of great importance.

Berrigan reminded the community that the quest for human rights must be concerned with all oppressed people. The idea of acceptance for a particular community isn't enough, he suggested, for after that goal is reached American society would simply find another group to ostracize.

In working for universal human rights, changing laws and drawing up commendments addressing particular injustices is fine, Father Berrigan said, but what we really want to do is "re-shape the system itself."

On Campus

The inconvenience of the construction here on campus seems to have gotten many of the students uptight. It's hard to imagine a fantastic building where parties and other activities are to be held when all we can see is M-U-D!!!

This week's "On Campus" examines some of the upperclassmens' opinions:

"I feel it is very inconvenient for people to go from class to class. It is especially bad for freshmen who have not seen the true beauty of the campus."

Kim Fernandes
Junior

"The situation is an inconvenience now, especially if you have to go between Mendel and Bartley Halls in ten minutes. I feel, however, that it's a good investment that was long overdue. It will alleviate many problems in Dougherty. I'm looking forward to its completion in 1980."

Spanky Lyle
Junior

McKiernan
Junior

"The only inconvenience is going between classes. It is very crowded behind Dougherty Hall. It will be good when it's completed, but in the meantime it's an eyesore."

Maryellen Walsh
Sophomore

"I am a senior and it's a shame that I will have to leave seeing the campus look like this. I hope they're doing more than just moving dirt. I suppose that when it's completed people will appreciate it."

Dennis Walsh
Senior

"I really don't feel it's that much of an inconvenience. The benefits clearly outweigh the inconveniences. I'm sorry I won't be around too long to enjoy it?

FR. RAY JACKSON, OSA

Holding a begger's child Against my heart, Through blinding tears I see That as I love this tiny, precious thing, So God loves me!

Kagawa, the famous Japanese Christian poet, wrote these words while reflecting on God's generosity. This past week the classic gospel story of the wine yard owner was told at the Sunday masses.

He paid all his laborers the same amount of money although some had only worked a brief time. When the others grumbled he admonished them not to be envious of his generosity. Most of us, I suspect, also think there is some unfairness in the owner's magnanimity. Perhaps, because we ourselves are not inclined to be that generous.

All this, of course, is nothing more than a reflection of the Prophet Isaiah's words, "My ways are not your ways; my thoughts are not your thoughts." If we look at the life of Jesus, we see the obvious contrast to our own life. He was born not to affluence but in poverty. It continued in His life — He was not a warrior but a peacebringer. His understanding of religion was different from the ways of the so-called "religious people" of His time. He would not make the law an end in itself but always made love the end. He sought out the sinner and the company of society's outcasts. These are hardly "our ways."

We have problems relating to this message of God's concern and generosity because we think we don't deserve that kind of love. Nor do we see ourselves as caring people. So o.k. we don't deserve God's super abundant generosity. We did little or nothing to merit life, the friendship and love of others, much less the love of God. He is creator; we can only stand in awe and reverence acknowledging our gratitude for His many gifts.

Insofar as our care and generosity goes, have you ever thought of the time, energy, and selfless care that goes with parenthood? Millions of human beings give themselves tirelessly to caring for and helping others.

Yes, our God is a generous God and He calls us to a response of generosity. A letter home to your family, a few extra moments with someone in need — it doesn't take much, except an openness to the needs of others. That's all God asks.

It Ain't Easy Being A Writer

By SUZANNE TAVANI

Dear Features Editors:

This story is about a staff reporter who could not locate her subject matter and consequently (for her) could not meet her deadline.

You see, said subject matter abruptly (and afterwards despondently) discovered that there wasn't a social life at his college and immediately split. Two rumors persisted as to his whereabouts. He either took a bus to a local state or is hitchhiking to that so-called oasis in South Bend to rid himself of his misery.

Well, if you don't buy that "very true" story maybe this one will do the job.

Since the subject matter was supposed to be an ordinary but "different" personality on campus the reporter set out to find the most ordinary looking person who at some time (either day or night) becomes a mixture of talent, gregariousness, and a lot of other suave baloney. Well did the reporter ever find a story!! It was such a good interview that she forgot to take notes — she was completely swept off her feet into a glorious stupor!

Oh boy, that story didn't work either! Well, the reporter didn't think it could (since on her campus could she find the Six-Million Dollar Man or even a reasonable facsimile?)

The reporter after some very heavy philosophic thought (for her that's about 10 minutes) decided to drink herself into oblivion to prevent herself from the suffering that her editors would subject her to. Unfortunately she remembered the story about the guy who left after discovering "that" law.

PANIC!! Certainly not this sweet but determined reporter! No sirrie, she left campus for three hours and called her editors with the news of there not being any news. After that not-so-successful phone call she decided on a new course of action — the French Foreign Legion. But that didn't work either — she couldn't pass the physical!

Well since none of these ingenious plans worked, the reporter decided to join guerilla forces in the first African nation she arrived at.

With that horrible recourse in mind (parting was never so sweet) the reporter hopped the next boat to Africa and decided that she would send a postcard — postage due, of course.

Dave Mason Brings his Golden Butterfly to Villanova

Dave Mason will be playing at the Fieldhouse on Tue., Oct. 3.

By JOHN ZAGARELLA

On Tuesday, October 3, Dave Mason and his versatile band will be on hand at the Villanova Fieldhouse.

While Mason is currently enjoying growing popularity, his success story begins quite a few years ago. Born in Worcester, England on May 10, 1946, Dave began playing the guitar at 14 years of age.

His first taste of success was a roadie for the Spencer Davis Group. It was with this band that he would first play with Steve Winwood, Jim Capaldi and Chris Wood. Later, the four would join forces and create the highly acclaimed and now defunct group Traffic. During this time, Mason performed with Delany and Bonnie and Friends. His first solo effort, Alone Together, appeared shortly after this.

Dave Mason's career then led him as a guitarist for the late Mama Cass, and eventually, he returned to Traffic for a few concert dates.

Mason's 1971 appearance at the Troubador in Los Angeles resulted in his second solo LP, Headkeeper.

In 1972, Dave Mason signed an exclusive contract with Columbia Records and in March, 1973, his first composition for his new label, It's Like You Never Left, was released.

After succeeding with albums such as Dave Mason and Certified Live, Mason was awarded his first platinum (over 1,000,000 units sold) disc Let It Flow. This LP exposed Mason to the AM airwaves with the hit single "We just Disagree." Presently, he is riding high on the top 100's with Carole King's classic, "Will You Still Love Me Tomorrow," on the current Mariposa de Oro (Golden Butterfly) LP.

Opening the show Tuesday night will be Livingston Taylor, highlighting his latest and first contribution on Epic Records. Three-Way Mirror. Liv was born in Boston and raised in North Carolina. He is the brother of singer-songwriter James Taylor.

For ticket information, contact the Campus Information Center.

Spectrum gets Heart

Heart will be appearing at the Spectrum on Oct. 8.

On Sunday night, Oct. 8th, magic comes to the Spectrum in the form of Heart. The songstresses, Anne and Nancy Wilson, who enlightened the music world with the sounds of "Magic Man" and "Barracuda" have just cut a new LP, Dog and Butterfly and is undoubtedly as great as their previous albums, Magazine Little Queen and Dream Boat Annie.

The Wilson sisters are the only group who are their own writers, producers, and vocalists. In other words, they manage the whole show. They are definitely two talented girls, so if you're not familiar with heart, you should be.

Set aside Sunday the 8th and make it to the Spectrum. It has Heart.

Tickets are available at all ticketrons.

Falvey Art and Photography Exhibit

The Falvey Library is presently exhibiting art and photography work which will continue through Oct. 15th. The artists are members of the faculty of the Fine Arts Department. Father Syvinski, who teaches art history and studio art, has some oil paintings with Italian and Spanish landscape scenes on display.

Rosalind Bloom, an art history instructor, displays some various abstract and realistic paintings.

The photographs were taken by Karl Leibold, also in the Fine Arts Department, and are picturesque scenes of her trips to Italy and North Africa.

On Oct. 16th a Phila. artist, Albert Gury, brings his work to be displayed. Oil paintings of landscapes and animals are his main interest.

Sometime in November Fr. Syvinski will have a one man show featuring all of his work.

Throughout the school year, the Art Department will display in Falvey the works of summer students who visit Italy.

In Jan. and Feb. there will be [illegible] several Phila. women artists displaying their work in conjunction with the Women in Art course the department offers.

Also, don't miss the glass showcase outside the reference room. The Univ. of Penn. Museum is sending us a small animal mummy to complete a display of Egyptian objects. Who knows, maybe Steve Martin will be one of them.

There's quite a schedule in art this year. So even if you're not an artist, there's a lot to be appreciated at Falvey.

Paul Solari performed at the Main Point last Monday night.

Paul Solari at the Main Point

By PATI NASELLA

Since 1964 when the Main Point in Bryn Mawr opened, many new faces were discovered. Unknowns who played at local clubs were finally there — the Main Point — the missing link between small times and big times.

People such as Jose Feliciano, Arlo Guthrie, Linda Ronstadt, James Taylor and the list goes on, have appeared at the M.P. as only names. Today they're old friends to us.

His voice had a soft but penetrating quality and displayed his sentiments perfectly in his song for Peggy, "Only For You." It was soft rock, as was "There's Something About A Woman's Touch." He played the guitar beautifully in both of these songs and then moved to a more lively rhythm in his "song about his 8th grade nun," as Paul so candidly said before plunging into this line. "I asked my baby to scratch my back, but when I saw her nails I had a heart attack." Hardly a song about an 8th grade nun, but . . .

"I asked my baby to scratch my back, but when I saw her nails, I had a heart attack."

On Monday, Sept. 25, a local singer and guitarist from Springfield had his debut. Paul Solari, mellow, good looking and a little nervous, had a style all his own. Paul writes his own music, some songs about life in general, some about girls and others about dreams and goals.

"This song is for all the fathers of the world," he said just before playing one of the most sentimental songs of the evening. It was about being nine years old which Paul feels is the best age to be, because after this magical year all the dreams change.

"I Like Your Cakes" was a rowdy enough song to be played for V.U. on WKVU. In this little melody Paul really got the audience going; the sign of acceptance.

David Strong, on guitar, assisted Paul and together they made music that will be heard! Paul has played at various Phila. and South Jersey clubs and says "I had the best feeling when I performed at Stars." Hopefully, the M.P. offered the same feeling because Paul deserved it.

Links, Charles Panati's first novel, is a psychological thriller based on current developments in hypnosis and recent accounts of life after death experiences.

The story centers around a mutual hypnosis experiment conducted by psychologist Ben West between his fiancee, Alison, and a graduate student, Stan. West is eventually unable to control his experiment, and is forced to battle unknown psychic forces for the control of his subjects' minds.

Links provides entertaining reading for a rainy weekend, as it manages to comment on the ethical issue of advancing research at the sake of society without troubling the reader's conscience.

Panati, who received a physics degree from Villanova, has also written two non-fiction books, Supersenses, and The Geller Papers. He is a former science editor at Newsweek, and his articles have appeared in Family Circle, New York Magazine, Reader's Digest, and Redbook.

THE MYSTICAL ELEMENT IN HEIDEGGER'S THOUGHT

292 pp., Hardback

The Mystical Element in Heidegger's Thought, by Dr. John D. Caputo, chairman of the philosophy department, systematically explores the influence of Meister Eckhart's mysticism on Heidegger's later works. In doing so, Caputo compares Meister Eckhart's movement from metaphysics to mysticism with Heidegger's movement through metaphysics to thought.

The book is thoroughly annotated and includes an extensive bibliography and index.

Caputo was chairman of the Annual Heideggerian Conference, held at Villanova this summer. His articles have appeared in The Journal of the History of Philosophy, Listening, Philosophy Today and The Thomist.

"Mado" Flounders in the Mud

By STEVE COMBS

I got my big chance to be chic st Sunday. It was my first signment to review a foreign m with subtitles at the Budco yn Mawr.

The professional critics loved ado. It was heralded as a sen-ive, well acted bit of cerebral ff. However, it was pointless, scure, and boring. Frankly, I ink I'm bright enough to un-rstand a fairly heavy film. But s one left me cold.

The plot picked up after a half ur leader and rambled on for other hour and a half until the ole cast got stuck in a mudhole. erally. For 30 minutes, a dozen ple were caught in this muddy d. Nothing significant hap-ed. Nothing important was d. They just wallowed around in ir mud covered cars and looked perplexed. I know this was supposed to symbolize something but what that was I couldn't say.

The subtitles were amusing. When a character said "oui" it was often subtitled "hello'. Similiar idiotic discrepancies abounded. However, reading them at least gives you something to do.

The only reason I would advise anyone to see this movie would be to get out of the rain. Since Sunday was a nice day, the trip was a total loss.

Polocats Split

Last week the top ranked Villanova Water Polo team began its season. On Thursday they defeated the internationally-ranked Lower Moreland A.A.U. Club by a score of 7-1. Lower Moreland's offensive attack was sucessfully stopped by the tenacious defensive play of Steve Gallagher, Tom Parisi, Ed Opalach, and goalie Jimmy McCarrick.

On Saturday V.U. went to Annapolis to play the eastern powerhouse, Navy. Despite the absence of three of its starters, due to the flu, Villanova still put up a fight, but lost. All-American hopeful, Gary Stanco, was the game's leading scorer with six goals.

Also contributing to the cause were returning veterans, Stan Degois, Elmer Pizzi, and sophomore standout, Jim MacDonald, each of whom scored a goal. Outstanding individual performances were also given by rookie Jim Burke and Tom Schweiger.

The Women's Cross-Country Team.

Next weekend Villanova University will be playing their rivals, Johns Hopkins University, and the University of Richmond.

Women Harriers Edge Two Powers

Villanova's women's cross country team went to Penn State this weekend for the opening meet of the season. Villanova finished 7th out of 13 entries, beating powerhouses Pittsburg and Temple. If this weekend was an indication of things to come, Coach Jim Thompson should have plenty of first class runners to enter in the upcoming meets.

The weather was cool and the course was wet on Sunday, but that didn't stop junior Brigid Leddy from running the 5000 meter course in 19 minutes, 20 seconds, to gain 29th place overall and a personal best. Leddy was closely followed by freshman Doriane Lambelet who finished in 19:25, good enough for 32nd place. Also scoring for Villanova were Maureen Sullivan (20:22), Kathy Thompson (21:02) and Jennifer Whitfield (21:08). Other finishers for Villanova included Cecily Guinnan, Maryann Moon, Mary Ellen Borkowski, Mary Nerger, Margo Leibler and Roberta Johnson.

Thompson was quite pleased with the results of the meet. "We have a very young team and it is still early in the season. I really didn't expect to beat some of the teams that we did."

The team travels to Franklin & Marshall on Wednesday for their only dual meet of the season. On October 1, they compete at the Trenton State Invitational.

Fall Baseball

By PETER J. RYAN

After two weeks of play the baseball Cats find themselves with a 3-3-2 mark. Rain has also been a determining factor in this early season washing out three contests to date.

An opening win over Haverford College was highlighted by an early inning attack that chased a pair of opposing pitchers. Kevin Cooke, Dom Mellilo and Tommy Hank provided most of the offensive power in this victory. After a 2-0 shutout over Philadelphia Community College the Wildcats pounded visiting Textile as sophomore Mark Armelino collected three RBI's and was aided by teammates Tom Harrison and Frank Vittiello.

Defensively, the team has cut down on the amount of errors that plagued them in last spring's schedule.

On the mound, it appears that sophomores Phil Sartori and Steve Skammer have been showing consistent form in the early going. Sartori has yet to give up an earned run. Head coach Larry Shane however, is forced to cut short the pitching time of each man (only two innings) to allow the entire staff equal time.

Coach Shane seems optimistic with the freshmen at this point and is genuinely pleased with the play of his regulars.

Harriers Dump Hoyas — Maree Leads Pack

By JOHN COOK

The Villanova harriers led by Sydney Maree handily defeated the powerful Hoyas of Georgetown 18-40 last Saturday at Belmont Park. Villanova, ranked number five in the preseason IC4A poll, now seems to be one of the favorites following the defeat of number one ranked Georgetown.

Another runner who may challenge Merrick's record is second place finisher Amos Kip Korir. Amos, a junior, was third in last year's junior College cross country nationals and was in contention throughout Saturdays race. He finished seven seconds behind Sydney in 25:39, unchallenged by his Georgetown competition.

"I don't know, I'm just going to run" was Sydney Maree's reply when asked of his chances the morning of the race. And run he did, lowering his personal best to 25:32 making him the seventh fastest Villanovan ever at Belmont Park. Sydney's time is also the fastest since the University of Pennsylvania's Dave Merrick set the course record in 1975. Sydney, a sophomore, doesn't expect to peak until late in the season and may well challenge Merrick's record.

Filling out the Cat's impressive 1-2-3 sweep was senior John Burns. John, the team captain, crossed the tape in 25:53, 11 seconds ahead of the nearest Georgetown runner.

Freshman Kevin Dillon, in his first college meet, ran the five mile Belmont course in 26:17. Kevin surged ahead of several Hoyas late in the race and finished fifth.

Rounding out the Villanova scoring was frosh Rob Earl who was seventh in 26:29. Rob, hampered by blisters, ran a fine race and nearly caught the sixth place Georgetowner at the tape.

Junior Chris Shafer and Freshman Brad Gair finished ninth and eleventh respectively, filling out Villanova's top seven. Brad, impressive in this seasons time trial, ran 26:50 a personal best by 1:49.

The teams first real test will be tomorrow when Villanova hosts the first Eastern Athletic Association championship meet at Belmont Park. Last years IC4A champions the University of Massachusetts, fourth place finisher Rutgers and a very powerful Penn State team as well as Duquesne, George Washington, West Virginia and Pittsburgh will be on hand. The meet starts at 10:30 and may well be a preview of this years IC4A championship.

Massimino Returns — Coached in Puerto Rico

By NATE COOPER

Rumor has it that Athletic Director Ted Aceto had begun looking for another head coach too, but Rollie Massimino finally returned.

After taking Villanova to the NCAA quarter finals, he could have been content to live off the glory for a while; at least through the summer. Instead coach Massimino spent eight weeks in Puerto Rico "imitating Gil Hodges" while coaching the Guaynabo Mets of the Superior Basketball League.

And superior the Mets were. The team was floundering with a 4-8 record before Massimino became the skipper. He took the job after spending part of the summer in Poland instructing the Polish olympic team. Under his leadership the Mets finished with a 19-14 record before being eliminated in the finals of the champion playoffs. Strike up another successful campaign for Coach Mass.

"One of the most gratifying experiences in my coaching career," stated Massimino. "The fans, the television exposure, the players, the coaches they were all outstanding."

The Basketball Federation of Puerto Rico attracts many coaches and officials from the United States. LaSalle's Paul Westhead, Penn State's John Bach, Saint Francis's Lou Rossini and Herbie Brown, formerly of the Detroit Pistons were also involved in the league.

Massimino would not say how many new prospects he ran across on the island, but admitted however, that "there were a couple who expressed interest."

"We have a large alumni in San Juan," he added. "It (his visit) was great for the university."

San Juan's hundred and fifteen alumnus will have an opportunity to see Villanova face the Puerto Rican olympic team during Thanksgiving.

The success of Massimino's Mets delayed his return to Villanova, but he has settled back into the old routine while preparing for the upcoming season. When asked about this year's team, he points quickly to a tough schedule and makes mention of the players' inexperience. The Wildcats lost three starters from last season.

"This is a hard working group," he goes on to say. "We're uncontested, the schedule is challenging, but we're going to be great to watch. This team has lots of character."

It appears to be another exciting campaign for Coach Mass.

Booters Meet NCAA Talents

By CHRIS BRENNER

Villanova's injury-laden soccer squad, struggling in the midst of a six game stretch with NCAA tournament powers, sustained two more losses this past week at the hands of Philadelphia Textile and Haverford College. The defeats marked the fourth and fifth of the season for Villanova.

Villanova unable to field any of their five first-team linemen as lingering injuries continued to harrass many of the players. Textile, probably the biggest soccer power in the east, picked up the skinning of the Cats where the injuries left off, eventually winning, 9-0. Dave McWilliams had three of those nine for the winners.

The booters did, however, display some reassuring skill last Saturday against Haverford College. Bouncing back from the Textile drubbing, Villanova nearly eeked out a thrilling victory over its Main-Line neighbor, losing heartbreakingly in the last minute of the contest, 4-3. Dave McHugh provided the fireworks on offense for the Cats as he scored all three Villanova goals from his halfback position.

Coach Howard Graff commended his team afterward for their "tremendous effort" in coming off the loss to Textile to play such a superb ball against Haverford.

"We have two big games left (Penn tomorrow and Temple next week) before we hit the lighter part of our schedule where we can even things up," stated the coach earlier this week.

Karate

The Villanova Karate Club is holding a karate tournament tomorrow in the Fieldhouse. Events begin at 12 noon and will continue until 6 p.m. Admission for the afternoon's events is $1.00 for students and $2.00 for adults.

In the evening the club is hosting the U.S. Kick-Boxing Eliminations in the Fieldhouse. Amateur bouts featuring Villanova and Bucks County Community College will precede the professional bouts. Tickets will be available at the door for the evening fights. Student admission is $2.00.

Anyone interested in joining the Karate Club should come to practice on Tuesday and Thursday nights at 7:00 p.m. in St. Mary's Hall Recreation Room.

Swimmers Recruit Strong Freestyler

By BETH WHITE

Coach Ed Geisz and his swimming Wildcats hope that the 1978-79 season will be better than last year's disappointing five wins and six losses. Although five members of last year's squad graduated and 2 more swimmers were unable to return, the team's co-captains, Kevin Quinn and Eric Wenger, are optimistic that the team's 16 returning lettermen and five newcomers will pull the team up to a winning season.

Along with winning a majority of the 13 scheduled meets, the team hopes to beat La Salle and East Stroudsburg in particular, both of whom are long-time rivals. The swimmers and divers face tough competition, notably Army and Navy, two of the nation's best teams. With a lot of hard work and the new recruits, co-captain Kevin Quinn feels that this could be one of the Wildcat's finest seasons, possibly sending either the relay team or individual swimmers to the NCHA competitions at the end of the season.

The brightest hope for the Wildcats is freshman Cameron Lawrence, an American Indian from Santa Clara, California. His sensational records in the 50, 100, and 200 meter freestyle events should strengthen the Cats already dominant freestyle force. Dan Ahern, last year's runner-up of the National Catholic High School swimmers, should help to fortify the backstroke and individual medley departments. Matt Rafferty, another freshman, will swim in the 100 and 200 meter butterfly this season. Todd Russell, a transfer student from Duke University, is unable to compete this year but will prove to be an invaluable asset to the Wildcats in the future. Freshman Steve Tue from Cherry Hill, New Jersey, joins senior Ted Klinges and sophomore Mark Feldner on the diving team.

The team is also counting on its veteran swimmers to pull them past their tough competitors. Co-captain Eric Wenger, who hopes to have an even better season than last year, leads off the strong freestyle swimmers and is in the freestyle relay, one of the Wildcat's best events. Bob Baltera and Tom Popdan join him by swimming the 100, 200, and 500 meter free. Kevin Connors, last year's most improved swimmer, exhibits amazing talent in the breaststroke and individual medley. Junior Steve Quindlen swims the butterfly, rounding out the list of the team's top swimmers. With all of this obvious talent, the team hopes to perform better in both individual races and in the medley relay.

Gridders Fall To Indians Lose 17 - 0 Lead

By ELMORE SMITH

In contrast to their last two outings, Dick Bedesem's Wildcats were unable to come up with the last minute heroics that previously brought home the win. In the first half, the Cats played almost flawless football, scoring 17 points in the second quarter. The third period began with the Villanova University offense ripping a hole in the William and Mary defense and Greg Bedesem scampering for a nine yard gain. An additional 15 yds. for pulling the face mask, put the Cats in good field position at the William and Mary 31 yd. line. It looked as if the Cats were taking up where they had left off in the first half.

The William and Mary defense then tightened up, forcing Chuck Bushbeck into missing a 27 yd. field goal. Shortly later, the Indians defense blocked a Joe Borakiewicz punt, giving them a first down on the Cats' 6 yard line. For the remainder of the afternoon the Cats were unable to gain back the momentum. Andy Banks scored on a one yard plunge and the Villanova lead was cut to ten, with 2:30 left in the third period.

The Indian defense forcing a poor punt then resumed the ball control offense that stopped the Cats last year. "All we wanted to do was try and keep the ball away from them, like we did in the first half," said exasperated Dick Bedesem.

On the next drive on an apparent mix up in defensive assignments, the Cats were caught off guard and Indian quarterback Tim Rosantz capitalized by hitting wide reciever Ken Cloud with an 18 yd. scoring strike. After forcing another Villanova University punt, Rosantz directed the Indian attack on a well engineered drive of 71 yds. Converting on several key third down situations, Rosantz capped the drive with a one yard toss, again to Ken Cloud; giving the Indians a four point lead, with 6:35 to go in the game.

The Cats were given their last chance at a reprieve, but it appeared that it just was not meant to be. William and Mary had the momentum, and just would not yield to Pat O'Brien and the rest of the offense. The Cats turned the ball back over to the Indians with 3:53 to go, who eventually ran out the clock. With nationally ranked Clemson up next, the Cats must regroup and prepare for their toughest challenge.

NOTES — Wildcats Charlie Kelly and Greg Bedesem were named by Jon Marks of the Philadelphia Journal as St. David's Ian Players of the Game . . . For the second straight week, LB Dan Burke (21 tackles) led all tacklers. He leads fellow 'backer Anthony Griggs in total tackles, 55-45 . . . Two third-quarter TDs, one on a 56-yard scamper by Gene Filipski, lifted the Cats past Clemson, 14-7, in 1952, their last meeting. Coach Bedesem backed up Filipski at halfback. Villanova is one of only nine clubs to have a winning record against Clemson in "The Pit." . . . On Sept. 24, 1955 63,409 people attended the Villanova-Baylor game at Municipal Stadium. An expected 50,000 turnout will be the largest crowd to watch Villanova since that date . . . Villanova gained 22 yards, two first downs by penalty in the second half.

Ruggers Sink Navy

By S. WINE

On Saturday, September 16 the Villanova Ruggers opened what will hopefully be a very successful season with a 20-13 come-from-behind victory over the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland. This victory was the result of a week of hard practice before the game, and an intense week of partying at the second Annual Training Camp held in Stone Harbor, N.J., the week before practice formally began at school. The next Saturday the Cat Ruggers lost 18-8 to the Middletown Hibernians.

The training camp opened on September 2 with the arrival of some fine summer weather and such notables as "Verge" Redmond, "Harvey" Glennon, "Captain Blue", "Redbeard" Rosato and Company, Tim "Blow Your Lunch" McCarthey, "Orca" Rathz, and Wild Turkey. For the next six days there was nothing but sunny days and hard drinking nights as case after case of Miller was quaffed, and bottle after bottle of Wild Turkey and several other brands disappeared.

The best part of the last weeks was the win over Navy. The first half started off typically as the Cats fell behind 6-0 as a result of some sloppy play. In the second half Nova came out firing. Tom Rosato went around the corner for the first score to make it 6-4. A few minutes later Gio Regina scored a try to put Villanova ahead 8-6.

A lapse in the V.U. defense with about 20 minutes to go cost them the lead as Navy went up again 10-8. Rick "Hoon Man" Donahue sprinted in for the third Villanova score which gave them a 12-10 edge. The Middies scored on a penalty kick and the lead changed hands for the fifth time as they went ahead. The Cats would not fold either as Denny "Ralph" Coughlin scored on a fine run to give V.U. the lead for good at 16-13. "Captain Mike" Abele scored an insurance try to ice the game at 20-13.

The "B" and "C" teams were not as successful as they both went down to defeat.

This Saturday the Ruggers open up their home season with a very important match against Lancaster. Game time is 1:30 and the field is right across Lancaster Pike from the football stadium.

Volleyball Takes Two Meets

The Volleyball Team successfully opened its fall season last Monday night with two victories in a tri-meet that was held in Butler gym. The girls, under the coaching of Mrs. Jennings, decisively defeated Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Science and Harcum Junior College in a best of three series.

The team was first matched up against Pharmacy, and after a couple of tight moments went ahead to win 15-12. Pharmacy, tried to make a comeback in the last few minutes of the second game, but Villanova held them off and won 15-13. The squad received much support from captain Kathy Morris whose serving helped the team score seven consecutive points in the middle of game one.

The girls then went on to resoundingly defeat Harcum by the scores of 15-4, 15-6. The Harcum girls were no match for Villanova, who demonstrated much more style and coordinated effort than Harcum did in moving the ball across the net.

Last year Pharmacy defeated Villanova, so this week's win was an excellent start for the season. Senior Kathy Morris, a three year veteran, said, "the team looks much stronger than it has in the past and has a chance of doing well this year." The team is young, but has depth. With the help of juniors Karen Hanna and Erika Vazzalluzzo and freshmen Sarah Hoyoke, Lisa Ortlip and Joanne Canuso, it looks like the beginning of a winning season.

Women's Hockey Strong Offense

By MARY GRACE MURRAY

The Villanova women's field hockey team dominated play in their first two games but lost their opener 2-1 to Bryn Mawr College. The second game was one-sided as Villanova completely handled Philadelphia College of Bible (PCB), 11-0.

Villanova's Field Hockey team lost to Bryn Mawr 2-1 last Friday.

Sandy Arena, the offensive power of the team, scored six goals in the two games. Arena scored the only goal against Bryn Mawr and pounded PCB for five goals while assisting on three others.

Arena said the game against PCB was "a team effort" and the players were "more accustomed to playing together."

Although Villanova dominated play against Bryn Mawr, outshooting them 31-5, their loss came about due to costly defensive errors.

The victory over PCB was a complete offensive fiesta as five players scored for Villanova, Arena (5), Lisa Alderfer (3), Debbie Fratantoni (1), Debbie Smith (1), and Kathy Martin (1). The team outshot PCB 37-2, with both PCB's shots coming in the first half.

Coach Cathy Miller says she has great depth on the varsity squad and once their stick work is together they should continue to win games.

Games this week include Kutztown and LaSalle away.

Chris Ford Unselfish Example

Former hoop coach Jack Kraft presents Chris Ford with a ball for his 1000th point.

By BILL MILLER And DAVE SCHMIDT

Occasionally an athlete comes along whose statistics don't fully reveal his true worth to his team. Villanova's 1972 basketball captain, Chris Ford, is such an individual. At 6'5" and 190 lbs., Ford was a model of versatility for the Wildcats, playing both guard and forward.

As the 11th leading all-time scorer at Villanova, (15.7 ppg.) Ford compiled an enviable list of awards, including the MVP trophy in the Big Five for 1972. Performing for coach Jack Kraft, the Wildcats with Chris Ford were 65-21 over a three year span.

Picked by the Pistons in the 1972 pro draft, the Atlantic City native has made a solid contribution to Detroit as their playmaker. Going into his seventh year in the professional ranks, Ford has played in 267 consecutive games and has been among the league leaders in steals for the past two years.

A perennial team leader in assists, this year Ford will be asked to sacrifice his playmaking role to teammate Kevin Porter. Ford will be counted on to spearhead the Pistons defensive effort.

Acknowledged as Villanova's all-time assist leader, Chris Ford's unselfish attitude and competitive spirit serve as a model for Wildcat cagers.

LCB Sparks Student Protest

Fifty Demonstrators Block Lancaster

By BILL GUERIN
and STEVE HAGGERTY

Last Friday afternoon, approximately 150 Villanova students assembled at the intersection of Ithan and Lancaster Avenues to protest the recent actions of the Liquor Control Board (LCB) on campus.

The demonstration included the blocking of Lancaster Avenue for several minutes by 50 or more students. The protest was promoted by posters in the campus dormitories and by word-of-mouth. The organizers of the rally are not known.

Students began to gather near the old entrance on Ithan Avenue around 4:00 p.m. as the afternoon traffic increased.

One of the first to arrive, sophomore Michael O'Brien, carried a sign that read "Never Mind, We'll Get Beer."

"I'm hoping this protest will get more students interested in making our school more social and less pathetic," O'Brien stated.

Student Union President Kevin Smith went through the growing crowd asking the students to leave the area.

"The protest will do no good," he said. "Please, please drop the charges of the four students being prosecuted by the LCB."

Despite Smith's efforts the demonstrators began clapping their hands and moving toward Lancaster Avenue. Then a section of the crowd sat in the street and halted the rush-hour traffic.

The remaining students lined the road cheering and clapping. Some displayed banners, one of which read, "We Need to Stew, There Is No Brew, What Should We Do?"

While the demonstration continued, Student Government Association Representatives, led by President Joe Cassidy, passed out flyers that described the rally as "inappropriate." The hand-outs also gave notice of an SGA sponsored demonstration to be held in front of the LCB office in Philadelphia on October 13.

"This protest is a disgrace," Cassidy stated. "It will only aggravate the judge hearing the case of the four Villanova students. The students should go down to LCB headquarters and protest there."

The blockade lasted about five minutes. At that point, the cars began to inch their way into the crowd. Dean of Men Allen Wechsler urged the students to return to the sidewalk, ending the barricade.

SGA Organizes Own Protest

Two Sullivan protesters display their displeasure with the LCB.

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

To protest Pennsylvania's legislation regarding the consumption of alcohol, the Villanova Student Government Association will organize a demonstration in front of the LCB headquarters at the State Office Building in Philadelphia on Friday, October 13. The SGA hopes to enlist the support, not only of Villanova, but also of the Universities and Colleges in the area and across the state, said Joe Cassidy, student body president.

The rally will be held in front of the LCB headquarters because "the LCB enforces the law. They stand out in most people's minds regarding this," said Cassidy.

Buses will probably be provided for students to come to the Philadelphia rally, which will take place between 11:00 a.m. and 3:00 p.m. Cassidy added that the Paoli local train stops two blocks from the site of the demonstration, Broad and Spring Garden Streets.

A representative from the Civil Disobedience Squad will be assigned to this demonstration to keep the rules of peaceful assembly. The SGA plans to have TV, radio, and newspaper coverage.

Cassidy said the SGA opposed the rally which was held on campus last Friday because "by tying up Lancaster Pike, you only influence the decision of the judge who is hearing the case of the four Villanova students charged with liquor violations."

"Since we're putting in a lot of time and effort to get this organized, it should be more successful and more effective than last week's rally," said Beth Dalena, student senator.

In addition to the Friday the 13th demonstration, the SGA will hold a preliminary rally on Thursday, October 12 between 12:30 and 1:30 in the Villanova Fieldhouse. Candidates running for the legis-

Connelly Donates $ 4.8 Million

Center To Be Named After Contributor

By JOAN BARNISH

The Connelly Foundation of Philadelphia has donated a gift of $4,800,000 to be used to underwrite the cost of the new university center.

It was learned in August that the principal donors to the Connelly Foundation, John F. Connelly and his wife, Josephine C. Connelly, would donate the money for the center now under construction.

In accepting the gift, the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., university president said, "This magnificent expression of generosity on the part of the Connelly family is destined to affect the lives of many people for years to come."

"Such a manifestation of confidence in the university requires an even greater dedication to those ideals of academic excellence and high moral values which have been a Villanova tradition," continued Fr. Driscoll.

Connelly, a Board of Trustee member at Villanova is the president and chairman of the board at Crown, Cork and Seal Co., Philadelphia.

The new building, to be known as the Connelly Center, will be the major facility for non-academic activity on the campus for both students and faculty.

At a cost of approximately six million dollars, the center will cover 70,000 square feet in the heart of the campus.

It will provide a place and a schedule of activities that will blend classroom instruction with the social, cultural and recreational dimensions of the Villanova educational process.

The building, to be completed by the Spring of 1980, will offer in addition to the professional staff numerous student employment opportunities.

Conference Fosters Campus Leaders

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

On Saturday, September 30, some 100 officers and members of Villanova's registered student organizations assembled at Dougherty Hall for the first Leadership Conference sponsored by the Student Committee for Organizational Development (SCOD).

The SCOD is composed of six students — John Rowland, president of Republican Club, Gail Frederick, of Delta Kappa Nu, Maryellen Boyle, vice-president of operations for the Villanova Union, Little Mac Anderson and Ellen Tracy, chairpeople on SCOD, Sparky Lyle, president of Tau Kappa Epsilon and Steven Steckler, assistant dean of student activities.

Saturday's conference was a result of the committee's work with Student Activities.

The Conference began with opening remarks by Sparky Lyle, who outlined the goal of the conference to promote organizational development among Villanova organizations and to aid those organizations that may need outside help.

The Conference then proceeded with a series of 5 seminars on topics relative to student leadership.

The Rev. Robert Martin, O.S.A., dean of student activities, began the day with a Student Activities Presentation which included discussions of requirements that an organization must meet before becoming an established group; they include having 10-12 members, elected officers, and a moderator.

Father Martin also detailed the processes involved in budget requests, expenditures, fund raising, and reservations of space. With regard to the latter Martin stressed the importance of planning ahead, noting that organizations can reserve areas in Dougherty Hall, Bartley Hall, the Fieldhouse, athletic fields, gyms, and Alumni House now through December, 1979.

The second event of the day was an Assertiveness and Effective Leadership seminar conducted by Jack O'Brien, assistant program director for the Villanova Union. O'Brien illustrated leader-member difficulties in communication through a series of sketches, encounters, and talks. Assertiveness, specifically honest communication of one's feelings, was suggested as one such solution to organizational conflicts.

Decision-making was the third topic for discussion. Director of the discussion was Steven Steckler, who dealt with the basic difficulties confronted in making decisions. Steckler also considered the methods of coming to a decision within a group setting. Illustrative of this was a hypothetical life or death situation involving the mythical hijacking of an airliner and the selection of the most qualified passengers to deal with a terrorist situation.

Following Steckler was Lucy Gorsky, program director for the Villanova Union, who conducted a module on recruitment, Retainment and motivation. Gorsky distinguished between active and passive recruitment; the former being exemplified by an organization's participation in the Student Activities Forum, while sitting around and waiting for people to join would be typical of the latter. Gorsky emphasized clear goals and the development of a marketing strategy for organizations to aid in qualitative recruitment.

The final meeting of the day was an instructional event on how to run an effective meeting. Outlines for improved meetings included considerations of environment, accessibility, presentational skills, and personal interaction between speaker and members.

SCOD was formed on Tuesday, Sept. 19 and began its work on an equal representative basis with Student Activities.

John Rowland deemed the conference a success stressing the fact that this year's conference was entirely student run, whereas last year's event was conducted by an outside organization. He also discussed the nature of SCOD: "The Student Committee will aid any organization experiencing difficulties," Rowland stated, "we will act in an advisory nature. SCOD will now become a formal committee and continue with leadership conferences annually, if not semesterly.

SGA Rally

lature were invited to this rally, along with Villanova faculty and administrators. Dr. Robert Langran and Dr. Jeff Hahn, both of the political science department, are expected to speak. Hahn is running for state legislature in this district.

Working with tacit approval from the Dean of Student Activities and the Vice-President for Student Life, the SGA is preparing Villanova and non-Villanova students for the rallies.

A table will be set up in the pie shoppe early next week to enlist student support for the demonstration. Yesterday, meetings were held with hall presidents, organization presidents and student body presidents of local colleges.

Dave Blachly, student caucus vice-president, drafted letters to universities across the state, explaining the alcohol situation on Villanova's campus. In these letters, the SGA asked colleges to hold demonstrations on their campuses or at nearby LCB offices. The letter encouraged colleges to invite candidates running for legislature to attend the demonstrations.

The SGA will also have a voter registration drive on campus. "We are encouraging all students to register to vote in this legislative area," said Cassidy. He added that the SGA hopes to obtain the roll-call vote of the last amendment to alcohol legislation presented in Pennsylvania.

Dorm Disturbance

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

Last Saturday night, the Radnor Township Police interrogated two Villanova student who, while intoxicated, had physically threatened Villanova Security guards and RA's in Good Counsel Hall.

At 1:00 p.m., two minds off-campus students came to Good Counsel Hall to visit a friend. In a drunken state, one began to verbally and physically harass Don Graham, a Stanford Hall RA. The Good Counsel RA on duty, Saralee Keller, called security.

Sergeants Rocco DiSciascio and Louis Travaglini arrived at the dormitory and asked the students for their ID cards. They did not have their ID's, and since they could not identify themselves, they were assumed to be trespassers, said Travaglini.

The students proceeded to threaten the security guards, and the guards called the Radnor Township Police.

The police questioned the two students and recommended that disciplinary action be taken through the University.

According to Travaglini, the girl whom the students came to visit refused to declare them as her guests. "You (resident students) are responsible for your guests," he said.

The girl, however, claims she did tell security that the two students were her guests. She said she believes "security was not concerned with the problem immediately. They seemed to be more concerned with the image they were projecting."

"We're going to quell the problem," said Travaglini. "We can't afford not to. Security is your greatest friend or your worst enemy. It is what you make us. We're going to do the job. Students must co-operate with security," he said.

The two students had officially broken two University handbook rules. First, every student must have a Villanova ID card with him at all times, and must surrender it to any authorized person upon demand. Secondly, any action or behavior, including a threat, which endangers the safety of others or causes injury to another person on University property is prohibited.

The two RA's submitted statements to Villanova Security. Security sent the report to Allan Wechsler, dean of men. Disciplinary action will be taken through the office of the Dean of Men.

VU Student Seeks State Office

By ANTHONY C. ONOFRIETTE

Kathy Scott is a Villanova senior, an honors major, and come this November, democratic candidate for State legislature from the 156th district — Chester County.

Kathy, 21, resides in West Chester. She is extremely active in such groups as Common Cause and the Association of Non-Resident Students (ANS), of which she is secretary.

Why did she decide to run? "I feel I can do a good job. My opponent is a much older woman, running for re-election for the first time." What about issues? "I'm basically running for higher education, and to bring a closer line of communication to the people from Harrisburg."

Is the age a factor? "Yes, definitely! Most of the constituents from my district are much older. Would this stop you from achieving your goals as a State Representative "Not at all. I feel the State Legislature is really corrupt. They don't really care about the people in their districts. Once they are elected, they don't show up again in the district for the rest of the term. I'd try to keep the district as well informed as possible."

What have been your major opposition thus far? "No one has said anything to me yet at all! I think that's their strategy — a sort of 'out of sight, out of mind' tactic." What about your stand on controversial issues? "Well, I'm for a national drinking age of 19 because kids should not have to go across state lines to purchase alcohol. Also, I feel marijuana should be decriminalized. I'm against capital punishment because I feel the victims still suffer or are punished more than the offender. We need a better system of penal reform."

How are the election and campaign going? "It's very slow. I have to do most of the work myself, in between classes at VU. I have people working with me now part-time. If anyone would like to help, it would certainly be appreciated."

How has VU helped in your decision to run? "I was influenced greatly by the Political Science department. The administration hasn't contacted me directly, but I'm certain that they're behind me!"

What has the election done to you personally as far as you are concerned? "Win or lose, it has been a great educational process to have seen how a campaign works. I'm definitely going to make a career out of politics. It helped me greatly in that respect."

that the statute of Pa. be changed such that individuals who are 18 years of age or above be permitted to consume alcoholic beverages.

I believe at the age of 18 we generally assume the rights, duties and the responsibilities which come to those who hold majority status in this Commonwealth. Examples of this are abilities to : contract, vote, be tried and prosecuted in a criminal court, abort a child and to be drafted into the armed services.

If you feel as I do, then please join me by pledging your support to the Student Government Association located in Room 204 Dougherty Hall. We shall hold a preliminary demonstration in the Field House on Thrusday, Oct. 12, 1978 at 12:30. A follow-up demonstration will be held at the State Office Building at Broad and Spring Garden on Oct. 13, 1978 (parking available) between 11:00 and 3:00.

You are all cordially invited to help us change Pa. Legislation regarding the consumption of alcoholic beverages. Help us help you by attending the demonstrations. SEE YOU THERE.

Joseph T. Cassidy
Student Body President

To the Editor:

I was appalled to learn about the Liquor Control Board's raiding of the Cat's Eye and the subsequent bringing of criminal charges against four students. Pennsylvania would be a lot better off if the L.C.B. was abolished and if the sale and control of alcoholic beverages was turned over entirely to private enterprise. Certainly, taxpayers' money could be spent much more constructively than subsidising a bunch of bureaucrats who engage in police state tactics to intimidate people into complying with their absurd, arbitrary edicts and regulations. The L.C.B. agents argue that they are "protecting" people by enforcing the drinking age limit and the rest of their restrictions; however, far more people are harmed through alcoholic beverages. Existing laws against vandalism, disorderly conduct, etc. can be used to effectively handle the relatively few people who violate the rights of others while under the influence of alcohol without necessitating L.C.B. restrictions which penalize responsible consumers and sellers of alcoholic beverages.

Kent State It Wasn't. . .

Right Idea, Wrong Setting

THE NEW REVOLUTION

While no one seems sure just what last Friday afternoon's rally was designed to accomplish (to protest the LCB's supposed "harassment" of Villanova? to urge state legislators to lower the drinking age? both?), or exactly who organized it, or exactly what was to be done once the masses gathered, the event took place — raising some interesting observations.

Administrators and many student leaders sought to stop the apparently spontaneous demonstration early Friday morning, fearing (probably realistically) that any protest which would block Lancaster and aggravate Radnor officials would only hurt the four Villanova students appearing in court Tuesday to face charges stemming from the LCB-raided Cat's Eye. Once the rally had started and traffic was blocked for several minutes, those same student leaders urged protestors to refrain from blocking the Pike, admirably and effectively preventing any serious repercussions.

A rally aimed at blocking Lancaster Pike seems to miss its objective. While causing a wave of discussion and debate on campus, its effects on the LCB and the legislature, sitting in Philadelphia and Harrisburg, are negligible, and these are the people who must be reached if any change is to be won. The SGA has grasped the importance of channelling voices of discontent to the proper ears, organizing a protest at the LCB's Philadelphia office next Friday.

And yet, after all the criticism and condemnation of last Friday's rally is considered, there remains something to be said for those 30 or so students who sat down on the concrete of Lancaster. Despite the fact that they were protesting alcohol policies and not poverty or civil rights or some Asian war, they did something, they took a stand, however brief and futile. For the first time in more than four years, students actually held a sit-in (remember that word?) at Villanova.

Perhaps this is an indication that the students of the '70's are not the apathetical aftermath of the '60's activism, as has so often been charged. Properly channelled, as in next Friday's SGA demonstration, such force can effect sought-after changes.

It seems rather ironic, though, that the issue which finally drove Villanova to take to the streets was a ban on brew. Berkeley it ain't, but it's a start.

A Call To Action

To the Editor:

As you know, last week students joined together to express their concern with respect to the Commonwealth of Pa.'s Laws on the consumption of alcoholic beverages.

At present, the Commonwealth of Pa.'s position is under Article IV, Section 493 (1) That "It shall be unlawful for any licensee of, or any employee, servant or agent of such licensee of the Board, or any other person, to sell, furnish or give any liquor or malt or brewed beverages, or to permit any liquor or malt or brewed beverages to be sold, furnished, or given to any person visible intoxicated, or to any insane person, or to any minor, or to habitual drunkards, or persons of known intemperate habits. This being an amended act of Pa. Legislation in the year of our Lord, April 12, 1951 (P.L. 90)

To be quite frank with you, I feel this law is not only out of date, it is unfair to responsible mature Pa. residents. I advocate

Our Own Wizard

There are some things that never change. It will always be remembered that in the Wizard of Oz, Dorothy wanted to go back to Kansas, the scarecrow wanted a brain, the lion, courage, and the tin man a heart.

Only one person could fulfill their wishes, the Wizard of Oz from the Emerald City.

In a sense, Villanova has its own Wizard of Oz. But instead of giving us a mechanical heart like the fictional Wizard gave the tin man, our Wizard is giving us a heart in the shape of a university center.

John F. Connelly, a respected Philadelphia businessman, recently donated $4,800,000 to help build the new center.

For years Villanova has wanted a place to call its heart and now with Mr. Connelly's generosity, it has become a reality.

No longer will commuters have to sit on a curb or will residents have to stay in their rooms after a night of studying. The new center will combine an educational and social atmosphere to complement the already established Villanova community. In the end, Dorothy tapped her ruby slippers and found Kansas, the scarecrow could finally add two and two, the lion wasn't afraid of his tail and the tin man was finally complete.

Our thanks to you, Mr. Connelly, Villanova finally has a heart.

Lucy Gorski - Leading the Union in New Directions

By BRIAN BUINEWICZ

The Villanova Union is still ... and well on campus these ..., and one of the many new ... this year is that of Lucy Gor..., the Union's program director.

... Union is comprised of eight ...mmittees, a president, and ...ut 450 members. Their job is to ...n activities for the student ...mmunity ranging from concerts ...d cabarets to films.

Lucy Gorski received an under...duate degree in psychology in ...nnecticut and a master's in ...dent personnel services from ...ode Island University. Coming ...m a state university, where she ... active in her school's student ...ion, to a private Catholic uni...sity would seem to be a big ...nge to cope with.

...She found Villanova to be a ...asant surprise, however. The expected strictness usually associated with a Catholic university was replaced by an attitude which is very open to new ideas. Villanova proved to be a very friendly campus — from the students to the faculty.

The program director of the Villanova Union is responsible for all contracts and negotiations made by the Union. Gorski acts as an overseer to try to avoid legal or contractural problems that the Union could encounter. So far, no real problems have cropped up and hopefully none will in the future. She would like to stay at Villanova for a while, expecially to see the opening of our new student center.

Last year, the Villanova Union sponsored such functions as cabarets, wine and cheese parties, beer dances, films and cat's eyes. These activities and others where alcohol was present had to be stopped because of the University's new policy on alcohol. This poses a problem for Gorski and the Union — programs including alcohol cannot be scheduled, but other events must still be planned. New ideas have to be tried to provide social activities for Villanova students.

When asked about the alcohol consumption situation on campus, Gorski said she would "like to see a change come about through the state legislature to lower the drinking age or give universities special exemption." She would rather see students drinking and staying on campus than having them get in cars to drive a few miles to drink. "Eventually someone is going to get seriously hurt or killed," she said. To her, people should be able to stay on campus and not be forced to leave it.

Gorski said she would "like to see a change come about to lower the drinking age or give universities special exemption".

Lucy Gorski, Union's new program director.

More cultural events are planned for this year, such as lecturers as well as concerts and films. The Union hopes to open new horizons by trying new ideas. Lucy hopes that students will come out for activities and apply their interests.

Hopefully, the Union will concentrate more on its committees to effect better programming. If the efforts put forth by the Union so far are any indication of the kind of programming to be expected this year, then Villanova has a good year to look forward to.

When ...aking with Issam it is easy to ... the tremendous effort being ...de to adjust and to interact ...h American society, although ...said that the adjustment really ...not difficult since he has ...velled outside the Middle East ...gland and once before to the ...ited States, and he has a friend ... graduated from Villanova in ...

In fact, Issam first became acquainted with Villanova through this friend, who after receiving a degree in Electrical Engineering returned to Kuwait and acquired a very good job. Issam said that 1 year of experience in the United States is equal to three or four years in the Middle East.

This is one of the reasons he choose Villanova. "It is very good to have an American education," says Issam. He also indicated that the Middle Eastern nations are looking for their own young people to be as progressive as the Harvard-educated Saudi Arabian Oil Minister, Ahmed Zaki Yamani. Issam is quick to define "progressive" as developed.

One of the more vivid differences between these two cultures is the role of women. While American women are marching on state legislatures for passage of the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA), Issam mentioned that the Emir of Kuwait recently issued a few basic rules of conduct for women: 1.) no women are to walk in trousers or jeans; 2.) no women are to drive cars after 10 p.m.; and 3.) men and women are not permitted to work together. Somehow I don't think most Americans would take too kindly to these "rules" if President Carter issued them.

"I love living in the United States, the people are easy to communicate with," says Issam. He adds that Americans are highly respected and admired people in the Middle East and are looked upon as models in the drive to achieve and accompliah the goals of becoming a developed nation.

I wonder how quickly any Villanovan could adjust to Middle Eastern culture? Any volunteers?

The group is based on the notion that dreams can be meaningful and helpful in increasing awareness and expression of unresolved feelings, moving the individual toward more integrated behavior. Focus of the group will be on sharing and working through dreams on an individual basis with feedback from group members. Some self-management and fantasy techniques will be used to facilitate having and remembering dreams. The group is open to 8 members and will last through the last week of classes.

We will begin Tuesday, October 17th at 6:30. Sign up for interviews in 106 Corr.

Thought for the Week

Darkness is the plague of many,
money is the source of all,
but truth is the light of understanding.

TRACY TANN

By NEESIE PALAZZOLO

Hear any complaints lately? A short conversation with most students will more than likely lead to negative remarks. Just about any topic concerning Villanova gets criticized.

This week's On Campus decided to get the real story. We asked the students what they would do if they could start their college career over, would they pick Villanova again?

"Yes, I would come back. I like the atmosphere. The social atmosphere is good. Most of the students are friendly."

Doug Rakestraw
Junior

"Definitely. I like the size. It's big enough that you don't meet everyone your first year, but it's small enough to get involved."

Peggy Scanlon
Senior

"Yes, I w[illegible]o hard. Weekends are a[illegible] are nice. I'm having fun [illegible]

Luis Garcia
Freshman

"Yes, I think I would. I like the people here. It's not like a college, it's more than people at a big university. I like the program I'm in but more than anything I like the people."

Jean Mallinaire

"Yes, I like it. I'm close to home which is why I transferred here. I want to be in communications and this is a good area for that."

Karen Krevitz
Sophomore

"I think I would.I didn't look into that many schools. I'm not too far from home. I'd like there to be more social life on campus, but I'm enjoying it because there's a good social life off campus."

BOOKER & STEVE HRABRICK

Stealing a phone call isn't a game.

Most students play by the rules when placing a long distance call. They take advantage of bargain rates and make their calls during the discount periods. If you're not sure when you can call at discount rates, check your phone book.

A few students think it's O.K. to break the rules by stealing their telephone calls. They're not beating the system, they're taking advantage of all of us, because it drives up the cost of providing telephone service.

Students who break the rules also run the risk of paying a large fine. Spending time in jail. And getting themselves a permanent police record.

It's just not worth it!

Bell of Pennsylvania

With 6-ft. Video Screen

BY PAUL VIGGIANO

Let's face it, television has become a major factor in our lives. It has, in fact, become a part of us for instance, answer this question as quickly as possible. Where are you at 9:30 on Thursday nights? If you didn't say "in front of the ion-bombardment device" then either you are studying for finals or doing something that you consider more interesting. (Think what you may.)

Keeping up with the tube phenomena, the Villanova Union has purchased, with surplus funds from their Summer Programming, a Panasonic Video Screen, known as a VTF in the trade. The screen measures four-feet wide by three-feet high and supposedly brings the action in color and up close.

John Mullin, film coordinator for the Union, states, "Large screen television is a fantastic medium for entertainment. The equipment we have purchased is the most modern and up-to-date equipment available on the market. There is a recorder connected to the screen so that we can tape-shows running up to two hours in length and replay them for the commuters as well as the resident body. Large screen television adds a completely new dimension to the concept of television as we know it."

Some of the shows that have been chosen to be recorded are, the ever popular series, Star Battlestar Gallactica for all sci-fi fans, and Saturday Night Live and Monday Night Football, which is especially exciting on large screen T.V.

The VTF will be placed in the West Lounge in Dougherty Hall and hook-up is to take place some time this week. A schedule will be posted as to what daytime shows will be aired and what shows will be recorded for future playback.

Much credit has to be given to Charles Molineaux and Jack O'Brien, assistant program director of the Villanova Union, because without their assistance, the purchase of the VTF would have been impossible.

So it you have nothing to do in the future, stop in the West Lounge (admission is free) and see "what's playing" on the Large Screen Television. But the big question is, will Jody decide to keep the baby? Stay tuned.

Mason Rocks Fieldhouse

Taylor Artistically Captivates

By JOHN ZAGARELLA

Those lucky enough to get a ticket to Tuesday night's rock show at the fieldhouse witnessed two gentlemen who are undaunted masters of their respective musical realms.

Dave Mason headlined the musical banquet which featured Livingston Taylor as the supporting act.

From the opening strains of "Only You Know and I Know," Mason stylistically demonstrated his expertise as a guitar virtuoso. Along with a six piece band, he eased his way through an hour-long set which seemed much too short.

Highlights of the show include a stirring rendition of his AM smash, "We Just Disagree," and a beautiful presentation of "Ain't No Doubt About It." Here Mason exhibited exceptional control of his vocal abilities. The overwhelming synthesizer added a mystical quality to the song.

Soon it was time for audience participation with "Warm and Tender Love," an ocapella number from Mason's latest Lp, Mariposa de Ore. The only accompaniment was provided by the 3,500 contented patrons who rhythmically clapped along, enhancing the beat. But perhaps the most memorable moment in Dave Mason's performance was near its termination. Without any indication, the singer encouraged everybody to move up front because, as he put it "... I want to play to some faces tonight." With this, he exploded into "Taking the Time to Find." By this time, a sizeable and orderly crowd had gathered around the stage, and the performance surged to a moving climax.

As Dave Mason shook the hands of as many enthusiastic fans as he was able, he appropriately sang, "Share Your Love." In the middle of the song, he successfully coaxed the audience into a choir as they happily sang out the chorus. Suddenly, the song came to an end, and Dave Mason wished everyone a goodnight, then ran off the stage.

Immediately, the fans protested, stomping their feet, lighting matches, and screaming for more. Soon, the star of the show was back on stage singing, "All Along the Watch Tower." When the music stopped this time, however, the house lights went up signifying the official end to an unforgettable evening of sound at Villanova.

The show began with the versatile talents of Livingston Taylor, who offered a more subdued, but warmly received catalogue of compositions. It was obvious Tuesday night that Liv has a devoted group of fans that is rapidly increasing in number.

His set began fittingly with "Good, Good Time," which instantly impressed the people that had gathered to hear some find music. Liv's songs are basically pop in nature, and are of the highest order.

A look of truimph never ceased to appear on his face; those present just would not tire of Taylor's own brand of song. He truly enjoys what he does, "I put my heart into it," was his reply when asked how he approaches his music.

His earliest musical influences are none other than Ray Charles, Ike and Tina Turner, folk music, and "and, of course, AM radio. I love pop music," he says.

Aside from touring with Dave Mason, he also warmed the crowds this summer for Linda Ronstadt and Fleetwood Mac, all of who Liv describes as "hard working people."

As Liv dominated the stage, anything from pop to rock to folk to jazz was heard. As a result, an aura of unparalleled career accomplishment could be sensed in this entertainer every minute of the fifty minute show. An outstanding piano solo by band member Kenny Wright was the first in what resulted in a series of concert pinnacles. The solo was followed by "Lady Tomorrow," after which he demanded a banjo and brought the house down with "Six Days on the Road," and "By the Light of the Moon."

"Y'all got fired up," was the response as he returned for his encore, acknowledging the standing ovation and unending applause. His extremely victorious musical endeavor ended with the rousing, "Sitting on the Midnight Bus."

A one point in the concert, his retort to an annoying comment demanding Mason's presence was, "Dave Mason's gonna be here, and when he gets here, he's gonna be great — I know it. But right now I'm here!!!" As the crowd cheered this reply, he knew he had won them over in more ways than one.

What are Livingston Taylor's plans for the future? "I wanna be the best entertainer, musician and husband this world has ever seen." Liv's top priority is pleasing his audience, "Above all else, I want to give people pleasure with what I do... Giving people pleasure is it." This he proved admirably Tuesday night.

New In Sound

Boston

By TONY PERRELLA

There have been numerous reports of an unidentified flying guitar, carrying the city of Boston, landing in the U.S. and capturing the ears of thousands. U.F.O.'s? Believe it! Boston's new album, Don't Look Back, may have taken two years to put together, but the finished work was well worth the wait. Listen to the album.

Tom Sholz just about does it all for Boston. Aside from having his masters degree in Engineering from M.I.T., Sholz produced, engineered and arranged the album; not to mention writing seven of the eight songs on the album. He also plays lead guitar, bass and musical effects guitar for the band.

But Boston is far from a one-man band. Brad Delp, Barry Goudreau, Sib Hashian, and Fran Cosmo contribute equally to the band's success. Much of the band's material was developed during the band's pre-professional days. On the contrary, Don't Look Back was a completely collaborative effort. Each member contributed equally to the writing, production or arrangement of the album. The album reflects the band's unity.

Boston's unmistakable style of fast, complicated guitar leads, and high octave harmonizing. Warmed up from side one the band really explodes with a great second half. Side two opens with "Feeling Satisfied." "So come on, put your hand together/ you know it's now or never, take a chance on rock n' roll." Nothing else can be said about a Boston album. Rocking on "Party" after a soft meoldic guitar introduction turns out to be the most fired-up song on Don't Look Back.

Boston continues to use the same pattern of music throughout their songs. It is this consistent style that gets the listener into the album and into the band. For a rock n' roll experience, go pick up Boston's Don't Look Back, and listen to the album.

Radical Buffalo

By JANEMARIE COYLE

"American Buffalo" the award winning off Broadway play by David Mamet premiered locally at the University of Pa. Annenberg Center Wednesday, Oct. 4.

Two decades ago Mamet would have been classified among "the angry young men of drama." In the 60's, the anger of the young took on a new dimension, the direct and often violent challenge of authority and the status quo. Rude behavior and obscene language were vehicles frequently used in an attempt to shock society out of what the young considered to be a deadly lethargy.

Mamet, 30, a product of this age, has taken the raucous attitude of this period and transformed it into an equally raucous but provocative and genuinely funny play.

Curtain Call!

The author has stated that he wrote the play "because he was mad at the practices of the business community." From his limited perspective, Mamet savages the business community with a refined dark humor that retains the full flavor of the ugliest part of that era.

Set in a junk shop, "American Buffalo" is a character study of three small time hoodlums planning a theft of a valuable American Buffalo nickel

Norman Smith, Peter Gerety and Richard Jenkins, members of the Trinity Square Repertory Co. gave believable and moving performances. They were very well received by their audience. "American Buffalo" continues at the Center until Oct. 15.

Talented Vasey

By JEANNE SALVATORE

Villanova students should be aware of the existence of Vasey Theatre. They pass it going to class and they see posters for upcomming performances. Yet people are not really acquainted with all it has to offer. It has a broad range of possibilites for individuals interested in almost any aspect of theatre.

Academically, Vasey has an excellent graduate department yet there are various courses offered to undergraduates. These courses encompass topics such as basic acting, history of theatre and the art of directing. To supplement these programs, there are six productions during the academic year. Participation is not mandatory nor is it limited to those who partake in these programs.

The casts of these productions are a healthy balance of graduate and undergraduate students. Yet casting is not exclusively limited to the Villanovan Community. Vasey has had its share of professionals. It has seen the genius of David Rabe who wrote "Sticks and Bones" and "The Basic Training of Pavlo Hummel." It is this mixture of talent, background and experience that creates a good learning environment. People with little or no background can learn from a person with professional expertise while a newcomer can bring new ideas and a refreshing naiveness.

Vasey, being multi-faceted, also offers opportunites for those interested in theatre but not in acting. Students can get involved in the technical aspect of theatre such as the designing of sets, scenery and costume. People not interested in the responsibility of creativity can volunteer to help around the stage, usher, or sell concessions.

Vasey Theatre offers the opportunity for students, and the general community, to see a wide range of excellent performances at a minimal price. Good theatre is an experience that shouldn't be missed.

Landais on Fine Arts

M. Hubert Landais, Directeur des Musees Nationaux de France, (including the ancient Louvre which dates back to the 16th century, museums in every French village, and the new Beaubourg), on Sunday, Oct. 1 paid a surprise visit to the Penn. Academy of the Fine Arts, oldest museum and academy in the United States, founded 1805.

Landais, in Philadelphia to represent France at the opening of the Second Empire Exhibit at the Philadelphia Museum of Art said, "I have known the Academy since I was a small boy, but I never had a chance to visit here. As a Frenchman, I like to visit the classical Academies which represent their countries and I am interested to see that your students are making real art."

The Academy, a unique institution has supported and encouraged American artists since it began. From this support has come one of the finest collections of American Art.

Landais, one of the first residents of the Palais du Louvre since Louis XIV, said that he felt at home in the Furness Academy building, which corresponds to the period of the Second Empire in France.

Landais also reviewed the newly installed exhibit, "Contemporary Drawings: Philadelphia" and looked at the work of Harold Jacobs, in the Morris Gallery. He was particularly interested in Jacobs work — when he discovered that he completed his inflated inner tube sculpture in the Loire Valley, not far from the home of Alexander Calder.

The Crew team will depend on four veterans.

Crew Quartet Shows Promise

By BRUCE MURRAY

Over the past four years the crew team, under the coach Mike Hurley, has been steadily improving. But the upcoming season appears to be the team's most promising yet. The strength of this year's varsity team will rely on four experienced oarsmen: Senior Jake Bonner will be expected to pull the weight along with three sopomores, Mike Brown, Jeff Britton and Mark Bergin. Mark represented the U.S. in the Youth Championships of the World during the summer of '76. This foursome, along with senior Coxswain Robin Drummond, shows great potential for the year ahead.

This years freshmen team has a distinguished oaremen as their coach. Coach Teti, a recent graduate of St. Joseph's College, finished sixth in the World Championships in Amsterdam. His talents cannot help but rub off on this years large freshmen team (20-30 members). Freshmen to watch are the talented Dave Calfo and Bill Brewer.

This year the Villanova Crew team unveils something new — a women's crew team, and their outlook is optimistic. These girls may just provide that added spurt the crew program needs.

Four New Hoop Members Gillen Named Assistant

By JERRY RINALDI

Villanova basketball coach Rollie Massimino is really excited about this year's team, especially with the addition of four outstanding talents.

Pete Gillen, the former assistant coach at Virginia Military Institute, has been named assistant coach under Massimino. He replaces Mike Fratello.

Gil'en attended Fairfield University, becoming a member of the Stags' basketball team as a "walk-on." He lettered twice and earned the Sportsmanship Award his senior year.

Gillen's college coaching experience extends to the University of Hawaii as well as V.M.I. In both situations, his main job was recruiting and coaching defense.

"He's the type of person we have to have here," said head coach Rollie Massimino. "He's a workaholic — just like Mike Fratello."

Tom Bethea, a 6-3, 183-pound guard, comes to Villanova from Northern Durham (N.C.) High School where he led his 22-5 state semi-finalist team in scoring, rebounding, assists and steals.

Bethea, a three-year starter and two-time selection to the All-Big Seven Conference first team, was voted as the top player in his conference senior year. He averaged 22.7 points, hitp rebounds 4.4 assists, and three steals per game, and was named to North Carolina's Group 4 All-State First Team.

"Tommy is a pure guard," says Massimino. "He's strong and has the ability to penetrate. He can do everything."

Aaron Howard, a 6-7, 195-pound Group 4 All-State player from Linden High School in New Jersey, will be the third addition to the squad.

Howard, who will most likely play forward for Villanova, played center for his high school team which finished with a 25-2 record, losing to Camden High School in the state championships.

As a two-year starter, Howard would contribute points when needed, but was known primarily as an aggressive defensive player who excelled in shot blocking. He did toss in 13.5 points per game and grabbed 12 rebounds per game his senior year, and was selected as a member of the New York Daily News All-Area team.

"Aaron is a fine athlete, a good rebounder and a very good defender," says Massimino. "He has the potential to be a great shot blocker in college because of his quickness and jumping ability."

Bruce Johnson, a 6-8, 215-pound center from West Aurora High School in Illinois, is the fourth addition to the team. Johnson, a power pivot man averaged 16 points per game and 10 rebounds per game for the Black Hawks.

In Johnson's three high school seasons, his team amassed a 70-16 record. They were state runners-up with a 30-3 clip his sophomore season and 23-4 as regional champs two years ago.

Johnson, an All-Upstate Eight Conference choice his junior and senior seasons, also excelled in the classroom.

Massimino adds, "Bruce is a very, very good offensive player around the basket. We've been looking for a good rebounder, and he'll add a dimension to our strength underneath."

The Wildcats are looking forward to a successful basketball season against plenty of good competition. Gillen, Bethea, Howard, and Johnson can only help but compliment the people already in the program and compensate for those who have left it.

Soccer Injuries Continue

By CHRIS BRENNER

What injuries can do in the way of hampering a team is painfully obvious to Villanova's soccer squad. Key player casualties sustained early in the season have crippled the booters' performance in every game hence, including the latest contest with Penn which Villanova lost, 3-0.

In that game, played at Franklin field, the Cats held well with what they had, improving on last year's defeat to Penn (6-1) by a few goals. Shawn McDonald of the Quakers managed two of his team's three goals in the match.

Veteran performers still frustratingly sidelined are Brian Purcel, Randy Soriano (last year's leading scorer), and Don Swete — a sorely missed trio offensively for the Cats. Consequently, Coach Howard Graff has been forced to experiment with different players for the line until a working combination is reached. Until then, however, Graff will be relying upon skilled but inexperienced players such as John Leitner, Clint Grimes, and Steve Frey to take up some of the scoring slack. Freshman goalie Bill Schamp has proven his defensive effectiveness in the net on numerous occasions, turning back seven stiff shots in the Penn game alone.

The team next encounters Temple in what is shaping up to be another thriller between the long-standing rivals.

Harriers Take Second — Maree, Korir Lead Pack

By J. T. COOK

If you had taken the time last Saturday to drive to Belmont Park, crouch down in a bed of poison ivy, and peer through the bushes, you would have been rewarded by a most unusual sight. What you would have seen is the Villanova cross country team not winning.

Despite Sydney Maree and Amos Kip Korir finishing one-two, Villanova only took second in the Eastern Athletic Association championship, losing to Penn State. There was cause for celebration, however, in the fact that Villanova did beat Rutgers, the University of Massachusetts, West Virginia, Pittsburgh and Duquesne. Other good news lies in the fact that Penn State isn't a member of the IC4A and, as such, will not be faced again until the nationals.

Sydney Maree and Amos Kip Korir cruised to personal bests of 25:19.3 and 25:23.3 respectively establishing them as number six and number seven on the all-time Wildcat list at Belmont Park.

In third place for the Cats was freshman Rob Earl. Rob, who ran a personal best of 25:53.6 Saturday, says he "isn't in top form yet" and hopes "to break Sydney's freshman record of 25:40.6."

Kevin Dillon, another frosh, was fourth for Villanova in a personal best time of 26:11.5. Kevin missed catching the tenth place finisher from Penn State by .3 seconds as his final kick ran out of room at the tape.

In fifth place for Villanova was yet another freshman running yet another personal best. Brad Gair, a walk on, ran 26:27.3 and his seventeenth place finish rounded out Villanova's scoring.

The harriers travel to Lehigh this weekend where they will face Lehigh, Navy, Georgetown, Maryland, Fairleigh Dickinson, and a host of others in the Lehigh Invitational. Next weekend the Cats wind up their home season while defending their title in the Big Five championship meet at Belmont Park.

Tennis Team Takes Three

By MARY GRACE MURRAY

The women's tennis team lost their first two matches against Rutgers and Seton Hall but bounced back to win the next three against Widener, Textile and Delaware County Community College (DCCC). Last Saturday, the team lost a close match to St. John's (4-4) to bring their record to 3-3 after two weeks of play.

Rutgers and Seton Hall were probably the toughest opponents of the season. Rutgers swept the Wildkittens 7-0 and Seton Hall scored a 5-2 victory. The fact that both schools award scholarships and therefore have higher caliber players accounts for Villanova's problems when trying to match up players for singles and doubles action.

The matches against Widener, Textile and DCCC were one-sided as Villanova won 6-1, 5-0 and 4-1 respectively. Diane Williams won all her matches at second singles as did the first doubles team of Diane Cappuccio and Melanie Calder.

Jayne Schreiner, first singles, won two out of her three matches. Her loss came at Widener, 6-2, 6-3. Schreiner had a great set against DCCC winning 7-6, 6-3.

Playing at first singles Schreiner often faces stiff competition. Many of the schools have scholarship players at first singles and some of these opponents are seeded players along the east coast. Schreiner is Villanova's toughest player and her victories are a big asset for the team.

The match against St. John's was a disappointing loss as it was an extremely close match. Captain Kathy Stetler said, "It's always an exciting match with St. John's because we have the same caliber players." Stetler explained how the score of 4-3 has been the same for the last couple of years with each school taking turns winning.

Gina Ayoub played well against St. John's and won in the third singles position, 6-1 and 6-3. The second doubles team of Mary Foti and Caren McCabe and the third doubles team of Diane Cappuccio and Amelia Cain were the other winners for Villanova.

The team will try to get on the winning road again as they prepare for this week's matches against Rosemont, Gwynedd Mercy, LaSalle and Cheyney.

Reflections From An Ex-Gridder

By NATE COOPER

Tommy Walsh dropped in on his old team's practice session Monday afternoon. It was unusual to see them in pads for the first session of the week.

"They're doing a lot of hitting for this stage of the season," he observed.

Noticing the offensive line, his old position, rerunning scores and scores of plays, he realized that they had not gotten any bigger since he graduated.

At 6'3" 240 lbs, the native of West Lawn, Pa. was one of Villanova's bigger linemen in recent years. He could imagine the trouble the midsize Wildcats had moving the oversized Clemson defensive line.

"But size is never an excuse," he stated.

Tommy watched his old skipper Dieruf against the practice field dummy.

"He's sticking this lone pretty hard," added the former captain.

Tommy could remember many Mondays like this during his career. Like his senior year which was suppose to be "The Year of the Cat," but turned out to be a disappointing 4-7 campaign. It pleased him to see this smaller and more inexperienced and unsong team get off to a fair start after last year's disaster.

William and Mary was a heartbreaker and Clemson was an embarrassment, but Tommy also knew the tenacity of the Wildcats.

His junior year the team opened with a 1-4-1 streak then won their last five games.

Tommy walked over to the tower where Bedesem was perched. It took him a while to notice his old pupil, but seeing his friendly face brought a warm glow to the coach.

"It's good to see you haven't given up on us," stated the coach warmly.

"I could never do that," replied Tommy.

Field Hockey

Coach Cathy Miller's team was victorious in four of five matches played last week, outscoring their opponents, 26-2.

The Wildcats opened their week with a 5-0 win over Textile. Deb Smith scored three goals for Villanova. Tuesday, the team handily defeated Phila. College of Bible, 11-0. Sandy Amon scored a team record five goals in the win. The only loss of the week came at the hands of Lehigh, 2-0. The girls were on the winning streak again against Harcum, 8-0. High scorer for Villanova was Lisa Alderfer with three goals. Alderfer was again high scorer with 2 goals when the team won 3-0 over Swarthmore.

Cats Go Big Time
Downed 31-0 By Clemson

The Tigers keyed on Vince Thompson last week.

By ELMORE SMITH

In Denver, they have the "Orange Crush" defense; in Pittsburgh they have the "Steel Curtain"; but all that exists in Clemson, South Carolina is the Clemson Tigers. The mania that surrounds Clemson football, parallels that of the Alabama Crimson Tide or The Fighting Irish of Notre Dame. The "Tiger Paw," the Clemson symbol, is somewhat like the dysenteric elephant; it's all over town. It's a fever that afflicts the whole state.

Last Saturday in "Death Valley," Dick Bedesem and his Wildcats were unable to combat the spirit that has made the old south notorious for its college football. "Their program showed its total domination of ours," said Coach Bedesem of the 31-0 drubbing.

The Cats were unable to mount a successful offense against the Tigers potent defense that held the Villanova running attack in check with just 127 yards rushing. In return the VU defense was unable to dismantle the Clemson offensive machine that rolled up 496 yards total offense.

Dana Shelton opened the game with a 34 yard burst that made Villanova fans anxious. After that point though the Cats were only able to muster four more first downs in the first half. After both teams swapped possession, Clemson QB Steve Fuller directed the Tigers on a 65 yard, 10 play drive to take a 7-0 lead. On their second possession of the second quarter, reserve tailback Marvin Sims blasted over from the five to make it 14-0. Unable to make a first down, the Cats were forced to cough up the ball again, and Clemson came right back on a 42 yard scamper by Lester Brown to make it 21-0 at the half.

Fuller brought the Tigers right down the field on their first series of the second half with Sims capping the drive with a two yard plunge. Villanova trailed 28-0 with 9:51 in the third quarter.

Villanova's only scoring drive ended at the Clemson six yard line when the tenacious Tigers refused Vince Thompson on a fourth and one. Possession bounced back and fourth for the remainder of the game and Clemson's Obed Ariri closed out the final seconds with a 33 yd. field goal, to make the score 31-0. "Today we were outclassed. The kids gave a hundred percent, busted their guts, but they just came up short," said Coach Bedesem after the game.

This Saturday at home, the Cats take on the Richmond Spiders that clubbed the University of Cincinnati 55-28 last weekend. Tailback Buster Jackson is a strong, quick back and running backs Reggie Evans and Tim Thacker give the Spiders a balanced offense. On defense Richmond features standout Ray Chase, a 6-3, 220 pounder that led his team in sacks last year and likely pro prospect Jeff Nixon at free safety.

It has been two weeks since V.U.'s last win and perhaps with a home crowd advantage the Cats can chalk up another one in the W column. With a little luck, maybe some of that southern spirit rubbed off. Game time is at 1:30 at VU stadium.

Intramural Race Open
Maulers Look Strong

By TOM McCORMICK

It's a wide open race for number one in the intramural football league with a total of nine undefeated teams. Reckless Abandon, Fedigan Pub, Jaws, The Maulers, Black Sheep, and the Gators all sport 3 and 0 records, while in the fraternity league D.T.D., D.P.E. and Sigma Phi Epsilon have 2 and 0 records. It is going to take a team who can perform under pressure to emerge on top when the playoffs begin in November.

The Gators and Black Sheep have come out of nowhere to be among the nine undefeated teams. A tough offensive line and a super running back named Tim Breslin are the reason for the Gators being 3 and 0. Meanwhile, the key to Black Sheep's success has been organization. Organization is a word the players on Black Sheep know well, because the team is comprised of members of Villanova's R.O.T.C. program. Their organization and discipline is evident on the football field and has produced an unblemished record. The Gators and Black Sheep are the surprise teams of the 1978 season and are destined to cause some upsets as the season draws to a close.

The Maulers are proving, as they did in the 1977 intramural season, that they are a team to be reckoned with. The Maulers are a well drilled team with the most sophisticated offense in the league. Wide receiver Ed Schwartz and running back Jay Gaybauer have been piling up the points for the Maulers. Twenty-seven of these points were scored against the Wally Gators in a shut out by the Maulers earlier this season. The Maulers, veterans of playoff action, should be there once again in 1978.

While Reckless Abandon, Fedigan Pub, Jaws, and the rest of the undefeated teams in the open league breeze by opponents, the fraternity league has provided the excitement so far in this 1978 season. D.T.D., D.P.E., and Sigma Phi Epsilon have survived unscathed and all post identical 2 and 0 records.

There have been two upsets thus far in the fraternity league. In the big upset, a young (they have no seniors) Sigma Phi Epsilon team handed L.K.D. its first loss. Sigma Phi Epsilon accomplished this by completing a sleeper play, which is when the wide receiver does not go back to the huddle on a certain play. Instead he hides on the sideline and then runs a long pass pattern once the ball is snapped. On Sigma Phi Epsilon's sleeper play, quarterback Jim Cronin connected with wide receiver Jack Jarret for an eighty yard touchdown to upset L.K.D.

In the other upset, T.K.E., who were winless before this game, knocked-off an undefeated Lamda Chi Alpha team 7 to 6.

The big game in the fraternity league this weekend will be played Sunday on Austin Field at 2:30, when D.T.D. meets Sigma Phi Epsilon. The battle between these two undefeateds will be highlighted by D.T.D.'s concern over Sigma Phi Epsilon coining Villanova as "the Notre Dame of the East" on their T-shirts. Ken Palladino, D.T.D.'s star defensive end, says that "D.T.D. insists that the T-shirts should read 'Notre Dame the Villanova of the Midwest' and he hopes that Sigma Phi Epsilon shows up for this year's game, unlike last year". This game promises to ba a barn-burner.

The games have been running very smoothly this intramural season with only one player being suspended. Each team has either four or five games remaining and at this point in the season the undefeated teams must play their games one at a time.

Elliott To Be Honored

America's dean of college track and field, James (Jumbo) Elliott, has been elected and will formally be inducted to the Pennsylvania Sports Hall of Fame on Saturday, October 21.

He will be honored with the other inductees: Vince McNally, Jack Ferrante, Bobby Shantz, Mickey Vernon and the late Danny Murtaugh, at the Alpine Inn, on Baltimore Pike in Springfield (Delco), Pa.

Through 45 years of coaching at Villanova, Coach Elliott has achieved unparalleled track success. The "Coach of the Century" by members of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America (IC4A), Elliot has molded 25 Olympians through eight straight Olympiads.

He has won 34 IC4A team championships, seven NCAA championships and three AAU national titles.

Last year was especially fruitful for the Wildcats. They tied their own mark of winning five relay races at the Penn Relays, narrowly missed winning an indoor NCAA title, won both the indoor and outdoor IC4A crowns and assembled a mile relay which won its national championship in Eugene, Oregon this past June.

For the past three seasons, Villanova has been declared the best relay team in the nation, according to Track & Field News.

Ruggers Rally

By VERGE GREENSHORTS

This past Saturday the Villanova rugby club bettered its record to 2-1 by annihilating Lancaster rugby club 43-3. Nine different players had tries in amassing the greatest number of points V.U. rugby has scored in quite a few years. To list the names of all those who scored would be an article in itself. Rather, it would be easier to name those members who did not score and/or did not play well. These people are: Timothy McCarthy, Ernest Falcone, and Giovanni Regina. Captain Mike Abele will be sure to assign these players extra laps during practice this week.

For the first time this season the "B" team also managed a win, ahead at the half by only two points, V.U. put it together in the final forty minutes to win 23-11. Since there weren't too many points in this match, some of those who did score include Chuck McNulty, Denny Coughlin, and Mike Blanco.

Also, Villanova failed to make the afternoon a hat trick as the "C" squad succumbed to White Horse rugby, a local club. The C's gave it a good effort, but too many young, inexperienced players like Terry Dansdill just could not rise to the challenge.

The party afterwards proved to be just as exciting as the games themselves. The Lancaster boys showed what elephants do when they get lonely, the infamous Wild Turkey arrived, and Gypsy Rose Murray gave his rendition of "Love on the Rooftop."

Can Villanova rugby make it two wins in a row this weekend? Will Hondo Rosato's knee heal in time for him to play? Will Danny "Swine" Ward ever make it to a rugby party again, or must he continue his enduring journey to Summit, N.J. each and every Saturday? For the answers to these and other questions, stop by the rugby field as V.U. takes on Scranton, another men's club, this Saturday afternoon at 1 pm.

SGA Rally Cancelled

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

After a four hour long meeting Tuesday night, "the Student Caucus decided to postpone indefinitely the demonstration against Pennsylvania alcohol laws which was to be held today. Disagreement among student organizations and persons within the SGA prompted the decision.

Dispute began last Thursday night, when Kevin Smith, Villanova union president, informed a meeting of college student presidents and Villanova SGA that the hearing date of the four students charged with liquor violations had been changed from October 12 to October 19. Smith said that the Villanova Union could not support the Friday the 13 demonstration, since bad publicity could influence the judge's decision.

For the same reasons, the Villanova RSA said that they could not support the demonstration.

Area college presidents and Villanova SGA held another meeting last Monday night, and it was proposed that the demonstration be postponed for a week. Several colleges expressed concern for the four students, including St. Joseph's Frank Miraglia, representative from St. Joseph's said that "the press could cause some problems for the students being tried." He could not say whether St. Joseph's would support the demonstration were it held a week later.

Joe Cassidy, Villanova student body president, said "I don't feel that this should have any bearing on the judge's decision. What goes on with the demonstration is extraneous to the court."

Tom Platt, SGA vice-president, suggested postponing the rally one week "to organize and educate the constituencies."

However, LaSalle, Rosemont, Cabrini, and Textile colleges, and Villanova's SGA agreed to support the demonstration on the 13.

Debate resumed Tuesday night at the Student Caucus meeting, and, at one point, the caucus voted 5 to 3 in favor of the Friday demonstration. But stressing the need for unity, Cassidy asked that the SGA postpone indefinitely Thursday's rally, and withdraw support of today's demonstration.

"I still personally believe that the demonstration would not work against the four students," said Cassidy, "but the unity of the group is more important."

Alcohol Committee Formed

Student leaders and administrators met Wednesday afternoon to decide whether or not to hold the Liquor Law Forum planned for yesterday in the Fieldhouse. According to S.G.A. vice-president Tom Platt, the group agreed to postpone the session until later in the fall.

Platt explained, however, that the meeting produced a plan to coordinate a campus-wide alcohol education drive and an attempt to establish a lobby in Harrisburg to lower the state's drinking age. A steering committee of students, faculty and administrators such as Fr. Robert Martin, dean of student activities, Jeff Quinn from the dean of men's office and Jack O'Brien, assistant program director, has been established to direct the efforts, Platt said.

"This is no longer strictly an S.G.A. function," Platt stated. "The main idea of the meeting was to consider if the forum should be held tomorrow. What came out of it was this whole new movement.

"We hope to bring in the Union, the R.S.A., utilizing everybody's best needs in order to make a more comprehensive effort."

The Steering Committee met yesterday at 1:30 to begin considering possible courses of action. Platt explained that the drive would make use of both existing organizations and student volunteers, but urged interested students to wait until definite plans of actions have been announced.

Self - Evaluation Begins

By JERRY DOUGHERTY

Once every ten years, institutions of higher education are evaluated by an accrediting authority. In the spring of 1980, Villanova University will be the subject of such an evaluation. The office of the Vice-President for Academic Affairs is in the initial stages of preparation for this process.

The University will be evaluated by is the Commission On Higher Education, an entity of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools. Their studies focus on the academic life of the campus but also include aspects of the University which contribute to academics.

There are two parts to the Middle States' process of evaluation. The first involves a self-study by Villanova of its academic institutions; the second part takes place when a team of academic evaluators from Middle States visits the campus to review the self-evaluation and provide a totally objective opinion regarding the state of academic life.

In charge of Villanova's self-study is Dr. Charles L. Cherry, assistant to the Vice-President for Academic Affairs office. A steering committee is planned to formulate the study, delegating specific functions to a number of sub-committees. The steering committee will consist of Dr. Cherry (chairman), two administrators, six faculty members, and one student. Proposed subjects of the study will include: the College of Arts and Sciences; the University College, "Student Life," and the Public Relations department.

Ideally, the self-study is a process by which a university

Parking Presents Problems

By STEVE HAGGERTY and BILL GUERIN

The cost of parking a car on one of Villanova's lots is now 25 dollars. This figure represents a five dollar increase over last year's fee.

According to Captain Joseph P. Cunnane, director of security, the increase was necessary for the University to maintain properly the parking facilities. The increase affects faculty as well as students.

"I'd like to see the parking fee as low as possible," Captain Cunnane stated. "Unfortunately, the cost of periodically resealing and relining the parking lots forced us to raise the fee."

Cunnane added that the cost of parking at Villanova is still reasonable when compared to area schools. He stated that Temple University, for example, charges nine dollars for a yearly sticker, and then charges an additional 60 cents a day to park.

Although the price of a parking sticker has increased, many students have complained that the parking facilities here are not adequate. Some Villanovans state that after paying 25 dollars to purchase a sticker, there are not enough spaces for them on campus.

Accordint to Rev. Patrick J. Rice, O.S.A., vice-president for administration, the University lost about 70-80 parking spaces through construction of the new center. Fr. Rice added, however, that the school does not plan to build a new parking lot in the forseeable future.

"Our parking lots become very congested around 11 a.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays," Captain Cunnane admitted. "However, I have toured the lots myself at those hours and have found many spaces still available."

Cunnane said that including the Stanford, Good Counsel, Fieldhouse, Law School, and Lancaster Avenue parking lots, 1,925 parking spaces are available for Villanova undergraduates. For these 1,925 spaces, only 1,809 stickers have been issued to date.

Captain Cunnane noted that many students who complain about a deficiency in the number of parking spaces are dissatisfied because they are unable to park closer to where their classes are held.

"People don't want to hear about parking spaces by the Fieldhouse if they have a class in Tolentine," he said.

Cunnane further explained that crowded conditions on the campus lots are often caused by people illegally parked. Many students park on campus without proper stickers, and many underclassmen obtain stickers through upperclassmen friends, said Cunnane.

"We always encounter a number of eligible students trying to buy stickers for ineligible students," said Cunnane, "however, most times we catch them."

Students who park illegally on campus have their cars towed by Radnor Garage. Cunnane said that he contacts the towing service when he receives complaints of parking congestion.

"I wish we could park everyone on campus, but logistics, cost, and space mitigate against it," Cunnane said. "If everyone exercised fair play and abided by the rules, then the congestion would be eliminated."

becomes aware of the curre state of its intellectual life, t progress it has made in specif areas, and the problems it fac now and in the future. Alumni - Positive Role

By PATRICK FLYNN

Since Homecoming is basically a time to welcome back the past graduates of Villanova, it seems fitting at this time to explore their organization. The Villanova University Alumni membership numbers less than 38,000 people. This figure is generally comparable to those of most other schools of the same size, such as Holy Cross and Notre Dame, and more than LaSalle or St. Joseph's. It is only slightly less than the memberships at Boston College (45,000) and Duquesne.

Almost half of the Wildcat alumni are residents of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and about two-thirds of them live in the Eastern corridor between Boston and Washington, D.C.

The man who is currently responsible for the Alumni Association is Edward Rideout, director of the Annual Alumni Fund. The alumni are grouped into various regional clubs, forty-four in all, around the nation, ranging in size from the Philadelphia Club's 12,000 members to the Villanova Club of Buffalo, which numbers just ninety-four. According to Rideout, "these clubs exist to keep the name of Villanova active in the community."

This is done in a number of ways. Alumni are involved in representing the University at "College Nights" at various high schools, recruiting interested students to Villanova and soliciting money for the school. "It's a social club where the members have an opportunity to meet other Villanovans in the area and have some fun," said Rideout. "But they also have the chance, by helping out in a phone-a-thon for contributions or by attending a college night, to help out the University, and that's a good feeling."

Making cash contributions is another function of the alumni. "Making a gift to the University is an individual thing. The clubs help to solicit gifts, but all contributions are made by individual members," Rideout said.

The total contribution of the Alumni Fund is about $280,000 per year. This figure is better than those at LaSalle, St. Joseph, St. Bonaventure and some other schools of their size and about the same as Duquesne and Georgetown. But Rideout is not satisfied. "Right now, we're doing just average or a little better than average. But Villanova is not an average school. It's a great University and, therefore, we should make more than they do," he said.

Alumni Remember...

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

For many, Homecoming presents the opportunity to capture and relive some past experiences at Villanova. We have given several alumni members the chance to express their feelings and opinions on this special event, and more importantly on Villanova's importance in shaping their lives.

Bill Vincent, Jr.

"I am coming back to Homecoming. I was President of the Philadelphia Club and of the Alumni so I am interested in Villanova. More importantly, I am very interested in the football program and am looking forward to a good game. I wouldn't want to come back for a basketball Homecoming."

Timothy Pierse

"I will be returning for Homecoming. I just graduated, so I really have not kept in touch with Villanova. My education at Villanova has helped me to get a job, but the Career Development Center really didn't help me very much."

Danise Amoruso

"I am looking forward to coming back to Villanova. I have gotten a good job at Price-Waterhouse, so I feel my education at Villanova has helped me tremendously."

Douglass Lioon

"I will be going to Homecoming. I have fond memories of Villanova. Even though the college doesn't affect me anymore, I still care. I certainly feel Villanova has helped me in my career and in my life."

Bob Biddel

"I have been coming to Homecoming for the past eight years now. I feel it provides a good chance to get together with some of my out-of-town friends. Villanova has provided me with a good education and I enjoy coming back."

...VU Traditions

By DENISE DRIALO

Once again Villanova University prepares for the crowds of alumni expected to return to campus for Homecoming weekend.

The weekend is filled with traditional social activities which include Mass in Corr Hall at 9:30 a.m., Open House with the University Deans from 10 a.m. until 2, tailgate parties in the parking lot across Lancaster Avenue from the Fieldhouse until the football game at 1:30 p.m., cocktails at the Covered Wagon beginning at 4 p.m. and dinner following.

Due to Villanova's central location on the East Coast, many alumni find it convenient to meet with old college friends once a year on Homecoming weekend. Blocks of tickets are reserved for the alumni and arrangements for Homecoming Day are made by the Alumni Association and Student Activities. The former faculty and present faculty are also invited to join in the festivities and meet with returning graduates.

The arrival of the Villanova alumni creates a boom for the local economy. Since Villanova does not provide accommodations for the weekend and until only recently arranged for an alumni dinner at the Covered Wagon, area hotels and restaurants absorb the influx of visitors. The bookstore also reports a marked increase in sales over Homecoming weekend.

In past years, the entire university rallied for Homecoming weekend. On Friday night students and alumni enjoyed a Red Garter Night party. Students decorated the dormitories, which were judged by an alumni committee on Saturday before the football game. At one time the fraternities, fraternities and sororities prepared floats to be displayed and judged at halftime.

In recent years, the Homecoming parade marched through campus but due to construction this year a parade is questionable.

adding, "The potential of alumni is great. We'll go place

Most of the contributions to Alumni Fund are unrestric gifts. In other words, they can used for whatever purpose University sees fit. Sometimes alumnus might restrict his to a particular department or to used for a particular purpose, those cases are exceptions to rule. "My goal is to get as mu from the alumni in unrestrict gifts as we can get," explai Rideout.

As far as the actual operation the University goes, the alum seek little authority. One co sistently hears of alumni fluences at various schools in decision-making processes, p ticularly regarding sports. doesn't have much effect here, at most schools. However, I kn that at Boston College last ye they fired their football coa primarily because of alumni pre sure. And I know that if (Not Dame football coach Dan) Devi doesn't win this year, some wea thy alumnus will but his contrac In the papers, it'll say that he l Notre Dame to take a position the business world, but in reali he will have been fired and hir as a vice-president for some alum nus' company."

That situation is rare, thoug "Basically, the alumni exist f positive things in the University, said Rideout. "Our alumni reali that Fr. Driscoll can run the Un versity and Ted Aceto can run th Athletic Department, so th leave their contributions in th form of cash and other forms support, and don't try to influenc the workings of the University.

Finally, addressing the subje of Homecoming, Rideout state "It's a great day. It's the day wh most alumni come back to cam pus. An alumnus gets the chanc to see his old roommate, h classmates and his form teachers again. In general receives a warm feeling from t University. He gets to enjoy aga the hospitality at Villanova."

Rideout has several ideas f future Homecoming plans. "The ought to be more cooperation b tween students and alumni as what could be done." Parade dorm decorations and larg tailgate parties staffed by student as hosts to the alumni are po sibilities. "The current problem with the LCB make that im possible, but once that's resolve it could happen," Rideout state and Bucknell, are able to cl down the main street for a para of floats, bands, and marchi groups. Often very large scho hold brunches or luncheons graduates of specific departme on Homecoming Day.

Edward Rideout, director of alumni annual fund, explained cause of Villanova Universit present trouble with the Liq Control Board. Several years a an Inquirer reporter interview an alumnus during a tailgate pa on Homecoming Day. Apparen the subsequent article drew the tention of the Liquor Cont Board to Villanova's formerly l strict policy on alcoholic b erages on campus. At that t the university operated ste selling hot dogs and hamburg as well as liquor. Now the u versity provides only the space tailgate parties with the alu supplying their own liquor for events. The after-game activ are held at the Covered Wag licensed operation.

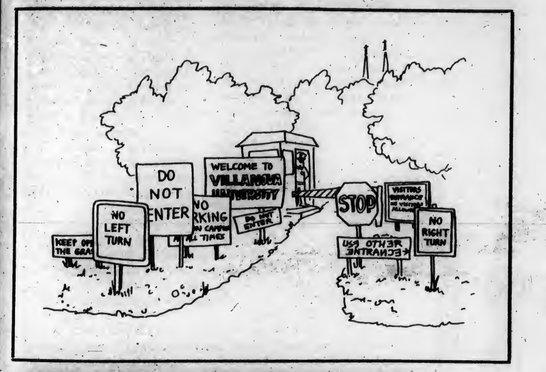
Parking, A Perennial Dilemma

The parking situation at Villanova has always been a problem among students and faculty.

In recent years, it has become more and more difficult to find an available spot after 10:30 a.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, and after 10 a.m. on Tuesdays, and Thursdays.

Why is it so difficult? Most students tend to blame the security office for giving out more parking stickers than they have spaces.

But after some investigation by The Villanovan staff, this was found to be untrue. There are 1,925 available spaces for students and only 1,809 stickers have been issued to date. Therefore, each day there should be approximately 116 spaces left over.



Obviously, there is either a mistake in our calculations or someone is parking in the 116 spaces who isn't supposed to.

Until the university can find the money and the space to build more parking lots, we will have to make do with what we have.

If you pay 25 dollars for a parking sticker, it entitles you to one six by twelve foot spot. The students without parking stickers are the main reason for the over-crowded conditions in the lot.

Towing the stickerless cars is one way to help alleviate violators, but who gave these students the right in the first place to park without a sticker?

In the end, it is up to the individual who doesn't have a sticker to decide whether it is fair or not to park in a spot designated for someone elses car.

Whatever the case may be, there is a parking problem at Villanova and until the towing is increased to 24 hour service many of us will have to be inconvenienced by parking in the Rugby field or somewhere between Ho Jo's and center city.

The Tripe Will Flow

To The Editor:

Once again, our undergraduate pundits have plunged their collective intellectual pipes in an assault upon the laws of a Commonwealth, an action for which they do not enjoy popular support and, in many cases, a state in which they do not have legal residency. Pardon me if I look askance upon cries of "rights, rights, I want my rights right now," but when, pray tell, did alcohol consumption become a natural right? Furthermore, was the State Legislature swayed by the prankish occupation of Lancaster Pike? Or was the cause celebre encapsulated in that unassailably logical syllogism "We need To Stew, But There Is No Brew, What Should (sic) We Do?" I await descriptions of "civil disobedience" in an attampt to scrub up the image of these churlish tantrums.

So I suppose the tripe will continue to flow, the inveighing and chest-pounding continue ad nauseam and the more bibulous desperados will perforce continue drinking while on the highway until "someone gets seriously hurt or killed". But reflect for a moment: has the Villanova student community not, in its unmitigated hue and cry of the past few weeks, evinced the accuracy of both the citizens of Randor Township and

Faded Snapshots At Homecoming

A Shame To Wait

In a few hours, alumni from various classes of Villanova past will begin their trek back to the ol' campus to partake in that annual ritual known as Homecoming.

It is that one weekend of the year during which adult and respectable members of the real world allow themselves to return to the place where they spent the "best years of my life," and share memories (enlivened a bit, perhaps, by time and a recent viewing of Animal House).

They will walk through the campus, awash with granite and autumn foliage; they will see the new Connelly Center rising out of the mud; they will see a football team with a winning record; they will attend cocktail parties and banquets and will go home reassured that the alma mater is, in fact, as they remember it — snapshots from a yearbook.

They will not see, however, a dearth of school-sponsored activities on campus; they will not see a student body growing more detached as each week wears on; they probably will not see the protests and will not hear about the Villanova students on trial.

Gone are the Cat's Eyes and Red Garters (Fieldhouse parties) of their college days. Going fast are the traditions that remain. Homecoming is no longer a big event for the undergraduate population of Villanova, surviving as another football game with a halftime that's a little longer than usual.

During Orientation each fall, freshmen always seem to be told that college is more than simply going to class and studying. It is a social learning experience as well, supposedly designed to prepare the student to enter society as a capable and compatable adult. Villanova is rapidly fading away from that aspect of its educational goal.

Time has a way of sweetening memories, of making the past greater than it actually was. Those alumni who come back to Villanova for Homecoming this weekend have undoubtably forgotten many of the problems of their college days, and we will someday look back at these days and smile. It just seems a shame to wait.

the Legislators of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in their original thoughts — that adolescence continues beyond high school and that common sense, accurate judgment and passions moderated by maturity seem all too absent in college students seeking sanctions for their mindless behavior.

Cordially,
John R. Haines

To the Editor:

Being a victim of the visitation policy now in effect, I feel it necessary to review the situation before the end of the three year experiment. If the policy is viewed from an objective standpoint, it can only be considered as a bad joke and as an insult to all parties involved.

In an educational community such as the one in which we are supposedly living, the actions of the student body are expected to reflect the age of its members. In other words, the University has the expectation that certain adult responsibilities will be undertaken by the student body. However, what the University fails to realize is that along with these responsibilities must also come certain privileges. A university is supposed to be more than just a place of learning, it is supposed to be a place to get an education. Education does not only come from lectures, but also from the world of the empirical.

Not only does the Villanova visitation policy hinder our education and insult our maturity level, but it also mocks the administration which has imposed it. The policy accomplishes this by the very existence of such a policy in the year 1978. The policy depicts its patrons as irrational medieval thinkers ridden by a morality of the absurd. The administrators don't seem to comprehend that the policy hinders social intercourse and doesn't prevent sexual intercourse. They also must realize that they should not cast themselves in the role of defender of the faith and take on the responsibility of guarding the morals of every resident student. A student's right to guide his own life, based on personal ideals and values, is of the utmost importance if a maturing process is to take place during the years at Villanova. Why else leave home and the domination of parental thought if not because of the aforementioned reason?

I, therefore, must decry the visitation policy on the grounds that it hinders education, ridicules the maturity level of the student population, and is medieval in thought. I propose that the administration should come out of their closets, rejoin society and present the student body with a fresh, updated, reasonable and rational policy.

We, the Villanova Barbell Club, on behalf of all the students who use the fieldhouse weightroom, would like to thank Dr. Theodore Aceto for all his help in renovating that facility.

Much money and effort was used to turn that dingy, sullen, weightroom into a new, modern work-out area. We hope that all the students who use the new facility will respect the time and expense that was involved.

Once again, we wish to thank our Athletic Director, Dr. Aceto, for all of his help.

Get Psyched - Pep Rally Leads the Way

By JACK STRAUB

Pep rallies go back to the days of high school — remember them? Hometown vs. Rival; afternoon classes cancelled; everyone piling into the gym; introduction of the football tea, the soccer team, the cross-country team; cheerleaders screaming out their cheers; coaches' speeches; maybe announcement of a bonfire that night.

The rallies were fun, and they did serve a purpose: they got everyone ready for the next day's game. Friday night was filled with anticipation of Saturday's contest. It was much more than two teams on a football field; it was two entire schools trying to prove who was the best.

The occurrence of pep rallies may have decreased since high school days are over, but the need for them certainly has not diminished. Our football team has a winning record and has played exciting football, pulling off all three victories in the fourth quarter of play. Last week's game against Richmond was won by a field goal with one second remaining to play — yet the stadium was not even half full. How does the team psyche itself when so little interest is shown?

Mike Chenet, one of the four senior captains, explains, "The team generates its own enthusiasm. It's a letdown when no one is there. Crowds help the team, giving it the support it needs." When asked what he thought about a pep rally for the team, he replied, "It's a great idea. People should come out for the whole day. There are tailgates before and after the game, and there's the game itself." As for crowd response inside the stadium, "the cheerleaders have a tough job. They're doing all they can. At the end of the Richmond game, the crowd got into it. It was great to look over and see everyone on their feet, cheering us on."

Bonny Partenope, co-captain of the cheering squad, also feels a pep rally is a help to the team. Speaking of this Friday's rally in the stadium, "I hope everybody comes out for it. The team needs a lot of people to support them, to do their best. The cheerleaders would like to teach the students our cheers."

For those who haven't noticed, the cheering squad's long hours of practice since late August have certainly paid off. Their stunts — pyramids, suspension, and a 20-foot human tower — are nothing short of spectacular.

The pep rally has returned. Friday afternoon in the stadium, the sub-varsity football team will kick off against Milford Academy at 3:30. At 4:15, Villanova will have its first pep rally, complete with band, cheerleaders, and pom-poms.

If Villanova means anything to you, if you take pride in this school and this team, support the pep rally in the Stadium.

Buzz - The Man Behind the Garbage Can

By JANET McGARRIGLE and JULIE LaROSA

For 18 years, a familiar face has maintained Bartley cafeteria. That face belongs to Wilburn William Harris, alias Buzz of Bartley. He's easy to spot with cigarette holder dangling out of his mouth and adamant commands of keeping feet off the tables and trash in the trashcans. Anyone who frequents Bartley is familiar with the legendary Buzz and his stern manner, but what few people know is the man behind the "character," his feelings about Villanova, and his interesting background.

Born and raised in Sharon, Georgia, Buzz spent most of his younger years around a convent where his mother worked. He later obtained a job as personal valet to Bishop O'Hara of Georgia, and travelled to London and other parts of Europe with the Bishop and the Apostolic Delegate.

Buzz states that his 24 years as a valet were the most thrilling of his life and that Bishop O'Hara was always like a father to him. During these years he had the opportunity to meet many famous people, his favorite being Madame Chiang Kai-shek.

William Wilburn Harns, alias Buzz, of Bartley Caf.

When Bishop O'Hara went on to Dublin, Ireland, Buzz preferred to remain in London with the Bishop's father. He then returned to the United States and began working at Villanova where he was one of the only black workers at the Main Line college.

Buzz states that the joy he finds in his work at Villanova revolves around the students. "I've never asked any C & F student a favor and he or she didn't come through. They never let me down. C & F students are tops."

Buzz has seen Villanova grow and prosper over the past 18 years. He believes that the students should give Father Driscoll a boost because he's really trying for them and they should be thankful for the privileges they have.

Buzz — Bartley just wouldn't be the same without him.

Are You a Junk Food Junkie?

By CAROL GOLDFARB

This is the first in a two part series on nutrition.

"One of the myths is that in an affluent society with abundant food, nutrition takes care of itself."

Dr. Don Davis
University of Texas

Animals of every kind become obese if forced to eat only two meals daily, even though the diet is ideal. Yet, when given small, frequent meals of the same food, their weight remains normal.

This is because large meals overwhelm the body's system so that much of the food cannot be utilized; so a large portion is stored as fat. However, when small meals are taken of the identical food, weight remains normal.

Humans are affected by the same disastrous manner by large meals; yet Americans eat 80% percent of their food after 6:00 p.m.

College life is such that eating "regularly" is a luxury few can afford. Yet, missing a meal, or eating too little, causes the blood sugar to fall, causing symptoms we know only too well: craving for sweets, hunger, tension, fatigue and irritability.

This usually results in overeating at the next meal or even eating on a candy binge. Eating excessive sweets or carbohydrates causes most of the sugar in the blood to be changed to storage fat. Again, the blood sugar falls and intense hunger recurs.

In the busy life of the student there is seldom time to think of planning nutritious meals. Fast food joints may be quick, easy and fun, but their food is loaded with calories.

A Colonel Sanders' Kentucky Fried Chicken Dinner, with a chocolate shake adds up to 1,387 calories. If you are an average male (5'9", 154 lbs.) this is about half of your allotted calories for the day. A female (5'4", 120 lbs) has only another 713 calories she may consume that day in order to maintain her weight.

Having lunch at Burger King may be inexpensive, but a Whopper, french fries, small Coke, topped off by a hot fudge brownie delight sundae at Dairy Queen adds up to 1,547 calories, a lot to lay on at lunchtime.

Next week, how to remedy your diet.

Tomorrow's game is considered to be one of the biggest this season. Not only because we get to witness the Cat's athletic prowess but because it is Homecoming Weekend.

On Campus decided to ask the student's for their opinions as to the value of Homecoming for the community as well as the University.

"I think it's a good idea because it brings back alumni which creates more spirit. I enjoy it and it creates atmosphere for the undergraduate population."

Mark Berenato
Junior

"Oh yes! I think it definitely is. I really don't know much about it but my sister was telling me about some of the people who were nominated. I think it's really nice."

Denise Schoner
Freshman

"I think it's [illegible]t keeps up a tradition. It brin[illegible]mni and the alumni bring in[illegible]e school."

[illegible]k Buchanan
Junior

"I've been here for four years, and I don't think of it as any great value. It just means this girl is the most beautiful. I don't really think it is important."

Tom Ryan
Senior

"Homecoming in itself is a worthwhile activity but I don't think its publicized enough. I think it should be a whole weekend with bonfires and parties. Its fun and I don't think they should get rid of it."

Joseph Squillace
Senior

"I feel that not enough is done to promote it. They could build more floats, and also publicize more in the community. Its nice to have the alumni come back and visit."

Hubba Hubba Hubba, Vasey!

L. to R. Paul Guerin, Lea March, Les Jacobsen, Jennifer Conway, Suzanne Barabas

By PATI NASELLA

The Graduate Theatre Department of Villanova started it s second show of the season at Vasey on Wed. Oct. 11. David Mamet's "The Water Engine" and "Mr. Happiness" do indeed display the genius of a successful young playwright.

Both plays were produced off-Broadway in 1978, and Vasey with a cast consisting mostly of Villanova talent offers both of these new, critically acclaimed plays for all you theatre lovers.

Director Daniel Baker, successfully recreated the look and sound of the 1930's radio. The stage in both plays was that of a recording station with the sound effects and musicians of the 30's.

"The Water Engine" is about a young inventor who invents a "water engine", yet is ridiculed, threatened and exploited in spite of his efforts. Greg Genovese was the inventor and was fabulous. As Charles Lang he had a frustrating life and seemed to only find console in his sister Rita, Jennifer Conway, and Barker, Alvin C'av both gave great performances.

The stage decor complemented the actors in their 1930 fashions, complete with baggy pants and seamed stockings. It was a great accomplishment of Leslie Muchmore, a theatre instructor at Villanova, who was in charge of set and light design.

The second show "Mr. Happiness" was written as a companion piece for "The Water Engine." It was thoroughly entertaining. Louis Lippa, a Temple professor, was Mr. Happiness and portrayed a 1970's "Dear Abby." He was a radio talk show host who answered many letters of personal problems on the air. His sincere advice was given in the 1930's style which was basically a common sense approach to solving others' problems. It was a delightful play.

Both works are based on problems, events and everyday life of the 30's and capture the attention of the audience with incredible authenticity.

Vasey has come through again with the thrilling new plays of David Mamet. Be sure to see them on Oct. 11 thru Oct. 14, and the following week, Oct. 18, thru the 21st.

The Villanova Union will sponsor a spectacular program of Prehispanic dances and authentic music from several regions of Mexico which will be performed by the widely acclaimed Ballet Folkorico Mexicano de Graciela Tapia on October 20, starting at 8:30 in the Fieldhouse.

The colorful, rhythmic, pulsating show is presented in a swirl of 250 authentic costumes with Mariachi, Marimba and Jorocha bands providing an exciting musical setting for the panorama of Mexican dance and song.

Graciela Tapia, the director of the Ballet, has preserved the authenticity of costumes, dances and music. She integrates genuine folk artist, both musicians and dancers, maintaining a high artistic level throughout the performance. The outcome is a colorful, fluent and intense spectacle.

The Ballet appeared at Villanova last year and according to Cathy Belleville, the Student Union coordinator, the attendance was very good. It was comprised mostly of Villanova faculty, staff and members of the surrounding community.

Tickets for the program are still available and may be purchased at the Campus Information Center, Ticketron and Mads in Ardmore. Villanova faculty and students will receive a two dollar discount on the regularly priced $7.50, $6.50, and $5.50 tickets. Put a little pizzazz in your life. Step out and enjoy this South of the Border entertainment.

Of Little Queens and Barracudas

By JOHN ZAGARELLA

The lights dimmed to eventual darkness; the applause grew louder and louder; and then the music started, officially beginning the party. Heart, led by the beautiful Ann Wilson, set the Spectrum stage ablaze Sunday night, as their concert performance commenced with "Cook With Fire" from their latest Dog and Butterfly Lp.

Ann Wilson, the lead singer, never sounded better. Her voice was clear and powerful; her presence was sensuous and stunning. Embracing the basic spirit of rock, Heart went through a generous itinerary of both old and new favorites. After opening the show with recent material, it was time to savor the flavor of older classics such as "Heartless" and "Magic Man."

While Heart is considered a hard rock band, they do have a considerable number of slower songs to their credit including, "Love Alive," "Mistral Wind," and "Dog and Butterfly." These tunes were done with class and style, with Ann Wilson's impeccably disciplined voice in the forefront and equally crafted instrumentation in the background. Their melodies contain a hint of fantasy that puts the finishing touch on their immense exhibition of talent.

The finale was simply incredible. The Wilsons began with "Crazy on You," leading into "Kick It Out," and exploding into "Barracuda." The band then left the stage amidst exuberant cheers of approval.

Shortly, they returned for their first encore, which consisted of "White Lightning," from their first release, Dreamboat Annie, and to the surprise of the sellout crowd they went into Led Zeppelin's, "Rock and Roll." Only a group of this magnitude can successfully take command of a song by one of the world's most highly acclaimed musical units.

Again, Heart left the stage, and again, the crowd demanded their return. For their second encore they slowed the pace down once more as the stars sentimentally performed Harry Nilsson's, "Without You" for their final number. From start to finish, Heart was a rousing triumph.

The supporting act on hand was Ambrosia, a rock band with a promising future.

Disco Club Tomorrow - Today

By BARBARA HIGGINS

For those of you who think that the only good clubs are in center city, you obviously haven't been in Drexel Hill lately. Fortunately for all the disco lovers in the area, Eddie Allen on July 15, 1978, opened the CLUB TOMORROW in the Drexel Line Shopping Center off of State Road. The decor resembles a disco version of "2001 Space Odyssey" with its clear, polyurathene chairs and psychedelic colors. Numerous murals of the earth and moon accent the walls, giving the place what Allen refers to as a "futuristic look."

Cover charge is $4.00 on Friday and Saturday nights, which includes one drink and a night of non-stop dancing music. Drinks are served between 9 and 2 and range from $1.50 and $2.00. As of now, the frozen concoctions, (Pina Coladas, Daiquiris, etc.) are not being served but the management hopes to add them in the near future.

A small crowd trickles in around 9:00 or 9:30 looking like mannequins in a high fashion clothing store, standing around and observing. But by 11:30, everyone throws off their standoffish facade and joins the frenzy on the dance floor. As of now the sound system is adequate, but word has it that a new one will be installed that will make the average club sound like a $15.98 phonograph.

D.J. Frank Cerami plays his funky selections from the disco top twenty and the Freaky Deaky and Hustle are seen in fifty different variations.

Some of the special events at the Club Tomorrow include a "Hot Fox Nite" on Tuesdays, when a $50 prize goes to the girl with the sexiest outfit. Thursday night features disco dance lessons from 8-9:30, and Sunday is Pencil Portrait Night. This is when a cartoonist comes in and draws caricatures of some of the customers. The doors are closed on Mondays, hoping that everyone will recover from the frantic weekend.

Approximately once a month, the manager, Donnie Staino brings in a major D.J. or a special group. This month, "Musique" will be appearing on October 18, which should bring the club to sell-out capacity.

Right now, business is booming and as long as the syncopated bass sounds of disco dominate the music industry, expect the Club Tomorrow to be the No. 1 hot spot for the clubing crowds.

Boston to Arrive

By STEVE CASTELLANO

Music through technology is what Boston is really about. This may seem strange, but it's true. The majority of Boston's music is actually programmed through a computer. The genius behind Boston's technology is Tom Scholz. Scholz does most of the guitar work on the albums. Scholz, a graduate of MIT is a most highly qualified individual when it comes to music and technology.

To get right down to facts, Boston is Tom Scholz; the other members are session musicians. Scholz has a 12-track recording studio in the basement of his home. What he generally does is put down several tracks by himself, as he plays most every instrument. Then the rest of the band comes in and plays in accompaniment to what Tom has put on tape.

The first LP entitled "Boston" took several years to produce but once it hit the record market, it hit big. "More than a Feeling" went gold almost immediately. Boston's latest release "Don't Look Back" went gold before it was released to the record stores.

Boston lands in Philadelphia on October 30. This concert should be something to look forward to.

On the album, Pete Townshend turns in one of his best all-around performances. Besides composing six of the nine songs, Townshend's guitar and synthesizer playing is splendid, best exemplified in the track "Guitar and Pen."

Townshend, though, is not the sole genius responsible for the album. In many ways, it is a vocalist's masterpiece, featuring lead singer Roger Daltry as he has never sounded before. His dramatic presentation of the title track is outstanding, and his emotional handling of the song "Love is Coming Down" makes it as touching a song as he has ever done.

Also contributing solidly to the album is bassist John Entwhisle, composer of three songs and singing lead vocal on one. He continues to improve his ability to make the music of The Who blend together in an extremely effective fashion.

As for the Who's infamous drummer, Keith Moon, who's recent death was a tragic blow to the rock world, he contributes his usual impressive performance on the album. It can honestly be said that he was as big a factor to the Who's success as any drummer has ever been to a rock band.

What is in the Who's future is anyone's guess, but it is certain that they have come up with a solid, and possibly their last, effort with Who Are You. If we never see another Who record or concert it can be said that they have closed out an illustrious career in rock and roll on a fine note.

Lynyrd Skynyrd

The Who

By STEVE COMBS

When I first heard that the lead singer/writer for Lynyrd Skynyrd had died, my reaction was "Leonard who?". It wasn't until I came to Villanova last year that I joined the legions of Skynyrd fanatics.

In case you were not familiar with the group, the members were Ronnie Van Zant-vocals, Allen Collins-guitar, Gary Rossington-guitar, and a host of other folks who drifted in and out. On October 19, 1977 Van Zant, Steve Gaines (guitar) and Cassie Gaines (vocals) were killed in a plane crash. This setback notwithstanding, the group has just released Lynyrd Skyayrd's First and Last. It is an album originally released only in Florida, back when the group first started.

Side one opens with "Down South Jukin", a typical Van Zant rocker that sounds a lot like "Gimme Three Steps." "Preacher's Daughter" keeps the pace up but adds little. "White Dove" is one of two songs written and sung by drummer Rickey Medlocke. I don't know what became of him but this beautiful tune is a testament to his talent. The side ends with "Was I Right or Wrong" and a wailing guitar burst called "Lend a Helping Hand."

"Wino" starts off side two. It's a hard driving number reminiscent of B.T.O. (Rickey Medlocke's "The Seasons" has a lighter touch than is typical of the band. Its clear, airy sound is a nice break. "Things Goin' On" finishes the album. This cut was on their first album for MCA.

If you're a Skynyrd fan, this album is a necessity. If you're not, you should, be. And this is a good place to start.

By TIM DIDIEGO

Who fans have waited a long time for Who Are You. For the past three years, Britain's hard-rocking quartet has kept itself out of the public scene. In fact, many considered the band, who ignited the 60's with explosive stage shows and invented the first rock opera, Tommy, to be out of existance. The Who's last album, The Who By Numbers, released in 1975, seemed to mark the group's decline from rock and roll superstar status.

With the recent release of Who Are You, though, the band has temporarily rejuvenated itself, putting together one of the best efforts in rock this year. The Who seems to have learned to present, in a professional and artistic manner, deep and personal feelings in their music that the listener can truly experience.

On first listening, one might feel that Who Are You is an attempt to imitate the band's best and most popular hard rock album, Who's Next, released in 1971. But, as with all other Who projects, this one is completely unique, showing elements of greatness never displayed before.

BOOKER & STEVE HRABRICK

Stealing a phone call isn't a game.

Most students play by the rules when placing a long distance call. They take advantage of bargain rates and make their calls during the discount periods. If you're not sure when you can call at discount rates, check your phone book.

A few students think it's O.K. to break the rules by stealing their telephone calls. They're not beating the system, they're taking advantage of all of us, because it drives up the cost of providing telephone service.

Students who break the rules also run the risk of paying a large fine. Spending time in jail. And getting themselves a permanent police record.

It's just not worth it!

Union Sponsors New Programs

By LUCY GAGLIARDI

In light of the controversy of the Liquor Control Board (LCB), life at Villanova is hardly what you'd call "social." Students, as well as the administration are patiently awaiting the LCB's okay to use alcohol for various social gatherings. Until then, Union leaders are working diligently to create programs for the students.

Union leader, Kevin Smith says these activities are directed at students without the transportation to leave campus grounds for a social event. Despite the absence of a liquor license, Smith feels optomistic, "When I was a freshman, alcohol was not permitted, but the picture changed March of that same year." He strongly believes that the state should make an exception to higher education colleges such as Villanova; then each school could make its own alcohol policy.

Contrary to Smith's optomistic hope for a new alcohol policy is that of Lucyna Goraki, Villanova's program director. She feels Villanova will never get to a point where it can sponsor a social event with alcohol. "Now," she says, "the Union wants to make a reputation for these new programs, and the only deciding factor is the student's response.

Listed are various non-alcoholic events now going on at Villanova:

What Ever Happened To
Frank Murphy: Great Competitor

By DAVID SCHMIDT

Last St. Patrick's Day, Frank Murphy took a look at himself and decided to slim down. A world class runner at Villanova in the late 1960's, the Irishman decided to take up running again. With the same determination Murphy exhibited in his college races, Frank has whipped himself into competitive shape and will participate in the upcoming New York City Marathon.

cross-country and track. As a member of four NCAA national championship teams, (two each in cross-country and track) and five IC4A title winning clubs (three indoor track and two outdoor track), Frank established personal best times of 1:47.0 in the half mile, 3:58.0 in the mile, and 3:38.4 in the 1500 meter run.

Murphy received the Most Valuable Performer award at the Penn Relays for his outstanding efforts. Jack O'Reilly, the announcer for the Penn Relays, reports that Frank "was a great competitor; (he) ran with determination and guts — a real fighter." Murphy ran against the best runners in the world at the time, men like Jim Ryan of Kansas, and Villanova's own Marty Liquori, Dave Patrick and Tom Donnelly (the present track coach at Haverford College).

Murphy, a native of Dublin, Ireland, picked Villanova for his education and states that it was the "best decision I ever made." Assistant track coach Jack Pyrah remembers, "When he (Murphy) came to Villanova from Dublin, you'd think 'poor Frank' and in two weeks he had the university under this thumb!" O'Reilly relates that "Frank was the most effervescent runner I've ever known, a genuine character." Noted for his Irish sense of humor, Murphy loves to have fun, and was known to exhibit a healthy interest in beer and parties.

Now in New York, Murphy last year opened a pub entitled 'Murphy's.' Two months ago, a second pub, three times the size of the first, was established. Called 'The Old Stand,' this pub-restaurant also handles catering in Manhattan. Frank says business is "excellent" and that his economics background at Villanova has helped him to plan the future of his establishments. A loyal alumnus, Murphy has tentative plans to charter a bus for the Villanovans who frequent his pub so they can attend one of the remaining home football games.

If you are ever in New York City, stop by 'The Old Stand' and say hello to Frank Murphy, a world class runner, a successful businessman, and a delightful character.

Yankees or Dodgers?
A Variety of Reasons

By JERRY KNAFO

Eight months, 3,000 some-odd games, and over 25,000,000 fans ago, 26 Major League baseball teams began the 1978 season with the highest of hopes. Now, only two teams remain in contention, the New York Yankees and the Los Angeles Dodgers, and undoubtedly, in the days to come, will be fighting for the glory and title of "World Champions of Baseball."

Which team will it be? The Villanovan went out and asked this question to the sports fans on campus, and this is what we came up with.

Jim Musselman (Sr.): "Dodgers in five. Their pitching is too good. I feel the Yankees bought all of their players; they're overpaid and there is too much inner conflict on the team. Plus, I think the Dodgers will have a lot of incentive caused by Jim Gilliam's death."

Mary Verderame (So.): "Yankees, because New York is the greatest! I love New York!"

Jerry Vasa (Sr.): "I think it will be a good series with the Dodgers winning in six. Dodgers have better pitching. There will probably be a lot of runs scored. The Dodgers have five good starters whereas the Yanks have been relying on Guidry all season."

Barb Robinson (So.): "The Chicago Cubs."

Jay Andrea (Jr.): "New York in six, because of better pitching and base running."

Leslie Palmer (So.): "Dodgers in five because they will be determined to win it for their ex-coach, Jim Gilliam."

Mike Denby (Sr.): "I don't really care, because the Phillies are out of it, but I'll bet you five dollars on the Dodgers!"

Mary Jo Harkins (So.): "Yankees in five, because they're great."

Ray Murphy (Jr.): "Dodgers. I think they have better overall hitting in all positions. Also, better pitching. The Yankees only have Guidry. Dodgers will want to do it for Jim Gilliam."

Andrea Germak (So.): "Yankees in five, because Lou Piniella is gorgeous . . . and Greg Nettles . . . and Bucky Dent . . . and . . ."

Al Corless (Fr.): "Dodgers in six. It's tough for me, because the Dodgers are my favorite team, and the Yanks are my second favorite. I won't really mind which team wins."

Pam Mayro (So.): "Yankees in five, because the Dodgers beat Philadelphia and I didn't like that."

Nick Daddio (Sr.): "Dodgers in six. Better overall pitching and clutch hitting. Also because they will play four games in Dodger Stadium. Yanks have a chance only if Reggie and Chris get hot."

Lou Karagias (Sr.): "Yankees all the way. They're great, they're the world champs, and they're going to do it again. Yankees represent pride and tradition."

Rich Ruch (Sr.): "I hope the Dodgers. Except for Guidry, I think they have the better pitching staff. Abbinz!"

Stan Fairlow (Fr.): "Dodgers. Because Steve Garvey can't do anything wrong with a wife like his."

Tom DePasquale (So.): "Yankees, of course."

Women's Sports
Women's Cross Set Records

Last weekend Villanova's Women's Cross Country Team participated in the Rutgers Invitational and finished in flying colors. In an exceptional team effort, the women harriers captured 10 place, beating such powerhouses as Delaware State, University of D.C., and University of Pennsylvania.

Brigid Leddy crossed the finish line in a personal best effort of 18:43, placing her first for Villanova and 13 overall. Other Villanova scorers, Maureen Sullivan (20:08), Sue Shea (20:25), and Katie Thompson (20:28) ran the 5000 meters course in their best times so far this season and show signs of continuous improvement. Fine performances were also demonstrated by Mary Ellen Borkowski, Cecily Guinan, Mary Nebler, Marge Liebler and Brandy Johnson.

On October 4, the team will compete at Belmont where they hope to fare well against Rutgers, Temple and other area schools.

Soccer

By BETH WHITE

Saturday, October 10, the Women's Soccer team played a highly competitive game against top-rated Princeton, losing by a narrow margin of 3-1. The game, played on the soccer field beside Stanford Hall, was one of the girls' finest, especially since the Princeton soccer team has beaten both Lehigh and Penn by scores of 6-1 and 5-1, respectively. Both teams are scheduled to play the Villanova women later this year.

Coach Lee Stevens, in his halftime pep talk, told his team that "from a hustle standpoint, it's been pretty good. They're a tough team, but you've been containing them" The score at halftime had been 2-1, but as one of the players remarked, "the ball has been down at our goal most of the game." The single Villanova goal was scored by Donna Lohr, the center forward, within the first minute of play. The coach commended Donna and her teammates, Karen Clabbers and Robin Glacken, for a well played game.

The women's next home soccer game is Saturday, October 28, on the soccer field.

Cats Take Another Fourth Period Thriller

By PETER J. RYAN

The Wildcat football team clinched their third win of the season on a last second field goal over the University of Richmond. The final score was 17-14. The Cats have recovered well after their 31-0 disaster at the hands of the Clemson Tigers.

There is a difference, however, as Coach Bedesem points out; "Clemson and Richmond are two different teams — Clemson has an excellent program and some of the best athletes in the south. They play national contenders (as do Richmond) and their coaching staff is excellent. Put that all together with their attendance records (over 45,000 against Villanova) and you have a winning organization."

Richmond Spiders came to Villanova with a record of 1-4 riding on the heels of a 51-28 rout over the University of Cincinnati. Offensively the Spiders boasted a solid running attack which featured tailback Jesse Williams and on defense the free safety Jeff Nixon.

Williams took the opening kickoff and ran the length of the field for the score, zig-zagging his way through a stunned Wildcat defensive team. Steve Adams made it 7-0 with the conversion fifteen seconds into the game.

The Cats came right back as cornerback Dave Martin blocked a Richmond punt that teammate Joe Posch scooped up at the 14 yard line and ran in for the score. A Chuck Bushbeck conversion knotted the score at seven to end the quarter.

Richmond took the lead at halftime as Greg Gregory hit flanker Ken Tweedy on a 36 yard pass play with :40 remaining to lead 14-7. That play and the preceding 45 yard gain by Williams on a reverse trap were the only lapses by the Wildcat defense during the entire game.

The score remained the same until Villanova defensive end Don Brooks picked off a pass and give the Cats the ball on the Spider 25 yard line. Hard running by senior fullback Vince Thompson (90 yards in 21 carries) and quarterback Pat O'Brien set up a Shawn Passman touchdown from two yards out. Another boot from freshmen Bushbeck deadlocked the teams.

The Cat's iced it with a heart-stopping 33 yard field goal by Bushbeck with one second remaining after O'Brien directed the offense from midfield with 2:43 remaining. Receptions by Greg Bedesem and Thompson accounted for this successful drive.

The real stories for the Wildcats were their exceptional defense, allowing 66 yards rushing and 7 yards passing in the second half and Vince Thompson's invaluable performance in the backfield rushing receiving and clearing the way for other runners. Said Coach Bedesem; "Vince is an integral part of our offense . . . he bailed us out by breaking tackles."

All of these talents will be needed when the Cats take on Colgate in the two teams first series meeting tomorrow in the annual Villanova "Homecoming Game." The Red Raiders are a deceptive 0-4 thus far after posting a 10-1 mark last season. They also hold the distinction of being the nation's number one offensive team. Fullback Angelo Colosimo and halfback Jim Comforti provide most of the ground attack while junior John Marzo calls the signals in their Wing-T offense that has scored big points.

On defense the Red Raiders will counter the Cat Wishbone with an intricate 4-4, Multiple alignment.

Warns Coach Bedesem, "This is the type of offense that can explode on you . . . we will try to continue with the monentum from the Richmond game and work with the offense."

Notes: Coach Bedesem on the Richmond game: "I don't remember a game where I've had to make more crucial calls."

Attendance was the poorest of the year as the gates accounted for only 5,800 people as opposed to 9,000 for the William and Mary game.

Sophomore nose guard Howie Long echoed Bedesem's feelings on the defensive effort by stating; "The defense played together for the first time and we hit people."

Soccer Team Earns First Win

By CHRIS BRENNER

After watching victories escape them one way or the other over the initial phase of the season, Villanova's soccer team finally put it all together against Drew University last Saturday, notching their first win by the score of 3-1. Even the injuries which have plagued the squad so badly this year could not daunt the tenacious Wildcat attack.

"We were long overdue," stated Coach Howard Graff after the game. "I know we have the skill, and the players know they have the potential to win a lot of ball games. This (the Drew contest) marks our start towards a .500 season."

Indeed, the way the Cats dominated play during the win would have made a believer out of anybody. Although the first half of the contest was scoreless, pressure from Villanova's front line never relented. The eruption finally came in the second half with Dave McHugh leading the surge once again. The invaluable halfback hammered home the first two Wildcat goals, upping his team-leading total now to six for the season. Freshman hit, Clint Grimes, tallied the final goal for the winners. Goalie Bill Schamp, another frosh sensation, demonstrated his stinginess in the nets as he turned back eleven sporadic Drew shots.

The only sour note of the game for Villanova came when fullback Tim Armstrong was injured while trying to head the ball. The senior booter was still out this past Tuesday and will be badly missed for what may be another few games.

Dave McHugh has scored six of Villanova's seven goals this season.

Harriers Capture Paul Short Memorial

By JOHN T. COOK

Amos Kip Korir and Sydney Maree finished in a tie for second place last weekend as the Wildcat harriers won the Fifth Annual Paul Short Memorial Race at Lehigh University.

It was the University of Richmond's Hillary Tuwei, one of Kenya's best distance runners; however, who led the 10,000 meter race from start to finish and won in 31:30.

Amos and Sydney were both timed in 31:45, well behind the elusive Tuwei. Hillary has the distinction of being the first runner from another school to defeat either Amos or Syd this year.

John Burns was back in stride this week finishing third for Villanova and seventh overall. "Burney," one of the key men in the team's championship quest, finished comfortably ahead of his nearest rivals in 32:12.

Twelfth overall and in fourth for Villanova was Kevin Dillon. Kevin, who is more accustomed to a hillier course, cruised to a time of 32:31.

Rob Earl, tired after a strenuous workout in the 24 hours before the race, finished fifth for Villanova and fourteenth overall. Rob, still hoping for Sydney's freshmen record, finished in 32:35.

In his best race of the season Dean Childs finished in 33:09, sixth for the team and twenty-seventh overall.

Villanova, in winning last Saturday's meet, defeated a strong Maryland team, Navy, IC4A power Fairleigh Dickinson, Georgetown, Queens College, the University of Richmond, Lehigh, Drexel and several track clubs. The team not only won, but also gained valuable experience on the new Lehigh course. Lehigh will be the sight of this year's NCAA sectional qualifying and last week's race is sure to help the team later in the season.

The team's last home meet will be tomorrow at Belmont Park when they host the Big Five Championship meet. It promises to be an exciting race as defending champions Jay Wood and Jim Flynn battle to re-establish themselves on the team, Sydney and Amos will pursue the course record as the team defends its title. The race features Penn, Temple, La Salle, and St. Joe's with Drexel, Catholic University and Delaware as guests.

Polocats Split In Penn State Tourney

By ERIC PIPPEN

Last weekend the Villanova Water Polo team split a four game league tournament at Penn State University. The league tournament included such teams as: Princeton, Johns Hopkins, Lehigh University, and Monmouth College.

The Polo players were upset by Johns Hopkins Friday evening 14 to 11. Despite an early lead helped by senior Gary Stanco with four goals and junior Tom Parisi's three goals, not to mention an unrelentless defense led by senior Steve Gallagher and an excellent goalie defense by senior Bill Butterworth; a strong Johns Hopkins pulled ahead in the last quarter to win the game.

Saturday, with junior Mike Patti as goalie and help from sophomores Jim MacDonald and Kevin O'Hara, Villanova easily overcame Lehigh 14 to 6.

Saturday morning the Villanova Water Polo Players were toppled by Monmouth College 10 to 10. Helping to score Villanova's ten goals were seniors Stan DeGeus and Eddy Opalach.

Sunday, Princeton fell prey to Villanova's Polo team led by top scorer Gary Stanco followed by Eddy Opalach, Stan DeGeus, and Tom Parisi.

Villanova's Water Polo team captain, Gary Stanco, who has been playing water polo for four years claims that this years team is the best team he has seen at Villanova. "We have a definite chance to go to the Eastern Division Championships held this fall at New Haven, Connecticut, Gary said.

Villanova hopes to beat Monmouth College and plans to beat Johns Hopkins at the Mid-Atlantic Championships early this November at West Point Military Academy in New York.

The Polo player's next game will be against Penn State University and St. Francis of New York at Monmouth College, New Jersey October 20 and 21.

CATCH-19: Action On Drinking Age

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

In an effort to coordinate and maximize Villanova student, administration, and faculty effort to deal better with the alcohol situation in Pennsylvania, CATCH 19, (Cats Assembled To Change 19, the state drinking age) has been formed.

As a University steering committee, it will include Jeffrey Quinn, resident staff director from the dean of men's office, Father Robert Martin, O.S.A., dean of student activities, Lucy Gorsky, program director for the Villanova Union, Jack O'Brien, assistant program director for the Union, and as yet three unnamed faculty members.

On Thursday, October 12, Father John E. Deegan, O.S.A., vice-president for student life, pledged full University support to accomplish one of two objectives — either to lower the drinking age in Pennsylvania to 18, or to find adequate measures to develop a goal of lowering the drinking age to 18 at the University level.

As a result of the formulation of CATCH 19, several specific committees have been formed.

The Committee For Alcohol Education, co chaired by Coleen Corcoran, president of the resident student association, and an as yet unnamed member of the Association of Non-Resident Students, will present the alcohol situation to the student body and the public through a series of organized rallies, Small Talks, and WKVU updates. The committee also hopes to set aside one full class day for the discussion of the alcohol question.

The Area Colleges Communication Committee has been formed to coordinate Villanova and area college communication and to stimulate sympathetic support for Villanova's cause from area educational institutions.

A Lobby Committee has also been established to coordinate all related efforts (petitioning, etc.) and to communicate Villanova's cause to the Pennsylvania State Legislature in Harrisburg.

The State-Wide Communications Committee has been created to direct and to inform all area colleges and universities on Villanova's internal actions concerning the alcohol question.

The Internal Publicity Committee will attempt to promote general student interest among the Villanova student body.

The Budget Committee has also been formed to solicit financial aid from student activities. Tee shirt sales and additional fund-raising activities will be held to gain revenue to finance a proposed rally in Harrisburg.

Finally, a Harrisburg Committee will be responsible for the transportation of Villanova students and all interested parties to Harrisburg for a proposed demonstration to be announced at a later date.

Jack O'Brien, temporary spokesman for CATCH 19, commented on the formation of the committee.

"CATCH 19 is a milestone in college history," declared O'Brien. "It is indeed rare when student organization and administration are in total agreement on how to handle specifically

Vandalism Plagues Campus

The abuses in Sullivan Hall speak for themselves.

By ANTHONY C. ONOFRIETTI

Although the school year is still young, vandalism has already affected Villanova University.

Vandalism cost the University forty thousand dollars just two years ago. It occurs primarily in the larger buildings, often in male dormitories such as Stanford and Sullivan Halls.

"So far, we have had new security doors damaged, a fire set to a pile of trash, a phone receiver ripped out of the wall, a bathroom stall door thrown out of the third floor window, and several fire hoses and extinguishers needlessly discharged," states Bill Weber, area coordinator of the Sullivan Hall resident staff.

The policy regarding the payment for damage, is placed solely in the hands of the residents of that particular wing or hall, unless the responsible parties are caught.

"Our intention here is not to charge the students," states Associate Dean of Men Anthony M. Martin, "but rather to have the residents recognize their responsibilities to the floor. Our purpose, in this regard, is to maintain their residency in a pleasant atmosphere."

The question remains as to the fairness of charging the residents, either on an individual or group basis, for damages that they might not have caused.

"I feel it is a fair system," says Martin, "because the students are willing to live with the destruction. We must place the blame on the residents for such a display of irresponsibility. They can have an effect on this situation if they would only pressurize their peers in order to reveal the guilty party."

Martin's stance is supported by Weber. "I think it is a fair way of handling the problem. More often than not, the residents know who is to blame and choose to shelter the individual. They have an alternative solution however; that being to identify the guilty party."

Compared to other colleges, VU appears to be at an average position. As reported by an official in Temple University's Department of Public Safety, "Vandalism is so commonplace here, we refer to it as 'criminal mischief,' and let it go at that. We ran up a bill of over fifty-five thousand dollars last year.

"Boston College, reports that vandalism has lessened considerably since the enactment of charging students directly and on the spot. We are very well below the national average."

Female Enrollment Rising Rapidly

VILLANOVA, PA., — Female enrollment in the full-time undergraduate divisions at Villanova University has risen 700% since 1968 when the University officially opened all of its academic programs to women.

The ten-year growth is reflected in current statistics reported this week which show Villanova's enrollment (male and female) up slightly from last year.

Enrolled in the four major undergraduate divisions are 5,875 students, about 75 more than the number from September, 1977. Overall figures, which include the part-time division (University College), The graduate School, and the Villanova School of Law, indicate a student population of 9,528 as compared to 9,422 last year.

Most striking, however, is the continued rise in the enrollment of women students. Forty percent of the current full-time undergraduate students are female, according to the new statistics.

Founded as an all-male school, Villanova first admitted women to its undergraduate programs in the early 1950's with the opening of the College of Nursing. Female enrollment was limited to nursing and to the College of Engineering until 1968, when all restrictions, except for campus residency, were lifted.

A dormitory for women was opened in the following year, and the residency restriction was also lifted. Additional dormitory space was provided as the female enrollment began to increase dramatically.

Today Villanova, with 2700 students, has one of the largest resident populations of any college in the area.

EARN OVER $650 A MONTH RIGHT THROUGH YOUR SENIOR YEAR.

If you're a junior or a senior majoring in math, physics or engineering, the Navy has a program you should know about. It's called the Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate-Collegiate Program (NUPOC-C for short) and if you qualify, you can earn as much as $650 a month right through your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you'll receive an additional year of advanced technical education. This would cost you thousands in a civilian school, but in the Navy, we pay you. And at the end of the year of training, you'll receive a $3,000 cash bonus.

It isn't easy. There are fewer than 400 openings and only one of every six applicants will be selected. But if you make it, you'll have qualified for an elite engineering training program. With unequaled hands-on responsibility, a $24,000 salary in four years, and gilt-edged qualifications for jobs in private industry should you decide to leave the Navy later. (But we don't think you'll want to.)

Ask your placement officer to set up an interview with a Navy representative when he visits the campus on Nov. 21, or contact your Navy representative at 564-3820.
If you prefer, send your résumé to the Navy Nuclear Officer Program, Code 312-B537, 4015 Wilson Blvd., Arlington, Va. 22203, and a Navy representative will contact you directly. The NUPOC-Collegiate Program. It can do more than help you finish college: it can lead to an exciting career opportunity.

ANS Seeks Members

By NESSIE PALAZZOLO

The Association of Non-Resident Students (ANS) held their weekly meeting Thursday, October 12. Although the number of undergraduate commuters make up a total of 58% of the student body, there were only 35 students present.

The ANS is divided into five committees, Social, Communications, Ad-Hoc, Athletics, and Academics, each of which meets separately during the week.

The Social Committee is planning an ANS-RSA (Resident Student Association) party in the Day Hop. The tentative date is set for October 21.

Other events planned are: Monte Carlo night which involves gambling with play money for prizes, a ski trip in January, and an outing to Philadelphia.

The Communications Committee will be coming out with a newsletter in the near future. They are also in charge of the ANS bulletin board outside of the Pieshop.

The Ad-Hoc Committee involves itself with organizing carpools and helping commuters find rides.

The Athletics Committee organizes the teams which include basketball, volleyball, and football.

The Academics Committee was formed in order to advise students with their curriculum.

Suggestions for changing the club's name were discussed, but as of yet, no definite decisions have been made. Plans for an ANS t-shirt were also discussed.

This year's president is John Garbarino and the vice-president is Laura Stecklair.

"The major concern of ANS," said Garbarino, "is trying to find active people."

The ANS needs new members. Any interested commuter should contact either John Garbarino or Laura Stecklair in the ANS office, second floor, Dougherty Hall. Meetings are held Thursday at 12:45, room 209 in Bartley.

a situation."

O'Brien added, however, that the success of the program will largely depend upon student organizational input.

"It is the obligation of student and all University leaders to look at the alcohol situation seriously," confided O'Brien. "Student leaders gave total commitment at the committee's initial and formative meetings.

"We thus expect student organizations to lead the rest of the University in maintaining a spirited unity in effort," stated O'Brien.

O'Brien and other committee members, specifically Jeffrey Quinn, are optimistic about the future of the committee's work.

"If the purpose of CATCH 19 is properly promulgated, it should be well-received by students, faculty, and administration alike," stated Quinn.

The first move of the committee has been to reschedule tentatively the October 12 student rally for November 3.

Homecoming Queen Crowned

By TERRY O'TOOLE

Laura Tue, a junior nursing major, was crowned as Villanova's 1978 Homecoming Queen at an Alumni House reception held last Thursday night.

The selection of the Queen marked the beginning of this fall's Homecoming Weekend, an annual event designed to bring graduates back to their alma mater run by the Student Activities Office. Despite a 20-14 varsity football loss to Colgate Saturday afternoon and the fourth rainy Homecoming in the past four years, the event ran fairly smoothly, according to junior Henry Klehm, co-chairman of the activity.

"We had a few worries about the rain, but it didn't make that much difference," commented Klehm, who shared his duties with senior Barbara Burke. It was the first time either student had worked on Homecoming.

"The undergraduate students don't seem very interested anymore, but the alumni are. We had a few more people become enthused this year."

Klehm said that between 1500 and 1700 ballots were cast by students for the 46 candidates nominated for the Homecoming Queen contest, a larger number than last year's vote. The top five vote getters were present at Thursday night's reception, during which administrators, alumni organization representatives and leaders of student organizations "who are representing the student body" met the finalists and cast their votes to determine the Queen.

Ms. Tue, sponsored by the Delta Kappa Nu sorority, was crowned by Becky Horstmann, last year's Queen. Comprising the Homecoming Court were the other four finalists, Linda Ann Schon, a sophomore sponsored by Delta Pi Epsilon; Carol Del Negro, a junior sponsored by Lambda Kappa Delta; Colleen Nolan, a junior sponsored by the Women's Tennis Team; and Diane Addonizio, a freshman sponsored by the Photography Club.

Ms. Nolan and Ms. Del Negro were members of the 1977 Homecoming Court.

"I was completely surprised; I never even expected to be nominated," said Ms. Tue. "It's a great honor, and I think any girl would be honored to do it.

"I love it. You get to meet a lot of people you'd never meet, and you feel more a part of the University."

Klehm felt that the event would benefit from greater publicity among the undergraduates in the future, while Ms. Burke suggested the election of a Homecoming King to increase student interest in the affair.

"I think it's fine as it is," Ms. Tue said. "Everybody knows about it, and they do it very nicely. It's pretty traditional, and I love it."

It's not Bluto behind the wheel, but a ZP Deathmobile, none-the-less, made its way around the stadium during halftime of last Saturday's Homecoming game.

Senate Meets Today...

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

Four motions approved by the Senate Academic Policy Committee at the end of last year are on the agenda for today's University Senate Meeting.

The first motion states that the University Senate accept the Council of Deans recommendation that bachelor degress be granted to former Villanovans who have not completed the program requirement for a bachelor's degree, but who have gone on to secure some advance degree.

A motion will be made that the University Senate adopt a policy against cheating and plagiarism.

It will be proposed that the University Senate standardize a University-wide withdrawal policy. At present, each college has a different policy for withdrawal from courses.

The most controversial motion will be that the University Senate accept a new overload policy. The Academic Quality Control Subcommittee recommends a new policy because the practice of overloading contributes to the decline in educational quality," as stated in the preamble of the proposed policy.

Under this proposed overload policy, students will have to pay for any courses taken on an overload in a particular semester.

Cheating, Plagiarism Discussed

By JOSEPH B. FINIO

In May of 1972, then Vice-President for Academic Affairs, Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., noting an increasing amount of cheating and plagiarism, recommended to the Executive Committee of the University Senate that action be taken on a review of policy and establishment of sanctions.

It has been six years and five months since May, 1972 and Villanova still does not have a concrete policy on cheating and plagiarism.

In those intervening years, committees and sub-committees have drawn up, added to, deleted from, and spliced together what is now the Standards and Procedure on Student Academic Misconduct and Discipline or, more commonly, "the Cheating and Plagiarism Document."

The reasons for formulating such a document are best explained in the preamble:

"Villanova University, in keeping with its religious and moral tradition, regards the ethical education of its students with great importance. Man's dignity is best preserved by a development and preservation of each person's responsible use of freedom. The individual's need for honest and just communication and association with colleauges requires restraint and self-discipline, so that no person becomes the agent or victim of the injustices of cheating and plagiarism. The University, the faculty, and the students are expected to accept their respective responsibilities in preventing such activity."

The proposed new document is concerned with narrowing down the definitions of cheating and plagiarism. It also makes recommendations as to the punishments assigned should the need aries. The document had been approved and sent to the University's legal counsel who sent it back with recommendations that it be amended in certain weak areas.

The document proposes that an Academic Disciplinary Review Board be established that would consist of a dean, a member of the faculty and two students. All members will be from the college where the alleged offense takes place. The document recommends that the students on the board have a minimum cumulative average of 2.5. Also, the student or teacher can not be presently charged with or under discipline for violating University standards of conduct or course performance.

The document allows for the appeal of a ruling by the Board within 15 days after disciplinary recommendations are made. The accused party is allowed during his appeal, to produce witnesses in his behalf, to cross-question them and have a tape recording made. The final decision, though, is left to the Vice President for Aca-

WHAT'S AN NSA CAREER?

It's different things to different people.

Of course, all employees at the National Security Agency have certain things in common: they are civilian employees of the Department of Defense; they are engaged in technical projects vital to our nation's communications security or a foreign intelligence production mission; and they all enjoy the benefits that accompany Federal employment. However, the differences between our career opportunities are just as interesting as their similarities. For example. . .

TO THE ELECTRONIC ENGINEER (BS/MS): An NSA career means delving into unique projects which can span every phase of the R&D cycle. An engineer may design, develop, test and manage contracts on communications, recording, and information storage devices and systems whose capacities and speeds are still considered futuristic in most quarters.

TO THE COMPUTER SCIENTIST (BS/MS): It means applying his or her knowledge in a wide range of sub-disciplines such as systems design, systems programming, operating systems, computer applications analysis, and retrieval systems.

TO THE MATHEMATICIAN (MS): A career means defining, formulating, and solving complex communications-related problems. Statistical mathematics, matrix algebra and combinatorial analysis are just a few of the tools applied by the NSA mathematician.

Interested in learning more about the difference in an NSA career? Schedule an interview with us through your Student Placement Office today. If we do not recruit on your campus, send a resume to the address given below.

Campus Activism Returns, Maybe

A Departure From Character

Shortly after his conviction at the Chicago Seven trial following the 1968 Democratic Convention, Tom Hayden wrote that the activism and unrest of the sixties was "... a starting point, and looking ahead into the seventies, we should look for a revolutionary strategy . . . in the way people are moving against the structures oppressing them."

Hayden's success as a revolutionary may be questionable, but his talent as a social forecaster was undeniably bad. Envisioned as a decade of campus activism and progressive political input from the student generation, the seventies have produced, with few exceptions, a materialistic and self-centered breed.

Last Wednesday's decision to attempt a University-backed lobby to lower the State's drinking age to 19 is a minute, but none-the-less significant, departure from character for both Villanova, that "conservative, Catholic, Main Line school," and the students of the seventies.

CATCH 19 (Cats Assembled To Change Harrisburg) has the capability to be a successful force affecting the legal decision-making process in Pennsylvania. The SGA office has been abuzz with activity and rhetoric during these last few weeks, for the whole liquor issue has given student leaders a reason to dust the cobwebs off of their typewriters and mimeo machines and work towards an attainable goal. Proposals and recommendations will not be sent to a distant Board of Trustees in this effort, but we shall witness a test of the ability of Villanova's student government and student governors to motivate and lead as they were designed to do.

The success of this venture will be judged by a great many students according to action in Harrisburg — if the vote is for a lower age, CATCH 19 will have done its job. Yet, the Villanova-based campaign may be but a small consideration in this state-wide issue. A more important indicator of success will be the ability of the Villanova community to work towards a uniformly desirable goal cohesively. Whatever the outcome of CATCH 19 in Harrisburg may be, a healthy and enthusiastic cooperative effort between student organizations and the administration could signal the beginning of a new era of involvement.

TOT

Demand for an Apology

To The Editor:

As a student of Villanova University for the past four years, I have held in great esteem the University its faculty, and its organizations. However, the recent article entitled Buzz — The Man Behind the Garbage Can, has enraged me in such a way that I feel it incumbent upon me to vindicate the good character of Mr. Wilburn Harris.

The good intentions behind the article were, unfortunately, pushed into the shadows by the slanted title, which I feel shows a flagrant abuse of the freedom of the press that up until this point has been utilized for the benefit of many.

Therefore, in retribution for the injustice suffered by Mr. Harris, who has served the school and has become a friend to many of us, I ask a public, "front page" apology of this paper.

Sincerely,
Frank Gerner
Senior

Initial Purpose: Sportsmanship

Once again, it is that time of year when a disease begins to plague many college campuses.

Villanova, not to be excluded is hit with an onslaught of intramural football injuries.

This year is no different than any other year. After the conclusion of last season, many players were hoping that the situation of broken jaws, arms, legs, concussions and other related injuries would cease.

But, the problems continue. More injuries, more fights, and more violence in intramural football.

Researchers have found that 81.24 percent of all college male athletes in contact sports are prone to excepting violence as a way of solving problems.

Are these aggressive attitudes built into the human character or are they developed over the course of the season?

These and many more questions are yet to be answered concerning brutality not only in football but all sports.

Recently, the Villanova intramural flag-football program implemented two new rules. No blocking below the waist is allowed and players can't leave their feet to make a block.

But will these rules be affective or will the violence continue?

Intramural football seems to be a combination of flag-football and tackle-football. Maybe with stronger referee control or more referees, unnecessary hits or late hits on which many of the injuries are incurred could be avoided.

Referees should be instructed to throw players out of the game at the first indication of violence, afterall flag-football is for recreation and should not be allowed to disintegrate into grudge matches between two rival teams.

Another possible solution for the prevention of injuries would be to institute a "grab rule"; that is after the quarterback releases the ball instead of hitting or tackling him, players should just grab him.

Whatever surface problems exist in intramural football they must be overcome to obtain the initial purpose of good sportsmanship within the context of the Villanova intramural football community. JCB

Internships - Putting Education Into Practice

Dr. Albert J. Dorley, coordinator of Internships, discusses the advantages of the program.

By PAUL F. VIGGIANO

We may give advice, but we cannot give experience.
— Ben Franklin

A student spends four long, tiring years in an institution of higher learning. Visions of midterms and finals still dancing in his head. Blood, sweat and tears (and about $10,000) is the price he pays for a piece of paper called a "degree."

It has been said that once an employer sees this piece of paper, the owner is immediately hired to a $60,000 a year job. Surprise! Welcome to the real world. Nowdays, the only thing that an employer wants to see on a job application is the word "experience" and thanks to the Intership Program here at Villanova this word may appear more often.

The Internship Program is designed to provide on-the-job experience for the student, which makes learning a job hunting all the easier. Dr. Albert J. Dorley, coordinator of the Internship Program, explains, "The purpose of the program is to provide the student with an opportunity to participate in experiential learning through experience. A student can earn up to fifteen academic credits each semester in his junior or senior year through an internship."

If a student is interested in working at a firm related to his line of study, he can ask for an internship which would require him or her to work full-time and receive up to fifteen academic credits.

The reason the University grants fifteen credits is, the more the student can become involved in a five day or full time basis for a full semester, the greater levels of responsibility the employer will give to the student. If an employer would see a student only occasionally, the student would only be in the way, he would never get totally involved.

Dr. Dorley comments, "We don't want the student to be a gopher, to get coffee or something. We supervise and monitor all work that is done. We also receive job descriptions and outlines from each employer so that the student knows what the job is all about."

The learning process goes beyond the classroom in this program. It doesn't just start in September and end in May, it becomes a total learning experience. Dr. Dorley states, "What we try to do is offer a variety of experimental learning activities with public and private organizations and we try to tie the academic experience of the student here at Villanova with the learning experience outside. You have to think in terms of granting academic credits with this type of learning. What we are doing is making the community-at-large a learning experience."

Dr. Dorley also stresses that the Internship Program is not a job search service. "We are not in the market to get jobs for the students. This is purely an academic function, but as a result of the Internship Program students are getting jobs because they have had experience — practical experience. Being exposed to a level of responsibility is a very maturing thing."

There are about sixty co-operating employers involved with the program, both public and private. They include, Public Health Services, Police forces across the Delaware Valley, Department of the Treasury, the Federal Government (six interns are presently in Washington D.C. working with several Congressmen), and Criminal Justice programs. The private sector includes such firms as Sears and Roebuck, Merrill Lynch, Chilton Publications, WCAU-TV and the Burroughs Corporation.

Students may also try to find their own internships. In the event a student wants to intern at a company that is not already in the program, Dr. Dorley will contact them and try to make an arrangement. He says, "The list is endless, and it goes far beyond the list that we have here."

Some of the requirements to be eligible for the program are a minimum 2.5 cumulative average and the student must be a second semester junior or a senior. The reason for this is that a second semester junior has already established a major, he is older, a more mature student, a more serious student. Because of that, an employer will look upon him as a more mature and more serious.

All interested students should contact Dr. Dorley, in Corr 106, sometime during pre-registration.

Reflections On The Connelly Center

DANIEL REGAN
Philosophy Dept.

Daniel Regan, assistant professor in Philosophy.

Autumn in the Delaware Valley is one of the most beautiful times of year anywhere. This year, however, it is especially beautiful on the Villanova Campus. The co-eds, of course, are as beautiful as ever but that does not account for the special beauty of this Fall. The situation with the Liquor Control Board, the goofy statutes, the bizarre and capricious implementations of these regulations by the Commonwealth are (as all sapient people know) things of beauty too; but, what is really beautiful is the construction of the Connelly Building. All the noise, all the dirt, all the inconvenience, and all the Snafus that may ever attend to its existence are beautiful indeed! This in spite of the fact that all this is taking place directly outside my office window.

The Connelly Building means so many things. It means that a member of Villanova's Board of Trustees has confidence in this University and its mission. His expression of this faith in Villanova will benefit the University for years to come. The value of the Connelly Building to the life of this community will eventually far outweigh its considerable economic value.

We are all proud of Mr. Connelly and honored by his generous affection for us. Yet, the Connelly Building has further implications for those of us who have been around for awhile. In the spirit of the times, perhaps, some nostalgic comments keep imposing themselves upon this writer's consciousness. Some unpleasantries accompany them but true visions of the past must be ever thus.

Once upon a time, there was a young, vigorous and surprisingly perspicacious Dean of Student Activities, a somewhat older and disarmingly handsome biology professor — not nearly as intelligent as anyone (including himself) would think he would be — a very intelligent and very chubby theology professor, a quiet reflective history professor blessed with the unerring charm of a southern gentlemen, a couple of sociology professors with rhyming first names and similar insights into the basic needs of their institution, a misunderstood Vice-President of Student Affairs (perhaps it is a necessary part of the job?) and a couple of minor figures — including myself.

This unlikely menagerie had one common denominator. We believed that the greatest need of this University was the lack of a student activities center. So, almost ten years ago I was selected (for reasons that I can no longer recall — the group wanted someone they were sure could be heard?) to present to the Board of Trustees an urgent request for the construction of a Student Activities Center. The polite, chilly rejection that we received was explained by cool logic of a Board of Trustees unwilling to risk financial outlays during such an unstable economic period.

While they waited a number of absolutely gorgeous autumns came and went in the Delaware Valley. We all watched as the simultaneously glorious turn of events in the economy — notice how beautiful the economy is today. Fortunately, the Board of Trustees also changes, administrations change and attitudes change with them. Eventually, the confidence and faith in the University displayed by Mr. Connelly resurfaced at Villanova. A covenent campaign began. A vigorous President and his competent administration started to move with the Trustees to make the University respond to its needs.

The Connelly-Center is not the end of anything. It is only the beginning. The University is alive and confident in itself once again. The intramural building and new fieldhouse needed so desperately to fulfill the athletic needs of our present day student body must surely be on the way. It may make it a little dirtier and nosier in other parts of the University for a while longer. It may inconvenience everybody a little more — but its beautiful!

Amidst all this talk about Homecoming being a dying tradition, people seemed to have overlooked those two traditions that were carried on so strongly last Saturday — rain and a football loss . . . We're glad to see that the student body still has some spirit (no, LCB, not that kind of spirit), however sick, as witnessed by the halftime appearance of the Deathmobile . . . in a related incident, the infirmary reports an alarmingly high rate of head injuries resulting from students trying to flatten beer cans against their brow . . . Late note for University administrators — John Connelly just said that he was only kidding about the $4.8 million . . . and says that now we have a great set of monkey bars (remember monkey bars?) . . . Don't you love it when, after four hours of trying to round up your vegetating staff, you finally get them posed for your organization's yearbook picture — and the photographer's flash won't work . . . our solution to the parking problem — carry a can of yellow spray paint and make your own space wherever you want . . . LCB, thanks for giving us the pleasure of that safe, pleasant and quiet drive back up the Pike after a party in 63rd street . . . we're not saying that the student support of the football program is low or anything, but you have to wonder when varsity basketball gets a bigger crowd for its practices than football does for the games . . . Isn't it great how, now that the weather is just getting a little cold, the heat is blasting in Tolentine and pipes are banging in Bartley — but in the freezing dead of winter, they'll finally turn it down and say "the kids complained" . . . Doesn't it make you proud as you drive up Lancaster on a sunny autumn day and you see the main chapel's crosses gleaming in the sun — and a big black crane . . . who knows, who cares . . .

Cereals: Add wheat germ to other cereals or use as cooked cereal. It provides B vitamins, iron, protein and vitamin E.

Vegetable Oils: Two tablespoons are needed daily. They may be obtained from mayonnaise, salad dressings, corn or other oils. Oils supply linoleic and linolenic acids.

If you are a "junk food junkie" and want to kick the habit, try to visualize yourself as you wish to be: energetic with all the attributes of good health. Keep this mental image before you at all times.

Remember, exercise and proper sleep are essential to building health. Unless we get enough sleep we don't feel like exercising. During exercise nutrients, needed for maximum energy production are carried to every body cell.

Nutrition determines how abundantly life is lived. Francis Bacon once wrote, "A healthy body is a bounteous host to the soul, a sick body, it's prison."

French Enthusiasts

Had you been one of the many Americans who made the grand tour of Europe during the Second Empire, especially after the Civil War, you would have stopped in for a while in Paris, which Napoleon III was transforming into the world's most beautiful city. Now is your chance to relive the past and see for yourself how Napoleon accomplished this. The life of the new boulevards, cafes, theaters, industry, and arts (Mais, bien sur!) have come alive. These aspects of French culture are right at your doorstep. The Philadelphia Museum of Art brings the past to life in the Second Empire exhibition. This exhibition is world renowned — and now here in Philadelphia you have a chance to see it for yourself. The French Club of V.U. is planning a trip to this exciting exhibit and they hope you will share the excitement with them. Why not join them? For more information, please contact Chris Howe at 525-5473, Lesley Cook. The tentative date for a student tour is Tuesday, November 7 at 5:30.

Women in Ministry

By ELLEN KEMEZA

"It is time to lay to rest the heresy that women cannot image Jesus in the priesthood."

With this conviction, women from across the United States will meet in Baltimore, Md. on the weekend of November 10-12 to discuss not only the ordination of women to the priestly ministry, but also to explore the ministerial roles held by women in the church today especially in terms of their increasing importance to the church of tomorrow.

The Pontifical Biblical Commission has admitted that there are no scriptural impediments to the ordination of women, the objections, therefore, stem from tradition.

The Vatican Declaration on Women in the Ministerial Priesthood of a few years ago would have seemed to many to have definitively and negatively answered the question of ordination for women. But dissent has come from many sides. Priests, theologians, and other members of the church have found it impossible to consider the issue closed.

One of the main criteria used in the Vatican Declaration is one of "resemblance"... That is, according to the scholastic dogmatic conception of a sacrament, a sacrament must "resemble" that which it seeks to represent. Priesthood is a sacramental state which enables one to represent Jesus. Jesus was a man therefore to represent Jesus, i.e. to "resemble" him, one must be a man.

The other major argument of the Vatican Declaration is one based on a certain view of the comparative natures of the sexes. The line of reasoning here is that men, by nature, are leaders . . . "heads" of things, if you will. Since it is crucial to the function of a priest to be a leader in prayer as well as the "head" of a particular community in the church, then it is appropriate to delegate this responsibility only to men. The document allows that there is a place for women in church ministry, but it is in line with her "nature" and is not priesthood.

Many people today question this view of human nature as well as the notion of "resemblance" as it seems to be defined in the Vatican document. What is it about Jesus that one must resemble? This seems to be the question. Is it his male-ness or his attitude of love and service? Can a woman, therefore, "resemble" Jesus, in this framework?

As well as the Baltimore conference, there will be a conference in our own area to discuss and explore these questions. On Saturday, October 21, from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the College Hall at LaSalle College in Philadelphia, St. Joan's Alliance of Philadelphia will sponsor a conference entitled "New Woman, New Church, New Priestly Ministry." Information on this conference is available at the Center for Concern, 208 Dougherty Hall, ext. 760, from Dr. Virginia Ratigan, Religious Studies Dept., and from Judy Heffernan (215) RA 5-5769.

Kicking The Junk Food Habit

By CAROL GOLDFARB

This is the final article in a two part series on nutrition.

If you have been rudely awakened to your "junk food addiction," as described in last week's article, all is not lost. There is still time to withdraw from that bad habit and get that bod in shape.

Health is a serious matter, but our general feeling toward nutrition is such that anyone interested in eating right is labeled "health nut."

According to nutritionist, Adelle Davis, it is amazing how difficult it is to find people with attributes of good health such as: good posture, naturally pink cheeks, glossy hair, energy, flawless skin and sparkling eyes. "Even a perfect set of teeth has become almost as rare as a Macedonian dodo bird."

The limited stomach space should be used for foods with the most to offer. Emphasis should be placed on the following:

Eggs: Two to four daily; use instead of most meats; serve in custards, omelets or french toast. Eggs supply protein, iron and vitamin A.

Milk: Obtain one quart daily including one cup of yogurt. Add to milk drinks, custards and soups. Milk supplies calcium, vitamin B2 and protein.

Cheese: Cottage cheese or other cheeses in omelets and souffles. Cheese supplies protein.

Meats, Fowl, Fish and Seafood: have daily but omit if sufficient eggs, milk and other proteins are obtained.

Vegetables: Select for their green or yellow color such as broccoli, string beans and carrots. Use fresh when available but frozen in preference to canned. Vegetables supply an antistress factor and furnish potassium.

Fruits: Have a citrus fruit daily. Fruits supply potassium, natural sugar, carotene and vitamin C.

Stealing a phone call isn't a game.

Most students play by the rules when placing a long distance call. They take advantage of bargain rates and make their calls during the discount periods. If you're not sure when you can call at discount rates, check your phone book.

A few students think it's O.K. to break the rules by stealing their telephone calls. They're not beating the system, they're taking advantage of all of us, because it drives up the cost of providing telephone service.

Students who break the rules also run the risk of paying a large fine. Spending time in jail. And getting themselves a permanent police record.

It's just not worth it!

Elta Long and Susan Turlish in "The Shadow Box."

"Shadow Box" Alive with Realism

By JANEMARIE COYLE

Death has a stench that assaults the senses and numbs the cognitive process. "Shadow Box" at the Society Hill Playhouse is a study of three terminally ill people.

Playwright Michael Christofer has avoided the trap of morbidity and presents us with a naturalistic morality drama.

The three patients, a middle aged, blue collar worker, a scholar and an elderly woman are the main focus in the drama but their loved ones who will survive are given equal and indispensable treatment.

Joe, the blue collar worker must deal with a wife who refuses to accept his impending fate and rejects the responsibility of informing their teenage son.

Brian, the scholar, laments over unfulfilled achievements and recognition.

Felicity, the elderly woman confined to a wheel chair longs to see a missing daughter and ignores Agnes, a daughter attempting to ease her suffering.

Despite the fact that all of the participants share the same "Is that all there is" philosophy, the drama is compassionate and in a limited sense understanding. We get a feeling that in the end death will become a bittersweet caress, much like the changing of the seasons rather than a cold embrace. The drama succeeds as a celebration of life on its own level.

The acting was superb. Susan Turlish gave an excellent performance as Agnes, the dying woman's daughter. Dennis Gildea was also fine in the role of the blue collar worker.

"Shadow Box" is an extremely simple, compassionate and tender drama. It leaves the viewer with a better understanding of death, a greater appreciation of life and maybe a few tears on the cheek.

In 1977, the drama won a Pulitzer Prize for Drama and the Tony Award.

Performances are scheduled Wednesday through Saturday to November 4. Curtain time is 8:00 p.m. The Society Hill Playhouse is located at 507 South Eighth St. in Phila.

The "Interiors" of Woody Allen

By JOHN ZAGARELLA

With the surprising success of "Annie Hall" at last year's Academy Awards, Woody Allen fans might have wondered what was next. Not too long ago, Woody Allen's first non-comic film, "Interiors," was released. There is only one word for this motion picture. Brilliant.

Written and directed by Allen, "Interiors" is the psychological study of a family on the brink of destruction. The film deals with many aspects of the human psyche including the conscience, the intellect, and inter-familial competitiveness, from childhood to adulthood.

The background sets are always rich and elegant, but most important, very simple. Even though there is vast symbolism in this simplicity, Allen allows nothing to overshadow the many conflicts involved in this extremely complex work of art.

Woody Allen's deeply troubled characters are portrayed through the talents of an excellent cast, each of whom has turned out an outstanding career performance. Included in this all-star lineup are Geraldine Page and E.G. Marshall, who play the parents of Diane Keaton, Kristin Griffith and Marybeth Hurt. Maureen Stapleton is perhaps the only simple character presented, and adds interesting contrast in a web of tension. Woody Allen himself does not appear in this film.

The symbolism is as subtle and delicate as the characters themselves. Each is striving for success; sometimes at the expense of one another as well as themselves. The mental trauma of people in search for self identity and security is beautifully brought to the surface here.

Aside from all of this, "Interiors" is a very emotional film. The characters exhibit emotion at peak levels, resulting basically from frustration caused by their inner turmoil as they watch their family unit crumble.

At the end of this film, an inevitable tragedy occurs that places these people in a position to see the destruction their self-centeredness has caused. The final scene provokes the viewer to focus on the state of mind of each family member and how he or she reacts as the curtain closes on the film and on a vital figure in each of their lives.

If 1977 was the year of "Annie Hall," there is a good chance that 1978 will be the year of "Interiors."

Produced by Charles H. Joffe, "Interiors" has a PG rating and runs approximately 100 minutes.

Life with "Girlfriends"

By BARBARA ANNE HIGGINS

One must be very careful in describing a movie such as "Girlfriends," that is, if one wants to convey the truthful essense of the picture. It is not a tremendous movie. It is an excellent film. Melanie Mayron does not have an electrifying quality. She has a refreshing quality. Director Claudia Weill won't be an overnight success because of her spectacular handling of this dynamic script. No, those words are too brash and sensationalized for such a gifted and new-respected director.

Sounds contradictory? Not if you saw this movie. Sometimes, raving reviews seem to disillusion the moviegoer to the simple, realistic quality that a film may have. The audience usually expects a tear-jerking, mushy, moralistic tale that leaves them emotionally drained at the theater door. Sorry to disappoint you. "Girlfriends" will simply leave you refreshed, pensive and a little more aware of what life is really like on your own.

The story is a personalized and intimate portrayal of a young woman's world and is carried extraordinarily well by the script. It's setting is in the Big Apple itself and the camera crew tastefully makes use of the bustling streets of New York as a backdrop.

But what really makes this movie, and any movie for that matter, is the leading actress and director. In this case, however, double praise is due, for they both had an uphill struggle on this one. Both are young, unknown, and female. But by the unrelinquishing authority that they both use to control the audience, you can bet they won't be unknown for long. Miss Maylon, who plays the heroine of the movie is simply superb. (By the way, she was born right outside of Philadelphia, in Center Square. Small world!) And Claudia Weill conveys the dreams and disappointments of a woman in a solitary and chillingly depersonalized existence in the big city as only another woman could.

It s tale of life and changes, geared towards women but not against men, as so many such movies are. But rather than being feministic, it is simply the story of a person (who happens to be female in this case) who goes through the general ups and downs that the world throws at all of us.

So, if you're in the mood for a good, realistic, down-to-earth, interesting, delightful, engaging, sincere. . . Well, I guess you got the message. I liked it, and so will you. (At the Ritz, 214 Walnut Street).

AUGUSTINIANS

"HOW CAN I MAKE MY LIFE WORTHWHILE?"

One way may be to live within the Augustinian Fraternity. When you come to live with us, you observe and participate in our community life for several years before making a final commitment. You observe that we are a religious community following the charism of St. Augustine and "that together and with one heart in brotherhood and spiritual friendship, we seek and worship God and that we labor in the service of the people of God." We serve in colleges, high schools, parishes, foreign missions, campus ministries, retreats, hospitals and military chaplaincies.

New In Sound

David Bowie

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

The emergence and evolution of David Bowie is perhaps one of the more important aspects in the development of rock music in the seventies. Indeed the self-stylized singer's appearance on the pop music scene in 1968 and his continued success (both financial and critical) are testimonial to his insights into musical trends and his adaptability. No one could ever accuse Bowie of being staid.

In his second live album, Stage, Bowie captures the fundamental elements of his past music and adds to his repertoire the more progressive musical directions that is Bowie 1978.

Stage chronicles Bowie's 1978 Spring tour of America. Like the tour, the album is divided into two fairly distinct stages — past and present Bowie, hard driving rock and complex, dense instrumentals.

Side One is Bowie at his best, reaching back to his Ziggy days The Rise and Fall of Ziggy Stardust and the Spiders From Mars, 1972 and belting out rockers like "Hang on to Yourself," "Ziggy Stardust," and "Star."

"Soul Love" and "Five Years" complete side one in which Bowie's voice is probably the best it has been in years (a considerable improvement over "David Live At the Tower"). Newcomer Adrian Belew on lead guitar and veteran Dennis Davis on drums highlight the first side.

Side Two displays two of Bowie's more progressive rockers — "Station To Station," a melodic and synthesized based number, and TVC15, a chunky rocker about a girl who falls in love with a television set. Between the two previous numbers is a good rendition of "Fame," Bowie's last number one single.

Side Two is an introduction to sides three and four, the second stage of the album. It is in the second stage that the core of present Bowie lies. Gathering material from his two previous efforts — "Low" and "Heroes," Bowie ambitiously attempts to convey the music that has fascinated him for the past two years — German progressive rock primarily exemplified by the group Kraftwerk.

Noticeably missing from sides three and four is Bowie's cohort, Brian Eno, formerly of Roxy Music. In his place, at least for the purpose of touring, are Roger Powel and Bowie himself; the former manning synthesizers and keyboards, the latter playing the chamberlain. Surprisingly the live versions, particularly "Speed of Life" and "Warszawa," are clearer than their original studio recordings. The majority of musical back up is present in the latter half of the album with Simon House on electric violin and Sean Mayes on piano and string ensemble. The result is a highly polished product with astonishing quality for a live effort; however, it is a moving away from recent trends (Peter Frampton) to incorporate the audience significantly in the recording. Perhaps this is the only flaw here.

On the whole, Stage is remarkable in its growth and increasing clarity. Although no tracks from Bowie's Spectrum performance are on the album, the work should please both his Philadelphia and world-wide fans. Bowie has done something unique — he has merged his past and present — coming up with a totally provocative and innovative piece of work.

Women's Sports

Net Gals Suffer Slow Start

By BETH WHITE

The women's volleyball team has had a disappointing season so far this year, winning only five of eleven games, due to a crowded schedule and little practice time. The team hopes to conclude the season with more wins, since they have already played their toughest opponents and have an easier schedule ahead.

Last week the volleyball team played four matches, winning three and losing only to West Chester. The varsity lost a best-of-five series 3-1, and the JV lost 0-2 in a best-of-three series. The varsity won important victories over both LaSalle (2-0) and Penn (2-0). The team also beat Chestnut Hill, the varsity by 3-0 and the junior Varsity, 2-0.

The team, led by captain Kathy Morris and coached by Mrs. Gertrude Jennings, is composed mainly of freshmen and juniors. Jo Ann Canuso and Kathy Morris are the team's most consistent servers, and freshmen Lisa Ortlip and Sarah Holyoke are the team's best spiker and setter, respectively. Other varsity players include juniors Karen Hanna and Erick Vassulluzzo, and freshman Consuelo Torres.

The team's next game is Monday, October 23 against Kutztown at 6:30 p.m. in Butler Annex. They also play St. Joseph's on Tuesday and Rosemont and Cheyney on Thursday. The team would appreciate support from the school, so come cheer them on to a winning season.

Racket Girls Take Three In A Row

By MARY GRACE MURRAY

The women's tennis team continued to look impressive as they swept all three matches last week to bring their season record to 8-3. Last week's victories were over Cheyney (5-0), St. Peter's (5-0) and Rutgers of Camden (9-0).

The girls scored numerous victories as Jayne Schreiner continued to win in first singles. Diane Williams and Gina Ayoub, second and third singles respectively, won all three of their matches also. Other winners included the doubles team of Mary Jo McWilliams and Collen Nolan and also Melanie Calder and Diane Cappuccio.

Very few points were scored against the Wildkittens last week and Cheyney was a complete victory as the team took all matches by the score of 6-0, 6-0. The toughest match of the week was against Rutgers where Gina Ayoub came out the winner, 6-2, 7-6.

The team will try to keep up the five game winning streak this week as they meet Eastern, Bryn Mawr and Glassboro State.

Field Hockey

Coach Cathy Miller's field hockey team swept two games this week as they raised their record to 5-4-1.

The Wildcats downed Eastern College, 4-1, on Sandy Arena's three goals and a single goal by Lisa Alderfer. The team trounced Rosemont, 7-0, as five Villanovans tallied goals. Debbie Fratantoni and Alderfer each had two scores.

The Women's Field hockey team scored victories over Eastern College and Rosemont last week.

Seven Undefeated Teams Remain In Flag Football

By TOM McCORMACK

Here come The Maulers. They handed Reckless Abandon their first loss in two years and followed up that game with a white-washing of The Band to the tune of 39 to 0. The Maulers are awaiting the playoffs as are the remaining undefeated teams: Fedigan Pub, Jaws, Wally's Gators, Black Sheep, D.T.D., and D.P.E.

The Maulers against Reckless Abandon was a classic matchup between two undefeateds. But more than that, it demonstrated the level of play two dedicated teams can achieve. The large crowd witnessed a tough, hard hitting game in which The Maulers' long hours of practice payed-off with 12 points to Reckless Abandon's 6.

The Maulers offense provided the twelve points on two well executed touchdown passes from quarterback Steve 'Zoid' Bonglorno to receiver Dave Fauw. Reckless Abandon will recover from this loss and will be looking for revenge in the playoffs.

There are two other big showdowns between undefeateds before the playoffs begin in November. Two of this year's undefeated new teams, Black Sheep and Wally's Gators, will go at it next week. And in the fraternity league, D.T.D. will play D.P.E. in the last game of the season. This will be an appropriate ending to the fraternity league season.

Fedigan Pub and Wally's Gators have been impressive teams thus far this season. Wally's Gators are one of the surprising new teams. Their undefeated record can be credited to a balanced attack, with running back Brian Costello and lineman Bob Coughlin having outstanding seasons. Defense is the word for Fedigan Pub. They have only been scored once so far this season. Fedigan Pub's player coach Frank Young says that "Fedigan Pub is ready to destroy any team which stands in their way to the number one spot."

Fedigan Pub and the rest of the teams have three games remaining. Some of the undefeated teams have yet to be tested. The number of undefeated teams will be reduced as the regular season draws to a close. Then the real season will begin.

The Maulers looked strong on their 12-6 win over Reckless Abandon.

Flynn Breaks Ice

By NATE COOPER

Jimmy Flynn was only the last of the seven Wildcats that swept the Big Five cross country meet last Saturday. It was not as satisfying as last season's performance when teammate Jay Wood and he broke the tape together for a one-two finish in the same meet. The senior from Riverdale, New York seemed content.

"I am not in as good condition as last year and all the meets are earlier," he noted.

An aggravating knee plus apartment hunting has hindered his early season training. He had to call over fifty places before finding someone that would rent to students and did not get settled in until the middle of September.

Living off campus is a privilege he enjoys because he is a non-scholarship athlete, therefore not confined to four years of dormitory life.

A 4:18 miler at Garden City High School, Jimmy has found himself as a runner.

"When I was a freshman, I never worked out with anyone on the team," he stated. He ran in three junior varsity cross country meets and an indoor development meet that season. Not much incentive to train.

"I took training more seriously in my sophomore year," he added. And not without results — Indoors, he was a member of Villanova's two-mile relay team that placed third in the NCAA. During the outdoor season, in only his third steeple-chase, he ran 8:50.3 to take fourth in the IC4A. He has improved to 3:47 in the 1500, 13:38 in the three-mile and has a personal best of 25:55 on the five mile Belmont course.

Jimmy did not realize his potential as a runner until late in his senior year at Garden City. By that time, he had been accepted at Villanova as a regular student. After discovering that he could compete with the best collegiate runners in the nation, he considered applying to other schools for financial aid.

"But I decided to stay at Villanova," he added. "I was into the routine here and was running in a lot of meets.

Jimmy would like to keep his training routine after graduation. "I definitely want to continue running," he admitted. "I got to find the right atmosphere."

"This program has alot to offer anyone who has ability," he went on to say. "It's just a matter of breaking the ice."

Walk-ons Jay Wood and Jim Flynn captured the Big Five meet last season.

Harriers Take First Seven Places In Big Five Meet

By JAY COOK

Villanova, in an overwhelming display of depth and power, dominated last weekend's Big Five cross country championship, cruising to an easy victory.

Sydney Maree ran a personal best of 25:14.8, leading the team to an impressive first through seventh place sweep. Sydney's time is the fastest in four years at Belmont Park and reinforces his position as the sixth best ever from Villanova on the Belmont Plateau course.

In second place was Amos Kip Korir with a time of 25:27.5. Amos, who tied for second with Sydney last week, was unchallenged while running his second best time of the season.

Rob Earl, in his last chance at Sydney's freshman record, finished third in 26:00.4. Although he missed the record his time was very good and he was not challenged by any runners from other schools.

Jim Flynn finished seventh for Villanova and seventh overall, completing Villanova's sweep. Jim's time of 26:29.0 was his best of the year and is indicative of his return to last year's team leading form.

Not only did the varsity team sweep but the J.V. did too! Dan Liebler led the team to victory while taking first place. John Farina finished second, Paul Dennis third, Pete Carrol fourth and Bill Sullivan fifth as the J.V. team romped to its' own title.

In the process of winning both team titles Villanova defeated Big Five members LaSalle, St. Joseph's and Drexel as well as guests Catholic University, West Chester State and Delaware. The University of Pennsylvania, a member of the Big Five, was a no show due to "Ivy League" commitments.

The team's next race is on October 27 when they travel to New York City's Van Cortland Park for the IC4A championship meet.

Villanova, one of this year's favorites, seems ready to regain its IC4A team title and a number of individual titles as well. Tough competition should come from Providence, Georgetown and Farleigh Dickinson with the University of Massachusetts as a dark horse candidate for the title.

Hockey

By PATRICK TORPEY

In just a few short weeks on Nov. 2 to be exact, Villanova's Ice Cats will be facing off for the first ice hockey game of the season. Second year Head Coach Skip Probst has very high hopes for his team that last year finished with a 7-17-2 record. That record is very misleading, for the Ice Cats went all the way to the Mid Atlantic Conference (MAC) Championships. Unfortunately the team took second to perennial power University of Delaware, but the signs are all there for another successful campaign.

With seventeen returning veterans the team looks strong but last year's leading scorer and MAC MVP Dave Bell and wing Jeff Pogue will be sorely missed.

Mike Fitzgerald, the team's most improved defenseman, will be spearheading the defense along with Greg Pierson and John Vagnoni. The offense looks good with the return of second leading scorer sophomore Chip Kenney. Captain Steve Schorr, Jack O'Hanlon and Steve Carr are also returning from last years offense.

Probst has been blessed with a fine freshman class including Center Jim Murphy. The Frosh will add greatly to the team in terms of physical size and skating speed. To better utilize these new team characteristics Probst is looking for a more open, fast breaking and hard hitting brand of hockey.

The quality of this years schedule has improved even more over last year's with the addition of the Cornell and Colgate JV squads, Upsala and Drexel. There are eight home games scheduled for Radnor Rink to be played on Thursday nights at 8:30. There are also games slated to be played at both the Civic Center and the Spectrum.

Cats Fumble Game To Red Raiders

By ED McASSEY

It appears that the fumble play has become an integral part of the Villanova offense lately. This was never as painfully evident as it was last Saturday in Villanova Stadium, where the Red Raiders of Colgate surprised the Cats by a 20-14 margin.

The day was even more dismal for the alumni attending the game as part of Homecoming as they watched the loss in the rain. Another gloomy note is that this was Colgate's first victory of the year.

The Cats lost five of five fumbles against Colgate and four of seven against Richmond on the previous Saturday. Sporting a 3-3 record, they travel to Rutgers tomorrow.

The score was tied 14-14 at intermission and remained deadlocked until Angelo Colosimo's three yard run with 1:20 still ticking away put the Raiders ahead. One positive note was Dave Martin's block of the Red Raider's attempted point after touchdown (PAT).

Colgate lit the scoreboard early in the opening quarter after John Marzo carried the ball five yards into the end zone. Dan Shelton quickly retaliated for the Cats with a spectacular 54 yard touchdown run. This was the longest run from the line of scrimmage this year for the Cats and the longest in the junior's stay at Villanova. Chuck Bushbeck's PAT was good.

Raider fullback Angelo Colosimo capped the first quarter scoring action with a three yard touchdown run late in the period.

Sophomore Shawn Passman carried the ball over the line on a three yard run in the second quarter. The touchdown was set up with the help of Charlie Kelly's interception, which put the ball on Villanova's 33. Vince Thompson earned three consecutive first downs as he brought the ball downfield. The Bushbeck kick was good to even the contest at 14.

The second half was a prolonged 30 minutes of frustration for Villanova with most drives dying due to fumbles and penalties. Field conditions worsened as the game went on, making the wishbone difficult to execute.

The "Cardiac Cats" weren't able to pull off a fourth quarter miracle before the final whistle.

Starting quarterback Pat O'Brien left the game in the second half after a previously sprained hand became worse. The sophomore quarterback is listed as a probable starter for tomorrow despite a hip pointer that has also hindered him in the last couple of contests.

Backup quarterback, John Sutphin, came in for the Cats for the remainder until freshman Bob Loscalzo took over with about two minutes to go. Coach Bedesem made the switch because Loscalzo is a stronger passer, and the air was Villanova's only chance of pulling off a fourth quarter miracle.

"When you play poorly the way we did, you don't deserve to win," Bedesem admitted. "There must be 100 ways to fumble a ball, I guess, and we tried them all. Sure we should have beaten them but we just gave the ball game away."

The gridders will have their work cut out for them tomorrow with the Scarlet Knights of Rutgers. The North Jersey institution hasn't been overcome since its opener when it lost to Penn State 10-26. Since then they have downed Bucknell 27-10, Princeton, 24-0, Yale 28-27 and Connecticut 10-0.

Bob Hering leads the multiple T offense at quarterback (32-81, 433 yds). Lester Johnson will be the back to watch as he leads the Knights in rushing (76-332, 4.4 avg.) George Carter is a tight-end known to be dangerous.

Rutgers employs a 5-2 defensive alignment, which is blessed with a solid secondary. The Knights' kicking game is one of the strongest ones Villanova will encounter this year.

"It will take a superior effort from our team to beat Rutgers," remarks Bedesem." We're meeting a football team that is as good as any we have left on our schedule. They play excellent defense and have fine skilled people on offense."

NOTES — Villanova coach Di Bedesem has 17 Wildcat wi making him the sixth winning coach in football history. . . V dropped its third strai Homecoming game. . . DE D Brooks will undergo surgery repair a torn ligament in his l knee this Thursday at Pa Memorial Hospital. He will joined by sub OG Joe Passaro w has a shoulder separation. . . D Burke (21 1-2) had his seco straight game with over tackles.

Ruggers Dump V.U. Law 44-0

By SCHMIDLAP

For the past two weeks, the Wildcat ruggers have rolled up an impressive record of scores, wins, and conquests. Last Saturday, those rough n' ready boys were slated to do battle against the Scranton Rugby Club. But to everyone's surprise, those Scranton lamos pulled a no show, thus giving V.U. its third win of the season. So with nothing left to do but quaf sixteen-ouncers and scrimmage, the A and B squads cursed Scranton for a ruined Saturday afternoon. Since not being able to take their frustrations out on the field, many ruggers were reported that evening eating records, breaking lamps, accosting young quail, and otherwise acting normal at the King of Prussia Zoo.

However, this year's Homecoming lifted the team's spirit. The weekend glistened with all the tradition it has always held — it rained, and the ruggers once again beat the Garey Hall Law School. When it rains it pours, and this year proved to be even more a shambles for the Law School as the undergrads whipped them 44-0. Scoring for the A-squad were Rick "Hootman" Donohue with a hat trick, Tom "Beard" Rosato with two tries, Joe "Hick" Wojtkun, Ernie "II Duce" Falcone, Mike "Dictator" Abele, Fred "Bucket" DePaola, and Jim "Veg" Rhaitz, all with one try. Fine performances were given by Bob Lynch, Danny "Swine" Ward, and Mark "it'll-never-happen" Redmond; Jim "Hotdog" Murray had an excellent day kicking the extra points. The only bright spot for the Law School was that Gio "Disco" Regina was again held scoreless. Also, we are all very proud of Burkle!!!

The Villanova B-squad did not fair so well, however. They succumbed to the Law School B's. But even though they lost the game, they are real champs when it came to the party afterwards.

Saturday, October 21, sees those crazy ruggers host the Temple Medical Rugby Club. So don't be a "veg," and come down to the rugby game to see those crazzzzzzy guys.

Collier Leads Booter's Win With Three Goals

By CHRIS BRENNER

The Villanova men's soccer team registered its second win of the season last Saturday against Georgetown University, defeating the Hoyas by a score of 4-1. The win came on the heels of a tough 2-0 loss to St. Joseph's College earlier in the week.

Jay Collier had a tremendous game for Villanova on Saturday, scoring three of the team's four goals in the first half of the test. Louis Quintino came off the bench in the second half to tally the final point for the victors. Steve Frey contributed to assists as the Cats enjoyed a comfortable 22-14 advantage in shots on goal. The lone Georgetown score occurred in the first half.

The booters could have used some of Saturday's goals against St. Joseph's. Although the Cats outshot their rivals by 19-16, they were unable to score. Defensively, a lapse between 17:00 and 18:10 of the first half was all St. Joe's needed to chalk up its two goals.

Some disheartening news for Wildcat soccer fans is that fullback Tim Armstrong will not be able to play again this season due to internal injuries suffered Villanova's win over Drew Unive sity two weeks ago. Armstrong, senior, had been an integral pa of the defensive framework of t team and his skills will be miss greatly by coach Howard Gra and his mates.

Senior Co-Captain, John Czipo has been a vital part in the socc wins.

Women Harriers Take Third

By MARY ELLEN BORKOWSKI

On Sunday, Coach Jim Thompson took his cross country team to the Temple Owl Invitational and came home with an impressive third place finish out of twelve teams.

Junior Brigid Leahy, who has run well all season, turned in an excellent time of 17:03. This led all Villanova finishers and placed Leahy fifth overall. This represents a personal best for Brigid, as well as a Wildcat record for the course.

Jennifer Whitfield, a freshman also ran a personal best as she covered the course in 18:04. She finished 14th overall and secon for the Wildcats.

Today the team travels Princeton for the Princeton I vitational and Tuesday they ch lenge Swarthmore College in a rare dual meet.

Lesa Kennedy of the host Temple team leads Villanova runner in the second mile.

CATCH-19 Progresses

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

Administration, faculty, and outside sources were called upon in the past two weeks by CATCH 19 (Cat's Assembled To Change Harrisburg to 19) to educate, discuss, and discover means of channeling Villanova's efforts toward effecting a change in the Pennsylvania drinking age from 21 to 19.

On Oct. 24, Father Robert Martin, O.S.A., dean of student activities, opened a series of "Small Talks" sponsored by the Education Committee of Catch 19.

Martin detailed the Liquor Control Board controversy from its roots in Spring 1978 when LCB officials met with University administrators to discuss Villanova's alcohol policy.

In re-evaluating the alcohol policy for the 1978-79 school year, the University sactioned and Union-sponsored Cat's Eye opened it's doors on September 14 under what they believed to be circumstances complying with LCB guidelines; however, the LCB raid left Villanova's drinking policy still under question.

"Regarding the current state of programming, it does not appear that we will be able to program events (with drinking) in the immediate future," explained Martin.

"We are now testing 21 year old formats with the LCB and will apply for a club license (for Villanova students and alumni over 21) to coincide with the opening of the University Center."

"Presently we have a clear feeling that someone inside Villanova is informing the LCB of scheduled events," confided Martin.

Martin also revealed that a reputable source within the LCB has indicated that Villanova is being watched very carefully.

In a second CATCH 19 forum on Thursday, October 26, Dr. Robert Langran, a member of the political science department at Villanova and longtime fraternity and sorority moderator, spoke on the political aspects of changing Pennsylvania's drinking age. Langran noted that there are three ways of changing a law or statue.

Construction Presents Problems

By JERRY DOUGHERTY

While construction of the University Center progresses, the problems associated with building on a central campus site have manifested themselves, while others loom in the future. The difficulties encountered have included the safety and security of the site, the modification of construction plans, and the noise created by the construction. Some of these problems have been overcome, others are yet to be confronted.

In an interview last Friday, Mr. Marc Tuchman, director of the university center, discussed the problems, both real and possible, involved in the construction of the Center.

The major concern Mr. Tuchman expressed was for the safety of unauthorized persons who venture onto the site. On October 15, two students were apprehended by Security at the top of a 150 ft. high erecting crane. With regard to trespassers who incur injuries on the site, both the Director and the Vice-President for Financial Affairs, Father Thomas Mahoney, emphasized that neither the contractor nor the University is liable for such injuries.

"As long as the fence is there, it indicates it is a construction area. The construction company's insurance is not liable for any unauthorized persons within the area, nor is the University's insurance," Father Mahoney said.

Mr. Tuchman explained that he, the Administration, University Security, and Keating, Inc. (the contractor)would be considering methods of dealing with safety on the site; he indicated that the nighttime security patrol may be strengthened, more lighting will be installed on the site, the perimeter fence inspected daily, and more warning signs posted around the boundaries of the construction area in places where walkways are cut off. Noting the many hazards in the site, especially at night, Mr. Tuchman urges that no unauthorized persons enter the site.

The Center's Director admitted that construction is "somewhat behind." This is due, he said, to difficulties in the excavation of rock in the vicinity of Kennedy Mall and also as a result of the need to re-route utility lines, especially water and telephone, around the site of the building. Both of these troubles have since been eliminated. Mr. Tuchman sees the threat of excessively cold or rainy weather as a possible threat to the progress of construction: "Any dramatic change in weather can create delays."

In light of this the Director explained that the major goal for now is the completion of as much of the outer construction of the building as possible by the beginning of winter. Much of the stone for the walls and wood for the roofs should be in place by then, he said. Mr. Tuchman did stress that any lost time would be attempted to be made up in every possible manner.

There is some good news for those who live in Sullivan Hall or Sheehan Hall and those who work or attend classes in buildings close to the site. Mr. Tuchman expects that by early January, when most of the construction will have moved inside of the completed

Vandalism Views Conflict

by BILL GUERIN

During the 1977-78 school year, ...nages to Villanova University ...used by vandalism were the ...ghest in the school's 136-year ...story.

According to figures compiled ...y Rev. Patrick J. Rice, O.S.A., ...ice-president for administration, ...e amount of vandalism incurred ...y the University from September, ...977 until June, 1978 was $48,519. These figures represent the cost ... replacing equipment and repair- ...f damage caused by vandalism. ...ese data, which represent a ...% increase over the preceding ...r, include damages to the stu- ...t dormitories as well as to the ...blic buildings.

Anthony M. Martin, associate ...n of men, explained why he ...ught the amount of vandalism ... so great last year.

"My feeling, in general, is that ...dalism was becoming accepted ... a way of life, and students ...were beginning to do it," stated ...rtin, "Thankfully, last year was ...t such."

"The amount of vandalism this year has been pretty much the same as last year; there's been no radical difference," said Fr. Rice.

"We've been experiencing the same problems as before: fire extinguishers being released, lamp posts knocked over, exit signs removed, broken windows and screens," stated Fr. Rice.

However, Martin said, "I think the amount of vandalism is down this year. Vandalism was spiraling last year, but we're in much better shape now."

Additional figures compiled by Fr. Rice's office show that the total amount of damage last year to the dormitories alone was $37,667. The residence halls which suffered the most damage were Stanford, Sullivan, and St. Mary's Halls, respectively.

Fr. Rice said that each day the maintenance department provides his office with a list of all the vandalism-related damages which occurred throughout the campus overnight. This daily report itemizes the location and description of all the damages which, in the opinion of the maintenance department, was caused by deliberate, unreported abuse and not by normal use.

"There are some people in the administration who want to deny that the vandalism problem is this serious, but I have the facts," stated Fr. Rice.

Rev. John E. Deegan, O.S.A., vice-president for student life, questions the validity of the statistics provided by Father Rice's office.

"A judgment on the extent of the vandalism damage can't be made," stated Fr. Deegan. "I can't tell because the statistics aren't always clear as to what exactly is vandalism.

"The reports provided by the vice-president for administration do not always distinguish what is 'wear-and-tear' and what is deliberate damage," he continued.

Martin indicated that the vandalism on campus can be partially attributed to student consumption of alcoholic beverages.

LCB Charges Dismissed

By NANCY ROONEY

Charges, filed by the Liquor Control Board (LCB), against four Villanova students for the sale of alcoholic beverages without a license were dismissed at the preliminary hearing on October 19.

The charges were a result of the September 14 LCB raid of Cat's Eye, a Villanova Union-sponsored social event offering refreshments, including beer, and entertainment for a general admission price of two dollars. The students charged had been directly involved in the administration of the Cat's Eye event.

At the preliminary hearing, the three LCB agent involved in th raid testified to the sequences (events that occurred.

Officer Frank P. Onea state "At 8:40 p.m., I went to the information booth and purchased three tickets at two dollars each. We then approached the door and were carded so we showed identification that we were over 21. We entered the hall area at 9:10 p.m. and I went over to one of the two halves of beer at the right side of the hall and was served. At 9:15 p.m., we identified ourselves as Liquor Control Board agents and confiscated the beer. A license permitting the sale of alcohol was not produced."

Onea's testimony was corroborated by the two other LCB officers involved in the incident.

During the cross-examination, Villanova University attorney, John Phelan, representing the four students, posed the following questions to the three officers: first, "Do you know if any of the money gained from the admission fees was used to defray the cost of the beer?"; and secondly, "Do you know who actually paid for the beer?". All three officers answered "I don't know" to both questions.

Following the prosecution's presentation, defense attorney Phelan asked for the dismissal of the charges:

"I submit to the Court that the Commonwealth can't produce a prima facie case proving that any sale of beer was made at Dougherty Hall. They can't establish that any money taken in at this event was used to pay for the cost of beer. Furthermore, they haven't established any criminal intent nor any intent to violate the Liquor Code. No sale of beer has been proven."

"Electioneering" is one such process whereby a citizen utilizes his voting power by seeking out a candidate sympathetic to his view; however, Langran cautioned against letting a candidate's stand on one issue affect the way one votes. One must consider the candidate as a whole and evaluate his stands on all issues.

"Lobbying" the State Legislature in Harrisburg is a second approach a group can employ to let government know what they think.

"The key to the effectiveness of a pressure group is access — reaching people who can change things, stated Langran. Demonstrations and petitioning are important. With regard to the latter, standard letters are a turn off and are often disposed of. The legislature looks for individual letters."

"Influencing public opinion" is a third method Langran detailed in changing a law, noting that if the public is behind a group, lobbying becomes more effective. He urged CATCH 19 to seek out allies — particularly among other age groups to establish credibility and support.

Although both "Small Talks" were informative, by far the most startling and beneficial information was revealed late Tuesday (10/30) in a forum held by John C. McMonagle, executive secretary for the united tavern owners of Philadelphia. Mr. McMonagle, who is active in legislative areas, forced the CATCH 19 Committee to regroup by informing committee members that a proposed Harrisburg demonstration which was tentatively set for November 1 would be a waste of time.

McMonagle explained that due to elections in the State, many legislators are actively running for office and therefore absent from Harrisburg. He also noted that a November demonstration could hinder reaching legislators who will not be returning in January; committee members change, therefore someone on the House Liquor Committee might not be on the committee when the second session begins in January.

McMonagle stated that although the bill for 19 year old drinking has passed the Senate and is now in committee, it's chances of reaching the House floor for this session are nill. He did, however, pledge his lobbying knowledge and efforts to assist CATCH 19. His organization's first move in January will be to reintroduce the bill and continue lobbying efforts.

"McMonagle's information was a Godsend," declared Jack O'Brien, assistant program director for the union, "it saved us alot of time and work."

"November 14 was a rather short period of time for us to work in," continued O'Brien. "We now have sufficient time for more effective organization-petitionning letter writing, etc. We will shoot for Harrisburg sometime in February."

In other CATCH 19 related events, there will be an educational forum debating the pros and cons of 19 year old drinking to be held in the Day Hop Cafeteria in Dougherty Hall at 3:00 today.

ELECTIONS 1978

Villanovans Battle For Same State Seat

Alumnus John Alden's Views

★★★★★★★★★★★

The race for the Pennsylvania State Legislature in the 167th district puts a Villanova political science professor against a graduate of both the undergraduate college and the Villanova Law School. One of them will journey to Harrisburg and the other will not, and in this Tuesday's election local voters will make their decision.

★★★★★★★★★★★

By Marita Zajac

John Alden, commissioner of Radnor Township, is currently seeking office as State Representative from the 167th district.

The Republican candidate was asked questions that specifically relate to some of the concerns we have here at Villanova.

Villanovan: Do you favor the lowering of the drinking age in Pennsylvania?

Alden feels that perhaps it would be a good idea to lower the age for beer consumption to nineteen, first on a trial basis to see if the negative aspects of such a measure would outweigh the positive. He does feel however, that an 18-year-old drinking age would make beer too available to younger high school students.

Republican Candidate — Mr. John Alden

Villanovan: What is your position on tax-tuition credits?

Alden is not in favor of tax-tuition credits. If this sort of credit were to be instituted, he feels that it would eventually cause the end of public schooling because there simply wouldn't be enough funds to keep public schools going.

Aid to parochial schools is more of a practical solution that tax-tuition credits.

Villanovan: Do you favor the rezoning of the Morris estates?

Alden voted against the rezoning of the estate. He did not, however, vote against it because he was against institutionalizing the land, but because the intended use of the land was not fully explained. Another problem would be the great tax loss that would occur.

Secondly, Alden explained that Radnor Township already has a rapidly shrinking tax base and that rezoning the Morris Estate would only add to this loss. If Villanova could give back to the township what is lost in tax base as a result of rezoning there would be no problem as far as building goes.

Villanovan: What do you see as the role of Villanova University in the district?

Being an alumnus of Villanova, Alden feels that the students generally have a tendency to vote their conscience.

Alden sees this race as an important one because there are many pressing issues involved. He believes Pennsylvania has gotten a bad reputation in the past eight years and a lot of work needs to be done. Pennsylvania is one of the top five on the F.B.I.'s list of corrupted states and in the bottom ten of the business world, but what Alden finds most disheartening is the diminishing of human resources, that is large numbers of people leaving Pennsylvania to find better opportunities elsewhere.

Professor Jeff Hahn Speaks

Marguerite Esmonde

Dr. Jeff Hahn, a professor of political science at Villanova, is running for the state legislature in Pennsylvania. Dr. Hahn has served as a Democratic committeeman in Radnor Township and is currently a commissioner on the Radnor Board of Commissioners. The Villanovan interviewed Dr. Hahn recently to discuss his position on several issues affecting Villanova and its students.

Villanovan: Do you favor the lowering of the drinking age in Pennsylvania?

Hahn: "Personally, I would have no problems lowering the drinking age in Pennsylvania. I feel that students who are old enough to vote and who are old enough to fight in a war are also old enough to be responsible for the consumption of alcohol . . . But to be perfectly candid I would be representing a district whose attitudes may differ from my own personal views on that type of an issue. Unless I became convinced that there were more people in my district who favored the lowering of the drinking age than were opposed to it, I would have a hard time voting for it in the state legislature. So my answer is yes, I favor it but I would not commit myself at this time to voting for it."

Villanovan: What is your position on tax-tuition credit?

Hahn: . . . I think that higher education is something that the state should be committed to and for this reason I think we have to do more than we have been doing in assisting the students going to college. I know as a professor at a major university in Pennsylvania just how much it costs students and their parents to go to college these days. It's difficult business to be able to insure a good education that will lead to a better job. So I'm committed to a tuition credit plan which I think would be workable and assist people at every income level, particularly the middle income level, in being able to send their children to college. And I would support some kind of tuition assistance plan not only in the public sector, that is to say state supported schools like Temple or Pittsburgh, but also at private universities as well.

Villanovan: Do you favor the rezoning of the Morris Estates?

Hahn: Well, let me explain my position on it. I am on the Board of Commissioners in Radnor Township, . . . but am still employed by Villanova. So when Villanova came before the Board of Commissioners to have the Morris tract rezoned from residential to institutional, I was unable to vote on it because of the potential conflict of interests. However, personally . . . it would have been a good idea to rezone the Morris tract because it would have preserved the natural beauty and the environmental quality of that particular tract of land."

Democratic Candidate — Dr. Jeffrey Hahn

Villanovan: What do you perceive as Villanova's role in the district?

Hahn: Well, it's a very general question. Villanova certainly contributes to the district in contributing perhaps to the intellectual environment. In a more practical way, they certainly bring in business for the local merchants. . . I think that Villanova's theatre, which provides entertainment of a high quality to the area is an example of the contributions Villanova can make. Certainly they make a religious contribution. So Villanova makes contributions of an economic nature as well as an intellectual and religious nature to the community. We're fortunate to have a great university like Villanova in our community.

★★★ Area Race Previews ★★★

By JOSEPH B. FINIO

November 7 is an off-year election day but one that promises to hold much in store for the residents of Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Running for the Pennsylvania governership are Dick Thornburg (R) and Pete Flaherty (D), Bill Bradley (D) and Jeff Bell (R) are battling it out for New Jersey's senatorial seat. Congressional positions and state representative seats are open, as well as other minor elected offices.

In Pennsylvania, Thornburgh and Flaherty have drawn favorable responses from the voters who believe that both men are highly qualified for the job. Their own political parties have been at odds with them at times on their policies and their handling of the prosecution of criminals. This has added to their reputation of fine public service in the face of opposition that one would not normally expect to encounter.

The New Jersey Senatorial race has former basketball star Bill Bradley (D) pitted against Jeff Bell (R). Bradley is relying on his prior contact with people as a basketball star to guide him in keeping touch with the feelings of the constituents. Jeff Bell has had more experience with the Washington political scene and will be using that to capture the confidence of the voters in New Jersey.

Although a day for elections, one issue that will be particularly interesting to watch and which has special significance for the residents of Philadelphia is the Charter change question.

In the early 1950's, the Philadelphia city Charter was ammended to prevent a mayor from running for more than two consecutive terms. This was done in response to the corruption that had plagued the City in years following World War II.

Now, the Mayor of Philadelphia, Frank L. Rizzo and a group called Citizens to Reform the Charter are seeking to change the City charter and allow the Mayor of Philadelphia, whoever he may be, to run for more than two consecutive terms of office.

Polls indicate that the Mayor may lose the charter fight. They also indicate that he may have lost much of the support he has relied on since becoming mayor in 1971.

The Mayor has pointed to polls he claims were taken by a firm he commissioned showing the charter change question leading in his favor and not trailing a far second as stated by other polls.

This issue has caused so much controversy and division among the residents of Philadelphia that the biggest turnout in voter registration since the end of World War II occurred this year.

For those who are registered to vote, November 7 provides a unique opportunity that should not be taken lightly. In an era of seemingly increasing apathy, be sure that your voice is heard.

U.N. Reform

Villanova Hosts Conference

By BILL CLARK

On the weekend of Nov. 10, Villanova University will host the first Mid-Atlantic Conference on the President's Report on U.N. Reform. The chairman of the event will be Dr. John Logue, who is also the Director of the University's World Order Research Institute.

The purpose of the conference, according to Dr. Logue, is to "focus attention on recent proposals to improve and strengthen the U.N. [illegible]

He does not feel that the President's proposals are radical, but "there may be some people attending who will want to weaken the U.N." It is also possible that the Conference will make additional proposals for reform.

Dr. Logue feels that the proposals will strengthen the UN. "This," he says, "has been a concern of mine for over thirty years." Several proposals that will be considered at the Conference will be: the formation of a U.N. peace-keeping reserve; the curtailing of U.N. veto power; and the adoption of consensus decisions.

When asked why the conference will be held at Villanova, Dr. Logue stated, "I suggested that it be held here. One of our concerns is to examine U.N. proposals, so I volunteered Villanova and the administration welcomed the conference."

Dr. Logue feels that along with the 200 or more people attending, there will be many important officials attending as well. Bradford Morse, former under-secretary general, C. William Maynes, as-

Parents' Weekend

By STEPHEN HAGGERTY

Villanova University's annual Parents' Weekend will take place from Friday, November 3, to Sunday, November 5.

Sponsored by the Blue Key Society, the weekend offers the parents of Villanova students the opportunity to experience the campus life-style. It also enables the administration of the university to meet with parents and answer any questions they may have.

The goal of the Blue Key Society, headed by President Dave Ridenour, is to show the parents what life at Villanova is like.

The weekend will begin Friday evening with a cocktail party at the Covered Wagon, a local restaurant. An extra cocktail lounge has been reserved this year to comfortably accommodate the crowd.

On Saturday morning a Deans' Reception will be held. The deans of the different schools will meet with interested parents and students.

Following these presentations there will be a President's Reception in the North Lounge of Dougherty Hall. The Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., president of Villanova University will be present.

The football game between Villanova and Boston College will take place that aftewrnoon. Whiskey Company, the ROTC unit, will perform at halftime.

To round out the day's activities, a dance will be held in the Field House featuring the music of Lester Lavin.

Sunday morning, a mass will be held in the Field House for both parents and students to complete the weekend's activities.

"We feel that the events will be fun for both the parents and students and encourage everyone to attend," Ridenour added.

Senate Meeting Uneventful

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

Of the four Academic Policy motions presented at the October 20th University Senate Meeting, only one was brought to a vote.

The Senate unanimously passed a motion recommending that bachelor degrees be granted to former Villanovans who have not completed the program requirements for a bachelor's degree but who have gone on to secure an M.D., D.D.S., or M.B.A. The motion, presented by Dr. James Cleary, states that Villanova will accept up to one year of academic work done at a professional school satisfying requirements for a bachelor's degree.

Senator Alvin Clay presented the controversial motion that the University Senate accept a new overload policy. But due to a secretarial error, the wording of the motion on the agenda was incorrect. Dr. Justin Green, maker of the motion from the subcommittee on Academic Quality Control, provided copies of the motion with the final wording approved by the committee.

Senator Joseph George moved that the overload policy motion be tabled so the Senate can study the revised motion. The motion will appear at the next Senate meeting.

After a lengthy debate, the motion to accept a University-wide withdrawal policy was sent to the Senate Executive Committee for rewording. It is expected to be on the agenda of this month's Senate meeting.

The Senate sent the proposed policy on plagiarism and cheating back to the Academic Policy Committee for rewording. They determined that the submitted statement was not a policy, but rather a preamble to procedure on academic misconduct.

As new business, Senator Paul Gormley requested the Senate Executive Committee charge a committee to investigate vandalism problems on campus.

U.N. Conference

sistant secretary of state, and Patsy Mink, president of the Americans for Democratic Action are some of the many prominent speakers.

Eight workshops, each covering a different aspect of the Carter proposals, will be held Saturday afternoon. These will include sessions on human rights, UN peacekeeping, UN finances, UN voting structure, mediation and arbitration, international court of justice, UN economic system, disarmament and international security.

Saturday's evening's session will be held at the Covered Wagon Inn in Strafford and will feature Norman Cousins, board chairman of Saturday Review; Bradford Morse, administrator of the UN development program, and Harlan Cleveland, international affairs director of the Aspen Institute.

At the closing Sunday morning session, the conferees will try to reach agreement on a conference declaration after hearing reports from the workshops. Csanad Toth, chairman of the State Department's task force to implement the President's report on United Nations reform, will speak.

Co-sponsoring the conference with Villanova, through its World Order Research Institute and political science department are more than twenty organizations, including the Mid-Atlantic region of the American Association of University Women, the World Affairs Council of Philadelphia, the Friends Peace Committee of Philadelphia, the United Nations Association of New Jersey, and the World Federalist Education Fund of New Jersey.

This conference is also unique because for the first time, Dr. Logue's play, "Freedom of the Seize," will be presented at Villanova. The play, which has already been performed at Geneva and New York, will star two Villanovans. Gautam Bose, a graduate assistant in computer science from Calcutta, and Cindy Marr have the lead parts.

Dr. Logue feels the conference will benefit the University. Not only does this program present the students with an opportunity to learn about world affairs, it will also enhance the reputation of Villanova.

Area residents are invited to participate in the three-day conference. For more information call 527-2100, ext. 245.

If you're a junior or a senior majoring in math, physics or engineering, the Navy has a program you should know about.

It's called the Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate-Collegiate Program (NUPOC-C for short) and if you qualify, you can earn as much as $650 a month right through your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you'll receive an additional year of advanced technical education. This would cost you thousands in a civilian school, but in the Navy, we pay you. And at the end of the year of training, you'll receive a $3,000 cash bonus.

It isn't easy. There are fewer than 400 openings and only one of every six applicants will be selected. But if you make it, you'll have qualified for an elite engineering training program. An Editorial: In Response To...

Liberty is experimental, and experiment implies trial and error. Debate itself could not exist unless wrong opinions could be rightfully offered by those who suppose them to be right. For social purposes, the cutting edge of the right of free expression is its demand for what is called "toleration" on the part of those who see, or think they see, error in others. What is required is something more positive than toleration-respect for the process of self-correction as against any authoritatively imposed correctness.

The assumption of this respect is that the man in error is actually trying for the truth; and this effort on his part is of the essence of his claim to freedom. What the moral right does not cover is a right to be deliberately or irresponsibly in error.

A Free and Responsible Press,
By the Commission on Freedom of the Press

We, the staff of the Villanovan feel that it is an obligation to respond to charges of sensationalism and "disservice to good journalism." It is our deep and abiding belief that the responsibility of the newspaper is to serve its readers to the best of its ability, with honesty, sincerity, and belief in the right of free expression. We do not believe that we are infallible. It is a credo of this newspaper that responsible writing, investigation and interpretation are keystones of responsible journalism. Infallibility is not.

A newspaper's job is to make its reading public aware of issues, to identify controversies and to inform the public. We believe it is also a newspaper's responsibility to analyze and explain to the best of its ability the problems which society faces, particularly those problems of the community the newspaper services.

The University environment is as complex as any other environment in modern society. If we are to function and to contribute to the society in which we live, we must be cognizant of the positive and the negative, the good and the bad, the just and the unjust. A responsible newspaper does not simply laud the accomplishments and achievements of the community; its responsibility is to inform and to educate the reading public about problems that exist which that public has to face.

We believe that a newspaper's responsibility and primary function is to inform and interpret — not merely to entertain.

We welcome criticism, disagreement and new ideas. After all, that is what democracy was founded on.

Fr. Deegan Speaks Out

To the Editor:

I would like to comment on the article "Vandalism Plagues Campus" and the accompanying picture which appeared in the October 20th issue of the Villanovan.

First, it should be noted, that the picture accompanying the article is three years old. Secondly, the picture was supplied to the Villanovan by the Office of the Vice President for Administration. Thirdly, it is my understanding that it was an editorial decision, due to time constraints, to run the picture. This decision was made with the knowledge that the picture was three years old. I cite these facts for the record.

The purpose of my letter, however, is to simply state that I believe that the printing of an undated picture, next to a rather disjointed article, under a sensational but untrue headline is a disservice not only to the Sullivan Hall residents, but to the Villanova community in general. (I will refrain from making any comments on its disservice to good journalism.)

Rather than write a thousand words to overcome the damage that one picture has done, let me make a suggestion. Why not do an in-depth series of articles on Resident Life at Villanova? Perhaps you could objectively evaluate the new programs that have been put in place over the past 2-1/2 years affecting resident life. Perhaps you could even make valid distinctions between vandalism and normal wear and tear. A chair that breaks after twenty years of service should not be listed as a victim of vandalism. If anything, it is a victim of poor planning.

There are so many good people at Villanova, students, faculty, staff and administrators. Why is it that we are always quick to sound a negative note? We should be people of joy and hope. People of love and compassion. Recognizing our weaknesses, we should accentuate our strengths. Our greatest strength is our people.

Rev. John E. Deegan, O.S.A.

Resident Vandalism

To the Editor:

In the October 20th issue of The Villanovan, the newspaper published an article regarding the problem of vandalism. Along with the article was a picture of trash strewn throughout a wing in Sullivan Hall. We think it is necessary to give a point of view from those who live in Sullivan Hall, a viewpoint ignored in the article.

First of all, in the last 2-1/2 years, there has never been an incident of such gross mischief and destruction as portrayed in the photograph. To us, the picture only serves to sensationalize the story, rather than depict current and relevant facts. At one time this incident may have taken place, as it obviously did; but it does not accurately portray any recent problems of vandalism the article is trying to emphasize. It improperly creates a false image of the students who live here now. We are not trying to say that vandalism does not occur, but not to such a degree in the last 2-1/2 years to warrant such a picture attached to the article.

Second of all, we take exception to Mr. Martin's remark that students are "willing to live with destruction." Too often the vandalism occurs in the early hours of morning, when most of the residents are asleep and are not aware of what is going on in the hall. Students cannot be expected to patrol the halls all hours of the day. For this reason, the University had installed new security doors which would be locked at a given hour, opening only with a room key of a resident. These new additions do not work, however, since the company that installed the doors put the catch mechanism for the lock on the wrong side of the front doors. They have been this way since the beginning of the semester, and as yet, nothing has been done. Most of the residents in Sullivan who are concerned for the upkeep of the hall see these doors as a necessary deterrent to would-be vandalism. The same students, we believe, would do their share in identifying those who maliciously destroy school property. We know of no one who is that willing to part with their money to pay for the fines assessed against the wing for discharged fire equipment, broken hall lights, or whatever. In the end, everyone pays.

We felt the article was an example of a misuse of journalistic license. Freedom of the press means that journalistic literature is guaranteed the right to print both sides of the story. There is nothing in the article that shows us the writer of the article inquired as to the opinions of the residents. It is for that reason we have written this rebuttal, to give our insights to the problems addressed in the article on vandalism.

Sincerely,
The R.S.A. Council of Sullivan Hall

Cafeteria Worker Complains

To the Editor:

The cafeteria workers of Dougherty Hall are becoming increasingly disturbed by the behavior of a great number of students.

In spite of a campaign by Food Services to have students return trays when finishing eating, it is still not being done.

Our job is based in a large part on timing and we frequently have to stop whatever preparations we are doing to "bus" tables. This is not part of our responsibility and it is a particularly unpleasant job. It is made even more so by many who dump juice, milk, pepper shakers etc. When we bus tables, we also see tremendous waste. Frequently whole portions are untouched.

Every cafeteria worker has been sworn at and verbally berated for following rules regarding size of portions. Seconds are always available for those who want more. The portion rules are obviously there to help cut down on waste.

Frankly, we are shocked by the lack of consideration and immaturity of a great number of the student body. We are asking that trays be returned and that some consideration be shown to us. We think it is time that the students "give" a little.

Sincerely,
Jane Perett

Jeff Hahn Honest: Yes, Says Fr. Jackson

To The Editor:

It came as no surprise when we started a new program of studies in peace and social justice at Villanova University, that Jeff Hahn was one of the first members of our faculty to lend his support and encouragement. His interest in local government and the common cause of responsible citizenship were well known. His concerns for the larger issues of humankind, world hunger, violence, racism, poverty, etc. were just as real and sincere.

We are indeed fortunate in the 167th district of Pennsylvania's State legislature to have Dr. Hahn offer us his services as our representative in Harrisburg. If past experience is any criteria for future performance, then we have the opportunity of electing a man whose character and integrity are manifestly superior. It is crucial that we chose our government representatives on the basis of honesty, independence, and personal responsibility. Jeff Hahn is clearly that kind of man.

Student Assistance Needed

To the Editor:

I would like to use your columns to urge Villanova resident students to extend "floor space hospitality" to out-of-state students during the November 10-12 Villanova Conference on the Reform and Restructure of the United Nations.

The students will be among the 300 people attending a conference which is being sponsored by 25 groups, including Villanova's Political Science Department, its UN Club and its World Order Research Institute.

We are hoping that many Villanovans will be willing to offer either an empty bed or floor space for a student with a sleeping bag on Friday and Saturday evenings of that weekend. We would deeply appreciate it if host students (men and women) would contact the Dean of Men (531), Dean of Women (534) or the World Order Research Institute (245) to indicate their willingness to help.

Thank you very much.

(Dr.) John J. Logue,
Director World Order
Research Institute

Intramural Feedback

To the Editor:

I am taking this opportunity to reply to your rather misguided editorial of Oct. 20, 1978.

I am happy to report, despite your Editorial's opinion, that there has been anything but "an onslaught of intramural football injuries." In fact, as compared to last year the number of injuries occurring in intramural football competition has decreased, and decreased dramatically.

Your statement of "The problems continue. More injuries, more fights, and more violence in intramural football." Is anything but true. I have recognized a concerted effort on the part of many of the teams to curb the number of fights and control any outbursts by those unrully few.

Your comment about researcher's finding that 81.24% of all "college males athletes" accept violence as a way of solving problems is wrongly directed at the "students" who participate in intramural football. Well over 80% of those playing intramural football are hardly difinable as "College male athletes." They are not varsity competitors; they are more likely a group of individuals from the first floor of Sullivan who want to get together for some organized exercise.

It seems somewhat inappropriate for you to accuse an intramural football program for developing violent and over-aggressive attitudes in a group of college students.

Your attack on the refereeing crews is nothing short of absurd. The group of students (and I emphasize that they are only students and not professionals. God only knows they're not perfect either.) Who referee our games is a small one — small because we use only those who the department feels are capable of controlling the games.

You also state that most injuries occur from unnecessary an late hits.

I beg to differ, but most injuries do not affect the ball carriers .Instead it is the lineman who is blocking or being blocked who receives the minor injury. Most of these injuries occur when a finger is caught in clothing or just jammed and not by a person being punched or kicked or whatever you think happens.

To say that a game between rivals "disintegrates into a violent grudge match" is, in fact, rarely the case. If you were at the Mauler-Wreckless abandod game you would have seen an aggressive, not violent, match-up of two very good teams, in which there were no fights and lot of good football.

Although good sportsmanship is of course an implied goal of any athletic competition the initial purpose of intramural sports is to provide some good, healthy exercise for the students of Villanova.

In closing I would like to invite you to become a referee for even just one game so that you might understand what a referee must do and also that you might see just how "violent" intramural football truly is.

Sincerely,
Dino Valente
Co-Commissioner of

outer frame of the Center, the noise level in the surrounding area will be "significantly lower," until landscaping work begins.

Regarding the building when it opens as Connelly Center, its Director revealed that some modifications have been made and others are being considered; specifically, the food service layout is being modified because the volume of people expected to be handled has increased, and the game room may include a glass wall to separate the billiard tables from the more noisy electronic games.

The full cost of the completed Center, including furnishings will be about six million dollars. As for the completion date, his estimate is sometime in early spring 1980. He hopes the Center will be open by this date that students graduating in May 1980 could have some opportunity to make use of its facilities.

Mr. Tuckman believes that the problems which the site presents now are justified. He states, "The location is great because of its relation to other major campus facilities, such as Connelly Hall, Dougherty Hall, Vasey Theatre,

WKVU Marathon in Third Day of Battle Against MD

By PAUL VIGGIANO

"Good morning Villanova. It's 9:15 on a Wednesday, the very first day of November." And so the Programming Director of WKVU continues in his fourteenth hour to attempt to set the American College record for on-the-air endurance. The whole event is for the benefit of the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Many local and national celebrities from movies, sports, T.V. and radio have arranged to make personal appearances or at least talk to Tom while he is on the air. Some of the people that have already called are Don Tollefson and Steven Levy of Action News, Al Meltzer and Larry Kane of Channel Ten, Bill Bergey, middle linebacker for the Philadelphia Eagles, George Michaels of WABC in New York, Phyllis Diller, Ed McMahon and Robin Williams of Mork and Mindy fame.

"I feel great" Tom answers when someone asks him how he feels. His goal is 120 hours but more important than that, he would like to see a total of $3,000 raised for this worthy cause. The mike switch is turned back on, "C'mon people. The number is LA 5-8910. Donate anything you can. Any loose change that you may have in your pockets: quarters, dimes, nickles, pennies, anything. Come on up and talk to me."

Anyone is invited and encouraged to stop on up the second floor of Dougherty, have some coffee and talk with Tom. This is your big chance to hit the airwaves and make yourself known.

Tom is a "personal friend of mine" and I know that he will indeed reach his goal. But it is up to the Villanova community to make his monetary goal a reality.

Bill Carrol, WKUV's business director, has stayed up with Tom for the initial day. He had this to say, "It gets kind of lonely up here late at night, especially when you can hear yourself echoing down the halls. To try to keep sane, we laugh a lot and just be ourselves when the mike is turned on."

Tom would like to stress the fact that his job seems easy compared to the hours and work that the rest of the station has done. And indeed they have been working 'round-the-clock doing anything they possibly can. A special thanks must go out to Thomas Kelly and the people up at WKVU, "Villanova's campus station."

As a closing thought Tom told us, "We would like to get as many students involved as possible. This will give Villanova recognition. The more students we can get involved, the better."

"C'mon people. The number is LA 5-8910. Donate anything you can. Any loose change that you may have in your pockets: quarters, dimes, nickels, pennies, anything."

Tom Kelly, WKVU jock is still going strong after two and a half days on the air.

Art Department Lends Color To Campus

By VALERIE FENDRICK

Did you ever notice the eye-catching array of color hanging in Mendel's physics lecture hall? Any science major may confess that this particular painting makes technical physics lectures much easier to sleep through.

Ms. Cheri Leibold, a Villanova art instructor, explained in a recent interview that the Department of Art and Art History, located in St. Mary's Hall, is purchasing a work of art from each graduating art major.

The plan is to develop an art collection which will be circulated to campus offices on a rotating basis.

Thus, the painting in the physics lecture hall is part of the project devised by experts in the AAH department to not only beautify campus buildings, but also to become visible as a dynamic university department.

Events planned for the current year include trips to Philadelphia museums and numerous art displays in Falvey Library. Currently, Philadelphia artist Albert Gury is exhibiting a collection of paintings. If you have not seen this art display, I recommend that you treat yourself to a cultural experience.

Moreover, in November one might catch the ancient Egyptian objects which will be displayed in the Library's glass cases.

February is the month when students participating in past June's Italy study trip will show water colors and drawings created during the one month period. The trip was a huge success with 40 participating students from many states.

Open to all students for credit or audit, the summer program in Italy is jointly sponsored by Villanova and Rosemont.

Moreover, April holds the famous senior exhibits by graduating fine arts majors. The senior exhibit is a requirement for graduation and contains a comprehensive show of the art student's four years of work.

To facilitate the biology major who would like to draw more than mitochondria, and the accounting major who feels that life is more than debits and credits, Villanova holds studio art classes in oil and water color painting. Yes, such courses may be taken as electives.

One of the most exciting prospects for the AAH department's future comes in the form of the new student center. "Plans are under way for opening a real art gallery in this center," says Leibold in anticipation.

For information call ext. 238.

Quick Wit Joe Carroll

Joe Carroll is always ready with a smile or an amusing anecdote.

By CAROL GOLDFARB

Perhaps you have seen him walking around campus carrying his briefcase. He looks like a math professor, tall with distinguished good features and a full head of white hair. Always wearing a smile, he has a pleasant word for everyone, from the cashier in the cafeteria to the serious students he encounters in the library.

He is Joe Carroll, a senior citizen, who came to Villanova last year to continue his education. Carroll retired after working for Septa 33 years. He was Vice-President of the TWU (Transport Workers Union) for five years and served on the International Executive Board for 12 years.

Beside writing poetry, Carroll loves to tell amusing anecdotes. While serving in the Army during World War II, Carroll ran an entertainment complex for the soldiers in La Louviere, Belgium. "Where there are soldiers there are many forms of vice. We opened the complex in order to combat vice, because we didn't know which vice was versa."

Carroll tells of a discussion going on about worshipping inanimate objects. A student asked "If I worship a rock am I being good?" Carroll responded "Does that mean you're stoned," then added "You may take that for granite."

Carroll said he is impressed with the excellent teachers, the great opportunity for learning here and the dedication of the students. "The students of today are sharper than when I went to school."

For those students contemplating Law School, Carroll says: "Follow the advice of Shakespeare's Henry VI when he took over the Country and said, "Now let's kill all the lawyers."

Fr. Papin- A Friend of the Pope

By LUCY GAGLIARDI

A member of the Villanova faculty, Professor Papin, a distinguished renowned scholar and a present teacher of Christology, is close friends with our new pope, John Paul II.

Their first confrontation was in 1963 when Fr. Papin and Cardinal Wojtyla were involved in the Communist struggle to divide the country between two leaders, causing confusion among the people about whom to follow. The Pope worked hard to keep unity and followed the policy of the primate of Poland. They worked together in 1970, and again it involved the Communist struggle. They made stronger demands for freedom and justice for the faithful of Poland. Fr. Papin and the Pope met many other times and he made it clear that "although in the eyes of the general public he had no chance, the eyes of God are not the ways of man. The Cardinals knew him well as a hard working man, dedicated and above all youthful with a pleasant personality.

"The choice of a Polish Pope," says Fr. Papin, "was chosen because the people of Poland are fighting the Iron Curtain, and their churches were destroyed. They needed a leader to guide them to peace." Reaction from Italy was that after 155 years of Italian Popes, they have accepted a Polish Pope with love and respect.

Is the new Pope liberal or conservative? Fr. Papin feels that these words, liberal and conservative are cliches and nobody's actions can be predetermined by such cliches. He says, "If you call faithfulness to the church teaching of conservation, then the Pope is a conservative, and if you consider his watchful eyes and future action for peace among you, then you can call him liberal." Humanly speaking, Fr. Papin feels Pope John Paul II is young, healthy and supernatural and natural good of the people is supreme law for him.

Abortion is a very controversial subject of the church and Fr. Papin believes that the Pope is from a country where the priest, during the war, offered his life for his neighbor's life, and likewise, "He will help preserve life, not destroy it."

Contraception raises another church question, and he believes "the Pope will consult responsible scientists in searching for a solution of overpopulation." Fr. Papin explains that the Pope is not a scientist, but a guardian of faith and morals. Just as he is responsible with Christ's teachings, so are we responsible to observe Christ's teachings. "Human conscience knows the difference between morals and evil, and a real love for God is a greater law than any external law.

Just how close are the Pope and Professor Papin? Fr. Papin says the Pope plays golf and skied last winter, and whether the Pope will have time for these sports is questionable. Fr. Papin feels "The new Pope was chosen by Christ when the Polish people needed a strong leader of faith to keep Christ's cross firmly, not only in Poland, but the entire world."

Stealing a phone call isn't a game.

Most students play by the rules when placing a long distance call. They take advantage of bargain rates and make their calls during the discount periods. If you're not sure when you can call at discount rates, check your phone book.

A few students think it's O.K. to break the rules by stealing their telephone calls. They're not beating the system, they're taking advantage of all of us, because it drives up the cost of providing telephone service.

Students who break the rules also run the risk of paying a large fine. Spending time in jail. And getting themselves a permanent police record.

It's just not worth it!

History Profs Fulfill Dream

By TOM SHARKEY

Remember back in high school when you and your best friend were sitting around having a beer and wondering what each of you would be doing in ten years? And remember how you dreamed about working together someday? Well, those dreams never come true, right? Wrong! It just so happens that at least two people in this world have made those dreams a reality. They are Mary Beth Immediata and Linda Salvucci, and they will team teach a course in women's history next semester.

Mary Beth Immediata and Linda Salvucci, longtime friends, are currently team teaching a University College course called "Women and the Family in U.S. History."

Mary Beth and Linda were best friends at Villa Maria Academy in Malvern and graduated together. From there Linda came to Villanova, wrote for The Villanovan, and graduated in 1973 with an Honors Degree. Following graduation, Linda attended Princeton where she earned a master's degree in History.

Mary Beth graduated from the University of Delaware in 1973. While there, she was accepted into Phi Beta Kappa. She also received a master's degree from Stanford University.

After their graduate work, both women did professional research work. Mary Beth worked for the Wharton School of Industrial Relations while Linda did research for the Mexican Archives.

The two women have yet another thing in common: they were married within two weeks of each other.

As far as team teaching is concerned, they both feel that their mutual respect and honesty with each other is what has enabled them to make it work. Linda commented that "we are so comfortable with each other that we often find ourselves finishing each other's sentences."

During this past summer, Dr. Joseph George, chairman of the History Department, asked Mary Beth and Linda if they would like to teach a course in women's history at Villanova. The course, entitled "Women and the Family in U.S. History," is the first of its kind to be offered at Villanova and the two women eagerly accepted the offer. Linda has taught before at Villanova. Four years ago she taught a Western Civilization course in the History Department. Some of her students are now seniors at V.U.

The idea of team teaching the course was Mary Beth and Linda's idea. As Linda said, "We felt and hoped that our enthusiasm for the course would rub off on the students."

The course, "while not ignoring exceptional women, will deal primarily with the life experiences of ordinary women. We will be concerned with how variables such as race, class, ethnicity and religion affect generalizations about women as a group."

Lecture topics will include such titles as "The Sexy Saleslady," "Modern Feminism" and "Puritan and Victorian Sexuality." Mary Beth will lecture on attitudes and preconceptions of women while Linda will speak on what is reality.

The two, who are presently teaching the course in University College, have found that controversial reading often sparks heated in-class debates. Mary Beth and Linda insist that they are not radical feminists and try to be as professional and objective as possible in their teaching.

The course is open to everyone next semester and will be given at ten o'clock on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Mary Beth and Linda are especially encouraging non-history majors and men to take the class.

There's No Such Thing As Ghosts??

By JULIE LaROSA

Remember the creeps you got telling late night ghost stories when you were a kid? Of course, then you outgrew them because everybody knows ghosts aren't real. Well, if you were in the North Lounge of Dougherty last Thursday night for the first of this year's lectures sponsored by the Villanova Union, you might have changed your opinion. The speaker was Dr. Jan Grossman, a noted area parapsychologist who believes in ghosts.

Dr. Grossman was out to jiggle our minds and bend out realities by giving some factual insights into the world of the supernatural.

Dr. Groesman, who is a by profession a clinical psychologist and marriage counselor, became interested in parapsychology when he experienced his first encounter with a ghost during his college years. He told how he was skeptical at first and tried to explain his experience logically, but soon became convinced of a ghostly presence.

Since then he has been involved in countless cases and feels he has definite proof of the existence of ghosts.

He related accounts of some cases he worked on such as the night he and a friend volunteered to spend the night in the attic of a haunted house. It was there he actually saw his first ghost.

Dr. Grossman then showed slides of ghosts he was able to photograph, and ended his lecture by answering questions from the audience. To add to the Halloween atmosphere, apple cider and gingersnaps were served.

A Touching Man

By FR. RAY JACKSON

Touching is most personal. One thinks of a mother holding her newborn child, or the youngster walking hand and hand with his dad. The trepidation and excitement of a first kiss and the warm embrace of true love are both special kinds of touch. An older couple sitting together on a park bench add a note of serenity to touching. Conversely, we realize that not all touching is good. A manipulator touches people in a hurting way; a con-man touches in a cheating way; and most of us know all too well when someone is putting "the touch" on us. For our purposes, however, let me confine my remarks to the first type of touching, that which provokes feelings of warmth and gratitude in each of us.

Jesus was a touching person. His magnetic personality constantly drew people to him. The gospels are filled with references to his touching of others whether physically or by the sheer force of his presence. Recall for instance, Luke's account: "After sunset, all who had friends who were sick with various diseases brought them to Jesus; he placed his hands on every one of them and healed them all." Mark's gospel relates an incident where some people brought children to Jesus for him to touch them, but the disciples scolded the people. Whereupon Jesus became angry and rebuked his disciples and told them that we must become as children to receive the kingdom of God. Finally Mark says, "then he took the children in his arms, placed his hands on each of them, and blessed them."

Furthermore Jesus didn't just deal with groups of people. He was especially sensitive to individual needs. He healed the eyes of the blind man, Bartimaeus; cured the illness of Jairus' daughter; touched the hearts of Mary Magdalene and Zaccheus. Many, many other examples might be given. Suffice to say, Jesus was a touching man.

But he's gone now! He suffered, died and was buried — rose from the dead and ascended to his Father. Is it true that he can no longer touch? Not at all. For according to our faith Jesus lives on in each of his people. St. Paul, who himself was touched to the point of being thrown to the ground, realized that Jesus would continue to touch the minds and hearts of people throughout history by calling his followers to imitate him to touch others in his name.

All of which brings us to a somewhat obvious conclusion. The Villanova University Christian community is called to be a touching community. How quick are we, even among ourselves, to be concerned about each others needs? Perhaps we cannot cure the blind or heal the sick. Surely we can be sensitive to the student with personal difficulties, the teacher burdened with large classes, or the administrator struggling to accomodate a variety of interest groups. Even the little amenities of life, a friendly greeting, a smile, a look of interest toward another are positive signs of our willingness to be touching people. Jesus does live on and he wants to share his life. Will we, his followers, allow his touch to be felt by continuing to reach out to each other?

Midterms are over and everyone seems relieved. Even though these grades do not go down on the final record, we all get up tight about it.

This week, On Campus decided to ask the students how they felt about midterm exams. Do you think it is right for the parents to get the grades before the students? Are they worth it? Here is what we heard.

"I don't think they're worth it. It doesn't mean very much. It's almost like a progress report. I think they should send them to the students not the parents."

Jocelyn Boscetto, Junior

"I think midterms are definitely a waste. Half the grades only consist of one test. And your parents think it's the biggest thing."

Jim Donovan, Senior

"Yes, I think they're a waste. I don't think they should be sent home. It's for you, not your parents to know how you're doing. You're in college, if you can make your own decisions, you can be responsible for your own grades."

Marie Schlosser, Senior

"No, I don't think they are that bad. It is a good threat for the student and it gives them motivation. Some of mine were good and some stunk."

Tom Herbst, Junior

"They're a waste of money. I think it's a waste because they are only made up of one test and it's not worth it."

Ellen Tracy, Sophomore

"I think the grades should stay with the students. The semester grades should go home. The grades are too early to judge and send home to the parents."

Peter Thompson, Freshman

Before committing yourself to a career, consider a career of commitment.

Maybe that means giving Central American Indians the power of the typewriter...standing up for human rights against a repressive South American government...consoling the widow of a Chicago policeman...providing leadership for a Perth Amboy minority parish. Members of our community do work like this.

Out of our experience with the opportunities open to young people undecided about what to do with their lives, we publish a special newsletter. WORD ONE describes the challenges of social action and religion today. It tells what's happening around the country and how good ideas are succeeding. We'll gladly mail it to you free.

"In part, I think the vandalism is most definitely related to drunk and disorderly people," stated Martin. "However, I think that thoughtlessness is the major cause."

Martin hopes that the fining system which was instituted last year will have a positive effect in reducing the amount of vandalism this year.

"With this fining system, we hope to make students responsible for their own wing, use the money we assess to make the necessary repairs, and then use any remaining money for dormitory improvements."

Through last year's fining system, a total of $22,000 was charged to students for vandalism. The remaining repairs were paid for by money originally intended for building improvements.

"From now on, money budgeted for building improvements will not be used to pay for vandalism. The responsibility for vandalism now rests with the students," said Martin.

On assessing the present status of the vandalism situation on campus, Fr. Hite said, "Maybe we've made people more aware of the problem, but let's not kid ourselves that there's been a tremendous improvement, yet."

After some two years of planning and over three months of construction, the Sullivan Hall Recreation Room opened for business last Monday.

Along with a snack bar operated by Pizza Palace, the center is also equipped with several pinball machines, pool tables, lounge booths, and an acoustical ceiling. Although the pizzaria is not scheduled to open until mid-November, the game room is presently ready for service.

The center is maintained by many attendants. The man in charge of the overall operation is Section Coordinator Don Bailey.

"My responsibilities," states Bailey, "are to take care of the machines, oversee the workers, and basically make sure that everything goes smoothly."

Chris Scheuer, one of the Game Room Attendants, says: "Everybody thus far has respected the machines, the room, and the center as a whole. Although it hasn't been too busy yet, it will probably pick up when the snack bar opens."

What are the advantages of having a recreation room in Sullivan Hall? "Due to the university center construction," says Bailey, "the hall is isolated from the rest of the campus. The game room will give the Quad a legitimate social spot.

Joseph DiFrancesco, Sullivan Hall President, adds: "Its a tremendous attribute to the hall, and it gives the residents a place to go to unwind from studies. I only hope that it will be used in the proper fashion and not abused as far as vandalism goes."

Are there any foreseeable problems or disadvantages that may arise? Bailey replys: "Because it will become a popular place for students to hang out, I'm afraid that it may become overused or vandalized. I hope the patrons will respect and take care of the room because it is truly unique. I only wish I had the place my freshman year."

Resident's feelings are generally mixed about the center. Sophomore Carl Adamo states: "I think it is great we have a small food outlet nearby. The game room, though, is just another distraction."

Sophomore Engineering major Ed Pinkon states: "It's a good idea since social activities on campus are somewhat limited, and a game room right in the dorm will keep the students occupied."

The recreation room is located in the basement of Sullivan Hall's East Wing. It is open seven days a week from noon to one a.m.

Charges

Justice Nicholas Sellers, reviewing the evidence presented, announced his decision:

"I'm dismissing this case on the grounds that no proof has been presented that the persons involved did not have a liquor license."

Sellers explained that the LCB could file for re-arrest in the future if evidence could be produced that the students did not have a liquor license.

Attorney Phelan, however, indicated it is unlikely that the charges would be refiled by the LCB.

Boston Is Back!

By STEVE CASTELLANO

No folks, no dime store phonies, Boston is real. When I was asked if I wanted to go to the Boston concert to review it I was hesitant because several of my friends had seen Boston once before and said that they can't perform on the stage. That was in 1976. In 1978, Boston is by far the best rock act I have seen in quite some time.

Anticipation, the whole idea of what can you expect from a band whose philosophy is music through technology. What I witnessed on Monday night was more music than technology. Many say that they do not put on a quality show because they cannot duplicate the sounds of the studio on stage. For a band of their caliber they did an excellent job and were extremely creative in the process.

Larry Rubin, public relations manager of the Spectrum said, "I have seen every act that has played on our stage, and Boston is by far the biggest crowd pleaser." The crowd is what really got me. It was not completely teeny boppers. There were many adults at the show just curious to see what Boston is all about. The show was a sellout, there was not a seat to be had in the Spectrum.

When the house lights went down the crowd lit up matches as well as voices. The crowd was most definitely psyched for Boston. Brad Delp grabbed the microphone and said "Philadelphia, you're number one."

After the crowd calmed down they went into an excellent version of "Rock 'n' Roll" band from the debut LP, at this point the crowd went absolutely crazy. It was hard to hear the music over the crowd. The voices in this song were excellent. Delp possesses a very powerful voice, and it went non stop for almost two hours.

"Hitchin' a Ride," also from the first album, received a warm welcome from the crowd. However, when Delp said "we'd like to do one off our new album, it's called "Don't Look Back" the crowd was in ecstasy. Hands were clapping, people were screaming, it was the most favorable response this far into the concert. "More than a Feeling" did not get as much response as I had anticipated. Possibly the crowd was tired out after all the excitement and were holding it in until the end.

Boston played an hour and a half set straight. However, Tom Scholz showed the crowd that he is a one man band, and electronic wizard. He was doing things with his Gibson that were trademarks of the genius that lies behind Boston. The spotlight was on Scholz who played the guitar solo, as only he can do it. With the help of his synthesizer he created the most interesting effects with the guitar. At times he would play solo for several minutes straight, and held the total attention of the crowd.

Delph dominated the mike again with his nothing short of great voice, he asked the crowd "if everyone was toking," and then said "for all those who are tokin, we're goinna do an old one called Smokin." The crowd at this point was really excited.

The last song of the night was Foreplay/Longtime and it went on for at least 15 minutes, it was really pleasing to listen to. It was the song that I really wanted to hear. The crowd was singing along

THE WIZ!

By CAROL ANN BARRALE

"Come on, ease on down, ease on down the road..." into a toe-tapping, energy exuding, fantastically lavish fantasy land created by Motown Productions and Universal Pictures in their latest musical release, "The Wiz."

The movie's screenplay by Joel Schumacher, is modeled more upon the 1900 novel by Frank L. Baum, "The Wonderful Wizard of Oz," and the 1939 Judy Garland classic, "The Wizard of Oz," than the current play of the same title.

This vain cinemagraphic attempt to recapture the viewer's sentiment for the Old Oz, transforms the basic plot into a Twentieth century urban fantasy, in which the "Merry Old Land of Oz" resembles nothing so much as New York City after present-day creative set designers get a hold of it.

The New York World Trade Center Complex becomes Emerald City, headquarters of the "elusive Wiz and inhabited by fashion-conscious citizens who change color from green to red to gold at the snap of a finger."

The New York Public Library, The N.Y. State Pavillion, Shea Stadium, The Hoyt-Schermerhorn Brooklyn subway station, as well as Coney Island are also incorporated into the elaborate set.

Dorothy, the all black cast title role, portrayed by Diana Ross, is no longer a wide-eyed little girl from quaint Kansas City but a 24-year-old school teacher living in the hipness of Harlem, who, fearing life and lacking self confidence, has "never been south of 145th street."

No sound or visual effect has been spared this production apparent in the highly imaginative set designs and costumes of this fanciful macrocosm of Oz.

Indeed the movie received class A treatment with a cast including Diana Ross, (Dorothy), Michael Jackson, (the Scarecrow), Nipsey Russel, (the Tinman), Ted Ross, (the Cowardly Lion), Lena Horne, (Glinda), and Richard Pryor, (the Wiz), surrounded by dancers, singers and musicians.

The film proves to be a bit ostentatious. There is a lull in dialogue and no great dramatic or meaty roles here. The real drama and effect comes in the form of energetic music and lyrics by Charlie Small.

Diana Ross's superb talents do justice to the somewhat unbelievable role she must portray—unbelievable in the child-like curiosity a 24-year-old school teacher exhibits. The excellent talents of the cast give the characters a worth beyond the lines as they impart emotion, spirit and personality to their performances.

This latest version has added to many of the old delights some comic anecdotes:

The Wicked Witch sisters are renamed as Ever Mean and Evillene: the "chicks who put the ug in ugly." Evillene's home is not a castle but a Sweat Shop where she sits upon her throne—a giant toilet seat.

The Scarecrow, in search of a brain, is stuffed with only the best in classical literature—pages of Shakespeare, Bacon and Cicero, yet can never produce a meaningful anecdote from all his stuffing.

The Tin Man "nobody home in soulville" is found in an amusement park display having been crushed by his more-than-pleasantly-plump fourth wife Teeny.

The Cowardly Lion's name is Fleetwood Coup de Ville in expression of "his mother's high hopes."

Some fundamental differences between the old and new versions exist resulting in the latter version's falling short in the comparison. The Wiz is no longer a storehouse of knowledge and wisdom, but behind this guise is a phony Hornwell Smith a cheap, unsuccessful politician from Atlantic City, N.J.

Thus the four compatriots can not be awarded their wishes by the Wiz, but discover with the aid of Good Witch Glinda and Dorothy herself that "If you believe in yourself, you will have brains, heart and courage to last your whole life through..."

Directed by Sidney Lumet, "The Wiz," despite its worth as a light spectacular version of 20th century entertainment, it is safe to say, may enjoy more economic success than its predecessor, but the delight and sentiments still held for the 1939 classic can never be replaced. Rated G.

The Wiz with Nipsey Russell, the Tinman, Diana Ross, Dorothy, Ted Ross, the Lion, and Michael Jackson, the Scarecrow.

Vasey's Fall Finale

"Marriage of Figaro" Begins November 8.

The Marriage of Figaro with Ed McGreevey, Figaro and Susan Trimble, Susanna

The Graduate Theatre Department of Villanova University announces the final production of the Fall 1978 season: Beaumarchais' The Marriage of Figaro. Directed by Dr. James J. Christy, the play will run November 8th-11th, 15th-18th. Curtain time is 8:00 p.m.

Something of a scandal in its time, The Marriage of Figaro was banned for four years due to its uncompromising attack on aristocratic abuses. Finally staged by the Comedie Francaise in 1784, its humor has admirably withstood the test of time, maintaining a biting freshness. The story involves the rivalry between the vassal, Figaro, and the Count Almaviva, who insists on his loyal "right" to enjoy the corporeal pleasures of Figaro's chosen bride. The various intrigues, reversals, and innumerable complexities of plot combine with Beaumarchais' free flowing humor to provide a thoroughly entertaining experience.

Encountering selfishness and venality about him, the resilient Figaro is able to maintain an optimism in his outlook and integrity in the conduct of his life. Dr. Christy, employing an environmental design and through the free-wheeling use of anachronism, intends to explore a timeless theme — man's potentiality for moral survival in a corrupt social world. The Marriage of Figaro will abound with references to contemporary experience, in an exciting interplay of musical, visual, and physical details.

The Marriage of Figaro, the source of Mozart's famous opera, contains the wonderful sentiments of that work and poses a raft of social questions that have not yet lost their immediacy and sting.

Midterms are over and everyone seems relieved. Even though these grades do not go down on the final record, we all get up tight about it.

This week, On Campus decided to ask the students how they felt about midterm exams. Do you think it is right for the parents to get the grades before the students? Are they worth it? Here is what we heard.

"I don't think they're worth it. It doesn't mean very much. It's almost like a progress report. I think they should send them to the students not the parents."

Jocelyn Bessettee, Junior

"I think midterms are definitely a waste. Half the grades only consist of one test. And your parents think it's the biggest thing."

Jim Donovan, Senior

"Yes, I think they're a waste. I don't think they should be sent home. It's for you, not your parents to know how you're doing. You're in college, if you can make your own decisions, you can be responsible for your own grades."

Marie Schlosser, Senior

"No, I don't think they are that bad. It is a good threat for the student and it gives them motivation. Some of mine were good and some stunk."

Tom Herbst, Junior

"They're a waste of money. I think it's a waste because they are only made up of one test and it's not worth it."

Ellen Tracy, Sophomore

"I think the grades should stay with the students. The semester grades should go home. The grades are too early to judge and send home to the parents."

Peter Thompson, Freshman

Sullivan Hall Game Room Opens

Anthony C. Chadwick

After some two years of planning and over three months of construction, the Sullivan Hall Recreation Room opened for business last Monday.

Along with a snack bar operated by Pizza Palace, the center is also equipped with several pinball machines, pool tables, lounge booths, and an acoustical ceiling. Although the pizzaria is not scheduled to open until mid-November, the game room is presently ready for service.

The center is maintained by many attendants. The man in charge of the overall operation is Section Coordinator Don Bailey.

"My responsibilities," states Bailey, "are to take care of the machines, oversee the workers, and basically make sure that everything goes smoothly."

Chris Scheuer, one of the Game Room Attendants, says: "Everybody thus far has respected the machines, the room, and the center as a whole. Although it hasn't been too busy yet, it will probably pick up when the snack bar opens."

What are the advantages of having a recreation room in Sullivan Hall? "Due to the university center construction," says Bailey, "the hall is isolated from the rest of the campus. The game room will give the Quad a legitimate social spot.

Joseph DiFrancesco, Sullivan Hall President, adds: "Its a tremendous attribute to the hall, and it gives the residents a place to go to unwind from studies. I only hope that it will be used in the proper fashion and not abused as far as vandalism goes."

Are there any foreseeable problems or disadvantages that may arise? Bailey replys: "Because it will become a popular place for students to hang out, I'm afraid that it may become overused or vandalized. I hope the patrons will respect and take care of the room because it is truly unique. I only wish I had the place my freshman year."

Resident's feelings are generally mixed about the center. Sophomore Carl Adamo states: "I think it is great we have a small food outlet nearby. The game room, though, is just another distraction."

Sophomore Engineering major Ed Plaskon states: "It's a good idea since social activities on campus are somewhat limited, and a game room right in the dorm will keep the students occupied."

The recreation room is located in the basement of Sullivan Hall's East Wing. It is open seven days a week from noon to one a.m.

Justice Nicholas Sellers, reviewing the evidence presented, announced his decision:

"I'm dismissing this case on the grounds that no proof has been presented that the persons involved did not have a liquor license."

Sellers explained that the LCB could file for re-arrest in the future if evidence could be produced that the students did not have a liquor license.

Attorney Phelan, however, indicated it is unlikely that the charges would be refiled by the LCB.

"In part, I think the vandalism is most definitely related to drunk and disorderly people," stated Martin. "However, I think that thoughtlessness is the major cause."

Martin hopes that the fining system which was instituted last year will have a positive effect in reducing the amount of vandalism this year.

"With this fining system, we hope to make students responsible for their own wing, use the money we assess to make the necessary repairs, and then use any remaining money for dormitory improvements."

Through last year's fining system, a total of $22,000 was charged to students for vandalism. The remaining repairs were paid for by money originally intended for building improvements.

"From now on, money budgeted for building improvements will not be used to pay for vandalism. The responsibility for vandalism now rests with the students," said Martin.

On assessing the present status of the vandalism situation on campus, Fr. Rice said, "Maybe we've made people more aware of the problem, but let's not kid ourselves that there's been a tremendous improvement, yet."

Boston Is Back!

By STEVE CASTELLANO

No folks, no dime store phonies, Boston is real. When I was asked if I wanted to go to the Boston concert to review it I was hesitant because several of my friends had seen Boston once before and said that they can't perform on the stage. That was in 1976. In 1978, Boston is by far the best rock act I have seen in quite some time.

Anticipation, the whole idea of what can you expect from a band whose philosophy is music through technology. What I witnessed on Monday night was more music than technology. Many say that they do not put on a quality show because they cannot duplicate the sounds of the studio on stage. For a band of their caliber they did an excellent job and were extremely creative in the process.

Larry Rubin, public relations manager of the Spectrum said, "I have seen every act that has played on our stage, and Boston is by far the biggest crowd pleaser." The crowd is what really got me. It was not completely teeny boppers. There were many adults at the show just curious to see what Boston is all about. The show was a sellout, there was not a seat to be had in the Spectrum.

When the house lights went down the crowd lit up matches as well as voices. The crowd was most definitely psyched for Boston. Brad Delp grabbed the microphone and said "Philadelphia, you're number one."

After the crowd calmed down they went into an excellent version of "Rock 'n' Roll" band from the debut LP, at this point the crowd went absolutely crazy. It was hard to hear the music over the crowd. The voices in this song were excellent. Delp possesses a very powerful voice, and it went non stop for almost two hours.

"Hitchin' a Ride," also from the first album, received a warm welcome from the crowd. However, when Delp said "we'd like to do one off our new album, it's called "Don't Look Back" the crowd was in ecstasy. Hands were clapping, people were screaming, it was the most favorable response this far into the concert. "More than a Feeling" did not get as much response as I had anticipated. Possibly the crowd was tired out after all the excitement and were holding it in until the end.

Boston played an hour and a half set straight. However, Tom Scholz showed the crowd that he is a one man band, and electronic wizard. He was doing things with his Gibson that were trademarks of the genius that lies behind Boston. The spotlight was on Scholz who played the guitar solo, as only he can do it. With the help of his synthesizer he created the most interesting effects with the guitar. At times he would play solo for several minutes straight, and held the total attention of the crowd.

Delph dominated the mike again with his nothing short of great voice, he asked the crowd "if everyone was toking," and then said "for all those who are tokin, we're goinna do an old one called Smokin." The crowd at this point was really excited.

The last song of the night was Foreplay/Longtime and it went on for at least 15 minutes, it was really pleasing to listen to. It was the song that I really wanted to hear. The crowd was singing along

THE WIZ!

By CAROL ANN BARRALE

"Come on, ease on down, ease on down the road..." into a toe-tapping, energy exuding, fantastically lavish fantasy land created by Motown Productions and Universal Pictures in their latest musical release, "The Wiz."

The movie's screenplay by Joel Schumacher, is modeled more upon the 1900 novel by Frank L. Baum, "The Wonderful Wizard of Oz," and the 1939 Judy Garland classic, "The Wizard of Oz," than the current play of the same title.

This vain cinemagraphic attempt to recapture the viewer's sentiment for the Old Oz, transforms the basic plot into a Twentieth century urban fantasy, in which the "Merry Old Land of Oz" resembles nothing so much as New York City after present-day creative set designers get a hold of it.

The New York World Trade Center Complex becomes Emerald City, headquarters of the "elusive Wiz and inhabited by fashion-conscious citizens who change color from green to red to gold at the snap of a finger."

The New York Public Library, The N.Y. State Pavillion, Shea Stadium, The Hoyt-Schermerhorn Brooklyn subway station, as well as Coney Island are also incorporated into the elaborate set.

Dorothy, the all black cast title role, portrayed by Diana Ross, is no longer a wide-eyed little girl from quaint Kansas City but a 24-year-old school teacher living in the hipness of Harlem, who, fearing life and lacking self confidence, has "never been south of 145th street."

No sound or visual effect has been spared this production apparent in the highly imaginative set designs and costumes of this fanciful macrocosm of Oz.

Indeed the movie received class A treatment with a cast including Diana Ross, (Dorothy), Michael Jackson, (the Scarecrow), Nipsey Russel, (the Tinman), Ted Ross, (the Cowardly Lion), Lena Horne, (Glinda), and Richard Pryor, (the Wiz), surrounded by dancers, singers and musicians.

The film proves to be a bit ostentatious. There is a lull in dialogue and no great dramatic or meaty roles here. The real drama and effect comes in the form of energetic music and lyrics by Charlie Small.

Diana Ross's superb talents do justice to the somewhat unbelievable role she must portray—unbelievable in the child-like curiosity a 24-year-old school teacher exhibits. The excellent talents of the cast give the characters a worth beyond the lines as they impart emotion, spirit and personality to their performances.

This latest version has added to many of the old delights some comic anecdotes:

The Wicked Witch sisters are renamed as Ever Mean and Evillene: the "chicks who put the ug in ugly." Evillene's home is not a castle but a Sweat Shop where she sits upon her throne—a giant toilet seat.

The Scarecrow, in search of a brain, is stuffed with only the best in classical literature—pages of Shakespeare, Bacon and Cicero, yet can never produce a meaningful anecdote from all his stuffing.

The Tin Man "nobody home in soulville" is found in an amusement park display having been crushed by his more-than-pleasantly-plump fourth wife Teeny.

The Cowardly Lion's name is Fleetwood Coup de Ville in expression of "his mother's high hopes."

Some fundamental differences between the old and new versions exist resulting in the latter version's falling short in the comparison. The Wiz is no longer a storehouse of knowledge and wisdom, but behind this guise is a phony Hornwell Smith a cheap, unsuccessful politician from Atlantic City, N.J.

Thus the four compatriots can not be awarded their wishes by the Wiz, but discover with the aid of Good Witch Glinda and Dorothy herself that "If you believe in yourself, you will have brains, heart and courage to last your whole life through..."

Directed by Sidney Lumet, "The Wiz," despite its worth as a light spectacular version of 20th century entertainment, it is safe to say, may enjoy more economic success than its predecessor, but the delight and sentiments still held for the 1939 classic can never be replaced. Rated G.

The Wiz with Nipsey Russell, the Tinman, Diana Ross, Dorothy, Ted Ross, the Lion, and Michael Jackson, the Scarecrow.

Vasey's Fall Finale

"Marriage of Figaro" Begins November 8.

The Graduate Theatre Department of Villanova University announces the final production of the Fall 1978 season: Beaumarchais' The Marriage of Figaro. Directed by Dr. James J. Christy, the play will run November 8th-11th, 15th-18th. Curtain time is 8:00 p.m.

Something of a scandal in its time, The Marriage of Figaro was banned for four years due to its uncompromising attack on aristocratic abuses. Finally staged by the Comedie Francaise in 1784, its humor has admirably withstood the test of time, maintaining a biting freshness. The story involves the rivalry between the vassal, Figaro, and the Count Almaviva, who insists on his loyal "right" to enjoy the corporeal pleasures of Figaro's chosen bride. The various intrigues, reversals, and innumerable complexities of plot combine with Beaumarchais' free flowing humor to provide a thoroughly entertaining experience.

Encountering selfishness and venality about him, the resilient Figaro is able to maintain an optimism in his outlook and integrity in the conduct of his life. Dr. Christy, employing an environmental design and through the free-wheeling use of anachronism, intends to explore a timeless theme — man's potentiality for moral survival in a corrupt social world. The Marriage of Figaro will abound with references to contemporary experience, in an exciting interplay of musical, visual, and physical details.

The Marriage of Figaro, the source of Mozart's famous opera, contains the wonderful sentiments of that work and poses a raft of social questions that have not yet lost their immediacy and sting.

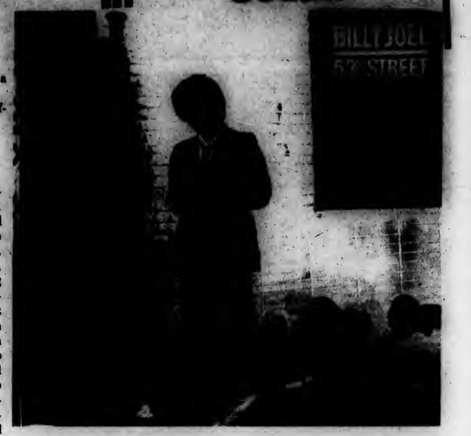
Billy Joel



"They say it takes a lot to keep a love alive;
In every heart there pumps a different beat."

By PAUL VIGGIANO

What can I say? For me, this album didn't come out fast enough. Everyone loved The Stranger and this album should have the same effect — a definite million seller.

The same, smooth Billy is here, that infamous piano still going stronger than ever, but a new addition has been made — the Jazz element. Every picture of Joel on the album shows him holding a trumpet, and a picture listening to the song titled "Zanzibar" will show the listener what he can do with this piece of brass. The well-known horn player, Freddie Hubbard, provides the Jazz horn and Joel provides a Latin beat for an unusual cross-over.

The entire first side is non-stop enjoyment. How can anyone resist it when Joel shouts "No, No, No, you had to be a big shot, didn't you" on the opening cut? I couldn't. "Honesty" is a simple melody made only better by Joel's ballad style and David Spinozza playing acoustic guitar. "My Life" will keep everyone jumping with the always vibrant, always colorful Liberty DeVitto providing his fantastic drum playing.

The second side opens up with "Stiletto" complete with the corner gang providing snapping fingers for background. (I can almost smell the leather jackets.) The Spanish influenced "Rosalinda's Eyes" is not one of my favorites but someone suggested that I be patient since the song grows on you. My favorite cut on the album is titled "Half a Mile Away" and it should have you humming and singing for the rest of the day. The song will definitely be a hit, with the multi-talented Rich Cannata providing the sax at its finest and Doug Stegmeyer providing the bass. Other cuts include "Until the Night" (Is that Billy Joel singing?) and the title cut, "52nd Street" (Maybe a Randy Newman impersonation?)

What can I say, only that it has been three weeks since I purchased 52nd Street which was the day it came out, and it still sits on my turntable.

with Delp and everyone was having a great time. Foreplay/Longtime received, as I had expected the biggest response of the entire night. However, all good things must come to an end, and Boston ended it on this song. The crowd was roaring for more and chanting "Boston, Boston." The noise was actually shaking the Spectrum. When Boston appeared on the stage for an encore it felt as if the roof was going to come off. When they came on for a second encore the police were beginning to get nervous. But once they appeared on the stage the crowd calmed down to a dull roar. They played "Party" and after it was over it was clear to see that Boston is Number 1 in Philadelphia.

Elton John

By JOHN ZAGARELLA

After a two year hiatus, the new Elton John album has finally arrived. This album, entitled A Single Man, marks the end of an era in the rock music world. From his initial recording, Empty Sky, Elton sang lyrics penned by Bernie Taupin. In the years that followed, Elton and Bernie were to become one of the most successful and memorable writing teams in music history. Taupin's words no longer accompany John's music. The lyrics are those of newcomer Gary Osborne. Instead of the crazy bifocals that were Elton's trademark, he now wears contact lenses. As for the band, the only familiar names that appear on this album are Davey Johnstone and Ray Cooper, who are more or less associated with Elton John.

So, here we have Elton minus glasses, minus Bernie Taupin, and a new band, basically composed of unknowns. And surprisingly enough, we have a very good album.

Side One begins rather subtly with "Shine On Through" a ballad in the unique Elton John tradition, followed by "Return to Paradise" that captures a tropical feeling with the help of Ray Cooper on the marimba. Next is the rocker, "I Don't Care," which may be the first single release from the album. This tune sounds like a throw back from the excellent "Don't Shoot Me, I'm Only the Piano Player" LP, and should bullet to the top of the Hot 100. A soulful boogie number follows entitled "Big Dipper" complete with choir accompaniment from his Watford Football Team and the South Audley Street Girls Choir. After the boogie, side one closes funky with "It Ain't Gonna Be Easy." It is also the longest track on the recording.

Side Two kicks off in grand fashion with "Part-Time Love" and is followed by perhaps the weakest song on the album, "Georgia." Somehow, a gospel-flavored melody doesn't quite fit in here. "Shooting Star," another mellow ballad, follows. But as usual, Elton goes out in a blaze of glory. "Madness," the album's strongest cut, unveils the true spirit of Elton John. The voice and the piano playing are flawless here; even Osborne's lyrics are up to par with the musicians' magnificence. The album closed just as it begins; slowly and beautifully with two instrumental pieces, beginning with "Reverie" a 52-second warm up to the emotional "Song For Guy," about their 17-year-old errand boy who meets an untimely death.

In short, A Single Man is a very worthwhile investment. It is a testament to Elton John's talent — he has justifiably sold the most records in this decade, so far.

The new Elton John album is probably the best of the pre-Christmas releases. But then again, what did you expect?

Keith Jarret : Jazzman

Keith Garrett at the Academy of Music.

By NATE COOPER

Keith Jarrett's performance at the Academy of Music last Thursday was not his best. Yet, anyone, even those hearing him for the first time, went away with a good idea of why the Allentown, Pennsylvania native is in a class of one among his contemporaries.

Performing before a near capacity crowd, Jarrett's two forty-minute sets were absolutely amazing.

The first half of Jarrett's performance, an ingenious blend of soft, slow melodies and energetic jazzy tunes, was good enough as to why he is heralded as the best improvisational pianist-composer around. His transitions were so smooth that the audience could not decide when an applause was appropriate.

Jarrett's second setting was marred by a photographer who ignored the artist's plea for no photographs during the show. Losing his composure, he lowered his head to the keyboard and went back into meditation. Soon he was into a trance-like state of inspiration. He began to play again, letting his hands glide over the keys almost at their own will; as if they were on a music-filled

Jarrett's limitless discipline and technical control enabled him to switch without warning from utter tonal simplicity to abstraction and atonality. The right hand repeated some figures with subtle rhythmic changes, while his left explored phrases borrowed from a different century. The music escalated, then dissolved, reemerged, melted away then vanished. A masterpiece created without the possibility of replication, that left the audience in a stupor as if drugged by the sounds that only Jarrett could create.

Jarrett works out on the piano like an athlete. As he plays, he stands, crouches, rises slowly, stamps his feet, throws his head back and violently slaps the piano top. He occasionally lets out a groan of delight or a "da da de da da."

Where most artists entertain with lyrics, Jarrett captivates the audience with mechanics. His ability to create multi-layers of sound, even without using the peddle, is astonishing. He does so with the meanist of left hands and the most precise right hand.

Jarrett's ninety minutes of almost totally improvised music was not without flaws, of course. Yet his ability to incorporate a missed key into the mood of a piece speaks highly of his ingenuity.

Jarrett's work is of such beauty and determination that places it beyond criticism. He has redefined the role of the piano in contemporary [illegible]

Harriers Take IC4A Crown With A 97 Point Margin

By JAY COOK

Led by Sydney Maree and Amos Kip, Korir the Villanova harriers won the 70th annual IC4A Cross Country Championship last Friday at New York City's Van Cortland Park.

In winning for the first time since 1971, the Wildcats tallied 39 points, 97 points better than second place Fairleigh Dickinson. Behind Fairleigh Dickinson were, among others, the University of Massachusetts, Rutgers, a tough Cornell team, Navy and preseason favorite Georgetown. Villanova's five man average time of 24:38 was the fastest in IC4A history and is indicative of the teams capabilities.

Another indication of the teams ability was Sydney Maree's uncontested first place finish. Sydney, who finished tenth in this race last year, cruised to a time of 24:04.0, the sixth fastest ever on the five mile Van Cortland Park Course.

Amos Kip Korir, third in last yeari's Junior College Nationals, was second in 24:13.1, succumbing to Sydney's awesome final kick. Amos was unchallenged for second place and finished 100 yards ahead of Maryland's Dave Cornwell, his nearest competition.

In third place for Villanova, and in eighth place overall, was the team captain, John Burns. "Burnsy," one of the keys to the teams success this year finished in 24:51.2, comfortably ahead of the first place finisher from runner-up Fairleigh Dickinson.

Rob Earl, who planned a top ten finish earlier in the week, did just that, finishing tenth in 24:55.8. Rob, a member of the Canadian Junior National team, moved into the top fifteen ever from Villanova at Van Courtland Park with his performance and appears ready for post season competition.

Kevin Dillon, another member of the Canadian Junior National team, was fifth for Villanova and eighteenth overall in 25:11.8. As an example of Villanova's domination, Kevin, who completed the scoring contingent, was across the line before any other team had two men across.

Close behind Kevin in nineteenth was senior walk-on Jim Flynn, who finished in 25:13.2. Jim, who wasn't sure he was going to run this year, appears to be in top shape and has added substantially to the teams depth.

Frosh walk-on Brad Gair was twenty-third in 25:20.3, rounding out Villanova's varsity team. Brad, a surprise this year, has had some fine performances this year and been the model of consistancy.

The team races again next weekend when they travel to Lehigh for the NCAA Region 2 sectional meet. The first five teams in this race will then travel to Madison, Wisconsin for the NCAA Championships. Villanova, ranked number six nationally by Harrier magazine, is co-favored with number four ranked Penn State to take the sectional title. This is a grudge race for Villanova as they face Penn State, the only team to beat them this year and also the only Eastern team ranked ahead of them nationally.

Maulers Are Back

By PETER J. RYAN

Upon graduation in May it looked as if the Maulers, last year's number two team on the intramural football scene, were destined to be dissolved. So sure of this factor a writer on the Villanovan sports staff did not even mention them as participants in the league. As fate would have it the Maulers and highly touted Reckless Abandon met in a battle of the unbeatens. As was reported, the Maulers settled the matter in a 12-7 victory. Thus far the Maulers have compiled a six game win streak.

Statistically they are equally as impressive. After six games the Maulers have amassed 141 points on offense while giving up a stingy seven on defense.

According to co-captain Joe Foley; "The difference between this years team and last years is the passing threat we now have. Quarterback (and co-captain) Steve Bongiorno is able to mix his play-calling so that we can get more players in the flow of the game." The offense, averaging 23 points a contest, is headlined by Jay Gebauer, hard-running Fran Grandieri, and a pair of sure-handed receivers in Ed Schwartz and Dave Faw.

Tony Dimeglio returns to the defensive line steadying the play on this youthful team. Joe Foley and Kevin Cassidy add experience to the secondary. The new faces on the defense, nicknamed the "Knuckleheads," include Joe Ingemi, Al Donatio, and Pete Parente. The former pair also double on the offensive line. "They've brought a new attitude with them and are extremely enthusiastic on the field," states Kevin Cassidy. The Maulers hope to continue their present momentum and sharpen their overall play in their final regular season game.

What makes this team even more feared is the fact that only two of their members are seniors. The Maulers, position for position, show the ability to be deep. This is evidenced by the fact that second stringer Joe Bennius has accumulated four interceptions in six games.

The Maulers look strong; the Maulers are back!

Fourteenth Stop of Schlitz Light National Marathon

PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, OCTOBER 24, 1978 — The fourteenth race of the Schlitz Light National Marathon Series will take place in Philadelphia on Sunday, November 26, it was announced today by Schlitz Senior Manager, Promotion Projects, Bill Gorman.

The Schlitz Light Philadelphia Marathon, a 26.2 mile race, is being hosted by the Penn Athletic Club and is open to amateur runners of all caliber.

The new Schlitz running program is the first national series of long distance and marathon running events ever initiated. Sponsored by Schlitz Light Beer, the program will span 15 cities through December, with the winners and top finishers from each event qualifying for the Schlitz Light National Marathon Final, to be held on Saturday, December 16 in Tampa, Florida. "This program serves three different and important needs," commented Mr. Gorman. "We will be supporting the sport of long distance running, assisting a number of high-quality distance races which need financial help, and developing a new and strong source of civic pride in our participation cities."

The Schlitz Light Philadelphia Marathon follows 13 other successful series stops. The national kick-off of the program took place April 22 in Atlanta and attracted over 1,000 runners. 1976 U.S. Olympian Garry Bjorklund captured the seven-mile Atlanta race, recording a time of 34:13 over a hilly, suburban course. The second stop of the national series, the Schlitz Light Superdome Ten Kilometer Race, took place in New Orleans on May 28, and attracted the largest turnout ever from the surrounding four-state area of Louisana, Arkansas, Mississippi, and Alabama. Garry Bjorklund bested a field of over 1,000 in New Orleans, and triumphed again over the fourth of July weekend — topping an incredible 8,000 runners in the Schlitz Light Chicago Distance Classic. Garry and room and running mate Mike Slack tied in both the Minneapolis and St. Louis events. The third Series stop — Denver on June 24 — was won by the National AAU cross-country champion Ric Rojas.

Other locations in the 1978 Schlitz Light Series included, Minneapolis, Seattle, St. Luis, Cleveland, Washington D.C., Los Angeles, San Francisco, and Holyoke. Kansas City precedes Philadelphia on the Schlitz Light schedule with the Tampa finals following on December 16.

With twelve races completed to date, over 20,000 runners have participated in the Schlitz Light running series.

Qualification for the Schlitz Light National Final will require a finish in the top 50 field of men or women in any Schlitz Light event.

The Schlitz Light National Marathon Series has been designed to benefit the U.S. Olympic effort of 1980, as a portion of all race entry fees will be donated to the U.S. Olympic team. Through the 1978 Schlitz Light program, over $20,000 will be donated to the U.S. Olympic team.

The Schlitz Light Philadelphia Marathon will begin promptly at noon at the Boathouse in Fairmount Park.

Advance registration will cost $3, of which 50c is earmarked for the U.S. Olympic team. Schlitz Light matches each 50c runner donation so that $1.00 is provided to the Olympics on behalf of each series participant. T-shirts and race certificates will be provided to all participants, with Schlitz Light trophies, Adidas prizes, age division medals, and Runner's World Magazine subscriptions also awarded.

The top male and female college student finishers in the Schlitz Light Philadelphia Marathon will receive special $500 college scholarships as the Schlitz Light National Marathon Series will be awarding $15,000 in college prizes this season.

Women's Cross

By MARY ELLEN BORKOWSKI

This past weekend Coach Jim Thompson took his Wildcats to New Brunswick, N.J. for a meet against some tough competition. In a meet against Rutgers, St. John's and Temple, Villanova came in third with 67 points.

Rutgers led the way in team scoring with 19 points capturing first, second and third as well as sixth through ninth place. St. John's edged Villanova for second and they scored 61 points. Temple trailed with 109 points.

Junior Brigid Leddy led all Villanova finishers as she covered the three mile course in 17:57 to place fifth overall. This is another personal best for Leddy at that distance. Doriane Lambelet finished in 18:50 to place second for Villanova and tenth overall.

Other scorers from Villanova included Sue Shea (19:36) in 14th place, Jennifer Whitfield (20:00) in 16th place and Katie Thompson (20:32) in 22nd place.

The Wildcats defeated Swarthmore in a duel meet by a score of 20-53. Again Leddy led all Villanova runners and was the first official finisher for the three mile course in 19:14. Lambelet finished second in 19:58, closely followed by Whitfield third in 20:02.

Maryanne Moon and Mary Ellen Borkowski were the additional scorers for the Wildcats. Other Villanova finishers included Mary Nerger, Eileen Downey, Pat Mogish, Marge Liebler and Pat Robinson.

Flag Football

The field of undefeated teams has been narrowed down to five. The Mountain Men, Gators, Jaws and the Sunkings fell from the list of undefeateds in close games played during the past two weeks, but these teams will get a second chance in the playoff. The Maulers, Black Sheep, Fedigan Pub and D.P.E. are still undefeated as the seasons heads into its final week.

Fedigan Pub and Black Sheep have been virtually unstoppable this season. The reason being that both teams stress tough, hard-nosed defensive football. Black Sheep stymied a previously unbeaten Mountain Men team 13 to 0 this past week, while Fedigan Pub handcuffed a powerful Attic squad 13 to 7. The defenses of Black Sheep and Fedigan Pub are sure to be tested in the upcoming playoffs.

The fraternity league championship will be decided this Sunday at Austin field at 2:30. D.T.D. will be defending their championship against an undefeated and spirited D.P.E. team. This will be the second year in a row that these two teams will have met in the fraternity league championship game.

The open playoffs are scheduled to begin next Tuesday, November 7, with the final game to be played Sunday, November 19. It will be a 16 team single elimination tournament. The three top teams from each of the five separate leagues and one wildcard team will secure a spot in the playoffs. If the weather remains as good as it has been, we should have one title championship team on November 19.

Soccer Team Hits Home Stretch

By CHRIS BRENNER

The Villanova men's soccer team ran its record to 3-8 over the past two weeks by gaining a 4-1 victory over Spring Garden and dropping a 2-0 decision to Swarthmore College. A third contest was played with Eastern College but some questionable officiating compelled Villanova to protest the game which the Cats wound up losing, 3-2.

The Spring Garden game featured some outstanding offensive and defensive power by the Wildcats, who dominated play from start to finish. Scoring sensation Dave McHugh notched two of the goals to bring his output for the season to seven. "Aggressiveness exposes his tremendous scoring talent," observed Coach Howard Graff during the performance. "He (McHugh) makes his own breaks." Junior Randy Soriano, last year's leading scorer, ended his scoring drought of this year by tallying the third goal for the victors. Jay Collier picked up his fourth goal of the season for Villanova to round out the scoring.

Goalie Bill Schamp had another great day in the nets, staving off 21 Spring Garden shots. Coach Graff also cited walk-on Rodney Lane for turning in an excellent defensive performance.

Unfortunately, the booters were brought to earth in their following game by Swarthmore College, 2-0.

A tough defense held Villanova to 13 shots on goal while the Swarthmore offense kept Schamp busy by getting off 23. Tom Gilbert and John Rudd scored for the winners. This contest was overly marred for the Cats by the loss of Soriano to a knee injury. Damage was extensive and it is not known if Randy will be able to play again. It was the second major casualty this season to Villanova. Tim Armstrong was critically hurt in an earlier game against Drew University.

The booters are scheduled to host Stockton College in their next outing. The match represents the first of the final four games the team has remaining to play.

Langran Posts 14 Non-Losing Seasons

Dr. Langran

By MARY GRACE MURRAY

Dr. Langran, the coach of the Women's Tennis Team has posted an impressive record of 14 consecutive non-losing seasons. Now in his 11th year, he has a record of 84-58 with one match remaining this season.

Although he smiles at his success, Langran says, "I'm very pleased for the girls that the team has done so well." Langran is an unselfish person who has a great concern for the team as players and as people. Mary Jo McWilliams says, "Doc is a great moderator and is easy to work for. He also helps you with anything outside of tennis."

After last weeks action this season's record is 11-9 after beating St. Joe's and losing to Swarthmore (3-2), Temple (3-2), Delaware (7-10) and Trenton State (9-0).

The matches against Delaware and Trenton State were completely one-sided as the lack of scholarship players hurts Villanova when they face such stiff competition from the bigger state schools. Against Swarthmore and Temple the absence of Captain Kathy Stetler due to illness, hurt the team in the close matches.

One of the high points of this year's team has been the success of Gina Ayoub at third singles and also the second doubles team of Diane Cappucio and Melanie Calder. Ayoub has a personal record of 11-3 and Cappuccio and Calder are 15-3.

Dr. Langran has seen the team progress from almost nothing eleven years ago and develop now into a very competitive team with lots of interest and ability among the girls.

Women Booters Take Three Straight

Since last Thursday, October 26th, the Women's Soccer Team has won three straight games, and today at 4:00 p.m. they play their final game of the season hoping to make it four in a row. Before today's game against a tough Rutger's team, Villanova's overall record stands at 4-5. With the homefield advantage and a keen incentive to avenge a close loss against the Scarlet Knights last week, the Villanova women should boost their record to .500.

Head Coach Lee Stevens, as well as assistants Judy Posgay and Billy Hook have been pleased with the team's consistently skilled play. Hard work and patience finally paid off last week, as the team came on strong in the second half against Swarthmore to win 3-1. Junior center forward Donna Lohr scored twice for Villanova; once from a rebound off of a powerful shot on goal by center halfback Karen Clabbers, while junior halfback Lisa Valla scored the remaining goal.

On Saturday, sophomores Liz Supchak and Lori Stasco each powered in a goal, while first year goal keeper junior Susie Stroud intercepted every shot on goal for a strong defensive effort. Expert play from veteran fullbacks Robin Glackin and Nancy O'Shea helped shut out Lehigh 2-0.

The Villanova women outplayed a seasoned 8-2 Penn State team on Sunday with a thrilling 2-1 victory at home. Freshman Karen Clabbers has displayed tremendous scoring, passing and ball control skills the entire season, and from the center halfback position she controlled the tempo of most of Sunday's game. Right halfback Lori Stasco put in a stinging shot for the initial score, and with four minutes remaining, Liz Supchak booted a perfect crossing pass to freshman left wing Liz Sauer who smashed in the game winning goal in an exciting win for Villanova.

Arena Leads Field Hockey Team

By BETH WHITE

Sandy Arena, a senior nursing major and co-captain of their women's field hockey team, is leading the team to one of their best seasons ever: 8-5-1. The team is ranked third in their conference, and recently placed first out of eight teams in the Philadelphia College Field Hockey Association Tournament.

Sandy and co-captain Judy Kolb, who played together at Bishop Kenrick High School, have seen a change in the attitudes toward women's athletics here at Villanova. "The players have always taken athletics seriously, so it is appropriate that Villanova is devoting more effort in fielding women's teams. There has been a definite improvement in incoming talent among the players who are more aggressive and competitive in their playing. Although the practice and playing schedules have been rough, there are many pleasant memories we will always value."

Arena, who leads the team in scoring goals (13), is followed closely by sophomore Lisa Alderfer, who has scored 12 goals so far this season. Alderfer and Debbie Smith, also a sophomore, and Suzi Comly, a freshman, are all trying out for the U.S. team from Philadelphia which will be picked next week. Both Lisa and Debbie made the team last year.

Officials at the games have complimented coach Cathy Miller by saying, "This is probably the best field hockey team that Villanova has ever fielded."

Come cheer the women on to victory at their last two games of the season: Friday against Widener College at 3:00 p.m. on St. Mary's Field and Monday at 4:00 at Drexel.

Cats Upset Youngstown

By ED McASSEY

The Cats proved they are still in the battle for a 7-4 season by downing Youngstown State 22-17 in Austintown, Ohio, last Saturday night.

Villanova's "Cardiac Cats" showed a miraculous recovery from two previous strokes suffered at the hands of Colgate (14-20) and Rutgers (9-24). The game was played at a local high school field, because Youngstown is in the process of building a new stadium.

Villanova will meet the Eagles of Boston College in the stadium at 1:30 tomorrow. The last time the Cats hosted Boston College in 1976, they upset the Eagles by a wide 22-3 margin.

Youngstown was a key victory in the Cats' battle for a winning season. The Penguins, who were tied for the No. 1 national ranking in Division II, had been averaging over 40 points a game. Even more impressive was the fact that Villanova's win snapped a ten game winning streak for the Penguins.

Villanova tallied all 22 points in the first half. Three field goals, including a 42 yard boot (a personal best), by freshman Chuck Bushbeck aided the effort.

Youngstown lit the boards first after only two minutes of play when Dwight "Dr. Doom" Dumas ran 55 yards after Villanova gave them the ball at their 45. Chuck Haynali's point after touchdown (PAT) was good.

Bushbeck's record 42 yard field goal occurred midway in the period. Villanova moved the ball from their 45 into field goal range after Howie Long swiped the ball from Robby Robson.

The frosh kicked in another three points (39 yards) with two and a half minutes ticking away in the quarter. Dana Shelton scored the first Wildcat touchdown with only 31 seconds remaining in the quarter. The junior picked up a fumble on a Pat O'Brien keeper and ran it 28 yards for the score. Chuch Bushbeck made it 13-7 with the PAT.

Shawn Passman scored six minutes into the second period on a two yard run. the Cats moved the ball down field with a series of O'Brien keepers and two passes to Paul Columbia and Denis McCauley. A two point attempt after a touchdown by Passman missed by about a yard.

Chuch Bushbeck capped the scoring action for the Cats with a 27 yard field goal with four seconds remaining in the half.

The Penguins scored early in the third period on a Chuck Haynali field goal (27 yards), which made it 22-10.

Villanova's defense, which displayed a total recovery from its Rutgers breakdown, contained the Penguins until the last four minutes of the fourth period. Rob Robson ran it in for a six yard touchdown after Keith Snoddy moved the ball down field with several key passes to Jim Faranti. Chuck Haynali's PAT was good.

David Martin snuffed out Youngstown's only remaining chance by intercepting a Keith Snoddy pass on their 31 with 2:25 still ticking.

"I've never seen our guys so sky high for a game," commented Coach Dick Bedesem. "We were ready for them."

The win was managed without the services of starter Vince Thompson, Villanova's leading rusher (108-362 3.4) who was out with a sprained ankle.

Villanova will need 100% from its offense when it hosts Boston College tomorrow. "Their defense could be the best we face all year. I am including Clemson," states Bedesem. "They're quick and very physical." The Eagles have suffered a 0-5 performance; however, they have had two consecutive open weekends to prepare for the Cats.

"Their offense has put them in a hole. They are averaging four lost fumbles a game," analyzes Bedesem. "Their offense is giving the defense poor field position to work with." The Eagles are quarterbacked by Jay Palesola, who leads a combination of I and split back offensive alignments. His favorite target is flanker Paul McCarty (19-266 14 avg.) Tony Brown leads the Eagle rushing with 35 carries for 173 yards (4.9 avg.).

Fred Smerlas, 6-3, 265, is an exceptional tackle that leads the defensive line. Jeff Ddama is their key linebacker along with Doug Alston and Mike Mayock, who head up the defensive back field.

Boston College leads the series (28-13-1), which is Villanova's oldest continual rivalry.

After B.C. the Cats will travel to Newark, Delaware, to meet the University of Delaware. They'll have two weeks to prepare for Temple on Nov. 25 in Veterans Stadium.

Hoopsters Meet National Powers

By JERRY KNAFO

The Villanova University basketball schedule has just been released by Athletic Director Dr. Ted Aceto and, as usual, the Wildcats will be pitted against some of the top teams in the country.

The 28-game program includes competition against 10 of 1976 post-season tournament teams; fortunately, seven of these games will be played at home. In addition, Villanova will be going up against the Eastern Athletic Association teams and the traditional Big Five rivals. Overnight visits include the Blade Cross City Classic (Ohio) between Christmas and New Year's, and a tentative trip to Puerto Rico to open up the '76-'79 season.

The only major newcomer to the schedule is DePaul, which boasted an impressive 27-3 record last year, finishing third in the final AP poll.

The Wildcats will appear on network television twice this season. The first game televised will be the Notre Dame-Villanova afternoon game from the Palestra, on January 6, and then on January 27, the Rutgers day game will be broadcast from New Brunswick.

T.V. pays approximately $11,000 to each team playing on regional television. If the network were to decide to put the Notre Dame-Villanova game on national television, the intake per team goes up around the $50,000 mark.

Just for the record, Villanova pulled in about $120,000 for going to the Eastern Regional final against Duke last year, and if the Cats had been one of the Final Four teams, it would have meant a total of $220,000.

Street and Smith picks Villanova to finish fifth in the E.A.A. and ranks Rutgers fifteenth in the country. Should Villanova finish among the top four E.A.A. teams after the regular season, they will be assured of playing host in the first round of the third annual E.A.A. tournament.

Basketball tickets will cost slightly more this year. This is due to increases in security guard wages, and the overall rise in the cost of organizing and running a game.

Baseball Caps Exhibition Season With 11-6 Record

By BRUCE MURRAY

Fall Baseball under Coach Larry Shane has had a successful season compiling a record of 11 wins and 6 losses. Impressive wins were scored over such local foes as St. Joe's., Haverford, Philadelphia Community College, Textile, West Chester, Rider, and rival Temple. "We've played well both offensively and defensively," claimed Coach Shane, "and the pitching has greatly improved."

The Fall Baseball season is basically an exhibition and tryout season by which Coach Shane picks his spring team. Sixty players tried out for the team and everyone got a chance to prove his talents before the final cut was made down to twenty-one players. This year's team will be led by four seniors; shortstop Chris Nurse, and tri-captains Kevin Cooke (3rd base), Dom Melillo (outfield), and Tom Hauk (2nd base). Their talents and experience should provide a very solid spring team.

Standouts of the fall season have been sophomore pitchers Steve Shammer, and Phil Sartori. Three extremely talented freshmen have also had a successful fall; centerfielder Stan Lavagni, pitcher Tom Cromyak, and short stop Mike Cudone.

Injuries created a big problem for last years spring team. And again, the jinx struck this fall; sophomore pitcher Mike Vescio has had a bout with mononucleosis, and shortstop Chris Nurse is recovering from a knee operation. But Coach Shane is very optimistic about this years team; "I'm extremely pleased with them .... they have a good attitude, they've worked hard, and they've accomplished a lot over the past few weeks." He concluded in saying, "If we can stay healthy, we'll be alright in the spring. And with Shane and Vescio back, we should have a look of a year."

WKVU Marathon Breaks Record

By PATRICK FLYNN

WKVU Radio's record-breaking marathon ended Sunday night after 120 consecutive hours of continuous broadcasting. Program Director Tom Kelly remained on the air for the length of the marathon to establish a new American college record.

The marathon earned four thousand dollars for the Muscular Dystrophy Association, which far surpassed the station's goal of three thousand dollars.

"As the marathon got closer, people began getting skeptical. But we planned a lot of events and everybody pitched in and worked really hard. We did it," said Kelly.

Those events included parties in the Rest Lounge on Tuesday and Friday nights during the marathon, and a very successful party at Rosemont College on Thursday. Money was also raised by raffling off several prizes, by holding a coin-toss on Lancaster Avenue, and by collecting change in canisters around campus. Anything from selling posters door-to-door, to wagering on college football games was used to make money and spur interest in the marathon.

One of the most productive challenges involved Villanova running back Dana Shelton's performance in Saturday's football victory over Boston College. Pledges were taken until game time in the form of cents-per-yards gained by rushing Shelton, who is also a member of the WKVU staff. The junior half-back gained 72 yards for the Wildcats and over 500 dollars for Muscular Dystrophy.

"On my first run (a 35 yard touchdown) I was thinking about how much money I had already made for Muscular Dystrophy," said Shelton. "It felt good to help out the radio station and to do something for other people."

Kelly, a senior accounting major, prepared for the broadcast by running three to five miles per day, by working out and by not "touching a drop of alcohol for four weeks, which was unbelievable."

"I got delirious once in a while usually in the mornings. That's when it really hits you psychologically as to what's going on. A couple of time I said to myself, I don't think I can do this. But as the day went on and more people came around, I got more confidence," said Kelly.

Kelly credited the WKVU staff for much of the marathon's success. "Everybody really chipped in a lot," he said. "Billy Carroll (business director of WKVU) is largely responsible. He kept this thing going. All the staff heads deserve a lot of credit. Patty Arcand has done a wonderful job in promotion."

"The best part of the marathon was the unifying factor. It brought practically every organization on campus together with us, as well as the administration. Fr. Martin's office (dean of student activities) was right behind us. And not only students, but the older generation, our families, were here, and that's where we benefited the most," said Carroll.

Villanova Play Filmed

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, California-based film company, recently began production on a screen play written by Villanova University professor Patrick J. Nolan.

Titled "The Jericho Mile," the film is being directed by Michael Mann and stars Peter Strauss (known for his role as "Rudy" in the mini-series "Rich Man, Poor Man"). Television network ABC plans to air the two-hour telemovie in early 1979.

Dr. Nolan, an associate professor of English, has been on Villanova's faculty since 1968. He has been writing stage and screen plays for almost twenty years, and has sold a number of his works, including one which was produced by Channel 12 in Philadelphia.

The story centers around a prison inmate who takes up the sport of running during yard-time to occupy his time and mind. Even though he eventually becomes an outstanding athlete, his olympic ambitions are thwarted because of his past.

The film is being shot on location at Folsom Prison, California's maximum security prison. Dr. Nolan visited the film site and reports that no movie company has ever been permitted to penetrate the prison compound so deeply before. Filming is taking place in cell blocks and workshops, as well as on the exterior grounds.

Special permission had to be obtained for MGM to film there, and the movie's script had to be approved by Folsom's warden before production could begin.

The prison benefited from the temporary intrusion, however, says Dr. Nolan. A quarter-mile track was constructed in the prison yard especially for the film, and it will remain after production is over. In addition, 135 inmates, all paid Equity scale, will appear in the film.

Drinking Age Debated

By BILL GUERIN

On Tuesday night, November 6, the Villanova Political Union sponsored its third public debate of the year. The resolution discussed was "Resolved: This house does not favor lowering the drinking age to 19 in Pennsylvania."

Herbert Zearfoss, a member of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives from Delaware County, opened the debate with a thirty minute address favoring the resolution. He prefaced his remarks by stating that a bill which would lower the drinking age to 19 has been passed by the Pennsylvania Senate and is currently before the House.

Zearfoss stated that lowering the drinking age would challenge many younger people to drink. He envisioned that it would solve no problems and only create more.

Throughout his statement, the state official cited several statistical studies to reinforce his position. He quoted one study which showed that alcohol-related highway deaths of teenagers increased in states where the legal drinking was lowered.

"There is no logic for it, no basis for going to 19," said Zearfoss. "There's not one arguement that anyone has come up with to support lowering the drinking age to 19."

At the conclusion of Zearfoss' remarks, Ken Fotey, chairman of the Conservatives, stated that his sect of the Political Union also favored the resolution. Their contention, however, was that the drinking age should be lowered to 18.

Fotey stated that since 18 year-

Cross Country Team Wins Championship

By MARY ELLEN BORKOWSKI

This past weekend Coach Jim Thompson took his Wildcats to New Brunswick, N.J. for a meet against some tough competition. In a meet against Rutgers, St. John's and Temple, Villanova came in third with 57 points.

Rutgers led the way in team scoring with 19 points capturing first, second and third as well as sixth through ninth place. St. John's edged Villanova for second and they scored 51 points. Temple trailed with 100 points.

Junior Brigid Leddy led all Villanova finishers as she covered the three mile course in 17:57 to place fifth overall. This is another personal best for Leddy at that distance. Doriane Lambelet finished in 18:50 to place second for Villanova and tenth overall.

Other scorers from Villanova included Sue Shea (19:36) in 14th place, Jennifer Whitfield (20:00) in 16th place and Katie Thompson (20:32) in 22nd place.

The Wildcats defeated Swarthmore in a dual meet by a score of 20-53. Again Leddy led all Villanova runners and was the first official finisher for the three mile course in 19:14. Lambelet finished second in 19:58, closely followed by Whitfield third in 20:02.

Maryanne Moon and Mary Ellen Borkowski were the additional scorers for the Wildcats. Other Villanova finishers included Mary Nerger, Eileen Downey, Pat Mogish, Marge Liebler and Pat Robinson.

Flag Football

The field of undefeated teams has been narrowed down to five. The Mountain Men, Gators, Jaws and the Sunkings fell from the list of undefeateds in close games played during the past two weeks, but these teams will get a second chance in the playoff. The Maulers, Black Sheep, Fedigan Pub and D.P.E. are still undefeated as the seasons heads into its final week.

Fedigan Pub and Black Sheep have been virtually unstoppable this season. The reason being that both teams stress tough, hard-nosed defensive football. Black Sheep stymied a previously unbeaten Mountain Men team 13 to 0 this past week, while Fedigan Pub handcuffed a powerful Attic squad 13 to 7. The defenses of Black Sheep and Fedigan Pub are sure to be tested in the upcoming playoffs.

The fraternity league championship will be decided this Sunday at Austin field at 2:30. D.T.D. will be defending their championship against an undefeated and spirited D.P.E. team. This will be the second year in a row that these two teams will have met in the fraternity league championship game.

The open playoffs are scheduled to begin next Tuesday, November 7, with the final game to be played Sunday, November 19. It will be a 16 team single elimination tournament. The three top teams from each of the fraternity leagues and one undefeated team will receive a spot in the playoffs. If the number remains as good as it has been, we should have one wild closing tuesday team on November 16.

Soccer Team Hits Home Stretch

By GEORGE BRENNER

The Villanova men's soccer team ran its record to 9-6 over the past two weeks by gaining a 4-1 victory over Spring Garden and dropping a 2-0 decision to Swarthmore College. A third contest was played with Eastern College but some questionable officiating compelled Villanova to protest the game which the Cats wound up losing, 3-2.

The Spring Garden game featured much outstanding offensive and defensive power by the Wildcats, who dominated play from start to finish. Scoring sensation Dave McHugh notched two of the goals to bring his output for the season to seven. "Aggressiveness exposes his tremendous scoring talent," observed Coach Howard Graff during the performance. "He (McHugh) makes his own breaks." Junior Randy Soriano, last year's leading scorer, ended his scoring drought of this year by tallying the third goal for the victors. Jay Collier picked up his fourth goal of the season for Villanova to round out the scoring.

Goalie Bill Schamp had another great day in the nets, staving off 21 Spring Garden shots. Coach Graff also cited walk-on Rodney Lane for turning in an excellent defensive performance.

Unfortunately, the booters were brought to earth in their following game by Swarthmore College, 2-0.

A tough defense held Villanova to 13 shots on goal while the Swarthmore offense kept Schamp busy by getting off 23. Tom Gilbert and John Rudd scored for the winners. This contest was overly marred for the Cats by the loss of Soriano to a knee injury. Damage was extensive and it is not known if Randy will be able to play again. It was the second major casualty this season to Villanova. Tim Armstrong was critically hurt in an earlier game against Drew University.

The booters are scheduled to host Stockton College in their next outing. The match represents the first of the final four games the team has remaining to play.

Women Booters Take Three Straight

Since last Thursday, October 26th, the Women's Soccer Team has won three straight games, and today at 4:00 p.m. they play their final game of the season hoping to make it four in a row. Before today's game against a tough Rutger's team, Villanova's overall record stands at 4-5. With the homefield advantage and a keen incentive to avenge a close loss against the Scarlet Knights last week, the Villanova women should boost their record to .500.

Head Coach Lee Stevens, as well as assistants Judy Poggay and Billy Hook have been pleased with the team's consistently skilled play. Hard work and patience finally paid off last week, as the team came on strong in the second half against Swarthmore to win 3-1. Junior center forward Donna Lohr scored twice for Villanova; once from a rebound off of a powerful shot on goal by center halfback Karen Clabbers, while junior halfback Lisa Valla scored the remaining goal.

On Saturday, sophomores Liz Supchak and Lori Stasco each powered in a goal, while first year goal keeper junior Susie Stroud intercepted every shot on goal for a strong defensive effort. Expert play from veteran fullbacks Robin Glackin and Nancy O'Shea helped shut out Lehigh 2-0.

The Villanova women outplayed a seasoned 8-2 Penn State team on Sunday with a thrilling 2-1 victory at home. Freshman Karen Clabbers has displayed tremendous scoring, passing and ball control skills the entire season, and from the center halfback position she controlled the tempo of most of Sunday's game. Right halfback Lori Stasco put in a stinging shot for the initial score, and with four minutes remaining, Liz Supchak booted a perfect crossing pass to freshman left wing Liz Sauer who smashed in the game winning goal in an exciting win for Villanova.

Langran Posts 14 Non-Losing Seasons

By MARY GRACE MURRAY

Dr. Langran, the coach of the Women's Tennis Team has posted an impressive record of 14 consecutive non-losing seasons. Now in his 11th year, he has a record of 84-56 with one match remaining this season.

Although he smiles at his success, Langran says, "I'm very pleased for the girls that the team has done so well." Langran is an unselfish person who has a great concern for the team as players and as people. Mary Jo McWilliams says, "Doc is a great moderator and is easy to work for. He also helps you with anything outside of tennis."

After last weeks action this season's record is 11-9 after beating St. Joe's and losing to Swarthmore (3-2), Temple (3-2), Delaware (7-10) and Trenton State (9-0).

The matches against Delaware and Trenton State were completely one-sided as the lack of scholarship players hurts Villanova when they face such stiff competition from the bigger state schools. Against Swarthmore and Temple the absence of Captain Kathy Stetler due to illness, hurt the team in the close matches.

One of the high points of this year's team has been the success of Gina Ayoub at third singles and also the second doubles team of Diane Cappucio and Melanie Calder. Ayoub has a personal record of 11-3 and Cappuccio and Calder are 15-3.

Dr. Langran

Dr. Langran has seen the team progress from almost nothing eleven years ago and develop now into a very competitive team with lots of interest and ability among the girls.

Arena Leads Field Hockey Team

By BETH WHITE

Sandy Arena, a senior nursing major and co-captain of their women's field hockey team, is leading the team to one of their best seasons ever: 8-5-1. The team is ranked third in their conference, and recently placed first out of eight teams in the Philadelphia College Field Hockey Association Tournament.

Sandy and co-captain Judy Kolb, who played together at Bishop Kenrick High School, have seen a change in the attitudes toward women's athletics here at Villanova. "The players have always taken athletics seriously, so it is appropriate that Villanova is devoting more effort in fielding women's teams. There has been a definite improvement in incoming talent among the players who are more aggressive and competitive in their playing. Although the practice and playing schedules have been rough, there are many pleasant memories we will always value."

Arena, who leads the team in scoring goals (13), is followed closely by sophomore Lisa Alderfer, who has scored 12 goals so far this season. Alderfer and Debbie Smith, also a sophomore, and Suzi Comly, a freshman, are all trying out for the U.S. team from Philadelphia which will be picked next week. Both Lisa and Debbie made the team last year.

Officials at the games have complimented coach Cathy Miller by saying, "This is probably the best field hockey team that Villanova has ever fielded."

Come cheer the women on to victory at their last two games of the season: Friday against Widener College at 3:00 p.m. on St. Mary's Field and Monday at 4:00 at Drexel.

Cats Upset Youngstown

By ED McASSEY

The Cats proved they are still in the battle for a 7-4 season by downing Youngstown State 22-17 in Austintown, Ohio, last Saturday night.

Villanova's "Cardiac Cats" showed a miraculous recovery from two previous strokes suffered at the hands of Colgate (14-20) and Rutgers (9-24). The game was played at a local high school field, because Youngstown is in the process of building a new stadium.

Villanova will meet the Eagles of Boston College in the stadium at 1:30 tomorrow. The last time the Cats hosted Boston College in 1976, they upset the Eagles by a wide 22-3 margin.

Youngstown was a key victory in the Cats' battle for a winning season. The Penguins, who were tied for the No. 1 national ranking in Division II, had been averaging over 40 points a game. Even more impressive was the fact that Villanova's win snapped a ten game winning streak for the Penguins.

Villanova tallied all 22 points in the first half. Three field goals, including a 42 yard boot (a personal best), by freshman Chuck Bushbeck aided the effort.

Youngstown lit the boards first after only two minutes of play when Dwight "Dr. Doom" Dumas ran 55 yards after Villanova gave them the ball at their 45. Chuck Haynali's point after touchdown (PAT) was good.

Bushbeck's record 42 yard field goal occurred midway in the period. Villanova moved the ball from their 45 into field goal range after Howie Long swiped the ball from Robby Robson.

The frosh kicked in another three points (39 yards) with two and a half minutes ticking away in the quarter. Dana Shelton scored the first Wildcat touchdown with only 31 seconds remaining in the quarter. The junior picked up a fumble on a Pat O'Brien keeper and ran it 28 yards for the score. Chuch Bushbeck made it 13-7 with the PAT.

Shawn Passman scored six minutes into the second period on a two yard run. the Cats moved the ball down field with a series of O'Brien keepers and two passes to Paul Columbia and Denis McCauley. A two point attempt after a touchdown by Passman missed by about a yard.

Chuch Bushbeck capped the scoring action for the Cats with a 27 yard field goal with four seconds remaining in the half.

The Penguins scored early in the third period on a Chuck Haynali field goal (27 yards), which made it 22-10.

Villanova's defense, which displayed a total recovery from its Rutgers breakdown, contained the Penguins until the last four minutes of the fourth period. Rob Robson ran it in for a six yard touchdown after Keith Snoddy moved the ball down field with several key passes to Jim Faranti. Chuck Haynali's PAT was good.

David Martin snuffed out Youngstown's only remaining chance by intercepting a Keith Snoddy pass on their 31 with 2:25 still ticking.

"I've never seen our guys so sky high for a game," commented Coach Dick Bedesem. "We were ready for them."

The win was managed without the services of starter Vince Thompson, Villanova's leading rusher (108-362 3.4) who was out with a sprained ankle.

Villanova will need 100% from its offense when it hosts Boston College tomorrow. "Their defense could be the best we face all year. I am including Clemson," states Bedesem. "They're quick and very physical." The Eagles have suffered a 0-5 performance; however, they have had two consecutive open weekends to prepare for the Cats.

"Their offense has put them in a hole. They are averaging four lost fumbles a game," analyzes Bedesem. "Their offense is giving the defense poor field position to work with." The Eagles are quarterbacked by Jay Palazola, who leads a combination of I and split back offensive alignments. His favorite target is flanker Paul McCarty (19-266 14 avg.) Tony Brown leads the Eagle rushing with 35 carries for 173 yards (4.9 avg.).

Fred Smerlas, 6-3, 265, is an exceptional tackle that leads the defensive line. Jeff Dzlana is their key lineback along with Doug Alston and Mike Mayock, who head up the defensive back field.

Boston College leads the series (28-13-1), which is Villanova's oldest continual rivalry.

After B.C. the Cats will travel to Newark, Delaware, to meet the University of Delaware. They'll have two weeks to prepare for Temple on Nov. 25 in Veterans Stadium.

Hoopsters Meet National Powers

By JERRY KNAFO

The Villanova University basketball schedule has just been released by Athletic Director Dr. Ted Aceto and, as usual, the Wildcats will be pitted against some of the top teams in the country.

The 26-game program includes competition against 10 of 1978 post-season tournament teams; fortunately, seven of these games will be played at home. In addition, Villanova will be going up against the Eastern Athletic Association teams and the traditional Big Five rivals. Overnight visits include the Blade Grass City Classic (Ohio) between Christmas and New Year's, and a tentative trip to Puerto Rico to open up the '78-79 season.

The only major newcomer to the schedule is DePaul, which boasted an impressive 27-3 record last year, finishing third in the final AP poll.

The Wildcats will appear on network television twice this season. The first game televised will be the Notre Dame-Villanova afternoon game from the Palestra, on January 6, and then on January 27, the Rutgers day game will be broadcast from New Brunswick.

T.V. pays approximately $11,000 to each team playing on regional television. If the network were to decide to put the Notre Dame-Villanova game on national television, the intake per team goes up around the $50,000 mark.

Just for the record, Villanova pulled in about $120,000 for going to the Eastern Regional final against Duke last year, and if the Cats had been one of the Final Four teams, it would have meant a total of $220,000.

Street and Smith picks Villanova to finish fifth in the E.A.A. and ranks Rutgers fifteenth in the country. Should Villanova finish among the top four E.A.A. teams after the regular season, they will be assured of playing host in the first round of the third annual E.A.A. tournament.

Basketball tickets will cost slightly more this year. This is due to increases in security guard wages, and the overall rise in the cost of organizing and running a game.

Baseball Caps Exhibition Season With 11-6 Record

By BRUCE MURRAY

Fall Baseball under Coach Larry Shane has had a successful season compiling a record of 11 wins and 6 losses. Impressive wins were scored over such local foes as St. Joe's., Haverford, Philadelphia Community College, Textile, West Chester, Rider, and rival Temple. "We've played well both offensively and defensively," claimed Coach Shane, "and the pitching has greatly improved."

Dave Gallen scored in Villanova's victory over Youngstown State. He is shown here scoring against Rutgers on October 21.

The Fall Baseball season is basically an exhibition and tryout season by which Coach Shane picks his spring team. Sixty players tried out for the team and everyone got a chance to prove his talents before the final cut was made down to twenty-one players. This year's team will be led by four seniors; shortstop Chris Nurse, and tri-captains Kevin Cooke (3rd base), Dom Melillo (outfield), and Tom Hank (2nd base). Their talents and experience should provide a very solid spring team.

Standouts of the fall season have been sophomore pitchers Steve Skammer, and Phil Sartori. Three extremely talented freshmen have also had a successful fall; centerfielder Stan Luongo, pitcher Tom Cromyak, and short stop Mike Cudemo.

Injuries created a big problem for last years spring team. And again, the jinx struck this fall; sophomore pitcher Mike Venezia has had a bout with mononucleosis, and shortstop Chris Nurse is recovering from a knee operation. But Coach Shane is very optimistic about this years team; "I'm extremely pleased with them ... they have a good attitude, they're studied hard, and they've accomplished a lot over the past few weeks." He concluded in saying, "If we can stay healthy, we'll be alright in the spring. And with Venezia and Venezia back, we should have a heck of a year."

By PATRICK FLYNN

WKVU Radio's record-breaking marathon ended Sunday night after 120 consecutive hours of continuous broadcasting. Program Director Tom Kelly remained on the air for the length of the marathon to establish a new American college record.

The marathon earned four thousand dollars for the Muscular Dystrophy Association, which far surpassed the station's goal of three thousand dollars.

"As the marathon got closer, people began getting skeptical. But we planned a lot of events and everybody pitched in and worked really hard. We did it," said Kelly.

Those events included parties in the East Lounge on Tuesday and Friday nights during the marathon, and a very successful party at Rosemont College on Thursday. Money was also raised by raffling off several prizes, by holding a coin-toss on Lancaster Avenue, and by collecting change in canisters around campus. Anything from selling posters door-to-door, to wagering on college football games was used to make money and spur interest in the marathon.

One of the most productive challenges involved Villanova running back Dana Shelton's performance in Saturday's football victory over Boston College. Pledges were taken until game time in the form of cents-per-yards gained by rushing Shelton, who is also a member of the WKVU staff. The junior half-back gained 72 yards for the Wildcats and over 500 dollars for Muscular Dystrophy.

"On my first run (a 35 yard touchdown) I was thinking about how much money I had already made for Muscular Dystrophy," said Shelton. "It felt good to help out the radio station and to do something for other people."

Kelly, a senior accounting major, prepared for the broadcast by running three to five miles per day, by working out and by not "touching a drop of alcohol for four weeks, which was unbelievable."

"I got delirious once in a while usually in the mornings. That's when it really hits you psychologically as to what's going on. A couple of time I said to myself, I don't think I can do this. But as the day went on and more people came around, I got more confidence," said Kelly.

Kelly credited the WKVU staff for much of the marathon's success. "Everybody really chipped in a lot," he said. "Billy Carroll (business director of WKVU) is largely responsible. He kept this thing going. All the staff heads deserve a lot of credit. Patty Arcand has done a wonderful job in promotion."

"The best part of the marathon was the unifying factor. It brought practically every organization on campus together with us, as well as the administration. Fr. Martin's office (dean of student activities) was right behind us. And not only students, but the older generation, our families, were here, and that's where we benefited the most," said Carroll.

Tom Kelly manages to smile after 120 consecutive hours on the air.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, California-based film company, recently began production on a screen play written by Villanova University professor Patrick J. Nolan.

Titled "The Jericho Mile," the film is being directed by Michael Mann and stars Peter Strauss (known for his role as "Rudy" in the mini-series "Rich Man, Poor Man"). Television network ABC plans to air the two-hour telemovie in early 1979.

Dr. Nolan, an associate professor of English, has been on Villanova's faculty since 1962. He has been writing stage and screen plays for almost twenty years, and has sold a number of his works, including one which was produced by Channel 12 in Philadelphia.

The story centers around a prison inmate who takes up the sport of running during yard-time to occupy his time and mind. Even though he eventually becomes an outstanding athlete, his olympic ambitions are thwarted because of his past.

The film is being shot on location at Folsom Prison, California's maximum security prison. Dr. Nolan visited the film site and reports that no movie company has ever been permitted to penetrate the prison compound so deeply before. Filming is taking place in cell blocks and workshops, as well as on the exterior grounds.

Special permission had to be obtained for MGM to film there, and the movie's script had to be approved by Folsom's warden before production could begin.

The prison benefited from the temporary intrusion, however, says Dr. Nolan. A quarter-mile track was constructed in the prison yard especially for the film, and it will remain after production is over. In addition, 135 inmates, all paid Equity scale, will appear in the film.

Drinking Age Debated

By BILL GUERIN

On Tuesday night, November 6, the Villanova Political Union sponsored its third public debate of the year. The resolution discussed was "Resolved: This house does not favor lowering the drinking age to 19 in Pennsylvania."

Herbert Zearfoss, a member of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives from Delaware County, opened the debate with a thirty minute address favoring the resolution. He prefaced his remarks by stating that a bill which would lower the drinking age to 19 has been passed by the Pennsylvania Senate and is currently before the House.

Zearfoss stated that lowering the drinking age would challenge many younger people to drink. He envisioned that it would solve no problems and only create more.

Throughout his statement, the state official cited several statistical studies to reinforce his position. He quoted one study which showed that alcohol-related highway deaths of teenagers increased in states where the legal drinking was lowered.

"There is no logic for it, no basis for going to 19," said Zearfoss. "There's not one arguement that anyone has come up with to support lowering the drinking age to 19."

At the conclusion of Zearfoss' remarks, Ken Fotey, chairman of the Conservatives, stated that his sect of the Political Union also favored the resolution. Their contention, however, was that the drinking age should be lowered to 18.

Fotey stated that since 18 year-

Former Villanova President Dies

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

Reverend John Klekotka, O.S.A., president of Villanova University from 1959 to 1965, died last Saturday at Mercy Catholic Medical Center, Fitzgerald division. He was 63.

The Augustinian became a professor at Villanova in 1942. Before taking the University presidency, he served as moderator of the Villanovan, chairman of the electrical engineering department, executive co-ordinator of the nursing division, and director of admissions.

After his resignation, Father Klekotka was named religious superior of the Augustinian community at Msgr. Bonner High School. In 1971 he became pastor of St. Thomas Parish in Rosemont, and in 1975 he was named superintendent of the Augustinian community at Our Mother of Consolation Parish in Chestnut Hill. Last year he returned to St. Thomas Parish.

He served on the Villanova Board of Trustees since July of 1969.

A Philadelphia native, Father Klekotka graduated from Roman Catholic High School in 1931. He received a degree in electrical engineering from Villanova in 1935. In 1942 he received a degree in theology from Augustinian College in Washington, D.C.

He joined the Augustinian order in 1936 and was ordained in 1942.

Father Klekotka was twice awarded the Freedoms Foundation Medal. He was a member of the Philadelphia Crime Commission, the World Affairs Council of Philadelphia, the Education Council of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce and the Polish Heritage Society.

An overflow crowd attended Father Klekotka's funeral Mass Tuesday night. The Mass of the Resurrection was concelebrated by 100 priests, with John Cardinal Kroll presiding. Father Robert Wesson, assistant Augustinian provincial was chief concelebrant of the Mass.

Father Klekotka was buried Wednesday morning at the Augustinian cemetery by St. Mary's Hall.

Who's Who Named

By RON TRISOLO

Dr. James J. Cleary, vice president for academic affairs, and Father John Deegan, O.S.A., vice president for student life have received confirmation from the National Headquarters for Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges of the list of successful candidates from Villanova University for 1978-79.

The official names of Villanova's candidates are:

Neal R. Aton, Joan C. Barnish, Judith A. Bedard, Nancy A. Bednarik, Catherine H. Belleville, Carol Ann Boris, Mary Ellen Borkowski, Patricia A. Cawley, Alvin A. Clay, Deborah A. Cook, Kevin P. Cooke, Robert A. Crowley, Elizabeth A. Dalena, Barbara DeMatteis, Glenn D. Desantis, Leonard S. Discenza, Paul J. Egitto, Stephen J. Heil, Christopher K. Howe, James Albert King, Jr., Jerry R. Knafo, Ellen E. Knott, Nancy L. Lamb, Susan C. Lyons.

Also, Scott G. Mackin, Stephen Malfitano, David J. Mazzo, Janet F. McAleese, Robert A. McMahon, Richard E. Miller, James R. Minicozzi, Ellen Napolitano, Charlene O'Connor, Cathy A. Peleski, Maureen J. Phelan, Neil R. Rapuano, Marc S. Raspanti, Paul L. Regan, Louis G. Rosanio, Jane M. Scharle, Kathleen A. Schwartz, Kathleen A. Scott, Kathleen M. Shea, Kevin R. Smith, John C. Straub, Carolyn J. Wall, Rita Wittmer, and Francis L. Zarrili.

The criteria for the selection for Who's Who at Villanova were: senior class status (candidates must be graduating in December or May of the current academic year), good academic standing with a cumulative average of 3.00, good disciplinary standing, proven involvement in extra and/or co-curricular activities, and proven leadership abilities.

The members of this year's nomination committee were Dr. James J. Markham, Dr. Margaret Esmonde, and Mr. John J. DiBernardi from the College of Arts and Sciences, Dr. Richard Ruane, Dr. Nicholas Rongione and Ms. Loretta Cook from Commerce and Finance, Dr. Suvabhi Rao, Dr. Ralph Koliner, and Ms. Charlene O'Connor from the College of Engineering, Mrs. Evelyn Bohanan, Miss Ann Cypress, and Ms. Jean Kaminsky from Nursing.

Mr. James Holstein and Dr. Robert Wilkinson represented the University College on the committee, and Student Life was represented by Mr. Allen Wechsler, Ms. Rebecca Drury, and Fr. Robert Martin, who chaired the committee.

In addition to the official criteria followed by the committee, certain guidelines were developed to facilitate the nomination of candidates. Good academic standing, for example, was occasionally interpreted more liberally than the stated 3.00 minimum quality point average. Some consideration was given to students with q.p.a.'s as low as 2.75 as long as they demonstrated extraordinary co-curricular and extra-curricular leadership and involvement. Consideration was also given to students who demonstrated involvement at Villanova over students who were involved outside the University only.

Union Debates Drinking Age

olds have all other rights, especially the right to operate an automobile, then they should be allowed to drink alcoholic beverages. He also said that at 18, he was personally responsible enough to drink because he had been able to distinguish between right and wrong since his Confirmation.

Heidi Fisher, chairman of the Liberals, stated that her group opposed the resolution. She said that by 19, people are mature enough to drink because they have either attended college or worked for at least a year.

Fisher attacked the statistics quoted by Zearfoss by stating that the increase in alcohol-related highway deaths has been caused by more people driving today than in the past.

Similarly, the chairman of the Moderates, Bill Dole, stated that his faction opposed the resolution. He cited flaws in Zearfoss's statistics by claiming that the representative's studies made no allowance for the quality of alcohol law enforcement.

In rebuttal to the students' statements, Zearfoss said that he could not see any benefit from lowering the drinking age to 19. He said that he would support a legal drinking age of 18 only for the purpose of maintaining consistency with other states' drinking laws.

"Considering the problems and ramifications of alcohol abuse, we cannot calmly allow the drinking age to be lowered," he concluded.

Political Union President Alvin Clay, Jr. then took a vote of all those present. The resolution was defeated as only five voted for it, twelve voted against it, and two abstained.

Alden Captures State Seat

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

John Alden, Radnor Township Commissioner and Villanova alumnus defeated Villanova professor Jeff Hahn in the race for the 167th district State Legislature seat.

Alden swept Radnor, Marple, and Upper Province voting district, receiving 56% of the vote. Hahn telephoned Alden at 9:10 Tuesday night to concede the election, said Jim Pierce, Alden's campaign manager.

"We were very pleased with the voter turnout," said Pierce. "It was definitely a team effort." Alden's immediate plans are to vacation in Florida for a few days, then to come home and "thank everybody," said Pierce.

In a Villanovan interview last week, Alden said he does not favor the 18 year old drinking age, though he would approve of lowering the beer consumption age to 19 on a trial basis.

Alden takes a negative stand on tax-tuition credits, as detrimental to public schooling. He instead favors aid to parochial schools.

As Radnor commissioner, Alden voted against the rezoning of the Morris estates, because Villanova did not fully explain intended use of the land, and a great tax loss would occur after rezoning.

In Philadelphia, voters rejected Mayor Frank Rizzo's attempt to change the city's home rule charter so that he could run for a third consecutive term.

Rizzo, who predicted victory by 50,000 votes, lost by more than 200,000 votes. Except Kensington, the charter change was defeated in every district of Philadelphia including south Philadelphia, Rizzo's home district. The Philadelphia Charter Defense Committee claimed victory shortly before 9 p.m.

Already, speculators are predicting a run for mayor next year by Jon Rizzo, fire commissioner and brother of the mayor.

Underdog Republican Richard Thornburg took an early, but slight lead in Pennsylvania's gubernatorial election. At 10:30 p.m., Democrat Peter Flaherty conceded the election after a neck-and-neck race.

Former federal prosecutor Thornburg led an anti-corruption campaign, in hope of winning support from disgruntled democrats.

Democrat Bill Bradley easily defeated Jeffrey Bell in the New Jersey's race for Senate. Minutes after the polls closed, the three television networks projected Bardley as the winner. Bradley, a former professional basketball player and Rhodes scholar campaigned as a man capable of drawing national attention to New Jersey's needs.

In New York, incumbent Hugh Carey defeated Republican opponent Perry Duryen in the governor's race.

Democrat Harry Hughes will be Maryland's next governor, defeating republican Glenn Beall.

Senate Republican leader Howard Baker from Tennessee secured his re-election, as expected. This campaign is seen by many as a first step in a run for the presidency.

Middle States Committees Form

Villanova University is currently preparing for an evaluation by the Commission on Higher Education of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools to be conducted in April 1980. A Middle States evaluation is a long-range process designed to help an institution analyze its functions, appraise its educational effectiveness, and discover means by which its works can be strengthened.

The evaluation process has two parts. The first is a self-study, carried out over a period of a year and a half, by the institution's full academic community. The second element is a visit by a team of experienced academic colleagues, who study the institution's analysis of its work, in the light of the facts as they see them, and gives the institution the views of competent outsiders on its strengths and weaknesses.

A steering committee has been formed to oversee the University's self-study effort. Members of this committee include: Dr. Charles Cherry, Chairman (Office of Academic Affairs); Dr. Wilber W. Baker (Biology); Dr. Raymond Cummings (History); Prof. Paul Gormley (Mathematics); Dr. Rachel Hare-Mustin (Education); Dr. Charles Helmetag (Modern Languages); Fr. John J. McKenzie (Director, Office of Planning); Fr. John P. O'Malley (Dean, College of Arts and Sciences); Ms. Nancy Rooney (student); and Dr. Miriam Vosburgh (Sociology).

Students, faculty members, and administrators are invited to participate in this self-study process. Six subcommittees have been established to investigate areas of special emphasis in this self-evaluation process. The steering committee will staff these subcommittees from those volunteering, though in the interest of keeping the committee size a manageable one, it may not be possible to accommodate all volunteers.

The six subcommittees and their areas of emphasis are:

Arts Programs, which will examine the Arts administration and governanace, advisement procedure, curriculum, facilities, and outcome.

Faculty Committee, which will review faculty participation in policy and governance, faculty perceptions of the University, and faculty development.

Science Programs, which will investigate Science administration and governance, advisement, curriculum, facilities, and outcomes.

Student Life, which will explore the admissions procedure, financial aid, involvement in academic and non-academic governance, evaluation of teaching, counseling, residences, dining service, non-resident students, student activities, facilities, and outcomes.

University College, which will research advisement, curriculum, administration and governance, admissions, summer school, continuing education programs, and outcomes.

University Relations, which will examine development programs, the alumni office, organization and administration of the office of public information, and outcomes.

Interested persons are asked to complete and return applications for the committees, available in the Office of Academic Affairs, Tolentine 105, by November 15.

The Ambassador Kisses the Royal Hand

Rehearsing major roles in the play "Freedom of Sieze" are Villanova graduate student Gautam Bose, playing Ambassador Labanda Landlocked, and freshman Ann Kenney, playing the Queen of Himalaya. The satirical play, written by Villanova political scientist John Logue, will be presented at the University on the opening night of the November 10-12 Conference on United Nations Reform. Bose, the male lead, is a resident of Calcutta, India.

Honors Hosts ERA Lectures

By JOSEPH B. FINIO

One of the most controversial documents of our time reads simply: "Equality of rights under the law shall not be abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex." This is it ladies and gentlemen (or is that persons?) — The Equal Rights Amendment.

The Villanova University Honors Program sponsored a workshop on the E.R.A. this week. Presented in a series of three lectures, was a cultural and historical view of the E.R.A. and a discussion on its advantages.

During the first lecture Joan Mandel, Professor of Sociology at the Penn State Media campus presented a "Cultural and Historical Look at the E.R.A." She said that the E.R.A. was the outcome of more general processes occuring to men and women in the past century. Since the 1850's, the United States has gone from a predominantly agricultural society to that of a highly technical one and this has been the basis for much of the change that has occurred.

The lives of women have changed but the traditional ideas linger on according to Professor Mandel. The birth rates are down in contrast to the traditional view that mothering is a primary function. More women are working now but the idea still prevails that women should be in the home. The traditional belief that women depend on their husbands is contrasted with the fact that a large number of women are divorced.

There has been a long term historical change and a dragging of the terms that follow. Women's life came about as a result of the lag of these traditional ideas in keeping up with reality. Women's liberation wanted to get society caught up with changes that have already occurred and reinforce those changes, according to Professor Mandel.

It was noted that early tactics of the women's movement were to organize demonstrations and confrontations. Now, the focus has shifted to legislative changes. The main focus of the women's movement has been the E.R.A.

Professor Mandel expressed concern that the E.R.A. would not pass and said that that would be a tragedy. On the other hand, she stated that she was worried it would pass since so much of the women's movement has been focused on this one topic that a large amount of complacency might occur for those who think that the E.R.A. is a cure-all.

"The E.R.A. will not do that much in making equality happen overnight," according to Professor Mandel.

Professor Doody, chairman of the Honors Program said that the purpose for sponsoring such a series of lectures was to "... provide an indepth look at current moral questions."

In seeking to "... provide an in-depth look at current scholarly questions," according to Professor Doody, the Honors Program sponsored a series of Julian Jayne lectures last year.

APO Sponsors Blood Drive

Alpha Phi Omega Fraternity, in conjunction with the American Red Cross, is currently sponsoring the fall blood drive at Villanova. Blood donation will take place on Thursday and Friday, November 16 and 17.

The procedure for donating blood is a simple one, and by giving just a few minutes time and a pint of blood, you insure that neither you nor your immediate family will have to pay for blood should a medical emergency occur. It takes forty-five minutes of your time, most of which is spent relaxing, a refreshment of beverages, and a friendly conversation. Giving blood benefits the Red Cross, the donor, and the donor's family, but beyond that, it benefits the entire Villanova community. If the University's quota is met during the blood drive, the Villanova community will be protected for six months against the expense of paying for blood should the need arise.

The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be on campus Thursday and Friday, November 16 and 17. It will be located in the West Lounge from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. For further information, contact APO Fraternity in 213 Dougherty Hall or call 527-2100, ext. 393. Please give, you could be saving a life.

CDC Preps Job Seekers

By VINCENT RAMBALDI

The Villanova Career Development Center, in an effort to aid students in their search for employment, has just completed a series of "career modules" which ran from September through the beginning of November.

The "career module" was a six hour workshop — three, two hour consecutive sessions developed and organized by Carol Parisi, coordinator of the Career Development Center, Paul Keaney, graduate school advisor, and Alice Corngold, part-time career counselor.

Topic covered in the workshops include: career decision making; skills identification; interviewing techniques; resume and cover letter writing; and job searching strategies.

"On a campus of this size, recruiters felt that students weren't prepared enough for interviews," explained Parlett.

"We feel it is worthwhile to participate in the program because of today's competitive job market; the more prepared one is the better his/her chances are in obtaining employment."

The program is one of the first of its kind in the area and represents a change in the Career Development's way of aiding the student — formerly they held one to one interviews with the student rather than holding a workshop with 35-55 people present. Parlett explained that the latter group method is both more efficient and manageable in terms of conveying necessary information in a structured and comprehensive way.

The "career modules" will be extended if requests are still made of the Center.

Participation in the workshops are mandatory for those who wish to utilize the Career Development Center's recruitment services.

The Career Development Center is located in the basement of Corr Hall.

Student Tax Info

By DENISE DRIALO

Many students who work part time are unaware that their pay could be tax exempt. The Internal Revenue Service wants students to benefit from this tax exemption.

With the new Form W-4, Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate, students expecting to earn less than $2950 in income and less than $750 in interest income are eligible for the tax exemption.

The procedure for exemption is simple. The student fills out a Form W-4 with his employer, writing the word "EXEMPT" on line 3 of the withholding form.

The Form W-4 eliminates the unnecessary step of filing a tax return in the following year. No federal income tax is deducted. The student receives a paycheck without any tax deduction.

The IRS says, "If you claim the exemption, you will not have to file a tax return. Most students only file tax returns to get back the money the employer withholds for income taxes. Now this will not be necessary."

The IRS is anxious to spread this important information to all students. If there are any questions, the student is urged to contact the IRS. The office for the Mid-Atlantic Region is located at 2 Penn Center Plaza, Philadelphia, Pa. Phone calls are taken at (215) 597-3090.

Clothing Drive Underway

By EILEEN CUNIFFE

As the Thanksgiving holiday approaches, it is time once again for the Thanksgiving Food and Clothing Drive. This year's drive is being sponsored by the Villanovans For Life, in cooperation with Campus Ministry, the Association of Non-Resident Students, and the Delta Kappa Nau Sorority.

"Our Food and Clothing Drive is an attempt to involve the entire Villanova community in a very worthwhile effort," says Dill Dwan, co-director of the 1978 drive.

Beginning today and continuing through next Friday, November 17, all Villanova students, faculty members, and personnel are invited to participate in the Thanksgiving Food and Clothing Drive in one or more of the following ways:

Non-resident students, personnel, and faculty members are requested to donate clean, used clothing to the table in Dougherty Hall between the hours of 11:30 and 1:00. Canned goods and other non-perishable food items (especially products that are of good nutritional value and may be used in making Thanksgiving dinner, e.g., vegetables, etc.) will also be collected during these hours. If you don't have access to a well-stocked pantry, donate some spare change — it will be used to purchase Thanksgiving dinners for needy families in the Philadelphia area.

Resident students are also asked to become involved in the drive. Usable clothing may be deposited in the collection boxes located in each dormitory.

Next week is Hunger Awareness Week, and residents are invited to participate in a voluntary fast at the lunchtime meal on Thursday, November 16. Students interested in joining this fast, which is being coordinated by Campus Ministry, may sign up on Tuesday or Wednesday of next week between 11:30 and 1:00 in the residence cafeterias.

"If everyone participates by giving just a little, then this drive can be a true asset that Villanova can be proud of. Everyone deserves to have a nice Thanksgiving Day, so please give to this worthy cause," said Mary Feil, co-director of the drive.

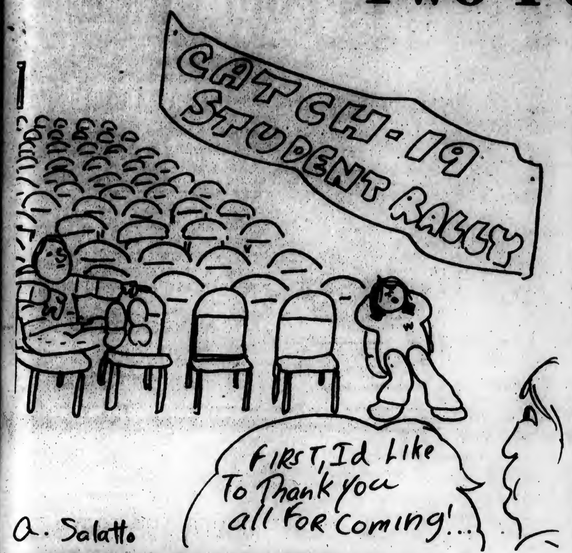
Bell of Pennsylvania

Our Actions Can Have A Consequence

Two People Showed Up



Last Friday afternoon, Villanova's CATCH-19 committee prepared to hold an educational forum designed to inform the student body of efforts to lower the state's 21-year old drinking age. The meeting was widely publicized, with promotions in the Villanovan, on WKVU, on posters plastered across the campus. The Pie Shoppe was set up, the speakers were ready, the committee was enthused.

Two people showed up.

Eight weeks ago, the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board raided the first Cat's Eye of the year, confiscating four kegs and bringing charges against four students. Six weeks ago, the pseudo-protest to block Lancaster Pike, while not accomplishing much, at least seemed to signal student concern and desire for action. One week ago, two people showed up at an event originally conceived as an important step in channelling the discontent of the Villanova student body towards a desirable and attainable goal — a vote by the Pennsylvania State Legislature to lower the drinking age to 19.

Two people.

Of course, one can question the logic of the CATCH-19 committee scheduling such an event at 3:00 on a Friday afternoon during Parent's Weekend. And it remains to be seen whether student support will grow when a more overt action, such as a lobbying trip to Harrisburg, is offered. Yet, the signs don't seem too encouraging.

When CATCH-19 was originally born as an alternative to the SGA-planned protest at the LCB's Philadelphia office, it spread a fervor of hope through the second floor of Dougherty — talk of a day off from school to lobby in Harrisburg, of a $2000 budget, of the possibility of a late November vote on the bill, which would put the 19-year age limit into effect in January.

The fervor has grown considerably more pessimistic since then. We have editorialized on Villanova's alcohol problems for the past two months, and can only sympathize with the CATCH-19 committee and other students and administrators who must try to run successful programs in the absence of alcohol.

The majority of Villanova students have apparently accepted the current situation as given, as they have shrugged off most issues in recent years. And maybe they are right — maybe the fights against parietals and tuition increases and student seats on the Board of Trustees have provided a valuable lesson: the futility of it all.

Still, we prefer to side with the people on CATCH-19, to believe that our actions can have consequence and can motivate change. It can be disheartening at times when the University's greatest and riches resource — the students — stand silent and unseen.

Maybe next time, more than two people will show up.

TOT

Students Support Who?

To the Editor:

Does V.U. Want Alcohol on Campus? NO!

It is nothing new! Everybody on Villanova's campus knows that way back in September the Liquor Control Board of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania raided Villanova's campus, closed a Cat's Eye and charged four students with the illegal sale of alcoholic beverages. It's nothing new that Villanova has been feeling a great deal of pressure from the L.C.B., some call it harassment. It is nothing new that Pennsylvania's laws forbid the use of alcohol by persons under the age of twenty-one. Finally, it is nothing new that there will be no social functions sponsored by the University where alcohol can be served legally — not until that law is changed.

Realizing that the law must be changed, a group of interested students and administration met and formed CATCH-19 (Cats Assembled to Change Harrisburg to the 19 year old drinking age). A series of small talks were sponsored by the group to educate the students on the legal, social and political aspects and implications of the present laws.

Proper political action in the form of a lobby in Harrisburg was organized and a date was set to lobby, sometime in December. CATCH-19 planned to bus as many students as possible to Harrisburg. There, we would show our support for the bill coming up before the legislature that would change the drinking age to 19. A rally was held on Friday, November 3rd, for all those interested in supporting the lobby in Harrisburg. Student support was at an all time HIGH! The ten students who did show up had to fight their way through the empty Day-Hop cafeteria to find chairs. How do you have a student rally if no students show up?

Right now, a proposal which stands to benefit the student body needs support. Not the support of the administration, we already have that. Not the support of the active leaders on campus, we have that, too. Not even the support of legislators in Harrisburg because most of that is present as well. The only support missing is that which one would expect to be the greatest; the support of the ones who will benefit from a change in the law — the students.

Only seven more votes in the House of Representatives are needed to effect such a change and all that those seven Representatives ask is to see student response to the cause. Villanova students have said "No!" Have we chosen to back the L.C.B.? It seems like it. Do we want social functions with alcohol to be legal? Do we want Cat's Eyes back? I guess not! It's up to us. Everyone else is willing.

John Gordon and Barbara Oesterle

WKVU Thanks

To the Editor:

The MDA Marathon of 1978 at WKVU was one of the most thrilling, emotional, and fulfilling experiences of my life. To be a part of such a unified undertaking. To see such an army of people care so much both for the cause, and for one another; and to see the students, the parents, and the administration all so willing to cooperate with one another was truly moving. To see such a diversified group so willing to ignore their differences and work side by side, hand in hand despite what at times seemed like insurmountable obstacles was a real inspiration.

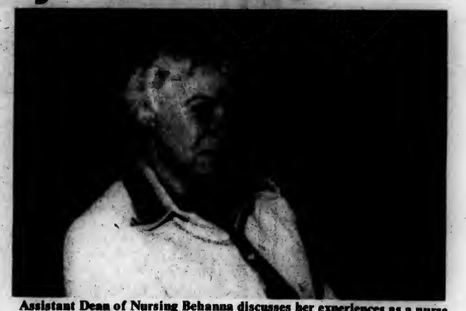
Behanna Discusses Nursing In The Army Reserves

By SUZANNE TAVANI

Scene: Somewhere in Korea inside the drab green makeshift home of Hawkeye Pierce and B.J. Hunicutt where they are sleeping like angels with dreams of sugar-coated nurses dancing in their heads. Suddenly . . . "Attention, all personnel, incoming wounded!" And within seconds Hawkeye, and B.J. and even the sugar-coated nurses are knee-deep in wounded — bleeding, hysterical, dying, deranged, and even dead.

If this scene seems worlds away from sterile Villanova or even from the United States, it really isn't. This bloody scene is recreated at every U.S. army emergency war-games simulation with Army Reservists playing the respective roles; and even game-playing can sometimes lead to casualties. So why even discuss such a gruesome situation and destroy your squeaky-clean day? Well, for one good reason, a member of the Villanova community, a Reservist for 20 years, has been playing those war-games which also includes the bloody injuries, the drab makeshift housing at the crossroads of no-where and no-return, and even the forest-green latrines.



Assistant Dean of Nursing Behanna discusses her experiences as a nurse in the Army Reserve.

Mrs. Evelyn N. Behanna, associate professor of Nursing, assistant dean of Nursing is also Lt. Col. Behanna, U.S. Army Reserves — day or night and whatever the conditions she's always ready and waiting for the call to go.

While a part-time student at the University of Pennsylvania, Behanna decided to join the Reserves to be prepared for duty in a wartime situation, much like the Korean Conflict which preceded her decision to enlist. She points to an attractive feature about the Army Reserves, that enlistees do not see active duty for a two-year period and after this should you reenlist and an emergency arises, your entire unit is activated rather than an individual facing the situation her (his) self.

Behanna, whose unit was assigned the 361st General Hospital has taught medical specialists during her tour of duty and points out, "in the Army to nurse is to teach." In 1972 the 361st General Hospital became the 361st Evacuation (EVAC) Hospital. An "EVAC" hospital differs from a General Hospital in that it usually is the first stop the wounded make and it can be as close as 40 miles behind the front lines. A General Hospital can be 1,000 miles away. Another difference is that an EVAC hospital is inflatable, which means its patient capabilities expand or decrease depending upon the situation. Next time you watch M*A*S*H* remember that it's a good representation of real-life operations in an EVAC hospital close to the front lines.

It's obvious that Behanna has never regretted her decision to join the Reserves. "It gives you

If You Aren't In Howard's Will: Try Financial Aid

By BRIAN BUINEWICZ

As we all know by now, attending the hallowed halls of Villanova doesn't come free. For some of us, our parents provide the necessary funding for our education here at Villanova. Others are left money by wealthy relatives or win the lottery. Some of my friends have had to revert to bank robbery, larceny, auto theft, and other means to pay tuition. Also open for consideration are grants and loans provided by the federal government, the state, the school, or by private institutions. A wide array of grants and loans exist, some of which are covered below. the most important fact is that applications must be filed by March 1, 1979 for consideration for the next year.

Grants are awarded by Villanova and based on need determined by the Financial Aid Form of the College Scholarship Service or the Family Financial Statement of the ACT Assessment program. Almost all of these grants are renewable.

The Supplementary Educational Opportunity Grant (SEOG) is awarded by Villanova to those with exceptional financial need. This grant supplies a maximum of $1000. The Basic Educational Opportunity Grant (BEOG) is federally funded and one can receive from about $200-$1800 per year. Three-fourths of the money provided will go to families earning less than $10,000 a year and the remainder to families earning up to $25,000. Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency provides up to $1500 to full time undergraduate students according to their need.

The problem with loans is that one must repay them with interest rates ranging from 3% to 12%. Most loans must start being repaid right after one's schooling ends. The National Direct Student Loan (NDSL) is granted by the university with federal money. This loan is awarded on the basis of need with 3% interest on the $5000 per year available for the student's tuition. The Guaranteed Student Loan Program (GSLP) is available to almost anyone regardless of need. It is usually sponsored by private institutions, the school, or a state agency. The maximum amount available is up to $2500 per year with a four year limit of $7500 and a 7% interest rate. The Nursing Student Loan provides $2500 per year ($10,000 for four years) to needy students attending accredited nursing schools. Graduate students heading for health professions can apply for the health education assistance loan for a maximum of $10,000 per year and up to 12% interest. College Work Study Programs (CWSP) are federally supported programs to furnish jobs to help pay the cost of education. Eligibility is dependent on the need for employment to defray costs.

Other benefits exist such as GI benefits and social security. Also available are the armed forces programs including ROTC and NROTC. Private loans and grants are available to some students. Any questions raised or left unanswered can be answered at the Financial Aid office, 2nd floor Kennedy Hall. Forms will be available in mid-November and most are due at least by March 1 for consideration for the next school year.

Bread For The World: A Vote Against Hunger

By FR. RAY JACKSON

"Hunger is increasing and the outlook in poor countries is cause for alarm."

This is a recent statement from Bread For The World, a Christian citizen group concerned with global poverty. It is difficult for us at Villanova to get in touch with this issue because the problem seems so remote. Yet the facts speak for themselves: 1) One half of the world's people live in abject poverty and suffer from malnutrition and related diseases. 2) Ten thousand persons die daily because of the lack of proper diet. 3) The United Nations Food Organization projects a four per cent increase in food demand in developing countries in the 1980's, but only a three per cent increase in food production by these same countries.

This last statistic is one that we as American Christian citizens can alter if we want to. Let me tell you how.

Two years ago, thousands of people like yourself wrote letters to their Congressmen urging the passage of a "right to food" resolution. It was passed. Last year thousands of people petitioned for a grain reserve program to store supplies against possible famine. It too was passed. This year Congress will be urged to reform the foreign aid program and bring it more into line with the basic idea that our country's aid program should be geared toward aid for self-reliance.

U.S. food aid has saved millions of lives over the years. However, it has sometimes discouraged aid-receiving countries from increasing their own food production. Aid programs need to be better organized and consistently focused on self-reliant development. The fact of the matter is, that we as a nation do have a foreign aid program, but it needs redirection and it is to that end that we ask again for an offering of letters.

This Sunday at all the campus Masses, a flyer explaining the aid for self-reliance petition will be distributed. During the following week, which is designated as Hunger Awareness Week, I ask that you read the petition, write to your Representative in Congress, and place the letter in the collection basket the following Sunday as a contribution to helping hungry feed themselves.

One voice-vote in the 1975-76 Congressional session dropped four hundred million dollars from the aid assistance program. This was more money than was contributed by all the churches in our country to needy peoples in the entire year.

Yes, you can join the symbolic fast day next Thursday as a sign of compassion for the poor. But, your Christian citizenship carries a responsibility too. I urge you to write to your representative and join this nationwide effort to reform foreign aid for the betterment of our hungry neighbors.

Creativity In Theatre Prerequisite: Imagination

By PAUL F. VIGGIANO

Without a sense of pattern in life, man would feel like a lonely child lost in a vast dark forest. But because of his powers of observation, man is able to perceive patterns in the world around him: the daily cycle of day and night, the seasonal cycle of spring, summer, autumn and winter; the life cycle of birth, maturity, death and rebirth through succeeding generations.

In addition to these outer physical patterns, man is also conscious of patterns in his inner world. He fears the harshness of winter, disease and death. He longs for the warmth of summer, health and life.

Just as patterns recur in our outer and inner worlds, they also recur in our imaginative expressions — that is, in the theatre. Just as we see in nature the cycle of the seasons, so we can see a cycle of patterns in the theatre: romance, tragedy, irony, comedy.

Romance tells us how strong and beautiful heroes and heroines set out in search of the kind of world that we would all ideally like to live in — a green and golden world of eternal summer. Tragedy tells the story of how man, though he is capable of great things, must at last come to terms with the limits of his power to change the world, and how he must inevitably fall toward death. In irony, dreams of brave new worlds vanish in the harsh light of experience. Comedy tells the story of how new societies emerge to take the place of old, dying ones. Where does allof this lead? The answer lies in a course numbered 2051-01 and titled "Creativity in the Theatre."

The course is described as an approach to the theatre of the twentieth century with emphasis on stimulating the imagination of the student. There are many ways that this can be done, some including warm-up exercises, practicing the use of your five senses, perception of the environment and several group projects. There is an investigation of the dynamics of interpretive creativity through the use of such stimuli as games, film, improvisation and music.

"Creativity in the Theatre" is a different kind of course. A course that has only one prerequisite — an imagination. With this tool, there is no end to what can be accomplished. What one will certainly discover is that there is much more to the theatre than just watching it. Each individual contributes imagination and talent to form the final product — an emotional experience. Now a student can become a part of these experiences, and it becomes very worthwhile.

I have to admit, at first I was a little skeptical especially after the initial week. (It's not every class that you have the opportunity to "taste" someone.) But now I realise that the course and the students involved with the course have made me realize the world in which I live. It has made me realize my environment.

Theatre has shown me that man is born into a great inheritance, how he somehow loses it and must wander far in lonely places, and how he at last, by his own creative efforts, is able to regain what he has lost.

Eastern Service Workers Association

By ELLEN KEMEZA

Did you know that there are literally millions of Americans who have no recourse when faced with bad working conditions or unfair labor practices? These "unrecognized workers" — those historically denied access to the traditional trade union structure through the National Labor Relations Act and the Taft-Hartley Act, are banding together through a new type of organization, a mutual benefit association, the Eastern Service Workers Association. (E.S.W.A.)

The E.S.W.A. began in the Fall of 1976 and has built a strong base within the low income communities of Philadelphia. In Philadelphia alone, the E.S.W.A. has amassed a membership of over 600 domestic workers, attendant care workers, other low income service workers, and unemployed workers, and organizing is also going on in New Jersey, New York, and Massachusetts.

All of the work of the E.S.W.A. is done by volunteers who receive no salary or stipend for their work. Full-time organizers are provided only with room, board, and necessary expenses. This policy is used to insure proper dedication and motivation among the organizing staff.

The methodology employed by the E.S.W.A. is something called "systematic organizing" which combines elements of grassroots community organizing, labor organizing, and mass political organizing around issues. Volunteers are trained in the skills necessary to the development and growth of a grassroot organizing drive through participation in community canvassing, community services, fund raising development and printing of literature, and organizational planning and coordination. In addition, there are a number of specialized areas in which a volunteer may decide to concentrate his/her energy.

Representatives of the E.S.W.A. will be on campus next week to speak to some classes about their work, but if you do not have the opportunity to hear them, information on the E.S.W.A. will tween doctor and nurse, a closer one than in a civilian setting."

Just as all experiences help develop a person Behanna adds, "the Reserves helped me withstand unpleasant situations and I gained confidence as a female. The military is a male dominated organization and I had to prove myself as an officer and not as a female. The military is another dimension, you meet people in the services you may not have met by not being there. There's a collegial relationship between male and female doesn't appear as it does in civilian life."

Winning The Battle Of The Bulge

By CAROL GOLDFARB

Would you like to lose up to 20 pounds in 14 days without ever going hungry?

Now you can. This no-hunger diet, which is sweeping the coast, was developed by Dr. Herman Tarnower, director of the Scarsdale Medical Group. It is called th. Scarsdale diet after the affluent residents of Scarsdale, N.Y. who first came to Tarnower's clinic.

Its enormous appeal lies in the fact that food is quite filling and you don't have to count calories or worry about quantities. For those who have trouble choosing from liquid protein and total starvation, this is just what the doctor ordered. What you eat is defined on a day-to-day basis.

This diet maintains normal energy and provides all the nutritional adult requirements. Therefore , vitamins and mineral supplements are not necessary.

Here is the quick loos diet: Eat assigned foods only — no substitues. Do not stay on the diet for more than 14 days. No alcoholic beverages. No eating between meals, except celery and carrots. Lean meat only. Black coffee and plain tea only. Sugar substitutes may be used.

Breafast is the same every day: grapefruit, slice of toasted protein bread, coffee or tea.

Monday

Lunch: Cold cuts of lean meat: tomato, coffee or tea.

Dinner: Fish; combination salad, as many vegetables as you wish, one slice of dry protein toast, grapefruit.

Tuesday

Lunch: Fruit salad: as much as you want; coffee or tea.

Dinner; Plenty of steak; tomatoes, lettuce, celery, olives, brussel sprouts or cucumbers; coffee or tea.

Wednesday

Lunch: Tuna fish or salmon salad with lemon and vinegar dressing; grapefruit; coffee or tea.

Thursday

Lunch: Cold chicken; spinach; coffee or tea.

Dinner: Two eggs; cottage cheese; cabbage; one slice of dry protein toast; coffee or tea.

Friday

Lunch: Assorted cheese slices; spinach; one slice toast; coffee or tea.

Dinner: Fish; combination salad; as many fresh vegetables as you want; coffee or tea.

Saturday

Lunch; Fruit Salad of any knid and as much as you want; coffee or tea.

Dinner: Cold chicken; tomatoes; grapefruit; coffee or tea.

Sunday

Lunch: Chicken; tomatoes; carrots, cabbage, broccoli or cauliflower; grapefruit; coffee or tea.

Dinner: Plenty of steak; tomatoes, celery, cucumbers or brussel sprouts; coffee or tea.

The Lynx — An Outlet For Creative Students

By BRIAN BUINEWICZ

Everybody knows that a lynx is some kind of wild cat, but how many of you know that the Lynx is Villanova's own literary magazine? The Lynx has been in existence at Villanova for at least ten years and comes out once every semester. Anyone can write for the magazine — students, grad students, or even teachers. And one can write poetry, prose, essays, plays, or submit their art work. Probably best of all the Lynx is free.

This year the staff is experimenting with a new format. Last year, the Lynx was an 8 x 11 inch magazine of about 20 pages. New for this year is a smaller magazine in size incorporating more color art work and better graphics. The theme this year, in case anyone out there is interested so far, is mutability. Stories, writings, and art are due by November 15. Writings can be of any length and can be turned in to the Student Activities office or Tolentine room 444.

The staff of the Lynx consists of Dr. Reino, moderator, Jan E. Guais, editor in chief; Anne Leopold, Prose editor; Dennis F. DeMarco, photography editor; and Mark Yount, poetry editor. When articles are submitted for printing, all names are removed and numbers substituted. A board of judges evaluates the writings and determines if they will be printed. If any editing has to be done to the article, the submitter will be contacted and consulted on the necessary editing.

The Lynx has not had good success in the past. The magazine suffered from low standards, and hopes to raise these standards in the upcoming issue. The editors are striving for a higher quality — not everything submitted will be printed. To attain this higher quality, the Lynx needs more support in the form of pictures, drawings, photographs, and articles.

The Lynx has suffered from teacher apathy in the past few years. The English department's support for the magazine has dropped in past years. The magazine has had such a lack of support that finding a moderator for this year proved to be a very difficult task.

The Lynx would appreciate any help that you can offer them. And if all goes well, they hope to have an issue this summer.

Campus social life certainly is not what it used to be. The LCB has taken away a major ingredient in today's college life.

This week's On Campus decided to find out how the students feel about the poor response the university has received due to the lack of alcohol at the festivities held on the campus. Here is what we heard.

"I think alcohol is a real part of the campus, but there should be more school spirit. You have to be able to live without alcohol."

Anne Long
Sophomore

"I think the p show up without alcohol. It ople. I'm not saying that alcob function, but it helps."

Al
Sophomore

"Probably a lot of people are afraid to voice their opinion in favor of alcohol, I think it shows that when the people don't come they are more interested in partying than in being socially involved with the school."

Tina Durante,
Senior

"I think that people should be able to enjoy the activities without alcohol, but I think that the university has cracked down an awful lot on the drinking. They should not have made it so strict this year."

Mary Ellen Tacel,
Freshman

"I think it's shame. There is a certain amount of peer pressure that makes people go where there is beer. A lot of times it is the same people who don't show up who are back in their rooms complaining about nothing to do."

Scott Mackin,
Senior

Mid-semester In Mexico

By LUCY GAGLIARDI

Exciting developments concerning the mid-semester trip to Mexico have elicited tremendous response from the student body.

Dr. Michael Burke of the History Department will guide the tour which is to be the culmination of a three credit course. The purpose of the course is to examine certain major themes from Mexico's historical evolution that continue to be significant today. It is not a survey course so much as an in-depth study of such topics as Spanish colonial society, the chaos and dictatorships of the 19th century, the Revolution; and contemporary social and economic issues. In addition to visiting the city's university, markets, neighborhoods, and remarkable historical sights, there is a strong possibility that the class will be privileged to participate in two special briefings.

Members of the equivalent of our presidential Council of Domestic Advisors are expected to speak to the class on current issues. Thus, students will hear from the men who actually set policy and make decisions. There will also be a briefing at the U.S. Embassy on a variety of American-Mexican issues, and a three day excursion to two cities prominent at the time of Spain's colonial rule of Mexico, Guanajuato and San Miguel Allende.

Departure date is set for March 3rd; the tour will return to Villanova on March 11th in time for the resumption of classes. Total cost of th trip is about $450, including a deposit of $75 to be paid as soon as possible.

Prior to the trip Dr. Burke will conduct a class acquainting the students with the culture, history, and contemporary problems of Mexico. Dr. Burke lived there for an extended period of time and has considerable knowledge of these subjects. Burke is looking forward to the briefings by top officials.

"I am personally very excited at the prospect since it is rare to get beyond the standard public relations officers, whether in a government or an embassy," Says Burke. While the precise arrangements are still tentative, he is assured that he will be able to set up something quite exclusive and most informative.

If demand for the trip becomes too great, students who have taken Spanish or Latin America studies will receive preference. Since enrollment is limited, interested students should contact Dr. Burke (Vasey 104) as soon as possible. In order to receive credit, students should submit an application to Dr. Burke and register for HIS 4114. Classroom session will be arranged for one evening a week prior to departure.

Tutoring Program

By STEVEN SALINARO

Many people sympathize with the education system existing for underprivileged children in Philadelphia. A group of students from Rosemont and Villanova Universities, under the direction of Sister Mary Poppit, have formed a tutoring service called PHILO. Operating out of Rosemont's Campus Ministry Center, PHILO's function is to help elementary school children keep up with their classes and teach them basic reading skills.

Each tutor is assigned to his own student with whom he will work on a bi-weekly basis throughout the year. The tutor is encouraged to develop a strong relationship of trust and cooperation with his student. Each session lasts for one and one half hours, in which time the tutor goes over his student's assigned homework and tries to develop the student's reading skills. Dinner is then served to the students and tutors in Rosemont's cafeteria to allow time for the tutors to relax with their students.

Teaching techniques are usually left up to the individual tutor. Most tutors find that a combination of sincerity and creativeness will enable them to keep his student's attention while deriving the desired results. Rosemont's library has a special elementary education section which provides the tutors with ample teaching and reading material.

Additional tutors are required to make this service successful. If you are interested in being a tutor, please contact Sister Mary Poppit at Rosemont Campus Ministry or Mark Hansler (896-5238).

I met so many new people, made so many new friends and became so much closer to all of the old ones, that that alone made it all worthwhile.

I would like to thank all of my friends that assisted me in my small contribution to the cause, and I would like to state publicly that you're the greatest group I could ever hope to be associated with. Figaro At Vasey

By MAURICE FURLONG

This past Wednesday evening saw the opening night of the Graduate Theatre Department's production The Marriage of Figaro. Written in the 18th Century by artist, politician and playwright, Beaumarchais, this clever, controversial and quite humorous work has been adapted for the Vasey Theatre by director, Dr. James J. Christy.

The story line of this play is at once apparent and confusing. The hero, Figaro is a boisterous, conniving but rather lovable rogue played outrageously well by Ed McEneaney. Figaro is confronted by many people and social obstacles in his quest of marital bliss. His financee, Suzanne, played by a firey Susan Trimble, has her arms full assisting Figaro in his schemes and fending off the amorous advances of their frustrated mutual employer Count Almaviva. This triangle would seem to be quite enough, but the Count played by Russel Mahrt has his problems with his Countess, Flora Fogel, whom he has dropped in search of greener pastures. Love is also in the air for Cherubino, the Count's randy little page played by a zealous Debra Hammer, who complicates everyones amorous entanglements by going after anything or anyone in a skirt. Another less enthusiastic pair of love birds are the doctor and the housekeeper, Tom Malloy and Brenda Sally. Their initial quest for revenge on Figaro turns to grudging mutual affection when they find they have more in common than they originally bargained.

Confused yet? Take heart. Surprisingly enough these chaotic couples trios and quartets provide maximum intrigue and sheer enjoyment as they maneuver themselves and each other through series of encounters, plots and endings.

Figaro has a scheme up every sleeve and several to a pants pocket, all of which he employs in his efforts to keep the Count out of his marriage bed. If his schemes are not enough, Suzanne conspires with the Countess to snare the Count and cure him of his wild ways. The element of luck is essential to the schemers, it reminds them of their own mortality.

The consummationor conclusion which the marriage ultimately is supposed to have meant, provides one more snag in the form of jealousy and misplaced pride. When all are guilty, all must see themselves as they are. The fragile nature of human character and mortality is the topic which the players hoist by it's own petard.

The acting in this production was extremely competent. The players carried off a very complex production with bounce, flair and style that should even improve with time. The high points of the evening were Ed McEneaney's performing in the title role complimented quite ably and believably by Susan Trimble as Suzanne. Debra Hammer stole the limelight everytime she went into a lovesturck swoon as Cherubino The Count and his lady lent vivid insights into married life when the honeymoon was over. The supporting cast was enlivened by the musically talented Christopher Applegate who could have been a beatnik in anytime. The music and singing were enjoyable especially young Julie and Noelie Christy.

The set, scenery and stage present what Dr. Christy terms an environmental design which places the audience in the midst of the action. This effect enables the audience to establish a rapport with the actors which I'm sure they share. Dr. Christy has also attempted to add relevance to this play by introducing anachronisms, contemporary references, some interesting expletives and music which combine with the solidly revolutionary and funny spirit of Beaumarchais to create a montage of sensation. The aura abounds with innuendoes.

As a comedy, this production succeeds, and I for one, hope it will prompt people to think a little beyond the joke because in its way, this play is life the way it happens . . . at least for some people.

The play will run November 8th-11th, 15th-18th, and curtain time is 8:00 p.m. For an enjoyable evening, check it out.

The Music of November

Coming to Philadelphia this month will be the musical talents of the Doobie Brothers and Donna Summer . The Doobies will be at the Spectrum November 11 and Donna Summer will be appearing at the Shubert Theatre November 13, 14 and 15.

The Doobie Brothers are a west coast group who have achieved international recognition. They started performing together in 1969 and have had several hits such as "Listen to the Music" and "China Grove." But it wasn't until 1976, with their new album "Livin on the Fault Line," that they were recognised as a progressive and innovative group. This album was a brilliant mixture of jazz, soul and rock. Their hit single, "Black Water," was a tremendous commercial success and sold over 2 million copies. The Doobies, also, have a soon to be released album and if the past is any indication of the future, then both the album and the concert should be tremendously successful.

Donna Summer , unlike the Doobies, is associated with disco. Yet she was in the Broadway musical "Hair" and has degrees from The Hartford Conservatory and Barnard College in Composition. Miss Summer's music is a mellow variation of disco with underlying tones of jazz and blues. Donna Summer's father was a jazz guitarist and had a definite influence on her style of music. She contributed her musical talents to the movie soundtrack of "Thank God Its Friday" and had two big hits "With Your Love" and "Last Dance."

Miss Summer's new album, "Live and More," is an example of her versatility. It contains old, as well as, new material and her new hit single called "MacArthur Park." Donna Summer is both energetic and exciting and her concert should prove to be a great musical experience.

On Monday, November 20, the Academy of Music will host the provocative songwriter, Tom Waits. This unique talent began recording in 1971 with his debut album, Closing Time. Since then, he has released five other albums including his latest, Blue Valentine, on Asylum records and tapes.

Waits is easily distinguished by his very coarse, experience-worn voice and his poetically stirring lyrics.

Sharing the bill is folk singer Leon Redbone. Tickets are $6.50, $7.50, and $8.50 and are available at Academy box office and all Ticketron outlets. For more information, contact Academy of Music 893-1930.

Catch the Midnight Express

By JOHN ZAGARELLA

The most astonishing aspect of "Midnight Express" is that it is a true story. The film centers on a young American, William Hayes, who is apprehended at a Turkish airport in the course of exporting two kilos of hashish from Turkey to the United States. He is eventually convicted and sentenced to four years and two months in prison for possession of drugs.

The scenes that followed were nothing short of shocking. He was repeatedly beat unmercifully for such minute "offenses" as taking a blanket for his so-called bed.

In addition to the numerous physical assaults, his mental faculties were also inconceivably abused. The abuse was so profound that Hayes was transferred to the ward for the criminally insane after being driven to the point of a frantic rage.

The importance of such a film cannot be overstressed. It is proof that wide scale degredation and destruction of human beings is by no means a thing of the past.

Here we are confronted with an isolated case of one nations somewhat distorted sense of justice and lawfulness. Where else does this go on?

It is disturbing to imagine that prison guards can literally get away with murder. Among other things, this film points out the large amount of homosexual rape that takes place. In many cases, the prison guards commit and get away with greater crimes than those of the inmates themselves.

Perhaps the greatest injustice of all inflicted upon William Hayes is that with fifty-three days remaining to his original sentence, his case was revoked by the prosecuting attorney who wanted Hayes convicted of smuggling instead of possession. Unfortunately, the prosecuting attorney won the appeal. The penalty for smuggling in Turkey is life imprisonment. The best Hayes' lawyer could do was have the sentence reduced to an additional thirty years.

However, William Hayes' story has a happy ending. In 1975, after five years of hell in a Turkish prison, Hayes' nightmare ends triumphantly with his escape to the border of Greece. There he boarded a plane back to America where he was reunited with his family.

At the films termination, a short message is projected on the screen. The essence of which was that upon completion, "Midnight Express" was shown to a group of United States government officials. Immediately after viewing the motion picture, the United States Embassy began negotiations with Turkey for the release of all American prisoners. It should be noted that "Midnight Express" begins in 1970 — a time when diplomatic relations between the United States and Turkey were very unstable.

Isn't it amazing that it took Hollywood to provoke the American government to strive to put an end to a great injustice incurred upon some of our citizens?

William Hayes is one of many Americans exposed to unusually harsh punishment in foreign prisons. For him, it ended victoriously. However, somewhere, there is another American just like William Hayes who cannot escape. And this American is being tortured to death.

One final point of interest. The term "midnight express" was used by the prisoners. It meant escape.

New In Sound

Aerosmith

By STEVEN COMBS

To love Aerosmith is to love guitar riffs that come away with your flesh in their teeth, thundering onslaughts of high speed drum rolls, and sometimes just plain noise that leaps and dances like a chicken on fire.

Their new live double album Bootleg is a disappointment with regard to the audience it was taped before. They just don't sound like the rowdy, hell-raising rock and rollers that traditionally show up for Aerosmith concerts. However, the band hasn't lost any of their fire.

There has been much speculation as to the health of Steve Tyler's vocal chords. Always famous for its deliciously obscene lyrics and high frequency emissions, Tyler proves that he's still got what it takes.

The opening number "Back In The Saddle" starts poorly but the guitar work pulls it through. "Sweet Emotion" is also less than expected because of the transition from studio to stage. The Peter Frampton sound that starts it off doesn't help. Finally, with the start of "Lord of The Thighs," Tyler begins to display the vocal gyrations and raw energy that makes him great. Throughout the album he is at his best when given a chance to start slow and sultry, building to a final blast. The first side ends with a nondescript version of "Toys In The Attic." Overall this side was my least favorite. But things get better quickly.

Side two opens with what sounds like Tyler's adam's apple in a vise. It dissolves into a crisp version of "Last Child." From the movie Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band comes Aerosmith's rendition of "Come Together." This song sounds like it was written for them. Better than the Beatles' version, it's also better than a number of Tyler tunes. "Walk This Way" comes across with what is best described as an electric staccato of voice, drum, and guitar. The pace and quality of this side are continued through this song and into "Sick As A Dog" which finishes it up.

"Dream On" starts off side three. The classic Aerosmith hymn to youth, hope, and living it up has improved greatly since its original release. "Chip Away The Stone" is a new one on me, not unlike a pleasant gust of cool air. "Sight For Sore Eyes" was never a favorite of mine. However, what was a noisy blur on their Draw The Line album comes over loud, clear, and full of the devil in concert. The group reaches back to their second album for "Mama Kim." The original was better. Only the drums of Joey Kramer save this. The side finishes up with an undistinguished version of "S.O.S." but is none the less my favorite.

"I Ain't Got You" sounds like it was recorded at the Main Point, close, hollow and exceptionally clear. Tyler shows off his harmonica work but Brad Whitford's guitar solo fails to impress. "Mother Popcorn" is classic jazz. David Woodward on sax carries the music. Meanwhile, Tyler talk/sings like a New Orleans veteran with a series of squawks that sound like Rod Stewart on a high voltage line.

When "Draw The Line" hits the air you feel like you're coming home. The whole song races toward you at full tilt until the long pulsing pause taken to allow Tyler to warm up for the ultra sonic screech that is his trademark. "Train Kept a Rollin'" is the product of a drug diseased mind. Wiild. Not a piece of art, but wild. However, the firecrackers at the end are an unpleasant reminder of the stupidity of some Philly fan.

As far as I'm concerned, this album will never replace Get Your Wings as my favorite Aerosmith disc. But if you're a sick puppie in search of hard nosed rock and roll then these boys have got it.

St. Joe's Queens and Rebels

By BARBARA ANN HIGGINS

Last Friday night, St. Joseph's University's Cap and Bells opened their production of Ugo Betti's The Queen and the Rebels at the Bluett Theater. Chiefly concerned with problems of human responsibility and guilt, moral freedom and expiation, Betti is inclined to propose a solution in terms of Christian forgiveness and mercy. Abstract moralization, however, sometimes mars the effect of his genuinely dramatic inventiveness, as once cited by A. Fiocco, who wrote a biography about the playwright. The Queen and the Rebels carries these qualities, which are thinly veiled by subtle underlying themes of compassion and renewal.

Besides being a heavy, moralistic play, the script is long and slow-moving, especially in the first act. In fact, even the main characters seem to remain partially dormant until Act II, and here only a few deserve full dramatic praise.

Stephanie Marabella, in her role as Argia, almost single-handedly conveys the true gist of the script. Through her character, Ms. Marabella displayed a very unique quality, when she is called upon to mix regality with an outspoken, vampish personality. Both Mark V. Oddo and Larry Arrigale, (Raim and Amos, respectively), deserve applause for their roles. Both were very well-casted, and possess the stage presence and versatility so essential for college theater. But unfortunately, all three of these talented thespians seem to be drowning in the script.

The setting is in a hillside village in a country seized by civil war. I was just about able to decipher the main story line from the exemplamatic dialogue, however, as the scenes progressed, it was apparently that a totalitarian regime was taking over the country, forcing the queen to flee in fear of persecution. Not only from the rebels, but also from the peasantry who resented her former lavish lifestyle. In the course of five years, the queen, (adequately played by Maryellen Broadhurst) had been in hiding, and had developed an omnipresent fear of discovery and thus, torture and death.

Despite the fact that the director may not have been fully aware of the timebomb of human spirit that Betti was conveying in his script, he and his staff did a commendable job with the set design, special effects and lighting. Hopefully after a few more performances, the opening night wrinkles will be ironed out.

Tickets are $6.50, $7.50, and $8.50, and are available at the Spectrum box office and all Ticketron outlets. For more information contact the Spectrum at FU 9-5000. Watch out for Queen's upcoming release, Jazz.

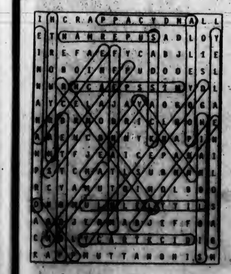
Hot on the heels of Queen, on Saturday, November 25, Aerosmith returns to the Spectrum stage. Tyler and his boys are on a nationwide tour to coincide with the release of their latest Bootleg LP, a live double record set.

Over the years, Aerosmith has accumulated a rather large and faithful following. To accomodate this large number of fans, this is the third appearance of the hard rock quintet in Philadelphia in less than a year — and the tickets are going like crazy again. Ticket prices are $8.00 in advance and $9.00 the day of the show. Aerosmith presents an extravaganza of gut-level rock. Their concert appearance should not be missed. Warming up the crowds will be Golden Earring.



EARN OVER $650 A MONTH RIGHT THROUGH YOUR SENIOR YEAR.

If you're a junior or a senior majoring in math, physics or engineering, the Navy has a program you should know about.

It's called the Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate-Collegiate Program (NUPOC-C for short) and if you qualify, you can earn as much as $650 a month right through your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you'll receive an additional year of advanced technical education. This would cost you thousands in a civilian school, but in the Navy, we pay you. And at the end of the year of training, you'll receive a $3,000 cash bonus.

It isn't easy. There are fewer than 400 openings and only one of every six applicants will be selected. But if you make it, you'll have qualified for an elite engineering training program. With unequaled hands-on responsibility, a $24,000 salary in four years, and gilt-edged qualifications for jobs in private industry should you decide to leave the Navy later. (But we don't think you'll want to.)

Ask your placement officer to set up an interview with a Navy representative when he visits the campus on Nov. 21, or contact your Navy representative at 564-3820.

If you prefer, send your résumé to the Navy Nuclear Officer Program, Code 312-B537, 4015 Wilson Blvd., Arlington, Va. 22203, and a Navy representative will contact you directly.

The NUPOC-Collegiate Program. It can do more than help you finish college: it can lead to an exciting career opportunity.

Cats Fight For Winning Season

By ELMORE SMITH

Oh, to have a winning season; Oh, to have Howie Long play defensive tackle; Oh, to watch Chet Zelesky drive Freddie Smerlas into the top row of the stadium. Last Saturday, Dick Bedesem's Wildcats were given new life and hopes of a winning season, as the Cats rushed passed the Boston College Eagles, to a 28-16 win. Villanova rushed for 408 yds. (third highest ever by a Wildcat team) as they completely befuddled the Boston College defense, scoring on their first three possessions.

On a day when starting QB Pat O'Brien, defensive tackles Steve Duda and Joe Posch were sidelined with injuries, Villanova played with a tenacity and expertise that had not been visible in the Cats first eight games. Junior QB John Sutphin directed the Villanova offense in the first half on drives of 82, 77, and 39 yards. "Offensively, we were able to control the ball a lot longer than we thought, and that gave our defense the rest to come in there swarming when we were on the field," said a jubiliant Coach Bedesem of the win.

BC opened the scoring on a 21 yard scoring strike from quarterback Joe Palazolo to wide receiver Kevin McCarty. Sutphin brought the Cats right back on 10-play 82 yard drive, that brought the Parent's Weekend crowd to its feet with Dans Shelton racing 35 yards for the score. The Cats controlled the ballgame from there on. Sutphin and the rest of the offense managed two more touchdowns before the end of the first half; Shawn Passman's one yard plunge and Mike Golds 10 yard burst put the Cats ahead 21-10 at the half, as the confused Eagles could only muster a 30 yard field goal after their initial score.

The only misfortune the Wildcats suffered during the game was the loss of Sutphin for the remainder of the year with a dislocated shoulder. Sutphin's brilliance in the first half, however, enabled an injured Pat O'Brien to preserve the win in the second half. BC threatened to take over the momentum when frosh quarterback Robert Loscalzo fumbled the snap on a 24 yard field goal attempt. The Eagles marched 52 yards for a touchdown that made the score 21-16, and went for two points, but the attempt failed. O'Brien however lead the offense to one more score to ice it, with 12:00 left in the period. The Eagles posed one more threat, but fell short when Eagle tight end Tom Carr fumbled in the Villanova endzone and Steve Plastek recovered with 5:11 to go. "Today we were going to be aggressive, win or lose, we were going to do it that way."

Next week the Cats travel to Newark, Delaware, to take on Tubby Raymond's Fighting Blue Hens. The Hens feature a potent offense with three year starter Bill Kolmo doing the signal calling. Delaware is primarily a running ballclub (Halfback Ivory Sully and Fullback Bob Ciccone have over 1000 yards rushing between them) and runs the famous Delaware Wing T. Raymond however has utilized the strong arm of Kolmo and the blazing speed of "Disco" Lou Mariani to put in an explosive passing attack to the rush. Raymond and his Hens (6-3) at one time number one in Division II, must win their next two games to land a berth in the Division II playoffs. Bedesem and his Wildcats, however, need at least one win in their next two games to have a winning season. Kickoff is at 1:30 and promises to be one hell of a dogfight.

By MARY ELLEN BORKOWSKI

This past weekend Coach Jim Thompson took his runners to the EAIAW Cross Country Championships in Burlington, Vermont and came home quite pleased. The Wildcats placed 18th out of 39 schools and they placed two runners in the top 100 finishers. This is quite a feat for a team that has only been in existence for five years.

Junior Brigid Leddy led all Villanova finishers and placed 23rd overall. Her time of 17:37 for the 5000 meter course represents a personal best. Freshman Doriane Lambelet finished in 59th place to be the second Wildcat across the line. She also recorded a personal best time of 18:32.

Other Villanova scorers included Jennifer Whitfield (113th), Katie Thompson (120th) and Mary Ellen Borkowski (184th).

The overall winner of the meet was Penn State's Kathy Mills. She covered the distance in 16:19 to capture first place. Penn State won the team title, followed by Princeton and the University of Maryland in third.

The following day the team traveled to Van Cortland Park for the Road Runners of America Cross Country Championship. Although there were no team awards, the Wildcats showed impressive team depth as they captured 14 through 19th places, as well as 21st and 26th places.

Lambelet led the Villanova pack to capture 14th place. She was closely followed by Leddy, Sue Shea, Katie Thompson, Whitfield and Borkowski. Maureen Sullivan took 51st place and Marge Lichter captured 55th place.

The ladies made a long and grueling season this weekend as they compete in the EAIAW Cross Country Championship at the Belmont Plateau in Philadelphia. This next weekend as be an exciting one as Villanova should be challenging West Chester State for the team title.

Hoopsters Face Tough Test With St. Mary's

The Villanova's men's basketball team is in for a stern test one week before the regular season when it faces Canada's national champions, St. Mary's University of Halifax, Nova Scotia. The game is set for Friday night, November 17, at 7, in the Field House.

St. Mary's has been the Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union's best team the past six years, winning two national titles and finishing runner-up on two other occasions. The Huskies, who were 29-11 last season, are led by Canadian national team players 6-8 Tom Kappos (11.7 scoring average) and 6-7, 220-pound Ross Quackenbush (10.6). Though it lost 6-11 John Brown, an aggressive rebounder who averaged 19.3 ppg., St. Mary's picks up 6-2 Mickey Fox, who had scored a school-record 2,596 points in four seasons before sitting out the last two years. Percey Davis, a 6-4 transfer from Rhode Island, may be another key addition.

Last season, St. Mary's began their season with five exhibition games in the States, winning the Paul Bunyan Classic against Husson College and Lydon State in Maine before dropping decisions to Boston College (75-74), Georgetown (88-61) and Fordham (87-78).

This season's southern itinerary will include a trip to Duke University the evening before the Villanova game, and a stop at Fairfield University two days after the Field House contest.

Fans will see a changed Wildcat team with an emphasis on speed. Co-captain Rory Sparrow and Steve Lincoln may make up one of the quickest backcourts in the East, while co-captain Alex Bradley will be moved to power forward. Newcomers this season will be forwards 6-8 Bruce Johnson and 6-7 Aaron Howard and guards 6-3 Tom Bethea and 6-2 walk-on Jim Knoebel.

Tickets are priced at $1.50 general admission and can be purchased at the Villanova Field House Ticket Office at 215-527-2100, x202.

Rory Sparrow (3) and Alex Bradley (42) have been selected co-captains.

Chet Zalesky Looks For The Finer Things In Life

By ELMORE SMITH

Chet Zalesky is a typical, a typical in the sense that he is the direct opposite of the image that comes to mind when thinking about the typical collegiate athlete. Chet is a rather reserved and determined person who looks back at his four years at V.U. as student and as an athlete with great affection. "There were a number of contributing factors that made me decide to come here," says the senior marketing major from Newark, New Jersey, "I wanted to stay fairly close to home but I wanted to get out of the city. I almost went to Rutgers, but New Brunswick is just another version of Newark and I wanted to go somewhere where you can see the season's change.

Chet Zalesky doesn't plan to pursue pro ball after graduation.

A four year starter for Essex Catholic in New Jersey, Chet also threw the discus and shot before arriving on the main line. Although he has no plans for a professional career as far as football is concerned, after graduation, Zalesky has always stood out because of his determination which earned him a spot on the traveling squad his freshman year. "I was in the right place at the right time. When I came they were in the process of rebuilding the line and I just happened to fit in."

The social life at Villanova is perhaps the only aspect of his four year tenure that he feels leaves a little bit to be desired. "Don't get me wrong, I love Villanova, this place has been nothing less than great to me. I just feel that its a little sad that the administration will not allow two mature adults to share the college experience together."

After graduation Chet's plans call for a job in sales, hopefully industrial or pharmaceuticial. "I doubt I'll try pro ball," says Zalesky, "as it is now injuries are hurting my play. I'd like to get out and enjoy some of the finer things in life. I feel I've sacrificed enough, now I'm ready to enjoy."

Hobbies are not what you would call Zalesky's forte. "I don't really have a lot of time for hobbies, except my plants, but between football practice, games, classes and studying it's really hard to get interested in anything else.

One thing that Chet is quick to point out is the commaraderie that exists between his teammates. "There is a closeness that the student body just has no conception of. Coach Bedesem is like a friend to all of us. You can talk to him anytime, about anything; and that's why we're all so close. Because we've lost a few games, the student body is down on us but it doesn't stop us from being as close to one another as we always have. Sure, we'll loose a few games, but it's all one process of growing together and we have Coach Bedesem to thank for that."

For a city boy out of the bullring of Newark, New Jersey, Chet Zalesky is concientious, and a determined young man, about to embark on another period of his life after graduation; a period that hopefully will allow him to enjoy life in the fashion to which he has not always been accustomed. There will be no 6'4, 260 lb. tackles waiting to take his head off on the next play, no three hour a day workouts; just hopefully "some of the finer things in life." Perhaps Chet Zalesky is not so typical, afterall.

There is still time to send your writings to the Lynx. Drop them off at Tolentine 444 or the Student Activities Office before November 15.

Net Gals End Successful Season

By BETH WHITE

The women's volleyball team crowned their winning season with a victory Tuesday over Cedar Crest, the varsity by 15-0, 15-1, 15-4; and the junior varsity, 15-2 and 15-13.

With only two weeks of practice time before the scheduled games began, it was hard for the team to develop unity and an effective strategy, but the team's performance improved during their playing season to a final record of 14 wins and 7 losses for the varsity and 9 and 2 for the JV.

Captain Kathy Morris, the only senior on the team, led the varsity squad in one of their most successful seasons ever. She "is happy with the team's improved record," and "will miss playing for Villanova." Since Tuesday was Kathy's last game, she would like to "thank the team for a good year." Junior Karen Hanna said that the entire team is "sorry to see Kathy go — she's one of the best all-around players on the team."

The team is optimistic for an even better season next year, since they will have six returning varsity players: juniors Erica Vassulluzo and Karen Hanna, and freshmen Consuelo Torres, Sarah Holyoke, Joanne Canuso, and Lisa Ortlip. The junior varsity squad also looks strong with many returning underclassmen.

Several obstacles have impeded the team's progress this year: it was hard to find managers and scorers for the team (applications for next year are open and should be taken to the Women's athletic Office), there is no spectator seating in Butler Annex, and the floor in the annex is hard, causing several injuries. The team hopes to be able to play some home matches in the Fieldhouse next year, and also participate in more tournaments. Arrangements for the team to compete in the La Salle tournament, held last weekend, were not made by the Women's Athletics office but the team felt that they should have played in the tournament since they had beaten lesser teams in their regular season schedule.

Booters Take Two Straight Victories

By CHRIS BRENNER

The Villanova men's soccer team secured two more victories this past week by virtue of a 3-0 dance over Stockton State College and a 2-1 win over a very stubborn Rutgers of Camden (New Jersey). The booters' record now stands at 5-8 with two games remaining in the season.

Total domination best describes the manner in which the Cats handled Stockton State. Villanova enjoyed a "modest" 32-9 advantage in shots on goal in the contest.

Jay Collier opened the scoring for the winners with his fifth goal of the season. Brian Pursel and Jeff Antoon were also able to find the nets for the Wildcats. The shutout victory marked the first of its kind this season for goalie Bill Schamp as he was credited with rejecting seven enemy shots. Rodney Lane turned in another stellar defensive performance to aid Schamp in the win.

All breathing room was taken during the win over Rutgers however, the feat requiring two overtimes to seal. A pair of sophomores, Steve Frey and Dave McHugh, inflicted the critical damage for Villanova. With his goal, McHugh upped his team-leading scoring total to eight. Coach Howard Graff lauded junior Brian Purcel for contributing an outstanding offensive effort. "He (Purcel) has to be our top player for next year," extended Graff.

The final two games find the Cats at LaSalle on November 8, and at West Virginia on November 11.

Cats Freeze Hawks

By PATRICK TORPEY

The Villanova Icecats started the new hockey season on the right foot by defeating St. Joseph's by the score of 11-2. Winning the first game of the season is important in any sport, but it was especially important to the Villanovans who are in search of another trip to the MAC Championships.

Although the game was obviously a team effort, as evidenced by the incredible score, there were a couple of outstanding players who made their presence felt. Sophomore Co-Captain Chip Kenny put in four of the teams eleven goals while Mike "Chief" Alegado had a great night in the goal allowing only one goal in his 2-1/2 periods of play.

Coach Skip Probst has to be impressed with the performance of his squad. They appeared to be in excellent condition, thanks to many long weeks of preseason workouts. They literally skated circles around St. Joe's and physically manhandled the opposition. The checking was bonecrunching, much to the pleasure of the boisterous crowd who had assembled down at Radnor Rink.

The scoring started off early in the game when with only 1:03 in the first period Ray Mateer scored unassisted. Steve Clark put in what turned out to be the game winner just three minutes after the first goal was scored.

The rest of the game was purely academic but did give a lot of the guys a chance to get their names in the score book. The first period was rounded out by scores by Chip Kenney and Gerry Murray and stellar defensive play of both Jim Femia and Mike Fitzgerald.

The second period saw St. Joe's go to the second of three goalies who would attempt to stop the Villanova scoring barrage. The move was to no avail. After a beautiful one-on-one save by Alegado, that brought a chant of "Chief, Chief, Chief" from the crowd, Mark Taylor scored the first goal of the second period. Two more followed, one to Kenny's credit, the other to Steve Schorr. The remaining goals were all scored in the third period. Kenny added two more while Jack O'Hanlon and Chuck Cuesta added insult to injury.

The team will be in Newark, Delaware on Friday November 17, to face University of Delaware and will be at home (Radnor Rink) on November 30 to face off against Drexel.

The new coaching staff of women's basketball, assistants Dan Cassidy, Debbie McKwee and head coach Harry Perretta.

Women Hoopsters Have New Look

By MARY GRACE MURRAY

A new season is underway for women's basketball and there are major changes in the coaching staff. Harry Perretta will replace Mrs. Joan King as head coach and he has appointed Dan Cassidy and Debbie McKee as his assistants.

Coach Perretta, a 1978 graduate of Lycoming College has three years of experience at coaching. He spent his last three years coaching at Lycoming after being injured his freshmen year. He was assistant head coach and also was coach of the junior varsity squad. Dan Cassidy played high school ball with Perretta at Monsignor Bonner High School and is currently attending St. Joseph's University. Debbie McKee, a 1973 graduate of West Chester State College is also the women's softball coach.

A disciplinary coach, Perretta would like to see a patterned offense and a pressing defense, using either zone or full court press. He would like to control the tempo of the game and have frequent use of the fast break.

With experienced players, such as All-American candidates, Kathy Straccia, Karen Hiznay and Joan Lobron returning, the team can hope to improve on last year's 15-7 record.

Straccia is less than 200 points from a 1000 point career and Hiznay set the team record for points last season. Lobron, 302 rebounds last season, should be helped in the center with the addition of 6-4 freshman, Lisa Ortlip. Straccia and junior guard, Lisa Souder, have been named the co-captains of this year's squad.

Although the team is young (11 underclassmen) and prone to mistakes, Perretta would like to see them win 20 of 27 games. His major objective however is "to get my team to play to their best capability."

The 78 season opens November 28 against Textile at the Fieldhouse before the men's opener against Merrimack. During December the team will defend its title in the Scranton Tournament. The first two weeks of February could be the toughest stretch of the schedule when they play seven games away facing such powerhouses as St. Joseph's, Virginia, Immaculata and Big Five foe, LaSalle. The season will wrap up on March 1 at home against Penn.

Flag Football Playoffs Begin

By TOM McCORMACK

Who are they? They're D.P.E., the 1978 fraternity league champions. They accomplished this by knocking-off last year's champion, D.T.D., this past Sunday 19-0.

D.P.E. controlled the ball for most of the game preventing D.T.D. from establishing an offensive attack. This fact was evident in the first half as the D.P.E. defense did not allow D.T.D. a single first down. Lineman Pete Orashevsky and linebacker John Cambell were standouts in the defensive effort. The first score in the game came with thirty seconds remaining in the first half when quarterback Joe Hoban hooked up with his brother Jim on a fifteen yard touchdown pass.

The D.P.E. defense remained steadfast in the second half and the offense controlled the ball while adding two more touchdowns to the score. Tight end Steve Hague's five receptions enabled D.P.E. to control the ball and kick returns by Kevin Collins put the offense in scoring position. In the second half, quarterback Joe Hoban once again found his brother Jim on a screen pass and scored the last touchdown himself on a quarterback sneak. The final score was 19-0. After the game, Mike Rovinski, captain of D.P.E., said "I feel this team can go all the way."

The quarterfinals for the overall championship began on Tuesday of this week with sixteen teams competing in the tournament. D.P.E., D.T.D., and S.P.E. made it to the quarterfinals from the fraternity league. The semifinals will begin next week and the final game is scheduled for Sunday, November 19. Tournament information is being posted outside the intramural office at Alumni Hall.

Jim Hoband contributed greatly to DPE's undefeated, unscored upon championship season.

La Crosse Opens With Win

By BRUCE MURRAY

The 1978-79 Lacrosse Club began its season successfully with a (6-5) victory over the Pennsylvania Lacrosse Club. The game was really a scrimmage in which Coach Lee Stevens experimented with his new and experienced players, but nevertheless, it was a victory. Goals were scored by (2), Billy Hook, Jim Besse, Jeff Bergman, Al Horcher, and Bobby Adams.

The outlook for this year's team is very optimistic. Forty-five players are trying out for the team which will carry twenty-five players. Much of last year's talent is returning and very few are seniors. Leading this year's young team will be senior co-captains Jim Besse (attack) and Eddie Krempa (mid-field). Both are talented and experienced, and both have started for Villanova since their freshmen year.

The goal scoring and "fire power" of this year's attack will be provided by juniors Billy Hook and Bobby Adams along with sophomore Jim Carey. The mid-field will be led by junior Jeff Bergman, and by sophomores Paul Grady, Al Horcher, and Mike Vanadia. Much of the success of this year's season will rely on the play of these veterans.

For the first time in many a year the entire starting defensive unit is returning. Frank Fresco, Frank Giorgio, and Jim Sweeney should make it tough for the opposition to score. The goalie position is open; Bobby Hughes, Bud Miranda, Craig Skinner and Lou Fritz are vying for the spot.

Over the Spring break the Lacrosse team will travel to Ashland, Virginia to play Randolph Macon. Upon their return the official season will begin. The crucial games of this year's season will be against Lehigh, Drexel, and Morgan State.

"The success of our season will depend on the strength of our midfields," said Coach Stevens. "We need to play a 'whole' ball game this year, and our middies must come up with those ground balls." He continued, "If our midfields can come through, we'll be a much improved team, and our season should be successful."

A short course in Bonded Bourbon.

First lesson: Bonded Bourbon is so unique that it took an act of Congress (in 1897) to establish the standards for Old Grand-Dad and other Bonded whiskeys.

100 is perfect. Bonded Bourbon must be 100 proof. No more. No less.

Final exam. You need only one sip to recognize the clearly superior quality and taste of Old Grand-Dad. Cheers!

Old Grand-Dad Bonded is authentic Kentucky sour-mash Bourbon, made with pure limestone water, the finest grains, and aged in new charred-oak barrels.

Only Bonded whiskeys have a green tax stamp. It's your guarantee that the whiskey is at least four years old. Old Grand-Dad Bonded is always aged longer.

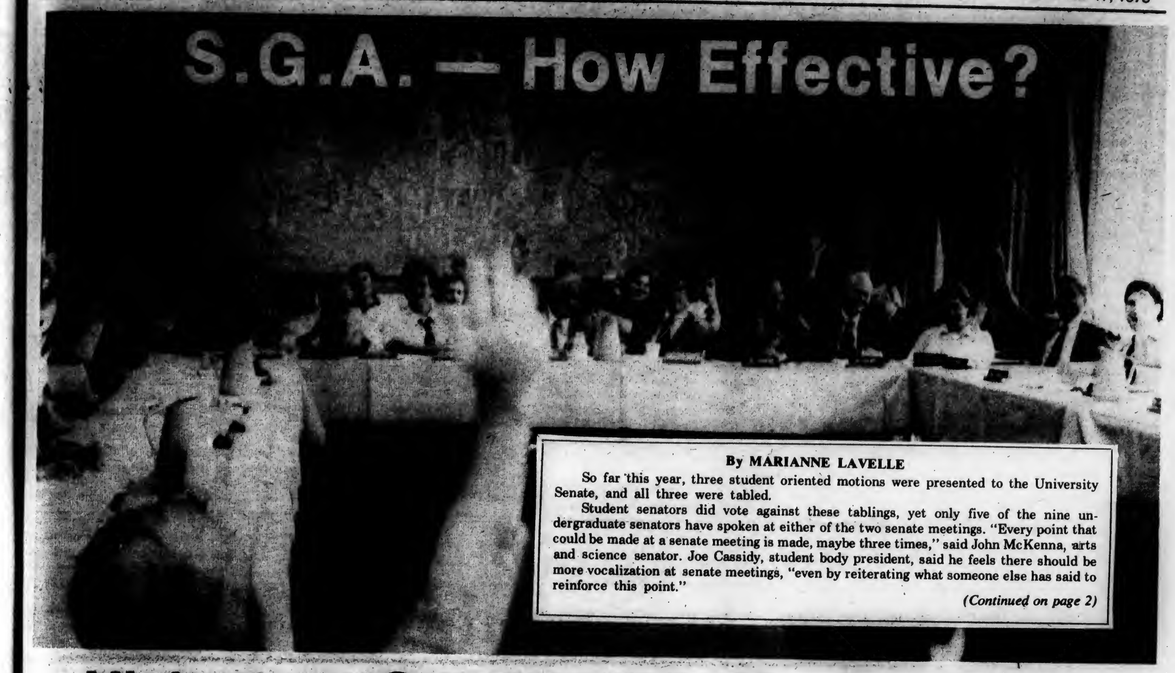
Vol. 54, No. 9 — VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY VILLANOVA PA — November 17, 1978



By MARIANNE LAVELLE

So far this year, three student oriented motions were presented to the University Senate, and all three were tabled.

Student senators did vote against these tablings, yet only five of the nine undergraduate senators have spoken at either of the two senate meetings. "Every point that could be made at a senate meeting is made, maybe three times," said John McKenna, arts and science senator. Joe Cassidy, student body president, said he feels there should be more vocalization at senate meetings, "even by reiterating what someone else has said to reinforce this point."

Visitation Questioned By Residents

By BILL CLARK

The visitation policy was questioned by approximately 50 Villanova residents who attended the RSA Campus Council meeting on Wednesday, Nov. 8.

"I think you should be discussing things the students want to hear. Frisbee golf and square dances are all well and good, but we're here to discuss visitation," said Russ Parker, a Stanford resident.

Colleen Corcoran, president of the RSA, said that the RSA wants visitation as much as the students who attended the meeting. But, instead of protesting, we must show responsibility.

The purpose of the demonstration was to influence the RSA Campus Council to take action in creating an Ad Hoc Visitation Committee which is presently under consideration by the RSA.

Earlier in the week, signs were posted urging students to demonstrate at the Campus Council meeting against the present visitation policy.

"We have nothing to do with these signs. We are not sure who is responsible for them, but they were not approved by us," said Corcoran. She further stated that the visitation issue would not be discussed until Fr. Deegan, vice-president for student life, readdresses the council after Thanksgiving.

Henry Amorosa, a Stanford resident and area representative said, "We're not here to bring chaos to your meeting. We just deserve to be represented. You are asking for feedback, and I feel you should show some consideration." A Sheehan representative, said, "We're up against a brick wall. We have to get in touch with the people who can really help us."

Corcoran said that nothing can be done for this school year anyway because the Board of Trustees must vote on the question and they do not meet until next September.

Amorosa said that he intended to propose an expansion of the present visitation policy to 24 hours on weekends and from 12 to 9 p.m. on Monday through Thursday.

The visitation policy is scheduled to be discussed at the next meeting, held sometime after Thanksgiving break.

Wednesday Nov. 8
There will be a Visitation Assembly* held at the main campus council RSA meeting in the North Lounge of Dougherty Hall at 6 o'clock. Your support is needed.

U.N. Reform Prompts "Villanova Declaration"

A three day Mid-Atlantic Conference on United Nations Reform descended on the Villanova campus last weekend. Hosted by the University's World Order Research Institute (WORI) and sponsored by 25 other groups, the Conference attracted more than 350 persons.

Among the sponsors were state branches of the United Nations Association, the League of Women Voters and the American Association of University Women.

The conferees heard a rich smorgasbord of diplomats, academics and government officials discuss various aspects of President Carter's recently issued "Report on the Reform and Restructuring of the United Nations." At the end of their deliberations the conferees issued a "Villanova Declaration" endorsing the Carter Report and calling for the establishment of a coalition of non-governmental organizations to help bring the President's Report to public attention.

The Conferee's plenary sessions and its eight workshops featured ten prominent speakers and a host of experts commenting on different sections of the Report. The Report itself calls for modest improvements in UN structures and processes including the establishment of a High Commissioner for Refugees, a UN peacekeeping reserve force, and consideration of repeal of the so-called "Connally Reservation" which limits U.S. acceptance of the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice.

In a Sunday morning session the participants heard the reports of their workshops on such subjects as human rights, UN financing and peacekeeping. Most of those reports, which do not bind the conferees, endorsed proposals which went well beyond the Carter proposals. Thus the workshop on UN finances suggested that a substantial portion of UN funding should come from independent sources of revenue not dependent on national contributions. It urged that some of the vast mineral wealth of the oceans, both inside and outside natural resource zones, be used to assit the work of the United Nations.

During the final session the conferees heard a State Department official urge that a major purpose of UN reform is to make the United Nations "a source of compelling moral authority." The speaker, Csanad Toth, serves as Chairman of the Department's Task Force to Implement the President's Report on UN Reform.

In the Conference's keynote address, C. William Maynes, Assistant Secretary of State for International Organization Affairs, said that the UN "has failed where we thought it should succeed — disarmament and collective security — but it has succeeded in areas we had not anticipated — peacekeeping and development efforts." He added "we have eminent cause to push — and push hard — for UN reform."

At a Saturday evening dinner at the Covered Wagon Inn, 250 conferees heard Norman Cousins, board chairman of Saturday Review observe that no nation can any longer guarantee the security of its citizens. Harlan Cleveland, Director of the International Affairs Program of the Aspen Institute and former U.S. Ambassador to NATO, stressed the interdependence of developed and developing nations. And Bradford Morse, Administrator of the UN Development Program, said that what Alexander Hamilton, President Washington's Secretary of the Treasury, wanted for the young United States in the way of trade relationships was "no more and no less than what the leaders of the world's developing countries want for their nations today."

In extending words of greeting to the diners, Villanova President Rev. John M. Driscoll, said "we are awed by the awesomeness of your taks." He told them that "the founding of the UN and its reform and restructure now are monumental events in human history, giant steps for mankind."

WORI Director Dr. John Logue served as program chairman of the Conference and master of ceremonies of its dinner. He told the audience that the University had recently given an honorary degree to UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim as a token of its concern for the United Nations.

How Effective?

McKenna said the Senate could be more effective with "student support at senate meetings."

Frank Zarelli, Engineering senator, said that the structure of the Senate itself is important in passing resolutions. "It's important to get administrators and faculty on the Senate who want to be there and look forward to it."

This week, the senate will discuss three student motions: a new overload policy, a new withdrawal policy, and a motion to change the Arts and Science senate representation to mandate one senator from the Science department. "These motions will be dealt with by the student senators for the students," said Cathy Pelesky, Art and Science senator.

Most of the SGA members said they feel their major duty right now is to support student motions on the senate floor, but most said they would like a restructuring and redefining of the SGA.

"The SGA is a legislative body right now," said Cassidy. "It shouldn't be. The SGA does not extend beyond the realm of senators. We need to broaden the base and the membership of the SGA."

"Since the SGA is primarily legislative, people aren't interested," said Zarelli. "Student Government would be the people who do the work, and the senators who advise them. Now, there's no one to advise," he said.

In hope of "broadening the base and membership of the SGA," a restructuring investigation is being conducted by the offices of student life and student activities, along with the SGA. Father John Deegan, vice-president for student life, said "The SGA is trying to fulfill its constitution as it stands. What we're doing now is looking at the constitution."

"We have the student representation on the Senate to deal with policy matters. But we need a body to hear the everyday concerns of the students, their grievances," said Deegan.

In searching for new SGA structures, Cassidy said he supports a model with the RSA, ANS, and Union all under the jurisdiction of the SGA.

Another concern is the Student Government's relationship with the Board of Trustees. "Our relationship with the Board is only from the Senate, and it is therefore a power that can't be checked," said P.J. Winterhalter, Arts and Science senator.

A lack of communication between the two bodies is obvious. After a Senate Executive Board meeting with the Trustees, Cassidy said, "Some of the Board of Trustees did not even know about the situation on campus with the LCB."

Internal problems also hinder the efficacy of the SGA. "The assembly committees this year, like last year, have become pretty much defunct," said Cassidy. The assembly vice-president was chosen until mid-October. Cassidy said this was due to SGA members who did not return to school this fall.

Morris Estates Preview

A Family of Tradition

By BILL GUERIN

For most Villanovans, the Morris Estates evoke images of zoning hassles and future dormitories. There was a time, however, when the estates meant much more.

The history of the property goes back 108 years to Israel Morris, who purchased the original 64 acres. Morris had founded his own iron merchant company in 1828. This company, which started with only a horse, wagon, and warehouse, was later to become Morris, Wheeler, & Co., the basis for the Morris family fortune.

In 1878, Israel bought the other 32 acres of the property. He divided the land evenly among his four children: Theodore, William, Frederick, and Anna. William built the Herron House in 1896, while Anna and Frederick sold their acreage. Theodore H. Morris built Dundale, the largest of the Morris homes, in 1889 for his sixteen children.

Dundale, which means, "hill" and "valley," was constructed at a cost of $64,000. The walls are three layers thick, one of brick and two of granite. Each room contains its own fireplace, and the entire house is heated by two coal furnaces.

This 35-room mansion was used as a summer home for the Morrises, who resided in Philadelphia. Throughout the summer, the estates were dotted with fields of wheat and numerous vegetables. The barns and pens were stocked with sheep, horses, and cattle. The farmers and gardeners, who lived on the property year-round, would send vegetables and meat into the city for the Morrises during the winter months.

Since these agriculturally rich estates were self-sufficient, most of the Morris family social life was centered there. Dundale, for example, was the site of several Morris weddings. One family custom, which survived up into this decade, was the singing of hymns every Sunday night by each member of the family, youngest to oldest.

"I have never seen a crowd of people with such tremendous loyalty toward one another," said Theodore H. Morris III, grandson and namesake of Dundale's founder.

When Theodore H. Morris I died, he stated in his will that there should always be a place on the estates for his children. C.C. Morris, the thirteenth child of Theodore, was the last of his children to live there.

During the 1960's when Villanova University first expressed interest in purchasing the estates, C.C. Morris refused to sell. Instead, he began buying the remaining houses on the property from other family members.

"Villanova has always been a good neighbor."

Theodore H. Morris III

"C.C. Morris was such a strong family man that he wanted to keep all the houses and land together so things would be the way they were when he was growing up," said Theodore Morris, III.

In 1971, when C.C. Morris passed away at the age of 88, he left his portion of the estates to his 21 nieces and nephews. In September of 1978, the heirs sold these 36 acres to Villanova University for $750,000.

"If we had sold the estates to a private developer, we probably would have made an additional $200,000 or so. However, rather than see our estates be leveled by a builder, we decided to sell the property to Villanova," said Theodore H. Morris III, senior trustee of C.C. Morris's estate. "Villanova has always been a good neighbor."

Will You Live Here?

By JERRY DOUGHERTY

In purchasing the Morris Estates, Villanova University intends to replace athletic fields lost to the University Center and to ease the growing problem of campus housing shortages.

The fate of the estates is not in the hands of the University; rather, it is with the Radnor Township Commissioners, who rejected a rezoning request by the University. This December, Villanova University plans to reapply for a zoning variance which would permit the conversion of the houses on the estates into dormitories.

"If rezoning takes place it is likely that the buildings will be used as dormitories. If they are not rezoned, the University has no immediate plans for the use of the facilities," said Edward J. Murray, assistant to the President.

Murray emphasized that the University wishes to make use of only the existing buildings on the Morris Estates as dormitories and has no plans at all to build new facilities on those grounds. Murray expressed hope that the Radnor Township Commissioners will approve the rezoning request at the December hearing.

Dean of Men Allan B. Wechsler explained that there are only five houses on the estates, and each is limited in terms of bed space. Wechsler added that at present two of the houses are being occupied by Midwestern Augustinian Seminarians. If the houses were to become dormitories, these seminarians would move into St. Mary's Hall, thus reducing dormitory space there, Wechsler reasoned.

With the presence of the seminarians considered, Dean Wechsler estimated that "not more than forty to fifty students could be accomodated by the full use of all five Morris Estates houses."

The other planned function for the Morris Estate land is the use of a portion for new athletic fields. Dr. Ted A. Aceto, university athletic director, discussed the proposed athletic fields and other modifications envisioned in light of the purchase of the estates.

Aceto sees the potential of the additional land being fulfilled with the proposed widening of the St.

The major purpose served by the new fields would be in the area of intramural sports. "The new fields on the grounds would enable us to have double the amount of intramural games played as of now," Dr.Aceto stated. He ruled out any large-scale varsity athletic facilities for the new grounds, citing their inaccessibility to the main campus area.

As it exists now, the Morris Estates situation is one of near inactivity in the realm of housing, with only preliminary plans having been drawn up. Development of the athletic fields, however, has not been hampered by any zoning conflicts.

Mary's fields to include two new fields, one for field hockey, the other for lacrosse or soccer. These two fields would be parallel to each other and could be converted to softball fields.

Gordon House, possible dormitory in Near Future

Dundale Exhibited

By BILL GUERIN

During the spring of 1979, Villanova's University's newly-acquired Dundale House will be showcased by the Main Line Vassar Club.

Every year the club selects an old mansion in the area to be renovated for public display. Each room of the house will be assigned to a different interior decorator. The designer will then restore his room to the style of the period in which the mansion was built.

Dundale has much to offer its renovators. Built in 1889, the 35-room structure contains fourteen fireplaces. In addition, the original copper bathtubs, plate glass windows, and carved woodwork remain intact.

The walls of the mansion are three layers thick: the inner layer is made of brick, the middle of granite from the Morris family's own quarry, and the outer of gray granite from Maryland.

While restoring Dundale, the decorators will make no permanent structural changes to the building. If necessary, however, the club will repair leaking roofs, faulty wiring, and inadequate plumbing at no cost to the University.

The designers will paint and paper the walls of their individual rooms as desired. They will also carpet the floors and install all new furniture. During the public display of Dundale, viewers will be encouraged to offer bids on buying the various furnishings provided by the decorator.

All revenues from the showcasing of Dundale will go directly to the Vassar Club. The organization expects income from admission fees charged to the public, from fees charged to the decorators for allowing their work to be displayed, from commissions on all furniture sales to the public, and from refreshment stands.

Any profits realized by the club will be used for their scholarship fund for area girls interested in attending Vassar College.

Residents Pleased

By STEVE HAGGERTY

The recent purchase of the Morris Estates by Villanova University has created interest among students and the administration as to their future use.

Also concerned about the future of the Morris Estates are some of the residents who now live in the houses not yet purchased by Villanova.

One of these residents, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Rowland, has rented a house on the estate for 25 years. Rowland is a retired Lower Merion school teacher. She hopes to see the history and beauty of the estate preserved.

"If the estate had to be sold, I'm glad Villanova bought it. The University will preserve the buildings and landscaping as opposed to a building contractor," she explained.

Rowland, who describes herself as a nature lover, sees the estate as one of the last of its kind in the vicinity.

"I think the estate should remain as a landmark," stated Rowland.

A member of the Morris Family, Dr. William H. Morris has lived on the estate since he was five. He has owned a house on the estate for 21 years.

Morris, who lives with his wife, has no hesitations about the sale.

"I feel positively about the purchase by Villanova. We've had no trouble adjusting to the Villanova students already on parts of the estate," he said.

Morris's house resides on a four acre estate. He sees the possibility of it becoming a part of Villanova University.

"Since Villanova has an option to buy my house it is very possible that my estate could someday belong to the University," stated Morris.

EARN OVER $650 A MONTH RIGHT THROUGH YOUR SENIOR YEAR.

If you're a junior or a senior majoring in math, physics or engineering, the Navy has a program you should know about.

It's called the Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate-Collegiate Program (NUPOC-C for short) and if you qualify, you can earn as much as $650 a month right through your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you'll receive an additional year of advanced technical education. This would cost you thousands in a civilian school, but in the Navy, we pay you. And at the end of the year of training, you'll receive a $3,000 cash bonus.

It isn't easy. There are fewer than 400 openings and only one of every six applicants will be selected. But if you make it, you'll have qualified for an elite engineering training program. With unequaled hands-on responsibility, a $24,000 salary in four years, and gilt-edged qualifications for jobs in private industry should you decide to leave the Navy later. (But we don't think you'll want to.)

Ask your placement officer to set up an interview with a Navy representative when he visits the campus on Nov. 21, or contact your Navy representative at 564-3820.
If you prefer, send your résumé to the Navy Nuclear Officer Program, Code 312-B537, 4015 Wilson Blvd., Arlington, Va. 22203, and a Navy representative will contact you directly.

Will We Ever Have A Media Major?

By the time Villanova's curriculum is enriched by a new major area which would entail the study of the media, we will undoubtedly be receiving live broadcasts from Mars. This is a blatent implication expressing the dissatisfaction from the anticipation for a major in Communications.

In any case, the reason that brought on this pressing issue on Villanova's campus is that we have been told that a Communications Major is a future reality. We have been waiting several years for this expectation to be fulfilled. Students are putting in their hard hours on the radio and newspaper, but it is not being rightfully recognized in their degree.

Where does the deterrant factor lie? It is a known fact that the Communications Department is doing all they can to initiate the launching of a major in Communications. Meetings are held several times a year in which all interested students meet with the faculty to discuss internships, careers and what to major in.

Most of the English and general art majors have concentrations in communications and have hopes of going into the fields of print, radio, T.V., theatre and the advertising media. This presently seems an impossible dream due to the lack of courses and instruction. Also, most students in this concentration have taken more than the required 24 credits which warrants being labeled as a major area. Granted, Villanova's undergraduate programs have never been noted for the newest in technology concerning the realm of communications, but a change in the outmoded curriculum would diversify Villanova's programs along with its students.

Temple, Penn and many other diversified schools have found it necessary and extremely important to incorporate such a major into their curriculums. Students seeking careers in this area need the proper courses, instruction and, most of all, recognition. Without these requirements the mass media might as well be extinct as far as Villanova is concerned.

A major in Communication will add flavor to every organization on campus because the forms of media in which Villanova subscribes to will be more informed. However, we will go through many more gyrations before we can declare ourselves "Communications Majors."

It's That Time

Maybe tomorrow I'll find a way,
To the land where the honey runs in the river each day,
And the sweet taste and good life is so easily found,
Way over Yonder — that's where I'm bound.

Carol King

It's that time of the year, when college seniors are faced with making decisions that will in most cases affect the rest of their lives.

It's that time, when loneliness sets-in. Much time is spent alone pondering what job to take, where to live or what graduate school to attend.

It's that time, when Dad steps back and says it's your decision, it's your life.

It's that time when professors all of a sudden become friends and you realize that you wished you had read the whole book instead of just enough to get you by.

It's that time, when just wearing a tie and sports jacket isn't enough and long hair and beards are out.

It's that time, when four years are condensed into one 45-minute interview or expressed on one sheet of paper entitled a "resume."

It's that time when friends become closer and everything is the "last" time. The last time we'll ever register for classes or wait in a drop/add line, a last first day of school and a last parent's weekend.

It's that time, when some of us will evaluate four years and wonder if it's all worth it.

It's that time when wedding bells, diapers and station wagons are all in the near future and beer parties, blind dates and basketball games in the past.

It's that time, and the only time it's for real.

VFL Thanks

To the Editor:

The members of the Villanovans For Life club would like to commend the Villanova community for its enthusiasm in all of the recent charity drives held on campus. Students and faculty have been more than generous in donating their time and money to several worthwhile causes — both by organizing the events and by participating in them.

The muscular dystrophy marathon was a tremendous effort on the part of WKVU and a huge success thanks to the people at Villanova. The UNICEF trick-or-treat was a successful venture, as was the Lambda Chi "Kidnap For Food" held this past week.

Over five-hundred people signed up to donate blood this week in the A.P.O. blood drive. Well over one-thousand students volunteered to fast to raise funds for the world hunger problem. Many students have also been generous in supporting the VFL Thanksgiving food and clothing drive.

We think it's great that the Villanova community is proving itself to be so generous in supporting these causes! We encourage you to continue to help the VFL and the many other serviced-minded organizations on our campus.

Crimewave: Kidnapping Rampant On Campus

By GEORGE BOZZUTI

Did you happen to catch a stray bullet on Monday while you were eating lunch or walking to and from classes? If you did you were witnessing a new type of fund raising.

The colorful brothers of Lambda Chi Alpha donning their now unused gangster regalia (pin-stripe suits and violin cases for those of your who aren't Cagney fans) succeeded in kidnapping about 30 campus personalities on Monday. The victims were held for ransom in the North Lounge of Dougherty Hall, which was taken over by the mobsters early on Monday morning and used as a hideout.

The gangsters ruthlessly abducted their target victims at times when they least expected it, and left a ransom note that stated their demands, which were to be met quickly or else.

The ransom in all cases was to be 25 lbs. of canned food or a check for a given amount which was donated by each victim's respective organization in exchange for his or her safe return. The organizations were notified of the kidnappings in advance. These donations, which amounted to close to 450 dollars or more and over 200 lbs. of canned foods, were all given to The Precious Blood Parish, a needy parish in West Philadelphia. Needless to say, the members of The Precious Blood Parish were overjoyed with the food and money which came right in time for the "Thanksgiving holidays.

The brains behind the operation was James Schuster, a sophomore Biology major and well known brother of LXA. Schuster approached The Campus Ministry weeks ago and after discussing the idea of a "Kidnap for Food" with Father Jackson, the two decided to give the proceeds of the kidnapping caper to The Precious Blood Parish.

The caper itself was pulled off by such important mobsters as "The Giffone Brothers" (Nunzio, Pasquale and Ralph), "The Pip and Mugsy Gang", "Stools and the Gang", and "Crispy and his Critter Gang."

Among the kidnap victims were such infamous personalities as Father Driscoll, O.S.A., president of Villanova; Ann Cooke of Security; Dan Ragan of the Philosophy Dept.; Kevin Smith and John Backus of the Union; Terry O'Toole, associate editor of the Villanovan; Larry Ingrahn, the Marine Gunnery Sergeant; Gary Bonas, moderator of S.P.E.; Alan Weschler, dean of men and last but not least, Tom Kelly of WKVU fame, who put up quite a fight before being subdued by Beth "Bonnie" Heimlich (a cut throat associate member of the Little Sisters of LXA) after a long and tiresome chase around the roof of Dougherty Hall.

Ruthless LXA mobsters holding hostages from campus organizations for ransom. Fortunately this criminal activity was for a good cause — LXA's "Kidnap for Food," held Monday, Nov. 13.

All went smoothly with the operation, with the exception of one minor incident involving the West Side Kids in the Pie Shop about 12:30 in which eight of LKD's pledges were gunned down in cold blood.

On the serious side of the matter the Brothers of LXA, the Campus Ministry and especially the members of the Precious Blood Parish would like to take this opportunity to thank all those who participated and/or donated to the cause in any way. This small project not only served a very worthy cause and was an excellent time for all who joined in the fun, but brought VU's community together and demonstrated once again the potential which we have, as a community.

By the way, if you did happen to catch a stray bullet on Monday. Just remember the immortal words of the Bogie: "I never met a dame who didn't answer to a slap in the face or a slug from a .45."

Chills And Thrills At 3000 Feet

By JAY COOK

It was like a dream. My mind and body, after being subjected to an incredible quantity of interesting chemicals at the equally incredible O'Dwyer Halloween party, could barely function. But there I was, watching Burlington County, New Jersey pass by at 100 miles per hour from an altitude of 3000 feet. And I could hardly wait to jump out of the twin engine Beechcraft I was flying in. I mean, I'll take off in them, I'll even fly around in them, but there's no way I'm going to land in one of those little mothers. No way. That's dangerous!

Some of your probably think that jumping our of an airplane is a stupid thing to do. You're right. It is. Unless of course you have a couple of parachutes, a helmet, jump boots, a radio, a jumpsuit — not to mention a real good teacher like Pete Wilson of the Ripcord Paracenter). Then it's not stupid. A little foolhardy maybe, but not stupid.

Stupid or not, I had fun — lots of it. And so did the 72 other people from Villanova that jumped that day. Except maybe the guy that broke his leg. But, as the saying goes, if you can't take a hike, don't parachute.

I took part in the parachute jumping expedition which Villanova sponsored October 28, to the Ripcord Paracenter at the Burlington County Airport in Medford, New Jersey. Paracenter is short for "Parachute Center" and not "Paraplegic Center" as someone nervously joked. I think I said that. Very nervously. But anyway.

The Paracenter staff, its professional instructors are certified by the United States Parachuting Association and, in all their years of operation have never lost a first time jumper. They have misplaced a few, but they've never lost one. That was a very encouraging thing to hear before your first jump. But it did make you wonder how many second time jumpers they had lost. Oh well, guess I'll find out the next time.

To the best of my knowledge everyone in the group of sick dogs from Villanova was a first time jumper (Kind of makes you wonder what happened to everyone that jumped last year, doesn't it?). As first time jumpers we were all enrolled, naturally enough, in the Paracenters First Jump Course. All equipment, aircraft services and both classroom and on ground practical instruction are included in this 70 dollar program. However, we got a special group rate and paid only 50 dollars. I realize that this does seem expensive but, when you consider that each additional jump, including a short instruction period on more advanced techniques and equipment rental, is only 17 bucks, it seems a lot more reasonable. If you bring your own jump gear and blow off the lesson it's only four dollars. What a bargain!

Contrary to what you may be thinking, it really isn't hard. Anyone over 18 and in normal health can do it. No great physical skill is required and only a minimum of coordination is necessary. What is required, however, is a fairly level head and some concentration.

another world and could see for miles. Mack trucks looked like ants; the airport looked tiny; and it was windy as hell. Pete Wilson, the instructor and jumpmaster, then told you to move, very carefully, to the door. He moved next to the appointed jumper, took the static line from your main chute, and hooked you up. A static line, for those of you unfamilar with parachute lingo, is the thing you always see Paratroopers hooking to the ceiling before they make their jump behind enemy lines on D-Day. What it does is open your chute for you, it's a surrogate ripcord. In fact the only ripcord you'll ever get to pull is the one on your reserve chute. And the odds of having a malfunction that requires you to pull your reserve are pretty slim. Say, about 3000 to 1. And that's fine.

After you're hooked up, receive the command "GET READY," and put your legs out the door, the wind pushes hard at your legs and you have to work to keep them in place as you hear the drop zone. Just before reaching the drop zone, you receive the command "GET SET." At this point you turn and face the wind while sliding closer to the edge. Then, seconds later a tap comes on the shoulder and "GO," you're out of there.

Leaving your plane, you try hard to think of everything you were taught on the ground; you start to count and suddenly there's a reassuring tug on your shoulders. You look up and see one of the most beautiful sights in the world, an open parchute. Then, grabbing the steering toggles, you turn to

Don't you love how the registrar times the mailing of mid-terms just right, so they get home just before you do for Thanksgiving vacation . . . then for four days there's more than one turkey in the house . . . Now's the time of year when you find out who your real friends are, when you ask, "How's this guy for English?" . . . As a handy pre-registration guide for freshmen, here's a key to some sample responses — "He's great, a brilliant teacher" means the guy cracks some good jokes, gives a take-home mid-term and final and the Joy of Sex is the only required reading . . . "He's good, really good" means class is boring as hell, but he lets his six-year old son grade the papers and if you tell him he should write for the New York Times Literary Supplement it's a sure A . . . "He's all right, if it's the only one that will fit your schedule" probably means that this class meets at 3:30 in the basement of Bartley and the teacher thinks Fear of Flying is an aviation textbook . . . "Change your major" means that this guy has probably died since the schedule was printed, once drooled through an entire class and thinks Chaucer should replace Springsteen as the poet of the '70's . . . Note for poli-sci majors, there is no truth to the rumor that Jeff Haba will require his students to turn in a 100-page study of John Alden's campaign finances next semester . . . LXA, in a noble and imaginative move, kidnapped campus leaders for charity Monday, but are getting annoyed that no one has claimed John Backus yet . . . the kidnappers reported that their easiest target was the secretary in the security office . . . We'd like to know who this new guy the accounting department has hired who's being over-worked next semester — Mr. Staff? . . . compliments to the girls at Rosemont for a good job on their semi-formal Saturday night — you know it was a good time when you spend the next day swearing all you'll ever drink is milk . . . right, Stick? . . . Prac T. Cal Courses Considered At V.U.

By CAROL ANN BARRALE

You've all heard of Villanova University, the Free University and now from the depths of educational folklore comes the Practical University?

The Practical University was begun in the nineteenth century by a Sir Prac T. Cal, a self-made English lord who made his fortune in artificial facial moles, wigs and wig powder. Sir Prac tried his utmost to encourage the school system of his day to adopt common sense, useful skills in addition to the customary academic college curriculum, citing the apparent need in a college society for a knowledge of the world and its people outside the college walls.

He attempted to take the skills and knowledge that one usually learns on street corners and put them into a classroom atmosphere where there would be a valuable interchange of college customs and culture.

Poor Sir Prac, however, was fruitless in his efforts and was vehemently ousted by the educational officials. Followers of Sir Prac T. Cal have tried century after century to interest colleges in all countries in adopting their realistic aims.

The Villanova Chapter of the Practical University has finally arrived. However due to insufficient funding and lack of trained personnel in the respective areas, the courses have been stricken from Villanova's Spring master schedule.

Below are some basic courses of the Practical University which had been considered. Of course, the courses have been modified somewhat to fit the present times and the Villanova community. For example, Tea For Two, a common interest in the nineteenth century, has been changed to Social Life 1000, etc.

Social Life 1000 - Villanova's answer to the computer dating service. This course is designed to help you re-discover that long misplaced adage, "the social life," by examining exactly what a social life is. It affords an in depth study of 1) the realm of boy/girl relationships in an effort to assist you in your quest for a compatible date; 2) the alternatives open to you when a date is not possible.

Interesting topics discussed include: How to ask a girl out?, How important are physical attributes in a relationship?, The tell-tale signs of a love interest., How to deal with rejection?, and What to do on campus and off on weekends besides homework?

Grape Juice and Cheese 4000 — In light of the latest LCB prohibitions, this course emphasizes the nutritional benefits of drinking Welch's Grape Juice, instead of wine, with your favorite cheese.

Also discussed are: the art of bottle stacking; the fun you can have at do-it-yourself label peeling contests; and finally that down-home, jam session atmosphere your party can achieve making their own kind of music blowing into the empty juice bottles.

Mr. and Miss Villanova I — This course was created to help you make the best of your appearance, so that you too may be nominated next year for that honor.

Girls are afforded personal consultation with former Homecoming Queens where lessons will be given in the hows and whys of appropriate apparel, make-up, posture and language for a Miss Villanova.

Men will be presented with the latest best selling book on body building by Arnold Schwarzenegger, so that they too can acquire that all important "macho" quality. A passing grade will only be awarded to males when they have passed the ultimate "macho" test — having a pin pinned to their bare chests.

I'm Sorry But . . . II — This course examines the art of excuse making and responsibility shirking. Guest speakers will be invited to relate to you the art by making excuses why they are not able to accept. Oh, excuse me! This course was canceled due to extenuating circumstances.

Philosophy of Apathy 3000 — An in depth study of the general lack of feeling exhibited by the Villanova community. Special emphasis is given to the Villanova psyche and its functions and norms. However, this course is no longer under consideration due to lack of student interest in the [illegible].

The Many Faces Of APO

At the end of this year's intramural football season someone asked if APO's ever had a winning team. That's a good question, and research by a member of the fraternity reveals that their record is about the same as the team that always plays against the Harlem Globetrotters. But if one looks at their activities as a whole, you can see that they've always been a winning team.

Take this semester's blood drive, for example. So many donors have been recruited that the Red Cross has had to plan on bringing in the largest blood-mobile unit in the history of campus blood drives, even bigger than last semester's which won an award for being the biggest blood drive in the Penn-Jersey region for 1977-78. It's been that way for about the last ten years. That's something for APO and all of Villanova to be proud of.

The brothers' activities aren't limited to blood drives. They have their share of parties, dinner dances, TGs and the like, but they spend some of their time in other areas. The fraternity has an active service program which includes working with some inner-city community centers, several children's homes in the area, and the University, among others.

Each week the brothers have a different project to work on. Two weeks ago they visited Presbyterian Children's Village in Bryn Mawr; last weekend they worked at Rosemont College, and this week it's the blood drive. Projects for the university include such things as registration, drop and add, and cleaning up the garage at Alumni House.

The best way to explain what APO's all about is to use the work brotherhood. Not just partying, although that's a big part of it, but all of the group's activities bear the mark of brotherhood. It's never mentioned by any of the members, but then actions speak louder than words. The group is something of a cross between John Belushi's frat from Animal House and the Villanovans for Life. Not one extreme or the other, but a unique mixture of the two.

The brothers seem to be proud of what they do, and proud of the high quality of student that APO attracts. Each year the fraternity has several seniors (four this year) among the list of Who's Who students, and invariably quite a few of the members are leaders of other campus organizations, including honor societies.

The fraternity's been on Villanova's campus for about a dozen years, but it's part of an older National Fraternity that has about 500 chapters around the nation. In their twelve years at Villanova the group has contributed a lot to the school and to the community. Much of what they do seems to go unheralded, but then they're not out for glory. They're just a bunch of college students out to have a good time, and perhaps be of some value at the same time.

All year On Campus has been presenting the student body with their own views on current issues dealing with Villanova. This week we decided to turn the tables by interviewing the faculty.

On Campus asked the faculty how they feel about the apathy among the students. Here is what we heard:

"I don't believe it. Look at what they are doing for "Hunger Awareness Week." I don't think there's anymore than usual. I really don't think there is any apathy."

Professor Regan
Philosophy

"I think there's a lot of it. I'm apalled at how little most students know about current events. I'm also concerned about how the major topics in the Villanovan have gone from hunger in the world to the drinking issue."

Professor …ocko
…istory

"I'm not so…pathy. It has to be related to so…else. To make a statement on t…ve to compare it to what I have s…. In the early sixties, the stude…uiet in the late sixties they were…uder. Now they're quieter but …more open and friendlier."

…ofessor McGarry,
Sociology

"I think there is a lot of it. Today nobody is interested in anything. People today are concerned about the cost of living and taxes. But as far as believing about improving the American society, they don't care. I don't think its restricted to Villanova, I think its all over."

Professor Rofinot
History

"No, I don't think the students are totally apathetic. They just aren't turned on by the same questions as in the past. Ever since Watergate, people have been apathetic. Actually, the students are no more apathetic than their parents."

Professor Hughes,
Sociology

"I don't think the students are apathetic. They may be more given to their own pursuits than international affairs, but basically I think they are more given to learning than students of five or ten years ago. In the classroom, I don't feel they're apathetic."

Professor Blimm,
English

Vasey's Figaro: A Faculty View

C. Applegate, S. Trimble, E. McEneaney, R. Mahrt, F. Fogal, C. Laibach.

By Dr. Wilson L. Frescoln
Modern Language Department

They used to call The Marriage of Figaro "the spark of the French Revolution." Like many another tag affixed by critics, this one is an exaggeration. Beaumarchais' play is partly an instrument of propaganda, containing incendiary lines, but the real kindling of the Revolution goes back a whole century and by 1784 the agitated times and the public spirit were such that it would have taken a genius to avert the upheaval — and Louis XVI was not that genius.

Even though he belonged to the privileged classes, Beaumarchais understood the lot of the oppressed; and having a natural affinity with the age of revolution, he provided the army of the American Revolution with vast supplies and munitions. But because of his title and various activities in which he became engaged he was finally obliged to flee the guillotine. It is interesting that the name "Figaro" is an anagram of his family name, Caron — Fi(ls) Caro(n).

With the benefit of the excellent direction of Dr. James J. Christy, the Theatre Department's presentation of The Marriage of Figaro on the opening night, November 8, proved to be an exceptional experience. Even with its interwoven subplots, the play never became confused or dull. The English translation is strictly faithful to the French text, with certain felicitous modifications, including a sprinkling of present-day touches and one amusing spurious scene. The ingenious stage settings are both imaginative and refreshing. The costuming, characterized by whimsical anachronisms and variety, leaves one with the wish that it could have been otherwise.

The title role, palyed by Mr. McEneaney, a trifle obtuse in the beginning, shaped into a masterful representation of the esprit gaulois, and there were moments when Figaro became the true successor to Renard, Pathelin, and Panurge.

Ms. Trimble's presentation of Suzanne showed considerable stage poise and skill in her handling of the virtuous Suzanne, an interpretation the author would surely have approved of.

Mr. Mahrt appeared at home as Count Almaviva, not an easy role, with its alternate phases of dignity, anger, bewilderment, and acceptance, and Ms. Fogel, who played the Countess, made a convincing noblewoman and an equally convincing coquette.

This particular Marriage of Figaro is a happy combination of superior direction, acting and decor.

The Doobie Brothers Perform

By STEPHEN CASTELLANO

"We don't judge our music, It's tough for us to. We usually leave it up to the listeners. If it does well, we get comments from radio stations and newspapers, and then we have a general idea of how we've done."

If you happened to be at the Spectrum last Friday, or even if you weren't I'm sure that you heard something about the Doobie Brothers Concert. Most of the comments I heard were, "excellent," "unreal" and "the best." The Doobie Brothers really put on a fine show for the 17,000 people at the Spectrum.

From the time I boarded the train at Villanova there was an electrifying feeling. The train was full of people, all going to the concert. The kids in the car behind us were singing some Doobie Brothers songs — one song they sung was "Jesus is Just Alright With Me."

The Doobie Brothers exhibited an enormous amount of energy from the first song to the second encore. After the traditional greetings and some final technical preparations, Patrick Simmons (lead guitarist) said "We love you Philadelphia" and opened the show with "Jesus is Just Alright With Me." The crowd was really in a party mood, and this was the song that many were waiting to hear.

While they were playing I noticed how calm and casual they appear. They have such good stage presence. They really relate to the crowd.

Perhaps the people's philosophy is the key to the massive acceptance. The title of one of their albums "Takin' It to the Streets" suggests that the Doobie Brothers are trying to communicate with their audience on a one to one level. When one watches them, they feel a sense of warmth, personalism and honesty generating from their music. "Long Train Runnin' " was next. It received such an overwhelming response that the sound crew had to kick up the volume a bit. The crowd was really psyched for the evening by this time.

Patrick Simmons turned the spotlight over to Michael McDonald (keyboards) for the next tune. Immediately he began to play "It Keeps You Runnin' ", a traditional Doobie favorite. The way he played the introduction to the song gave it a different sound, but the crowd recognized it right away.

"Take Me In Your Arms" another popular radio tune received a favorable response but nothing out of the ordinary. The Doobie Brothers played for almost two hours without a break. They gave the crowd exactly what they came for — good music.

The first of December will make the list of Dobbie Brothers albums one longer as they release their eighth album, just in time for Christmas. Telling the crowd that they were going to be the first to hear these songs really raised some matches, as well as cheers. They played two songs from the new album, "What a Fool Believes" and "Don't Stop to Watch the Wheels Go Round." Both new tunes received an overwhelming response from the crowd and it seems that the new LP is going to join the other seven in the ranks of certified gold and platinum albums.

Richman: The Main Point?

By STEVE COHEN

Last Saturday night I made my first trip to the Main Point. I had heard good things about this small [illegible] Mitchell and James Taylor got their start there, and it has yuppie munchies with a great atmosphere." Well the first part about [illegible] and Taylor, who have [illegible] enough, but the atmosphere! The interior looks like the main lodge at summer camp with folding chairs and plastic-coated cardboard tables that sway with the music. Of course, that is when there's music, which, in consideration of the performance I saw, there was not.

The opening act was Kenn Kweder (without his Secret Kids.) He seemed very nervous at first and after two songs he announced that he had left his keys in his door and asked for someone to call his number and tell Steve to get them. A young lady in the front volunteered and the show continued. He loosened up and did a really awful tune called "Kansas City Star."

As Kweder talked to the audience more, his performance improved. His displayed a passable voice backed up by his harsh but competent guitar.

Singing a song called "Tom and Jim" he proved to be as weird as he had seemed. The song made no sense at all. He sang half of it with a series of French sounding grunts.

His last song, "Pandemonium" was the only one I really liked. With a group behind him, Kenn Kweder might be pretty good. Certainly better than Johathan Richman, who was the main attraction.

The performance given by Richman would have been perfect in front of a bonfire at scout camp. He was funny, energetic, almost talented, and very well received. He would play his guitar for about four bars of a song then get bored, put down the guitar, and accompany himself with handclaps and thigh slaps. He sang a song about a little dinosaur while he crawled across the stage. When the town fire alarm went off, he played in tune with it. During "Nature's Mosquito" he buzzed around and bit himself. This guy is weird. He went over very well, but for a five dollar show, it wasn't much. I couldn't help thinking that I knew plenty of ex-boy scouts who could do the same things for free.

It is only fair to mention the munchies. They were pretty good. I had spiced hot chocolate with cheese and crackers.

O.K. I know the Main Point is sort of a sacred institution around here. Maybe I was there on a bad night. But I can't say I recommend the place.

How Is Sound

UFO

By SUE BREHM

U.F.O.'s newest album, their fourth effort, Obsession, is powerfully packed with eleven electrically dynamic rock n' roll tunes. Their music may be considered hard-rock but with more class and talent than comes under that classification.

Side one starts off with a catchy commercial tune "Only You Can Rock Me", sounding like the typical rock song. But, as you listen closer and as the album continues you'll eventually notice the original vocals of frontman Phil Moog and the continuous dazzling guitar rifts of Michael Schenker.

This is followed by one of my favorites "Pack It Up And Go", starting with a good rock beat by drummer Andy Parker. Moog sings forceful lyrics like — "You made me eat crap back in 1969, but now move over friend I think you've had your time." The guitar leads are frantic and wild, filling in every space throughout the song — a total rocker. Next is an acoustical tune "Abory Hill", featuring Paul Raymond on keyboards, using his talent on the mellotron and piano to create a beautiful melodic soft number. The fourth tune "Ain't No Baby" is dynamic, bringing your mood up and down. The guitar lead is violently spastic but still melodically controlled. The lyrics are again harsh and powerful. The last song on this side "Lookin' Out For No. 1", is again melodic and original, the only problem being that the ending is a little drawn out.

It seems, as in most rock bands, that the vocalist and guitarist are featured in this album. Schenker gets a good sound from his guitar. He is quick, melodic and never repetitious. Moog sounds like a mixture of Robert Plant and Steve Tyler, correlating well with the type of music U.F.O. plays. The bass and keyboards, along with the background vocals, are kept hidden, used only as back up in this band. Drummer, Parker, is adequate, but doesn't improvise or use his imagination as much as I would like to hear.

Side two starts with "Hot 'n 'Ready", a fast paced rocker with quick electrifying guitar rifts and sexually oriented lyrics, sung powerfully. The second number "Cherry" sounds like any familiar normal rock tune; nothing really standing out. Following is another favorite called "You Don't Fool Me" using a forceful drum beat and continuous, clean and clear guitar leads. Moog uses male dominating, harsh, sexual lyrics; such as: "You don't fool me, One look at you it's easy to see, You don't fool me, I'll play along — just give it to me." The fourth song is an instrumental written by bassist, Pete Way, who along with Moog wrote most of the selections on this album. It's a soft, slow song entitled "Lookin' Out for No. 1 Reprise", again featuring keyboards. The fifth song is fast paced, sounding like other rock songs, but done with perfection. Schenker makes this song original, adding choppy, irratic guitar leads throughout the song, which is called "One More for the Rodeo". The lyrics are hard to follow in this song, and unfortunately are not printed anywhere in the album. The last song is low keyed, "Born to Lose". The guitar solo is flowing, gradually into wild, spastic melodic rifts. This is a good dynamic song to end with.

It seems to me that U.F.O. could be an extremely powerful concert band, and you can bet they will be welcomed by hard-rockers anywhere they go. U.F.O. will be appearing with Ginger Baker at the [illegible] on Thursday, November 30 at 8 p.m. I recommend [illegible]

Take advantage of National Airlines' new "inter-National" fare from New York to Amsterdam this vacation.

This is not a stand-by fare. It's on a regularly scheduled National Airlines nonstop transatlantic flight. It's a guaranteed reserved roundtrip seat with inflight meal service. It's on a big, beautiful National wide-cabin DC-10 jet.

So why hang around the house when you can hang around the mellow "brown cafes"? Why fight crowds on the ski slopes when you can fight your way into the Paridiso or Voorn, Voorn, two of the wildest discos east of Studio 54? Come with us to Amsterdam. It's one of the most student-oriented cities in Europe; it's where English is everybody's second language.

National's "inter-National" fare is good on a substantial, but limited, number of seats on every National New York to Amsterdam flight starting December 13. The Gin Game

Tandy and Cronyn Play Perfect Hands

Jessica Tandy and Hume Cronyn in "The Gin Game."

By MAURICE FURLONG

People are people from start to finish; we all remain what we are. The quality of personality rarely changes all that much. A boring young person can easily mature into a boring old person. Comedians rarely lose it when they hit old age. In our society senior citizens are often given second class status. They are put in homes or hospitals where it is all too easy to forget about them. This subject can easily lend itself to dreary editorials, for it is but a small part of everyday life for most of us.

Wednesday night a play opened downtown at the Forrest Theatre. Interestingly enough, it was about two people, two old people and peered into a few days in their lives at a rest home. It is the 1978 Pulitzer Prize winning production of D.L. Coburn's The Gin Game. Directed by Mike Nichols, this play comes to Philadelphia from New Haven's excellent Long Wharf Threatre. The play is a showcase for the talents of a very talented husband and wife team in the persons of Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy. Together they Simmons picked up his acoustic guitar and announced that he was going to play a song "that I wrote this afternoon on the way over." The crowd did not know what to expect because we had just heard two new songs. He began to play "Black Water," letting the audience sing on the chorus. "Black Water" got the best response so far.

The light show during "China Grove" was one of the best I have seen in a long time. The stage went dark, and smoke appeared on the stage, red lights began to fade in gradually, getting more intense with the music. Just as the crowd was settling back to enjoy the light show there were explosions on the stage adding to the effect. After "China Grove" the stage lights were dimmed, as the Doobie Brothers walked off stage. The crowd was restless; they wanted more music.

As "takin it to the Streets" was played the crowd was roaring. But where was the favorite of all favorites "Listen to the Music?" The lights went out again and the crowd brought the decibel level up to at least 200. The Doobies appeared on stage a second time but they were with Sea Level, the opening act. They played "Listen to the Music." By this time the Spectrum was shaking — the crowd couldn't get enough music but after two encores you get the feeling it's all over, and it was. Both bands took a bow and walked off stage, bidding Philadelphia goodbye until next year.

hard. Less than a month later he surprised everyone but himself by qualifying for the IC4A's and placing third in a time equivalent to a 4:08 mile.

From here he moved on to the NCAA Championships, placing fifth, just behind teammate Don Paige. One week later he battled Steve Scott in the AAU Nationals on national television, losing by 3/100's of a second. He made a truly remarkable comeback.

So far this fall Sydney has shown a great deal more strength than he had last year and seems to have matured as a runner.

Gin Game

create a relationship whose aura envelopes the whole theatre. You can really get behind these two and their ever present game of gin.

Hume Cronyn portrays an old man relegated to the home by illness and poverty. His only remaining means of expression is playing cards. He meets Jessica Tandy and teaches her how to play gin. It is quite a scene, especially when she turns out to be an excellent gin player to the tune of beating her partner almost all the time.

The action reveals much of the pretense and fiction with which they defend their lives. They remain the same people they were once, only their situations have changed.

They begin to form a relationship through their games of gin, but it suffers from victory. Miss Tandy cannot lose and Mr. Cronyn cannot handle losing. Their mutual satisfaction in this relief from the routine of the home is unable to withstand the intrusion of jealousy, selfish pride, and attitudes from their past.

Their characters are laid bare to the point of lively profanity and finally violence. The play transcends the drab setting and old age. It comes cout and deal with human nature and its simultaneous capacity for love and scorn.

Harriers To Run In NCAA Champs Monday

By JAY COOK

The Villanova harriers, led by the 1-2 finish of Amos Korir and Sydney Maree, finished second in last Saturday's NCAA Region II championship meet at Lehigh University.

The team title, despite Villanova's 1-2 finish, went to the pride of Nittany Lions representing Penn State, as expected. Led by third place finisher John Ziegler and freshman Alan Scharsu, fifth, Penn State showed great depth as all of their five man scoring contingent crossed the finish line, picking up 42 points in the process, before Villanova got its third man across.

Penn State, ranked third nationally by Harrier magazine, is the only Eastern team ranked higher than seventh place Villanova in the national polls. The Nittany Lions also have the distinction of being the only team to defeat Villanova this fall.

Villanova scored 69 points in taking second and was followed by Bucknell, third with 116 points, fourth place Rutgers with 176 points and the surprisingly strong Army team, fifth with 190 points.

These five teams will be competing again on Monday along with the top five teams from the NCAA's other districts in the NCAA national championship. This race, the last of the college season, will be run on a 6.1 mile (10,000 meter) course and is being held in Madison, Wisconsin.

Leading Villanova's championship bid will be the first half of Saturday's 1-2 sweep, Kenyan sophomore Amos Korir. Amos is no newcomer to the national championship scene. Last year, as a student at Allegheny Community College, Amos placed third overall in the Junior College nationals and was a major force on Allegheny's national champion team.

In winning Saturday, Amos set a new record for Lehigh's 10,000 meter Saucon Valley course, cruising to the tape in 29:59.9.

Less than two seconds behind Amos, in second place, was IC4A champion Sydney Maree. Syd, who led the race for all but the last 70 yards, set a grueling pace in an unsuccessful attempt to spread out the runners from Penn State. Although unsuccessful in slowing Penn State, the fast pace did begin to tell on Syd at the very end of the race. Exhausted, he was unable to kick in with Amos. Sydney's time of 30:01.8 was, however, significantly better than his time earlier this season on a slightly longer version of this Lehigh course and shows that he too is ready for the NCAA's.

In third place for Villanova and 17th place overall was freshman Rob Earl. Rob, in his best performance of the season, ran a time of 30:45.5, seconds ahead of his nearest competition.

Senior Jim Flynn showed convincingly that he's back in form, running 31:00.5, fourth for Villanova and 24th overall. Jim, one of the top runners on last years squad, had a slow start this fall but has been coming on strong lately and has certainly lifted the teams' championship hopes.

Right behind Jim, in fifth place for Villanova and 25th overall, was senior John Burns.

Booters Finish 5-11-1

By CHRIS BRENNER

The Villanova men's soccer team rounded out its season this past week on a somber note as LaSalle College and West Virginia University each threw goose eggs at the Cats in 3-0 and 2-0 wins respectively. The defeats marked the end of a two game winning streak for Villanova and also sealed the Wildcats' 1978 record at 5 wins, 11 losses, and 1 tie.

Tough defense ended the story for Villanova in both games. In their game against West Virginia, the Cats managed to match the Mountaineers in shots on goal but could not draw scoring blood. By virtue of the win, West Virginia was able to qualify for post-season NCAA tourney play.

Although a 5-11-1 records sounds rather shy, it represents a continuation of a steadily improving trend toward a .500 season by Villanova soccer teams. The squad secured more victories this year than it has in the last two seasons combined. With many valuable players returning (leading scorer Dave McHugh, goalie Bill Schamp, halfback Brian Purcel and lineman Randy Soriano among others), the Cats appear to be headed for one of their most fruitful years ever in 1979.

The Sleeping Giant

By NATE COOPER

At 6' 11" 225 pounds, he is a towering figure on Villanova's bench. Yet the record books show that his contribution to the team has been minimal.

No one is more aware of this fact than Ron Cowan himself. For the past three seasons he has sat patiently on the bench cheering his teammates, occasionally relieving a front court man for a few minutes and then back to the bench.

Ron did not come to Villanova as a cheerleader, at Essex Catholic he formed the nucleus of one of the best high school basketball programs in the nation. He comes from a sound background, but the sleeping giant has yet to find his place in Massimino's program.

"It's partly my fault," admits the sleeping giant is looking forward to his last go round. "I feel I can contribute to this year's team. I want to continue to play ball in Europe or somewhere after I graduate. If not, I would like to further my education." The sleeping giant has reasons to awake.

"I know I have not played up to my potential. Massimino expects a lot from his players. Sometime I don't put forth the effort which he expects." Looking back, the Newark native does not regret coming to the Main Line. "I'd still come here if I had to do it all over again, but I would probably have a different attitude about the whole thing."

"But I can not prove myself on the bench," he adds. "When I do get to play I concentrate hard on not making any mistakes because it seems that every time I do something wrong I would be taken out of the game.

Ron Cowan will not be content to be a cheerleader for another season. He spent most of the summer playing basketball in the Sonny Hill basketball league where he averaged 14 points and 12 rebounds, against some of the best college players around.

"It restored my confidence in myself and in my game, which was part of my problem," he says about his summer experience. "A lot of people got a chance to see what I could do."

With confidence restored, the

Sailors Expand Schedule

By RONNIE CUBIT

This fall the Villanova Sailing Club increased the number of regattas in their schedule to match their move from student activity to club sport. The team sailed under the jurisdiction of the Middle Atlantic Intercollegiate Sailing Association and competed in co-ed and women's events. Although they finished in the middle of the standings for this past season, this was an achievement considering their competition was against such schools as Navy, Princeton and Haverford which have had established teams and regular practices for years.

During the course of the season the sailors finished high in the standings in several of the races they entered. Among some of the team members who placed were Carolyn Murray and Kathy Caranza, who finished at the top at the Women's Elimination Event on October 7. Villanova tied for second place with the University of Pennsylvania in the Philadelphia Inter-City Trophy Race on the weekend of October 21. The most impressive accomplishment came just this past weekend when the team sailed past a tough Navy squad by one point and finished overall in third place in a regatta hosted by Textile on the Schuylkill River. Captain Lou Sanders, Kevin Ondrey, Peter Furcht and Doug Church all contributed to this finish, which was not decided until the last moment when Ondrey captured first in the final qualifying race.

In future seasons the sailing team hopes to put less emphasis on the number of regattas they compete in and place more importance on establishing regular practices and acquiring more boats to compete in. As of this time, the squad only owns one single-handed Laser, but plans are being made for the squad to practice with the University of Pennsylvania in the future in order to improve the quality of the team.

Sun Kings Became Challengers

By RALPH MANOPPELLO

A week before the intramural football season began, a team called the Sun Kings didn't exist. But, nine weeks later they became one of the league's challengers for the championship.

Statistically, the Sun Kings were as impressive as any of the veteran teams. After an opening season loss to Jaws, due only to first downs, the mainly all-commuter team ran off a six game winning streak. "We have what it takes to win," noted coach Ray Bauso.

A stingy defense laid the basis for the team which gave up only an average of 1.8 points per game during the regular season. Leading the defense were Lou and Joe Jocono, Frank Keel and Guito Giampolo.

The offense was led by senior Jerry "Pops" Montella who weaved and darted for at least one score in every game. A mid-season quarterback change left Dennis Tolan as offensive chief. The offense, which at one point in the early season never practiced as a unit, used a steady flow of running and passing. Heading the running game was the King's power back "Chief" Alegado and their finesse man Pops Montella. The sure handed receivers for the Sun Kings were Tim Carroll (SE) and Frank Matus (TE).

Making the play-offs was an accomplishment in itself for the rookie team. An impressive victory in the preliminary round over the hard hitting Black Sheep Squadron left the number nine ranked team in line to play top seated DPE.

The frats went into the game undefeated and unscored upon. They almost left the game boasting neither. Victory looked within the Sun Kings' grasp until a late TD put DPE ahead to say at 19-13.

The Sun Kings have shed their rookie status this season; they are now an experienced team: "The Sun Kings will be back," echoed coach Bauso.

face the target.

The view is absolutely incredible, your plane is a speck on the horizon. It's incredibly quiet, surreal, almost eery. You're suddenly jarred back to reality by a voice from your radio saying "Kick you legs back and forth . . . good . . . now make a right turn . . . good . . . " From this point, until your three minute descent ends, you're in complete control trying hard to guide yourself towards the 20 foot target. Most missed, but it didn't really matter. You were down. You've done it.

After a brief period of going nuts, you headed back to campus and tried to tell your friends what you experienced. But, try as you may, you really can't. All you can do is tell them to jump themselves if they get the chance.

And guess what, you'll all have a chance. Plans have been made for another school sponsored trip. This spring, the date is still uncertain. Plenty of advance notice will be given, and I hope a lot of you give it a try. Until then, happy landings.

I believe through our continued effort and persistance we can change visitation. However we must be united. At any time the majority of our students feel are efforts are wrong I shall gladly abandon all hopes of changing visitation. I believe there is a new horizon at Villanova and that the students should pursue it. As a group of free thinking individuals who may disagree with each other, it is vital to our education that we have the courage to defend each others right to opinion. I hope this university will open their doors to us, guide us when we are wrong, and help us learn from our experiences. However I hope no one will judge us too harshly for daring to do right.

Hockey Team Rallies

By PATRICK TORPEY

The Villanova Ice Hockey has just come off one of the most successful weeks in its history. After two very impressive wins, Delaware 9-5 and Penn 4-3, Head Coach Skip Probst proudly announced that his Villanova team "is the best amateur team in the Philadelphia area!"

Probst has every right in the world to be proud. This is the first winning record, 3-0, that Villanova Ice Hockey has seen for years. Even though they made it to the MAC championships last year, where they were defeated by the same Delaware team that they just beat, the Villanova team had a losing record. This winning record has not come easy either. Both Delaware and Penn are two of the premier teams in the area. Penn, let's not forget, plays Ivy league hockey which is some of the best in the country. The schedule doesn't get any easier. Tonight at 8:30 the Icecats have to once again face off to Delaware. This time however it will be on Delaware's home ice instead of the friendly confines of Radnor Rink.

The Delaware game, which the Icecats won 9-5 was unforgetable. Delaware plays a very rough and almost dirty brand of hockey. One long time Villanova hockey fan pointed out that Delaware was more out to hurt the Villanova players than they were going after the puck. Delaware would do such things as pinning Villanova players against the boards in front of the Delaware team so that everyone on the Delaware bench could have a shot at somehow hitting him. This type of gang mauling was typical of the way plays went.

Delaware scored first in the game, Villanova quickly answered that score with three of their own. Steve Carr and Pete Cahill scored two of the three while Bill Quinlan the assist.

Mike Kane and Gerry Murphy scored in the second period for Villanova but Delaware scored three of their own, making the score 5-4 in favor of Villanova.

Chip Kenny put the game away in the third period by scoring twice, Gerry Murphy and Steve Carr also scored to make the final score 9-5.

The Penn game was even better than the Delaware game. Mike "Chief" Alegado played excellent goal while Gerry Murphy took control of the offense and scored two goals and assisted on another to Mike Kane. Tom Curran got the winning goal off an assist by Chip Kenny. Thus ended a very important week in this years Villanova Ice Hockey season.

Rugby Action

Ruggers To Cap Season Tomorrow With Hoyas

By VERGE GREENSHORTS

Last weekend the Villanova Rugby Club upped its fall season record to eleven wins versus-two losses by beating Boston College. With only one game left to go, Villanova has put together a team many feel is the best among colleges in Pennsylvania.

For a while it looked as if the B.C. squad was not even going to make an appearance; by Saturday morning however, they arrived in small groups. Two of them had even survived a mugging in 30th Street Station. The game finally began, and it was immediately apparent that the Eagle side of A and B players would be no match for the Wildcat powerhouse. After scores by Terry "Blue" Dansdill and Fred "Bucket" DePaola, Tom Rosato pulled the old fake injury trick in order to let some younger V.U. players join in the fun. Point after point was recorded by forwards like Gio Regina and Gary "Polack" Pelkofsky, as backs Mike Abele, Tim McCarthy, and Mark Redmond had visions of Jack Daniels being force-fed to them in mass quantities. When the smoke finally cleared, Villanova had a 38-0 victory on their hands, their sixth shutout of the season.

The B game followed this conquest, but was terminated upon the arrival of two steel barrels containing some mysterious liquid. Later on, the party was moved to the King of Prussia Zoo, where much window breaking, curtain tearing, and other Wojtkun-like activities occurred.

This week the ruggers travel to Georgetown for their annual onslaught of the nation's capital. Can the Cats continue their four year domination of the Hoyas? Will Mark Civil-man continue his streak of tries in seven of the last nine games? Will Dan "Swine" Ward maintain his tradition of mentally and physically abusing anything or on that walks and talks in the city? To find out, don't bother traveling all the way to Georgetown; just read this article in the next issue.

Maree Establishes Himself

By JAY COOK

If you've been following the Villanova cross country team this year you already know who Sydney Maree is. You probably know that he's the number one runner on Villanova's IC4A champion cross country team. You probably know that he won the IC4A individual title this year too. And you probably know that he's a sub-four minute miler.

There are, however, a lot of things about Sydney that you don't know.

Sydney is a native of the city of Pretoria in the Republic of South Africa. He attended Vlakfontein High School where, in addition to being a star athlete, he was President of the Student Council.

Another interesting fact is that Sydney has been running track for less than four years. It was in 1975 that Sydney, a star soccer player, was encouraged by an alert coach to try on some spikes and hit the track.

And hit the track he did, becoming district 800 and 1500 meter champ as well as the captain of both his school and province track teams.

But it wasn't until an invitational meet in Port Elisabeth that Sydney established himself as a world class runner. In the feature mile race Sydney battled Colin Dale, and, in an exciting finish, won the race in 3:57.9. In the process he became the first Black South African ever to break the four minute mile barrier, became a national sports hero and picked up the nickname "Black Flash."

Since coming to Villanova Sydney has established himself as one of the best runners in America. In his first ever cross country season last year Sydney finished tenth in the IC4A championships. He went on to establish himself as a real threat during the indoor season and ran a 4:01.6 mile at the Philadelphia Track Classic. This was to be his last race of the indoor season, however, as he came down with a leg stress fracture.

Sydney spent the next several months in and out of several casts and seemed unlikely to compete in spring track. In April he finally shed his cast and started to train

Cats Barely Edged By Blue Hens

By TOM McCORMICK

The Wildcats lost a heart-breaker this past week to Delaware 23-22. The near capacity crowd at Delaware Stadium saw their home team barely escape a tremendous second-half comeback by Villanova. It was an exciting, action packed game that was decided by breaks, and for most of the afternoon Delaware was on the receiving end of those breaks.

On its first possession, the Villanova offense gave the ball away deep in its own territory on a fumbled pitch. Delaware capitalized by kicking a 36 yard field goal. The Wildcat offense bounced back on its next possession, sustaining an 83 yard drive, capped by Vince Thompson following Chet Zalesky's block to score untouched from the five yard line. The snap on the extra point was bobbled and holder Bob Loscalzo was stopped attempting to run the ball across the goal line. This was a bad omen for the Villanova kicking unit. The first period ended with Villanova on top 6-3.

In the second quarter there were breakdowns in the Villanova defensive secondary, while the Delaware defense swarmed on the Wildcat wishbone to hold it scoreless. Early in the second period, Delaware split-end, Pete Ravettine, burned the middle of the Villanova secondary on a 44 yard touchdown reception. After a poor Villanova punt and a 15 yard penalty, Delaware was on the scoreboard again with fullback Bo Dennis carrying it in for the touchdown on a 16 yard run. The Villanova offense was handcuffed in this period, and after a series of punts Delaware put together an 81 yard scoring drive, which was highlighted by a 49 yard reception by Ravettine, who once again found an opening in the middle of the Villanova secondary. Villanova had a challenge awaiting when they left the locker room for the second half down 23-6.

Villanova kicked off to start the second-half and rover back, Bernie Hober, ignited the Villanova attack by making a big tackle on third down forcing Delaware to punt. The Wildcat offense followed suit going 54 yards with Shawn Passman taking the ball off right tackle, Joe Arcidiancono, for the last five yards. Quarterback Pat O'Brien passed to tight end Paul Columbia for the two point conversion to make the score 23-14. Charlie Kelly's interception gave Villanova the ball back but the offense stalled and was forced to punt. A coffin corner punt by Joe Borajkiewicz put the Delaware offense in a hole at their own three yard line. The Wildcat defense did not give an inch. Howie Long nailed the Delaware punter after one snap was dropped in the end zone for a safety. The third period was all Villanova as they crept to within seven points.

The fourth period opened with a perfectly executed fleaflicker by the Villanova offense. Pat O'Brien passed seven yards to wide receiver Dennis McCauley, who, in turn, lateraled to the trailing Mike Gold, who took the ball 54 yards up the sideline to the Delaware two. Vince Thompson hit the middle, behind center Pat McEvoy, for the score. The point after attempt was missed, and the score remained Delaware 23, Villanova 22.

A sack by defensive end, Tom Jensen, thwarted a Delaware drive and Villanova had the ball back with five minutes remaining in the game. A twelve yard pass to Paul Columbia and runs by Vince Thompson and Pat O'Brien put Villanova within field goal range. Freshman place-kicker, Chuck Bushbeck, came on to the field with 3:16 remaining to attempt a 28 yard field goal from a tough angle on the left hash mark. Said Bushbeck of missing the kick, "I was trying to aim for the left post. The wind was blowing right to left, but I hit it too hard. I shanked it."

There is nothing to do but look ahead to the final game of the season against Temple. Coach Bedesem was disgusted after the game, citing various individual mistakes and stating, "We were kicking their butts and they could not even stratch their noses in the second-ahlf." The Wildcats will learn from the mistakes and the team, who are now five and five, will be due for some breaks when they face Temple on November 25 at Veterans Stadium.

Women Harriers PAIAW Champs

By MARY ELLEN BORKOWSKI

The cross country, under Coach Jim Thompson, finished a very successful season by capturing their first invitational trophy on Sunday at the Belmont Plateau.

The Wildcats defeated second place West Chester State College, 23-32, to win the PAIAW Cross Country Championship. This is the first time that Villanova has defeated West Chester in either track or cross country.

Junior Brigid Leddy led all finishers to finish in 17:10. Second across the line was Doriane Lambelet in 17:59. Other scorers for the Wildcats included Katie Thompson (5th place) in 18:50, Jennifer Whitfield (6th place) in 18:51 and Carol Gilsinger (9th place) in 19:44.

The team will have a one month layoff before they begin the indoor season. On Dec. 10, the Wildcats will participate in a meet at Princeton against Rutgers, St. John's, West Chester State and Princeton.

Any girl who is interested in running indoor or outdoor track should report to the track Monday through Friday from 3:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. for practice or contact Coach Thompson at ext. 246.

Flag Football Champs

The Maulers, Fedigan Pub, and DPE were the only teams to complete the 1978 intramural football regular season without a loss. Joining 13 other squads in the playoffs, these three teams remain in contention for the championship, to be played on Austin Field, this Sunday at 2:00.

In first round action, upsets took place as Jaws, led defensively by Joe Grolio, blanked the attack. Other surprises included the Farmers win over the rugged Mountain Men (starring Tom Murray and Bob Hanlon) and the Sun Kings triumph over the Black Sheep. SPE, featuring a sterling performance by junior Jack Jerret, was eliminated by a veteran Wreckless Abandon team.

In the quarterfinals, the Maulers held off a late charge by the Gators to preserve a 19-14 verdict, moving them into the semi-finals, along with DPE, who edged the Sun Kings. Fedigan Pub, scoring on a flea-flicker pass from Phil Regan to Rich Talamo, defeated the Farmers (featuring Tom Kubelis) and will be joined by the winner of the Wreckless Abandon-Jaws game.

The Maulers, last years runner-up team, are led defensively by safety Kevin Cassidy, a ballhawk in the secondary, and by Middle guard Tony Dimiglio, who has been hampered by injuries throughout the season. On offense, Fran Grandiere totes the pigskin while the passing combination of Steve "Zoid" Buontiorno to Tight end Dave Fawe ranks as one of the best in the league. Joe "Knucklehead" Ingemi, a star lineman for the Maulers, says that Fawe "hasn't dropped a pass all year!"

DPE, featuring QB Joe Hoban and TE Steve "Mad Dog" Hague, rolled to the fraternity league championship virtually unopposed. Remaining undefeated and unscored upon into the playoffs, DPE has looked impressive.

A sophomore dominated Fedigan Pub squad is captained by Ed Rohrbacker. He joins QB Schmidt, Peter Ferrarri and either Phil Regan or Rodney Roeske in the backfield behind an outstanding offensive line. The defense anchored by Brian "Baby Hulk" McKenna, has surrendered just 12 points all year. Bill Craig's towering punts keep opponents pinned deep in their own territory.

Wreckless Abandon, (6-1) in the regular season, features LB Mike Russomano and lineman Art Laschonik. As of this writing, Wreckless Abandon has to defeat an upstart Jaws team, featuring Joe Grolio and Terry Byrnes, to get into the semi-final round.

Dino Valente, a spokesman for the intramural department, revealed "there are more teams this year who deserve to make the playoffs than last year. There were three or four quality teams that we couldn't accommodate in the playoff system due to its structure."

Valente, Joseph Grolio and Phil Farrell joined efforts to run this year's intramural football program and this writer, for one, would like to take this opportunity to thank them for a job well done. Thanks also to the referees, whose efforts are generally unappreciated. They performed well under adverse conditions, keeping control of games in which competitive tempers frequently flared.

As the season draws to a close, make an effort to come out and watch the CHAMPIONSHIP game this Sunday at 2:00 on Austin Field. You will be rejewarded by the play of two fine teams vying for the 1978 Villanova Intramural Football Title.

Hoop Exhibition

Villanova head coach Rollie Massimino has selected four of his five starters for this Friday's game against St. Mary's of Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Coach Massimino, who plans to have "a fast team, a tall team, a fat team and a skinny team," will use 6-10 Marty Caron as the pivot-man of his "tall team" which will face the Huskies. Canada's national champs must also face one of the top sophomore forwards in the country in 6-8 Alex Bradley.

The backcourt will consist of 6-2 Rory Sparrow and 6-0 Steve Lincoln, both of whom lettered in Villanova's 20-6 season last year.

The only spot still in the contested in the starting forward position. Mike Saxe is in a toss up between Bill Berry (6-6) and 6-7 freshman Aaron Howard. "I plan to alternate both Larry and Aaron the first three games (Villanova plays the Puerto Rico national team on Friday and Saturday, November 24 and 25)," said Massimino. "I plan to change the line-up quite a bit the first few games.

St. Mary's will play Villanova as the second opponent in a four-team tour of the States. Last season's 23-11 Huskies travel to Duke on Thursday.

Following the Villanova game, St. Mary's stays in Philadelphia to play St. Joseph's on Saturday. On Sunday, there is a game with Fairfield. Tickets will be sold at the door with a general admission charge of $1.50 for the 7:00 p.m. contest.

Ex-Editor Wounded In Guyana

By JOAN BARNISH

He was known for introducing freedom of the press to the Villanova campus, opposing the Vietnam war before it was fashionable and most recently was the first one to be wounded in the gunfire on Nov. 18 that killed U.S. Rep. J. Ryan (D-Calif.) and four others on a remote airstrip in Guyana.

A 1967 Villanova graduate, Ron Javers was working as a reporter for the San Francisco Chronicle when the incident occurred.

Javers received a shoulder wound before running for cover in the nearby swamp. He was later flown to Washington, D.C. for medical attention and en route he dictated what was known to be one of the first eyewitness accounts of the ambush.

Javers, a former editor-in-chief of the Villanovan in 1966-67, taught in the Philadelphia School Dist. for a couple of years before taking a position on the Bucks County Courier Times. In 1971 Javers moved to the Philadelphia Daily News where he later progressed to associate editor. He took a leave from the Daily News in 1975 to attend Harvard on the Nieman Fellowship and upon completion returned to the Daily News until his most recent move to the Chronicle in January 1978.

While at Villanova, Javers was said to be somewhat of a revolutionary who opposed the Vietnam War from its earliest stages.

"I won't call him a radical, I'd rather say he was concerned with putting a substantive and critical newspaper together," said Dr. Nicholas Rongione, a Villanova business law professor and associate editor under the Javers' Villanovan staff.

"He believed in thorough examination of academic and administrative life at Villanova. We weren't radicals but let's say we were committed," continued Rongione.

His major contribution to the Villanovan was the introduction of freedom of the press; before 1966 the newspaper had been published with more control exerted by the University.

"Javers was a very strong editor," said Fr. Louis Rongione, O.S.A., head librarian and former moderator of the Villanovan in 1966. "He wasn't afraid of making any strong opinions or going out on a limb."

Warren Richardson, chairman of speech communications, said Javers was one of the most creative students he's ever had.

"Some of the things I've read of his are quite well done," said Richardson.

"He is a dynamic person and I'm very happy he survived," added Fr. Rongione.

New Withdrawal Policy Approved

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

The University Senate rejected a new overload policy, but approved a University-wide course withdrawal policy at its November 17 meeting.

Had the overload policy motion passed, academic load levels would have been determined for each program in the University. Students would have been required to pay for any courses taken over these set limits.

The major objection was that the makers of the motion provided no evidence that students who took overloads were doing poorly academically, or that the University was suffering significant revenue loss due to course overloads. Senator Cathy Pelesky pointed out that the motion "addressed an academic issue with a financial posture."

Submitted by Senator Alvin Clay on behalf of the Sub-Committee on Academic Quality Control, the overload policy was defeated 21 to 8.

The Senate unanimously approved the new withdrawal policy. This policy states that students be permitted to withdraw from any course during the first five weeks of the semester. To withdraw after five weeks, a student must hand his Dean a statement of justifiable cause and written recommendation from the instructor and the instructor's chairperson.

Also unanimously approved was a motion from the student caucus that student Senate representation from the College of Arts and Science be reapportioned. At the next student election, Art students will vote for three senators and Science students will elect one. Formerly, all students from the College of Arts and Science simply voted for four senators.

The Senate also voted that the number of faculty members on the Standing Committees of the Board of Trustees be increased from one to two members per committee.

At the beginning of the Senate meeting, Father President John Driscoll addressed the Senate for the first time this year. He presented a list of budgetary priorities from the University administration. The purpose of this list was that the Senate Budget Committee should have a "clearer notion of the administration's priorities" when drawing up the University budget for the 1979-80 year, he said. This list divided into five basic concerns: academic excellence, student life, financial stability, institutional character, and university planning.

Illness Strikes Campus

By JERRY DOUGHERTY

Thanksgiving had an unusually special meaning for some three-hundred students of Villanova. By the arrival of the holiday, they were giving thanks for having overcome the uncomfortable and painful effects of a virus that swept through the campus the week of November 12.

Neither the strain of the virus nor the contracting agent has been conclusively identified. The symptoms of the virus included nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, abdominal cramps, fever, chills, and body-ache. As the symptoms varied, so did the time over which they were felt; some persons suffered from the virus for four or five days while others were rid of the symptoms in 24 hours.

The high number of cases reporting similar symptons first came to light on November 12 with a few dozen virus victims reporting to the campus infirmary. The next day fifty-four cases were treated.

These statistics, and the virus' severe symptoms, prompted University Physician Dr. Denis A. Boyle to call in the Radnor Twp. Health Office and the Pennsylvania Dept. of Health's local office. These two agencies visited the campus on November 14 and 15. Radnor officials took samples of campus water and state investigators gathered data and information on various aspects of the illness in an attempt to find a common causal denominator among the infected persons. SPIRITUAL EXERCISE

In a time when much emphasis is put on physical fitness, it is good to remember we need "spiritual exercise". Prayer, worship, and a concern for others strengthen the spirit of love and fellowship with God and man.

Those who are seeking to develop greater spiritual strenghts are needed to work with the spiritually and materially abandoned. You may be among those called to serve as a spiritual leader.

Trinity Missions is seeking young men who want to become spiritual leaders. You can learn more about us and our work by contacting us. You may also discover some spiritual insights about yourself.

Peace Conference Scheduled at V.U.

In October, 1976, more than 1,000 delegates from Catholic dioceses around the country attended a Bicentennial "Call to Action" Conference in Detroit. The conference outlined some of the many concerns of American Catholics as our nation entered its third century. Among the most important topics discussed there and later reinforced by the National Conference of Catholic Bishops was the Church's continued concern for peace and justice for all human beings. The Bishops, in fact, encouraged dioceses throughout the country to "develop new models of justice education at all levels" as well as "research and evaluation projects in this area."

Following this course of action, the Archdiocese of Philadelphia's Commission for World Peace and Justice will sponsor "A Day of Awakening to Do the Work of Justice" on Saturday, December 9, at the Villanova University Law School. The conference will provide teachers, students and other interested adults with information on the various causes of social injustice and how the Church can promote a better understanding of these conditions at the local level.

Archbishop John Roach of the Archdiocese of Minneapolis-St. Paul will open the conference with a 9:00 a.m. keynote address on "The Church and Its Commitment to Justice." After a morning workshop session, Cardinal John Krol will concelebrate a noontime liturgy for conference participants. An afternoon workshop session and general summary meeting will conclude the day at 3:45 p.m.

Guest workshop leaders will include Msgr. George Higgins, Secretary of Research for the United States Catholic Conference (U.S.C.C.), who will speak on the issue of human rights. Msgr. Higgins served as a consultant at the 1977 Belgrade Conference on the Helsinki Human Rights Agreement. An expert on labor relations, he is on the Board of Public Review for the United Auto Workers and writes a syndicated column on social issues for Catholic newspapers.

Rev. Bryan Hehir, Ph.D., a member of the Papal delegation to the United Nations General Assembly and Associate Secretary for International Justice and Peace for the U.S.C.C., will talk on the issue of economic justice. Father Hehir, whose forte is international relations, gave a major presentation at the 41st International Eucharistic Congress in 1976.

New Game Room Burglarized

By STEVE HAGGERTY

Sometime during the early morning hours of Friday, November 10, the new game room located in the basement of Sullivan Hall, was broken into and robbed.

Several of the machines, including pinball and other electronic games, were pried open and their coin boxes emptied. Most of the money in the machines had been collected the day before by ARA, the company that services the machines. As a result, only a small amount of money was lost.

The lid of a zip top can was found wedged in one of the doors preventing it from locking properly. It is believed that this enabled the burglars to enter the room after it was closed to the public.

The matter is being investigated by campus security. It is believed that the crime was committed by Villanova students.

Game Room Coordinator Don Bailey, a resident of Sullivan Hall, was discouraged by the burglary. "It is a shame because the University put a lot of money and effort into creating this recreation room. It doesn't seem right that one or two students should wreck that," Bailey stated.

Dean of Men Allan B. Wechsler visited the game room to inspect the damage. He too saw the incident as unfortunate.

"This is certainly not the type of thing we like to see happen. But these things do occur. ARA realizes this and so do we," Wechsler said.

To prevent any similar incidents in the future, security has been tightened. Dean Wechsler feels this should alleviate the problem. "Bars have been put on all the machines and campus security is keeping an eye on the place along with some other precautions I'd rather not mention for security reasons," explained Wechsler.

As to the future of the game room, a Pizza Palace will soon be opening. This will provide the residents of Sullivan Hall as well as Sheehan with a convenient place to buy snacks. Girls are permitted in the room even during non-visitation hours.

Bailey feels that the recreation center has great potential. It fulfills a useful purpose on Villanova's campus. "The game room can be a great meeting spot for students. It provides them with a place to go, buy refreshments and have a good time," Bailey said.

Dean Wechsler explained that the recreation centers in both Sullivan and Stanford are important to the campus life. Despite the problems, the University will continue to support the game rooms.

"These are worthwhile projects. We've been fortunate in not having too many problems with the game room in Stanford and with the new precautions expect the Sullivan room to be the same way, Wechsler said.

Visitation Policy Updated

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

Recent questioning of Villanova's visitation policy by a group of residents at a November 8th meeting of the RSA (Resident Student Association) Campus Council has sparked new interest concerning parietal rights.

To gain a more clear understanding of the issue it would be useful to view visitation from three perspectives — the previous policy of visitation, the present state of policy, and the possible directions such a policy might take in the future.

Visitation is a fairly recent occurrence at Villanova. Before September of 1976 it was practically nonexistent with the exception of Saturdays of home football games between the hours of 2:00-8:00 p.m.

Prior to 1976, most notably in April of 1974, the visitation policy (or lack of it) invoked student demonstrations resulting in administration rejections of proposed changes because of proposedly irrational methods in which student leaders demanded implementation.

What occurred to change the previous policy on visitation began with the arrival of Father John Deegan, vice-president for student life and a new proposal — "the package": "Upon arriving at Villanova in June, 1976, stated Deegan, I found an impasse between the Students and the Board of Trustees, predominantly on the issue of parietals."

In September, 1976 Deegan requested permission from the Board to experiment along the lines of a general student development model. His "package" was a new approach to "aid in the development of student life, particularly in establishing a greater sense of community and interdependence within residence halls. The "package" entailed affording students greater responsibility for formulating and implementing programs, activities, and policies. Specifically, the plan of action called for the development of RSA Councils, Judicial Hearing Boards, limited visitation in the form of an experiment, and establishing social, cutural, and spiritual programs in the halls. The "package" emphasized many aspects of student life, not simple visitation.

The "package" was approved on September 14, 1976 by the Board of Trustees.

Now, some two and a half years later what is the present state of visitation?

A limited visitor's policy is now in effect during the following times: Fridays — 6:00 p.m.-1:00 a.m., Saturdays — 12:00 Noon-1:00 a.m., and Sundays from 12:00 Noon to 11:00 p.m. This is near maximum hours under the guidelines of the experiment. At present, visitation is operating on a semesterly reporting and evaluation. In terms of Resident life the RSA is functioning, Judicial Hearing Boards are in place and about to function, and improvements on dorms are continuing in the third year of a five year program.

However, the question arises concerning the expansion of visitation to weeknights: "At present we cannot experiment with weekly visitation under the existing guidelines," declared Deegan at an address to the Campus Council and residents Wednesday night.

"The current program is up for evaluation by the Board of Trustees in September of 1979," stated Deegan.

Deegan noted that we must first tighten up our present policy and evaluate the existing situation before considering new changes. The Board evaluation in 1979 would make any changes before then impossible.

Coleen Corcoran, RSA president, also echoed Deegan's view, noting that she is in favor of expanded visitation but that we must work on the present policy and see that it is functioning.

Deegan also welcomed the formation of an Ad Hoc Committee on visitation which will evaluate policy, survey student opinion, and help to demonstrate to the Board that the present policy is responsible and being implemented properly.

In other student life areas Deegan addressed himself to the alcohol situation, reaffirming University support for the student and stating that guidelines are being tested with the liquor Control Board. He also noted that a proposal for drinking at Graduate school wine and cheese parties where there is no fee being charged to get in and where all concerned are over 21 years of age has been rejected by the LCB.

In other matters, Deegan expressed his concern over fire safety, noting that weekly establishing of the condition of fire equipment and drills are a necesity. He also expressed his dismay with those who tamper with equipment, noting that those responsible for such actions will be dealt with severly.

Deegan also stated his and the University's hope that the Radnor Zoning Board will approve zoning for the recently acquired Morris Estates to satisfy Villanova's increasing need for resident space.

In other developments at the Campus Council meeting, a resident proposed that in lieu of Villanova's visitation policy and the alcohol situation that two letters should be sent out — one to

Snow Freezes Indian Summer

Almanac Predicts Rerun of 1978

Monday, the Villanova grounds were covered with just enough snow and slush to make walking to class an annoyance.

The Maintenance department said it did receive complaints, but there was not much trouble because of the snow. Maintenance is preparing for the winter months with new equipment, salt and new snow melting chemicals. Students will also be helping with snow removal this year. "we're using as many people as we can to get us out of any mess we may get into," said one of the Maintenance staff.

Not quite enough snow fell to cancel classes. "Because we have such a large number of resident students, we ordinarily do not cancel classes," said Father President John Driscoll.

Driscoll emphasized that though classes may be cancelled the school and University services remain open.

Swimmers Open Tomorrow

By BETH WHITE

Since the 1978-79 competitive season begins Saturday, December 2 with a meet at East Stroudsburg, the swimming Wildcat co-captains Eric Wenger and Kevin Quinn have led the team through a rigorous practice schedule and are hoping that the team's extra efforts will be reflected in a winning season.

Four morning and five afternoon practices weekly straight through the Thanksgiving vacation, combined with Nautilus weight-training program, should ready the team for a victory over East Stroudsburg.

The Blue and White meet, an inter-squad competition used to build team spirit and prepare the freshmen especially for collegiate competition, revealed some promising talent. Eric Wenger and Cameron LaWerance have freestyle times possibly good enough to qualify for the NCAAs. The freestyle department is also fortified with juniors Jerry Byrne and Ted Brufke. Steve Quindlen leads the butterfly events, especially in the 200 meter and medley segments. Seniors Doug Vance and Lou Petrozellio dominate the breaststroke, and senior Ted Klinges captains the diving squad, rounding out the events.

Co-captain Eric Wenger, a senior education major, swims sprint, distance, and medley freestyle events, while Kevin Quinn, a senior marketing major adds to the ranks of the team's strong freestyle sprinters.

Eric and Kevin both express special gratitude toward Jack Medica, the team's starter and the core of team spirit, and Coach Ed Geisz. The team hopes to gain five wins as soon as possible since that will make Coach Geisz's 200th victory, a remarkable accomplishment for any coach.

Campus Illness

state had both ill and healthy students fill out forms, asking for such things as foods eaten, where they ate, and the sort of symptoms, if any, they experienced.

Even as the health officers were going about their tasks, the number of sickened persons grew. On November 14, 119 new cases were reported and 49 more appeared the following day. By Friday the number of new cases had decreased markedly. The short, yet severe epidemic had come to an end.

During the epidemic, the infirmary's basic treatment for the symptoms of the virus was to prescribe a liquid diet for 24 hours and administer a palliative for the diarrhea.

When it became known that some water had been taken for testing, it was rumored throughout the dorms that the water was somehow involved in the outbreak of the virus.

Dr. Boyle tends to discount the rumors concerning the water, and is of the opinion that the virus is airborne and common to the university: "We have had another bout with a constantly occurring virus which causes NVD (nausea, vomiting, diarrhea), this bout being more severe in symptoms but shorter in length."

As of Tuesday, November 28, neither the state health office nor the Radnor health office had completed their respective tests. Rev. John E. Deegan, O.S.A., vice-president for student life, expects Radnor Twp. to have its results of the water tests soon. The state results are not expected for a few weeks.

Our Problems Aren't Unique

After stuffing myself on that much-welcomed home cooking, visiting with the family and watching the Penn State comeback, I met an old high school friend who now serves on the Undergraduate Cabinet of the University of Delaware, and while collegiate politics was the last thing I wanted to discuss, she had a few interesting insights into the problems and progress of another large local university.

Delaware's Undergraduate Cabinet has apparently achieved what our SGA has sought for so long — they meet regularly with both administration officials and members of the Board of Trustees to advise and offer suggestions. And yet, they are not free from criticism, for while the University has an elected student government, these students are picked by the administration and, like our own Senate, can only make recommendations and have no power to implement change.

Delaware's image seems to be that of the typical state school, full of football, frats and parties, but the University is plagued by a problem similar to our LCB controversy. Situated in a state where the drinking age is 20, University administrators placed a ban on all open parties early this fall after protests by local residents. Delaware's Inter-Fraternity Council, a much more powerful organization at this school where frat houses border the campus, set up its own rules to police members. The University realizes the strain placed on its social life, my friend reports, and is seeking solutions.

Cultural arts programs fail to elicit a response at Delaware just as they do at Villanova, and many artistically noteworthy events depend on community support for survival. Student leaders ponder means of motivating a seemingly disinterested student body down in Newark just as they do on the Main Line.

Administrators and students who are trying to achieve a goal at the University of Delaware meet the same challenges...

So take heart, administrators and students who are trying to achieve a goal at the University of Delaware meet the same challenges that face their counterparts at Villanova. And while the roadblocks are there, they go on, a few working for the benefit of many.

WHY IS THIS RACE DRIVER GRINNING?

Some say it's because he gave up a promising film career to head up the Budweiser Racing Team!

But the real reason is that he just likes to win. And he did plenty of that this past season in a pair of Budweiser-sponsored, Bob Sharp-prepared Datsun race cars.

Fifteen races: Twelve wins! On the pole eight times! Three track records!

And in the SCCA National Championships at Road Atlanta, he took a second place in his C-Production Datsun 280-Z . . . and a third in the B-Sedan category with his Datsun 200-SX.

Naturally, we congratulate him for his super season and wish him even greater success in '79.

A Touch Of Ancient Egypt At V.U.

By SUZANNE TAVANI

Out of the mystical lands of Ancient Egypt, from the world of the striking Empress Cleopatra, Tut, the boy King, the mighty Pharaohs, the great Pyramids, the vast desert, and the powerful Nile, come treasures — symbols of this culture — which have lasted throughout the tumultuous march of civilization. Some of these treasures are now on exhibit in the Reserve Room Showcase at Falvey Library until December 16.

The Egyptian Art Exhibit, part of the University of Pennsylvania's Ancient Art and Archeological Museum's vast collection is on loan to Villanova.

Although the original collection is comprised of an assortment of objects, the Falvey exhibit focuses on two categories, those of everyday use such as pottery, cosmetic items, jewelry, and amulets, and those of religious significance, usually found in tombs and temples, such as figurines of gods and goddesses.

Many of the everyday items used in ancient Egypt are still a part of contemporary living although the materials have been changed. A water-jug made of fine, burnished red-black clay can be compared to a modern water pitcher made of crystal or silver. Of the figurines, winner of the most unusual award is Thearis: Isis Nursing Horus, patroness of motherhood. This goddess resembles a combination lion, hippopotamus, and crocodile. I don't believe of ever hearing an old wives tale or myth coming close to that!

Another interesting item associated with the Egyptian notion of life after death is the Shawabti figures placed in the tomb to do any task that the deceased might be called upon to perform.

The most fascinating object in the collection is "Mummy of a Child." Experts believe that the child died of hydrocephaly (enlarged skull) and then buried in the customary manner. Original wrappings have been lost or decayed over the thousands of years, leaving only a black leather-like skin preserved by the dry Egyptian climate.

As a help on this trip, I advise you to pick up a copy of a guidesheet which explains all 26 items. They are available at the Library's check-in desk.

On exhibit until December 8, is a collection of paintings by area artists, part of the travelling exhibit sponsored by the Philadelphia chapter of "Artists Equity," part of a national guild for artists. This collection of 29 paintings, and drawings are all by "unknown" artists, each exemplifying a different style of expression. Some are abstract, some realistic, and some watercolor. All are on sale to the public.

Ms. Cheri Leibold, instructor of Art History, encourages all to view the exhibits, "to broaden their senses, and to expand their knowledge."

V.U. Cheerleaders - Spirit, Ability And Lots of Dedication

There are only two forces in the world, the sword and the spirit. In the long run, the sword will always be conquered by the spirit.
Napoleon Bonaparte

What is blue and white, has 48 arms and legs and screams "Let's go Wildcats!?" Why the Villanova Cheerleaders of course. All joking aside, to the Villanova Cheerleading Squad, cheerleading is a very serious business. "Cheerleaders are supposed to raise the school spirit but it is only easy when the team is winning. When the team is losing, we make a lot of noise so that the fans can start cheering also," said Patty Miele, a squad member. "Cheerleading," adds Moira Higgins, another squad member, "is not just putting on a uniform and going out on the field. We make posters, sell balloons and raffle tickets and just try and make the stadium look nice. There is not much glamour being a cheerleader here at Villanova, but I have a feeling inside of me that I am supporting the team and that I am trying to help them win."

So cheerleading isn't just jumping around and yelling "Sis, boom, ba!" No sir. As a matter-of-fact it is similar to a varsity team in many respects. Before school starts, the cheerleaders attend camp for one week. Each day they put in twelve or more hours of practice, which starts at 8:00 a.m. And just like any varsity team, the cheerleading squad has its share of injuries as sprained ankles are frequent occurrences. Patty Miele comments, "We have to prove the dedication of our squad by what people go through."

When the word "dedication" appears, the name Bonny Partenope also appears. Partenope a General Arts major, concentrating in Communication Arts, is the captain and spiritual advisor of the cheerleaders.

Partenope states that the purpose of the cheerleaders is to create enthusiasm in the school. "We represent the team, we try to organize spirit. Instead of everyone yelling something different, it works better if everyone is yelling the same thing to cheer the team on to victory."

Since there is no cheerleading coach, (Mary Aceto is the moderator) the squad depends on Partenope's vivid imagination to supply the cheers and routines. Many ideas for the stunts are usually supplied by various magazines from a cheerleading society. "Many people think that it's easy and that we are just there," she states, "on Saturday mornings we just don't go out there at 1:00, it's much more than that. I don't think that they (the students) realize the work that is involved. We work hard. There has not been one cheerleading team that has topped us in performance. I've never seen higher pyramids, or more difficult stunts.

This year we have one of the most talented group of guys and girls out there. The guys are really looked down upon, but they have the hardest job, since there are only eight of them and sixteen girls. They do twice the work."

This year there has been a lot more enthusiasm than there was consider Villanova apathetic, but I do think that the spirit can be channeled and be more organized.

Well, this article has helped Villanova cheerleading, and as the Basketball season arrives we can only cheer and watch the squad as they do more routines and higher pyramids.

Thanksgiving was fun but it's back to reality with finals ahead. We all talk about studying but when it gets right down to it, how many students know how? We all have different study habits. Who can say what is right? This weeks On Campus decided to ask the students how they go about studying and what kind of study habits they have. Here is what we heard:

"I take them one by one. I usually take each course two or three days before the exam. I try to start an overall review about ten days ahead of time."

Jim Rathe, Senior

"I usually study a week before. I study one subject a night and by the end of the week I'm studying all night."

Nancy Kalentac, Senior

Anthony Cofone, Junior

"Well, I usually start reading before, and then cram the night before the exam. Since I'm in nursing, I only have two exams so it won't be much of a problem."

Mignon Miller, Junior

"I study every night. For finals I plan to study all the time. I study in my room. The library is okay, but everyone is around."

Brad Luck, Freshman

"I don't pull all nighters. I try to begin a couple of nights ahead and do a little each night. I try to do one subject at a time because I can't study for more than one at a time."

Who Shot the Aero?

Aerosmith's Steven Tyler Injured Again

Members of Rock band, Aerosmith

By JOHN ZAGARELLA and STEPHEN CASTELLANO

October 9, 1977 — Aerosmith was about to return to the Spectrum stage for an encore after a powerhouse performance when some inconsiderate person threw an M-80 onto the stage, fragments of which injured the eye of lead singer Steven Tyler and the hand of lead guitarist Joe Perry.

It seemed that everything was going right on schedule for the Aerosmith concert last Saturday evening. Aerosmith took the stage at 9:37 p.m. for what was going to be two hours of great rock and roll. However, to the capacity crowd on hand, this concert was not going to have any encores, no standing ovations or anything else that goes along with a fine performance. The crowd had bought tickets for a concert that lasted eighteen minutes. That comes to about 47 cents a minute for those who are budget conscious.

As usual, the crowd was rowdy, but this time, firecrackers weren't flying through the air — no, instead someone decided to send a half-filled bottle of Southern Comfort smashing onto the stage. Again Steven Tyler was the recipient of the injuries, this time from shattered glass.

The concert was called to a premature halt as Aerosmith had just gone into the introduction of their sixth song of their set, "Sight For Sore Eyes," from the Draw the Line Lp.

The concert commenced amidst a barrage of screams and applause as Tyler and the boys exploded into "Toys in the Attic." Hot on the heels of this classic tune was "I Wanna Know Why," from the Draw the Line album. Two oldies but goodies followed — "Mama Kin" and "S.O.S. (Too Bad)," both of which can be found on their latest Columbia release, Live Bootleg. Steve Tyler then showed his versatility on the harmonica as he played a jazzy prelude to the sexually overtoned "Big Ten Inch Record" from the "Toys In The Attic" album. All of a sudden, during the opening chords of "Sight For Sore Eyes," Tyler was walked off stage by one of the roadies with a towel held to his face. At first, the rest of the band did not realize what happened and kept on playing. Then, after a few seconds, everyone left the stage. To say the least, the audience was confused. Minutes later, reports from a spokesman for the Spectrum said that Tyler had been hit in the face with glass and that he was "hurt bad." We were also informed that it would take some time to determine whether or not the band would resume their performance. However, at approximately 10:20 p.m., it was announced that Aerosmith had left the building. A brilliant concert in the making was cut short.

It now appears very unlikely that the native Boston quintet will ever perform in Philadelphia again. The reason boils down to one person on two different occasions who endangered the entertainers and spoiled what could have been a memorable evening of music for thousands of fans. While most people in the recording industry have very warm and good memories of this city, Aerosmith left Philadelphia once again on a sour note.

In addition to Steven Tyler on lead vocals and harmonica, band members include Joe Perry, lead guitar; Joe Kramer, drums; Tom Hamilton, bass; and Brad Whitford rhythm guitar.

Before the unexpected chaos, another heavy metal band, Golden Earring, opened the show. Golden Earring proved to please the crowd. This was especially evident when they performed their hit of a few years back, "Radar Love."

Queen Crowned at Spectrum

By JOHN ZAGARELLA

On Monday, November 20, the British rock group Queen returned to the Spectrum for their annual concert appearance. Playing before a very receptive crowd of 19,000, Queen offered a sometimes lopsided but generous itinerary of songs, both old and new. The material was basically concentrated on cuts from A Night at the Opera, News of the World, and their latest release, Jazz.

But something was missing — all of the flash and volume were there, but the progressive style that spawned such masterpieces as "Bohemian Rhapsody" has now turned into a much more predictable hard rock approach to their music.

Queen got off to a roaring start with a splendid up-tempo version of last year's "We Will Rock You." This was one of the highlights of the show. Freddie Mercury, the band's lead singer, came running out in a black leather suit and sunglasses. All he needed was a safety pin through his cheek and he would have looked like a typical punk.

The fact that his voice cracked more than a few times coupled with the fact that Freddie chickened out on some of his traditional high notes during the concert is evidence that perhaps Mercury has seen better days. It should also be noted that the band totally ignored their first two albums, Queen I and Queen II, and played only three songs from Sheer Heart Attack. Among them was their first AM smash, "Killer Queen." Evidence once again that Queen is leaving behind their progressive image.

Freddie Mercury, John Deacon, Brian May, Roger Taylor

However, with all of the flaws considered, there were brilliant moments. Aside from the opener, other pinnacles included a bizarre version of "Get Down, Make Love." And as the spotlight was centered on a smaller stage descending from the ceiling, Mercury and company proceeded to add a touch of intimacy to an 'Evening with Queen.' Included in this segment were stirring ver-

Tom Waits at Academy

Waits at Academy

By STEVE BRECHBIEL

Not too many years ago, two shows at the Main Point were enough to satisfy the Philadelphia fans of Tom Waits. Now, it appears, one night at the Academy of Music is not enough. For the second consecutive year, the gravel-voiced balladeer of the bowery bum played for a full house in the confines of the usually tame Academy.

To describe Waits is no small task; he enters in what appears to be a comatose state, rubbing his eyes and stretching his tired body in all directions. He begins his first number, leaning on the mike stand as he sings. Actually, leaning is a poor word if that stand was not there, one is sure he would fall over and sing while lying on the stage.

A better description might be to call him an "underground" Harry Chapin. Then again, the only trait the two have in common is they both tell stories. Waits' stage appearance makes one believe he has been literally, on the streets of skid row, and has come back to tell the story.

The music of Tom Waits is nearly as shocking as his looks. The formula is a basic one: take one bass, heavy tenor sax, sprinkle with drums, light lead guitar, moderate piano, saturate with rasping low voice, and you have something like "Christmas Card From a Hooker in Minneapolis." From his latest album, "Blue Valentine," a lady of the evening sends a note to a former customer, Charlie, telling him how she is

Watership Down

The Rabbit Speaks

One of the stars of Watership Down

By JEANNE SALVATORE

"Watership Down" is a movie based on the tremendously successful book by Richard Adams. The movie is a suspenseful epic drama whose heroes are rabbits. One of these rabbits, a timid young fellow named Fiver, is clairvoyant and has a vision that their "underground city" is going to be destroyed. The rabbits, who believe him, go on a dangerous and exciting journey in search of a new home.

"Watership Down" is animated, yet these rabbits are not the cute, conventional cartoon characters that people are accustomed to viewing. These rabbits never defy the laws of nature and cannot comprehend the danger and meaning of man-made hazards, such as roads and train tracks. Yet these rabbits have human intelligence and traits such as courage, hate, love and ambition. This combination of humanness and animal instinct creates a realistic display of violence. These rabbits kill and get killed for purely instinctual reasons, while the added dimension of intelligence creates a sophisticated situation.

The movie is absolutely fascinating because Adams created a world that is seen totally through the eyes of rabbits. It is easy to get totally engrossed in this rabbit reality because it contains elements of the human world while having beliefs and mythology of its own. The movie presents a rabbit's version of creation while trying to explain the existence of evil in the world. The film can be viewed on many levels and has surprising depth.

"Watership Down" is extremely interesting. The animation is a true representation of life while containing a sense of magic. The film, like the book, is destined to be a classic.

happily married, "quit smoking dope and gave up drinking whiskey." She sounds totally reformed until the very end, when she asks him for money to pay a lawyer — she is "eligible for parole, come Valentine's Day."

The second star of last week's show came from the "heavy tenor sax" of Herbert Hardessey, a New Orleans veteran who played with the finesse for which that area is so well-known. A very receptive audience was treated to an exceptional solo during a rousing version of "Romeo is Bleeding." Waits brought him out to center stage for this one, and that performance was enough to earn a standing ovation.

Probably most impressive is the emotion Waits packs into his more sensitive songs. "Tom Traubert's Blues," his second encore, is the cry of a dying man to his lost love; tacky as the theme sounds, the deep-rooted power within it warms even the coldest heart — and wets many an eye.

No, not everyone can appreciate his show. At times, it is downright impossible to understand what he is saying; at others, one may wish they did not. I am sure the Academy's employees, used to Bach and Strauss, were none too pleased with his spitting on the stage.

Opening for Tom was Leon Redbone, another Main Point frequent, whose style evolves around some very old guitar songs and some very old licks. His songs are the ones your grandfather sings after a few too many. As hopeless as it sounds, it works. If nothing else, a strange act is probably the most effective way to open for another strange act. Redbone not to be confused with the group, is strange.

Basically, one should be slightly disoriented and mentally imbalanced to understand Waits. For a real thrill, take someone who has never seen or heard him to one of his shows; they will finally understand what is wrong with you, or suddenly realize they are just as crazy. Unfortunately, he probably will not be around till next year . . . seeing him more than once in twelve months has been determined dangerous to your health.

sions of "39", "Love of My Life," and the best of the new material presented, "The Dreamers' Ball." The concert unofficially ended with "Tie Your Mother Down" and, as the matches were put ablaze, followed by the foot stomping ceremony, Queen appeared once again to play a convincing, better-than-studio version of "Sheer Heart Attack," from News of the World. This time Mercury was running around in a ridiculous red sequin suit. The outfit and his arrogance were totally unnecessary. As the band left again, the audience was stomping out the beat of "We Will Rock You." Queen returned again for a superb encore that consisted of a more familiar rendition of "We Will Rock You," followed by "We Are the Champions." At the termination of this tune, a prerecorded tape played "God Save the Queen," marking the end of the Queen concert, at least until next November.

Despite the imperfections, Queen managed to put on a very good show. They played for 2 hours straight — no intermission and no supporting act. It was refreshing to see a concert go on for more than 90 minutes — they rarely do these days.

The band members, all of whom have college degrees, include Freddie Mercury, lead vocal; John Deacon, bass; Roger Taylor, drums; and Brian May, guitar.

Women's Hoop Beats Textile 65-38

By MARY GRACE MURRAY

The women's basketball team opened their season on Tuesday night with an impressive win over Textile 65-38. A young squad starting three sophomores, one freshman and one senior never trailed throughout the game.

Villanova led a very balanced attack as Karen Hinnay was the team's high scorer with 14 points, Joan Lobron pulled down 11 rebounds and Kathy Straccia had 10 assists. Vicky Haddy led Textile with 16 points and eight rebounds.

Mixing up their defenses, going from a man to man, 3-2 zone and the full court press, the Wildkittens constantly pressured Textile for key turnovers. The zone proved the most effective as Textile worked the ball around but was unable to penetrate the middle.

After building up first half leads of 24-10, 35-20 and 39-22 at the half, Villanova came out cold at the beginning of the second half as they only scored two field goals in the first eight minutes. Textile however could only slightly close the gap to 41-30 and then Villanova got hot as they outscored Textile 24-8 in the final 11 minutes.

The Wildkittens showed their youth at times with some early team mistakes and only shooting 38% from the field but they should improve as the season wears on and mature and fulfill the team's potential to become a very competitive squad.

The team plays again tonight against Glassboro, 7:00 at the Fieldhouse.

Women's Hockey Game

By RONNIE CUBIT

On Friday, November 17, some women athletes from Villanova participated in a ice-hockey game. The game was organized and set-up by WFIL radio and the girls involved competed as the WFIL "Lovelies." The "Lovelies" match was against the University of Delaware's women "Bobcats" and was held at the Valley Forge Sports Garden.

The team had four practices prior to the ice-off with the Bobcats which were conducted by Mr. Horton of Conestoga High School. There the Lovelies learned some of the basis skills needed for hockey on ice. At the game the goalies of each team switched to play for the opposite side, since the Bobcats had been competing for some time and this helped to even the sides up. Both teams played in full uniforms and were subject to the same rules used in men's ice-hockey. Television personality Jim O'Brien was on hand at the match-up to help coach the Lovelies team.

The Villanova ice-hockey team was composed of women players from other varsity sports. Mary Beth Campanella, Maggie Horcell, Virginia Horcell, Debbie Fratantoni, Janice Lynch, Sandy Arena, Lisa Alderfer and Lorraine Ball all came from field hockey. Sue Stroud and Linda McKenna were from the soccer team and Lyn Wood was from cross-country.

The final result of the informal game was a 4-2 defeat for Villanova, but the girls had a taste of what the rough sport of ice-hockey is really like.

Cats Down Merrimack

By ELMORE SMITH

The 1978-79 Wildcats opened their season last Friday in Puerto Rico, and came out with a 2-0 record. "It was a beautiful opportunity for us to win our first two games. The people of Puerto Rico, the Basketball Federation, the director of tours, and the Villanova alumni, showed us unbelievable hospitality. It was a great experience," said Coach Massamino of the two wins. The Cats fell behind early in both contests but rallied to win 81-78, and 86-81 respectively. Down 12-2 in the beginning of the first contest, the young but tenacious Wildcats edged back to take a second half lead 45-44, with 15:01 remaining. Co-captain Rory Sparrow led the Cats with a career high 26 points. Tom Sienkewicz was 8-10 from the field, and ended the game with 16 points.

In the second game, the Cats gave up a 28-8 lead before waking up. Marty Caron and Steve Lincoln took the game over Lincoln scoring 20 points (also a career high). Caron, who managed slightly more than 20 minutes playing time, cleaned the boards for 13 rebounds, and had four blocked shots. "I thought they showed a great deal of character in foreign surroundings," said Coach Mass of the win, "They came back because of their aggressiveness."

Last Tuesday night, in their first appearance of the young '78-'79 season, in the field house, the Cats had somewhat of a breather. The final score, 108-65, was not necessarily indicative of what the Cats could have done, against a rather mediocre Merrimack team.

Alex Bradley led all scorers with 23 points, but saw little action in the second half. Opening a 24-49 lead at half time, the Cats merely had to come out in the second half and go through the motions, but instead Massamino was able to gain some invaluable game experience for his reserves. Rory Sparrow injured his left ankle early in the game, and saw no action in the second half. Marty Caron looks as if he might be coming into his own finally, as he put the ball on the floor, showing considerable authority in going to the hoop. The Cats travel to George Washington tomorrow night in their first EAA contest of the season, to take on a much improved Colonial team.

Tom Sienkiewicz (33) puts up a shot in the Merrimack game.

Harriers Startled In NCAA Championships

By JAY COOK

Several startling things happened at last Monday's NCAA cross country championship in Madison, Wisconsin.

For starters, the University of Texas-ElPaso (UTEP) didn't win the team title. Not only that, Henry Rono didn't win the individual championship, which is pretty bad considering that Henry is the two time defending champion in this event and the holder of four world records.

Henry isn't the only one to get nothing but tired: the Villanova team did, too. Ranked seventh nationally by Harrier magazine, the Wildcats finished sixteenth overall and failed to place a runner in the top fifty.

Some teams, however, did do well. The University of Oregon, led by individual champion Alberto Salazar, improved on their number two ranking and won the meet. UTEP finished second and Wisconsin, the "home" team, finished third. Villanova's Eastern rival, Penn State, finished fourth and Colorado was fifth, to round out the top teams.

Madison, Wisconsin, the sight of the meet, is a really nice place. In the summer. But not in the winter.

In the winter it's colder than heck and a lousy place to hold a meet. The Villanova team, after a very mild autumn, was unable to cope with the teeth-chattering temperatures they encountered.

No one was hurt more by the cold than Villanova's top finisher, Amos Kip Korir. Amos suffered frostbite on both his hands and finished well back in 67th place, an unaccustomed position for one of the country's top distance runners.

Kevin Dillon was the second Villanovan to cross the tape and finished 101st. Kevin, a freshman, ran an excellent race and will be one of the mainstays of next years team.

Rob Earl was third for Villanova, 107th overall, in what he described as "an awful race." Rob, after an excellent first season, was unable to keep his string of fine performances going and succumbed to the tough championship field.

Seniors John Burns and Jim Flynn were fourth and fifth, respectively, for V.U. Ending their excellent college cross country careers in style, at the nationals, both John and Jim ran excellent races. Their talents will be sorely missed.

Freshman walk-on Brad Gair was sixth for Villanova and Dean Childs seventh to fill out the varsity team. Brad ran well in his first championship race and gained valuable experience. Dean, on the other hand, ran too tactical a race.

Dean's plan, it seems, was to run right behind Henry Rono, the meet's favorite. In this he succeeded. Unfortunately, Henry finished fourth from last, leaving Dean third from last. Since this race, Dean has changed his strategy and expects to "run his own race" more often in the future.

Villanova's runners will turn their attention to the upcoming indoor season. Their first meet will be on December 8 at Lehigh University, and will give the coaching staff a chance to "feel out" the team.

Hockey Team Experiences Their Best Season

By PAT TORPEY

Villanova's Ice Hockey Team keeps rolling along and firmly established themselves as the best hockey team in the Philadelphia area. Their record of 4-0-1 is the first winning record the team had had in its 24 year history. However, it's a very long season, with a possible 25 games still to play. It is for this reason that Head Coach Skip Probst is approaching the rest of the season with a tone of caution and conservatism. Probst wants his players to keep their success in perspective.

Two Fridays ago, November 17, Villanova played a rematch against the University of Delaware, who they had defeated earlier this season. Delaware had figured to be one of the top teams in the area, that is until Villanova soundly beat them for a second time. This games final score was 3-1.

The success of the team, Probst believes, rests in the fact that the entire team, right down to the last man, is playing superb hockey. With all the different lines playing as well as they have been, Villanova is a very tough team to beat. The constant improvement of the defense has been essential to the team's victories. Here is where the addition of a talented freshman class makes its presence felt. Frosh defensemen Jim Femia, Paul Lafond and Bill Quinlan have all fit in nicely with Junior Mike Fitzgerald and Senior Rich Curley to form an inpenetrable defense. Frosh center Gerry Murphy and Junior goalie Mike "Chief" Alegado have so far been a very happy surprise to Probst. Not much was known about Murphy before his arrival. Alegado was the back-up goalie last year, but won the starting position this year. Both have played magnificently and are vital to the teams further success.

In the most recent victory over Delaware, things looked shaky at the start. Because of car problems, Alegado, Fitzgerald and co-captain Jack O'Hanlon were late and missed the first period. Fortunately senior Goalie Pete Cahill played extremely well and shut out the Delaware offensive attack. Alegado played the remaining 2 periods and put in what senior Captain Steve Schorr called, "some of the best goal tending I've ever seen." Murphy, O'Hanlon and Femia all scored in the victory.

This Saturday and Sunday the team will be in Upstate New York to face both the Cornell and Colgate JV squads.

Ruggers Finish Fall Season

By VERGE GREENSHORTS

On Saturday, Nov. 18, Villanova Rugby capped a very successful season with a disappointing loss to Georgetown. Losing 13-0 at the half, the Cats went down with a fight. The team needed something to spark them on, and they found this when Brian Heir broke an opponent's arm; a half hour delay followed. V.U. then went to work, with two scores by Joe "Hick" Wojtkun and one by Mike Abele, putting V.U. within two. The Cats could do no better however, and the final score remained 16-14.

This leaves the ruggers with an 11-3 final fall record, their best in years. For the first time the team had an explosive wing to match its ever-powerful scrum. They amassed 335 points while allowing only 89. Each point seemed costly however; many feel if it weren't for all the injuries the team would be undefeated. Only one back, Mike Abele, played every game. The Lehigh Tourney in particular took its toll as injuries to Tom Rosato, Hondo Rosato, Mark Civil, and Rick Donohue forced them out of at least one game, for some the rest of the season. Fortunately, the scrum remained the dominant factor it has always been and kept the team in contention. Some standout forwards include Terry "Blue" Dansdill, Gio Regina, Fred "Bucket" DePaola, and Gary "Polack" Pelkofsky.

What does the spring hold for Villanova Rugby? A very tough schedule for one thing. Matches are planned against Penn, Princeton, Delaware, and B.C., all tough opponents. If the Cats can heal their wounds, they should attain what they have come so close to: an undefeated season.

Temple Tops Cats 27-17

By BRUCE MURRAY

Last Saturday, the Wildcats ended their 1978 football season on a sour note as they were defeated by Temple (27-17) before a sparse crowd at Veterans Stadium. The loss gave the Cats a losing record for the season (5-6), and their second losing season in a row. Yet, the games final score is misleading, because it was not until late in the fourth quarter that the powerful Temple team defeated the fired-up Cats. "We played a good football team, and I'm proud of the effort our kids made," said Coach Bedesem. "Our people reached back and played one heckuva a football game."

The game got off to a great start for the Wildcats. Temple return man Gerald Lucear, fumbled the opening kickoff and captain, Steve Plastek, recovered the ball for Villanova at the Villanova 48 yard line. Temple was stunned and the Cat offense further confused them on the first play from scrimmage. Charlie Gross, carried for twenty-five yards down to the Temple 26 yard line. The Cats pushed further toward the goal line on runs by Shawn Pasamen, Mike Gold, and Vince Thompson. The drive culminated with QB, Pat O'Brien, scoring on a 3 yard touchdown run

Following the Villanova kickoff, Temple again coughed up the ball. Owl QB, Brian Broomell, fumbled the snap and defensive tackle, Steve Duda, recovered the loose ball at the Temple 27 yard line. But this time O'Brien was unable to move the offense, and the Cats had to settle for a 41 yard field goal by freshman, Chuck Bushbeck.

Temple's first scoring drive began at their own twenty yard line following a Joe Borajkiewicz punt. The Owls easily moved down the field behind the running of Anthony Anderson and the passing of Broomall. But the Wildcat defense stood strong and the Owl drive stalled out at the Villanova 18. Temple was forced to settle for only a field goal the entire first half, and the Cats entered their locker room with a 10-3 half time lead.

Like the first half, the second half began with a Temple turnover as Broomall's pass was intercepted by Steve Plastek. But following the interception came Villanova's first costly error; O'Brien fumbled the handoff and Temple recovered the ball. The game momentum suddenly shifted, and the Owls ripped off a 55 yard drive that ended with a Zach Dixon scoring on a 9 yard touchdown run.

However, the emotionally high Wildcats were not about to give up. After a short Temple kickoff, senior fullback Vince Thompson burst through the right side of the line and dashed past the Owl secondary on a 54 yard touchdown run. This run put Thompson over the 100 yard mark for the first time this season. (Vince finished the day with 127 yards on 20 carries.)

Thompson's touchdown again gave Villanova the lead (17-10), but unfortunately this was to be the Cats last score of the day. The tough Cat defense was now being easily moved by the potent Owl offensive line. Temple drove down field to tie the game on a four yard scoring pass to Zach Dixon, and then drove again to take the lead (20-17) for the first time on a Fioravanti field goal.

With eleven minutes left in the game, Villanova mounted its last threatening attempt to score. Heroically they marched down the field on the passing of O'Brien and the running of Thompson. But suddenly the Temple heroics took over and O'Brien was caught behind the line twice for losses. The Wildcats final gasp came on a fourth and fifteen on the Temple twenty-eight yard line; with his intended receiver covered, QB, Pat O'Brien, saw Mike Gold open in the endzone and he attempted to connect with him. Somehow though, the ball got caught in the wind, and as pass floated downfield toward Mike Gold, the Owl defenders were able to recover. The ball fell tragically incomplete in the endzone.

"It was a shame we didn't main tain our momentum on the drive," said Coach Bedesem. "I we had gone ahead, 24-20, it woul have been a different ballgame."

Temple then began a drive tha would produce the final score o the day. The Cat defense stalle the drive and forced the Owls t punt. But as the fates had it, th Cats were penalized fifteen yard (for having two players with th same number) on the punt. Th Owls, who retained possession o the ball, now had a first down. A few plays later, with twenty five seconds left in the game, Temple's Mark Bright broke through the left side of the line on his game clinching 17 yard touchdown run.

DPE Takes Flag Football Crown

The spirited favorite, DPE, defeated the surprising Jaws squad to clinch the championship of the Intramural football league on November 20. The game, delayed a day by monsoon-like rains, enjoyed a large crowd of spectators and was broadcast over WKVU.

In advancing to the championship round, Jaws stunned the Maulers 6-0 on a TD pass from Tom Hank to standout SE Tony Pasquale. The Maulers had trouble getting their offense cranked up and were plagued by poor field position for most of the contest. Jaws held off a valiant last-second drive by the Maulers when LM Joe Grolio tipped a Zoid Buongiorno aerial in the end zone as time ran out.

DPE earned their spot in the final round by handing Fedigan Pub its first setback of the year, 13-6. The fraternity team scored first on a 50 yard TD pass from senior QB Joe Hoban to SE Charlie Varesano. The Pub roared back early in the second half to tie the score on a brilliant pass reception by Phil Regan. DPE then posted the winning TD on a pass from two-way standout Bob Murtaugh to Joe Hoban, who had circled out of the backfield undetected.

On the crisp, final day of the season, Jaws and DPE staged a defensive battle for most of the first half, with DPE scoring on a flea-flicker play with just seconds to go before intermission. Varesano grabbed a pass from Hoban then lateralled to trailing HB Kevin Collins, who raced to paydirt untouched.

In the second half, Varesano gathered in a spiral from Hoban on a slant pattern and scored to put DPE up 12-0. Jaws rallied to break the shutout when Hank found TE Terry Byrne alone in the end zone to pull within 6 points of the leaders. But DPE iced the title on a screen pass to Jim Hoban, who scored behind the excellent blocking of Carl Capobianco.

Intramural spokesman Dino Valente rated the fraternity league as the strongest overall division this season. Looking to next year, Dino sees the Sun Kings, Maulers and Fedigan Pub as leading contenders in the title chase.

Cats Face Tough Challengers

By ELMORE SMITH

Entering his fifth season at the Wildcat helm, Rollie Massimino faces what must be considered his toughest challenge to date. Gone, are all time Villanova scoring leader Keith Herron, power forward Reggie Robinson, and leading rebounder Whitey Rigsby; all key ballplayers in Massimino last three successful campaigns. The prospects for a successful season however, do not seem out of the realm of possibility. Sophmore Alex Bradley (14.9ppg., 7.7 rpg.) returns to his old high school position this year at power forward, which should leave him a little more freedom to roam the baseline. Alex will be forced to be more of a floor leader this year, a role that seems somewhat out of character for last years modest and humble freshman sensation. Also returning is Coach Mass' buzzerbeater, point guard Rory Sparrow. Rory won three games for the Wildcats at the buzzer; the latter of which projected th Cats into the finals of the NCAA Eastern Regionals. With the absence of Herron, Sparrow will be called on to perform a number of duties; small forward on the quick offense, point guard, as well as being a leader on defense. Steve Lincoln, who provided much excitement for Villanova fans for the past two years off the bench, will be teamed with Sparrow in the backcourt, which could perhaps be one of the quickest in the East.

The battle for the other starting forward spot is between three year sub Larry Sock and freshman Aaron Howard. Howard, an All-State center from Linden, New Jersey, is perhaps the best defensive ballplayer the Cats have this year. His outstanding leaping ability makes him an exciting shot blocker and an awesome rebounder.

The two year war for the starting center spot, resumes this year, between 6-10 Jr. Marty Caron and 6-11 Sr. Ron Cowen. Through an extensive Nautilus program in the off season both have beefed themselves up to the point where Coach Mass can count on them for rebounding strength on the boards.

Helping to fill the void left by Herron, Rigsby and Robinson, are frosh Tom Bethea, and soph Tom Sienkiewicz. Sienkiewicz, who saw limited action last year, returns to play a more integral part of th offense. Bethea, who was overlooked by the entire ACC, was an All-State guard in North Carolina, and will be called on to perform a number of duties. Sienkewicz 4.0ppg. should provide some instant offense from the perimeter, and destroy anybody who attempts to throw a zone against the Cats this year.

Another promising freshman this year is 6-8 Bruce Johnson. An Illinois product, Johnson should see time at both center and forward.

Coach Massimino looks upon his young Wildcats as being a tenacious bunch, "Aggressiveness makes up for a multitude of sins; that is what our slogan is going to be.

There will be a few new wrinkles this year in the Cats attack, reports Massamino, "We're going to lengthen the defense up the court, we want to try and get some additional offense out of our defense."

After two impressive victories in Puerto Rico, the Wildcats appear to be more promising than any of the preseason polls would have you believe. "We have something to strive for this year. After the last two years," reports Coach Mass, "but we have to establish our own identity. We're going to have to work as hard as we can. We were down by 20 in Puerto Rico, but we worked hard and came back. We showed character."

Perhaps the Wildcats should regard their preseason status as an omen. At no time last year or the year before was V.U. regarded very highly in the preseason polls. Perhaps with a few extra breaks going their way, a few heart-stopping buzzerbeaters, the pollsters will realize that Coach Massamino has brought the Cats back, hopefully for good.

New Center Capped

by BILL CLARK

In an attempt to enclose as much of the new University Center as possible before winter sets in, the builders of the Center are in the process of putting the roof on the building. It is hoped that a large portion of the building will be covered so that workers can begin construction of the interior during the winter.

"We hope the building will be completed early in the spring of 1980 so that the graduating seniors will be able to enjoy it. A month from now, however, the situation may be different. It mostly depends on the weather," said Marc Tuchman, center director.

During the winter months, he explained, the blockwork cannot be done because a minimum temperature must be maintained for the cement. It is his hope that the workers will be able to install the plumbing and part of the interior during the winter.

Presently the wood trusses are being installed. These, he said, "will define the character of the building. After these are installed, the decking or covering of the roof will be installed." The trusses went up so fast because the wood was prenumbered and put together almost like a puzzle.

Work has also begun on the interior design of the building. Such things as color schemes and furniture are in the process of being selected.

Tuchman is very happy with the work of the builders, Keating Construction Co. He feels they are making every attempt to finish the building on time, and taking advantage of every nice day by sending over extra workers.

Tuchman is confident that the University Center will be completed on schedule. He frankly admits, however, that "We're hoping for a mild winter."

Street Debates Public Housing Issue

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

Milton Street, political activist and state representative-elect from Philadelphia, literally jumped to the Villanova Political Union podium last Monday night.

"I'm going to be on you tonight about public housing!" he declared as the Union debated: "RESOLVED" That public housing is a necessary and equitable solution to the housing crisis that exists in the United States.

Delivering a lively and punctuated speech, Street addressed himself to the housing problem in Philadelphia.

Street said that the city government is holding thousands of vacant houses where poor people live. Twenty-five per cent of the population are designed as "throw-away people," people who live in compacted ares and whose median income is $6000.

"If the federal government and city administration would utilize the vacant houses in North Central Philadelphia, there would be homes for 6000 of these poor families," said Street.

The city pays area brokers $10 to $12 a day to take care of these houses, said Street. "The brokers don't do their job and the houses are invaded by professional vandals," he said.

Other vacant houses are sold for $40,000 to people who invest another $20,000 for renovation and sell the houses upward of $100,000, said Street.

"The idea on the minds of young professionals is to bring the affluent back to the city. To escalate the tax base, To bring the city more funds," said Street, "but what are they going to do with the poor people?"

He pointed out that because of the federal government's Housing Assistance Plan, the city must provide a certain number of houses for the poor. These houses are built in "non-impacted," white areas, he said.

"On the West side of Broad Street we're saying, 'Bring the houses over here!' But the government is saying, 'We're not going to integrate the black community, we're going to integrate the white community'," he said.

Street said that public housing should be appropriated 50 per cent in the black community and 50 percent in the white community. He proposed a program where the city would grant $5000 added to $10,000 a poor family would pay to renovate and live in one of the now vacant houses.

Carl German of the Moderate Party contested Street's position, asserting that the problem is one of supply and demand, and the solution is not in government manipulation of the free market system.

"Government interference would provide unfair competition with private housing. This is an economic problem, one of the lack of employment. Solving the

Board Of Trustees Preview

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

The Villanova University Board of Trustees will hold their second scheduled meeting of 1978-79 academic year in the Law school on Tuesday, December 12.

"We are not ready for a Villanovan representative to sit on the Board, as far as attending throughout the entire meeting."

DEVINE

Although the agenda of Board meetings are not generally disclosed, it has been learned that the Board will consider and approve nominees for the conferring of honorary degrees and elect a vice-chairman of the Board.

Among other standard business, the Board will also vote on two Senate proposals — a motion to increase the number of faculty members on the Standing committees of the Board from one to two members, and a proposal which will consider giving Bachelor's degrees to those who have Master's or Doctor's degrees.

With the arrival of the Board on campus questions arise concerning the policy making body's relation to the student. Specifically, how is the Board made aware of current events and issues on campus.

Beside the five standing committees of the Board (Academic Affairs, Building and Finance, Development and Public Relations, Student Affairs, and Investment) which include faculty, student, and administration representatives, there are other methods the Board uses to survey student opinion.

The Trustees will often contact representatives such as Father Deegan, vice-president for student life, for information on student affairs. Deegan would be called in as a special resource person, usually address the Board in a presentation and then leave the meeting. Student and faculty can also serve in this capacity by addressing the Board at the opening of their meetings.

"The Board likes to see special resource people from time to time," stated Thomas E. Devine, chairman of the Board. "We will continue to do this sort of thing."

In 1976 and in 1977 a reception was held in Dougherty Hall whereby student leaders and Board members could discuss and meet in an informal setting. Devine also expressees his support for meetings of this nature.

Joint meetings between the Executive committee of the Board and the Executive committee of the Senate as a method of communication between Board and student are also endorsed by Devine, who expressed his hope in trying to establish these meetings twice a year.

The Board and Devine, however, have been firm in not allowing a non-voting student body member to sit on the Board. This also applies to a representative from the Villanovan:

"We are not ready for a Villanovan representative to sit on the Board, as far as attending throughout the entire meeting," expressed Devine.

Devine also detailed some of the difficulties involved for some trustee members to spend a lot of time on campus: "They are difficulties for members who must travel and are limited timewise; however, many members stay overnight and attend events."

Devine noted that the 1976-77 receptions were well attended and that both he, and Father President Driscoll, among other Board members will be present at the Christmas Tree lighting ceremony next week.

The Board meets on the second Tuesday of each September, December, February, and April. Special meetings may be called at other times as may be deemed necessary by the chairman.

New Editor Selected

Villanovan associate editor Terry O'Toole was elected editor-in-chief of the University's student newspaper for the 1979 spring and fall semesters in elections Monday afternoon.

O'Toole, a junior, will succeed senior Joan Barnish, who has been editor-in-chief since last April, in January. The Villanovan staff was formerly elected each spring and served from September to April, but a constitutional amendment last year changed the staff to a January — December year.

The new editor joined the paper in the fall of 1976 as a sports-writer, seerving as co-editor of the news section last year with Ms. Barnish before moving to associate editor last April. O'Toole is an economics major and currently resides in Stanford Hall.

Nominated as managing editor is junior David Dear, who has been The Villanovan's advertising editor for the past three semesters. Carol Barrale and Nancy Rooney, both juniors, have been nominated to serve as the newspaper's associate editors. The three nominees must be ratified by two-thirds of the editorial staff, who will vote on Monday.

"I'm very optimistic about the upcoming year," O'Toole said. "We have an experienced, talented and energetic staff, a staff which works very well together.

"We've got the basics, the routine, down, and now we can concentrate on upgrading the newspaper and its interaction with the University community. I think you'll see an improved product next year."

Ambassador To Speak

Arthur Lall, former Ambassador of India to the United Nations, will lecture on "Sharing Seabed Wealth: An Essential Step to World Peace" on the Villanova campus on Tuesday evening, Dec. 12. Sponsored by the World Order Research Institute, the talk will be given at 8:00 p.m. in the Student's Lounge of St. Mary's Hall.

Lall is presently serving as chairman of Common Heritage International, a new international committee which is urging that some of the trillions of dollars of ocean mineral wealth, offshore and in the deep ocean, be paid into a "Common Heritage Fund" and used to build peace, save the ocean environment and help fund the United Nations. The Committee has prominent members from 21 nations.

Lall served five years as India's Ambassador to the United Nations and shorter tours as India's Delegate to the Geneva Conference on Disarmament and as Governor of the International Atomic Energy Authority. For nine years he was Adjunct Professor in Columbia University's School of International Affairs. His many books include The United Nations and the Middle East Crisis, Negotiating Disarmament, and How Communist China Negotiates. He received an M.A. degree from Punjab University and studied modern history and political science at Oxford (Baillio1 College).

RST Honor Society

Senior Mary Nadine Wesoski, alumnae Noreen Buckley, Class of 1978, Ellen Marie Kemeza, class of 1977 and alumnus John Lozano, class of 1976 have been selected as the first members of the newly formed Omega Chapter of the Theta Alpha Kappa Honor Society for Religious Studies/Theology. Fr. Edward Hamel, O.S.A., chairperson of the undergraduate religious studies program, announced that the new Honor Society Chapter was founded at the instigation of Fr. Silvio E. Fittipaldi, O.S.A., chairperson of the religious studies department, and has received the full approval of Dr. James Cleary, vice president of academic affairs and of Fr. John O'Malley, O.S.A. new dean of arts and sciences.

The new member of the Religious Studies Honor Society will be inducted at a special ceremony on January 24, 1979. They and their families will be the guests of honor. Religious Studies faculty, staff, and students will be invited to attend.

To qualify for membership students must have completed at least twelve hours of Religious Studies courses with an average of 3.75. Further they must have a general cumulative average of 3.50. The first alumni were selected on the basis of having been winners of the Religious Studies medal for their respective graduating classes.

Mendel Associates Honored

By GEORGE BOZZUTI

On Friday evening, November 17, Villanova University held its 23rd annual Mendel Associates Dinner Dance at the Valley Forge Hilton. This dinner is given each year in order that Villanova might express its thanks to the members of the Mendel Association for their donations to the University. There were 250 people in attendance including Fr. John Driscoll, O.S.A., who hosted the evening's festivities.

In a spirit of thanksgiving well suited to the season, Fr. Driscoll once again thanked the Mendel Association for its immense aid in University fund raising (just for the record, donations have ranged anywhere from $500 to $1,000,000). This year, however, there was an added occasion to observe. Saturday, November 16, was the 35th anniversary of Villanova's official status change from College to University.

During his dinner speech Fr. Driscoll introduced the Honorable Francis X. McGuire, O.S.A., who is a member of the Board of Trustees and was President of Villanova at the time of the name change. In his speech Fr. McGuire described his pleasure at seeing Villanova evolve from a small college to a large university and cited the accreditation of the School of Law and the School of Nursing. He further mentioned the myriad of new programs which have been initiated since the change in status and the tripling of academic enrollment since WW II.

The organization of the Association Dinner Dance was the work of Fr. George F. Riley, Vice-President of University Relations, and the staff of the Relations office.

We would like to thank the Mendel Association for its donations to Villanova University and the University Relations Office for both realising the great value of our alumni and continuing the tradition of a formal dinner dance which shows our appreciation.

Band Picks Winners

On November 28, at the halftime of Villanova-Merrimac basketball game, the Marching Wildcats Eighth Annual Raffle took place. Feature Twirler, Barb DeMattias drew the lucky winners out of a drum (a marching band drum, of course!). First prize, of a $1,000, went to the Marcin family from Tamaqua, Pa. Judy Marcin is a freshman at Villanova. The trip for Two in Florida with the Villanova Union was won by the Tommarpes from Spring Lake, New Jersey, whose son Richard is also a student here. Mrs. Joan Haungs, from our very own Registrars office, won the stereo system. Congratulations to all three!

The band would like to thank all those who purchased chances and contributed to our organization . . . Better luck next year! Thanks to Father Martin, to the Student Activities staff, to Ms. Alba and the Development Office, and to Dr. Aesto.

We Are Makers of Apostles

Our founder, Father Thomas Judge, called us to be "makers of apostles". His words speak to the needs of our world today when he also said one of our chief aims is to "make others missionaries".

Each generation must ask others to follow as apostles, as missionaries. This is the process of renewal, so vital to the contemporary Church. Are you called to be an apostle, to serve as a missionary?

Trinity Missions is seeking young men who want to become spiritual leaders. You can learn more about us and our work by contacting us. You may also discover some spiritual insights about yourself.

Ken Fody of the conservativ party said that though he felt th government holding of vacan houses was "a disgrace" he added, however, that "we cannot rely on the federal government. It is up fo us to solve this problem."

Moderate Bill Dole pointed out that Street's proposition would "tend to perpetuate the con centration of people in places where there are no jobs. Public housing will not alleviate the problem. Poor people should be al lowed to move where they can get jobs," he said.

Bruce Keogh of the Moderate party said that "if we give housing to the poorest of the poor people, the moderate income groups are going to be left out, and if we give to the moderate income groups the poor will not be getting those houses."

On the other hand, Heidi Fischer of the liberal party said that public housing is "purely a moral issue. It is important to get roofs over these peoples' heads before we worry about integration."

The resolution passed in favor of public housing, eight for, seven against, and one abstention.

EFF. FALL 78 SPRING

MERRY CHRISTMAS C.K.

Time To Be A Senior

Thank you, thank you, thank you. There aren't too many people who realize what newspaper reporting for the Villanovan can do to you.

On Monday, when other students are studying for accounting and philosophy tests, you're worrying whether the writers are writing or studying.

On Tuesday, when the rest of the world is watching "Happy Days," you're laying out a 20-page newspaper and trying to think of creative headlines.

On Wednesday, when classmates are sleeping through their 8:30 class, you're wondering if the late copy got to the printer.

On Thursday, afternoon, when normal coeds are playing tennis, swimming or taking a nap, you're standing at the printer putting a 20-page jigsaw puzzle together.

On Friday, when everyones heading for Kelly's, you're listening to all the complaints about the newspaper that you just spent all week worrying about.

On Saturday and Sunday you spend all your time catching up on the work you should have done during the week.

And yet, after all this, you wonder if it is worth the aggravation. Well, I don't know about the other Villanovans but I wouldn't trade this opportunity for the world. It's easy for me to say, my stay at the Villanovan has come to an end.

It is time for the Class of 1980 to make its contribution to the journalism world. After three and a half years of deadlines, I have to admit it will be nice to watch Richie and the boys again and join my senior friends at Kellys because I only have 157 days left of being a senior and I want to enjoy every minute of it.

Thank you, thank you, and thank you again. I'll miss you and good luck.

What's Going on Here?

Old and in the way, at the ripe old age of twenty one. Did this really happen to Rick Trevor? After spending four years on the Villanovan, I have drawn the conclusion that old managing editors never fall off cliffs, they're pushed. Some call it transition of power. I call it transitional pain.

This is the first and last editorial I shall ever write. They let me do it so I'd give up my old gray desk and my keys and my phone and . . . For those of you who don't understand what I'm saying, it's too late. I've already retired. Before I go I would like to take this opportunity to thank all of those who gave me a hard time, without whom I never would have been able to develop that well known obnoxious personality. Let no one say Villanova doesn't have a lot to offer, my pension is pretty good.

In the course of my short Villanovan career, I have made many contacts. Among those great ones I'll miss the most are Rosemary, Jeanne, Agnes, Linda, Amelia, Jim at the mail room and of course Howard at the bank (everyone misses him). There will be some who will miss me too; some who won't care, that's you; and some can't wait to see me go (sorry June, there's nothing you can do to change my mind).

In closing this farewell, I would like to publicly bequeathe David's folder to David, the picture of Joan however, I'll keep.

Sorry I have to go so suddenly, but there is no sequel, and if I don't go now, they'll get me. I'd rather jump than be pushed.

Catch-19 Is Alive

To All Students:

CATCH-19 is not dead. However, the Cats Assembled to Change Harrisburg Committee has been experiencing a period of non-activity in the past two months. There is a very good reason for this lull and it is not because of apathy.

What has happened is that House Bill No 905 (to lower the drinking age) has died in committee over this election year. This means that the Bill must be reintroduced in both the House and the Senate during their next session which will begin in January. This Bill should pass the State Senate as easily as it has in the past. It will then come up for a vote in the House which is where the majority of our effort will be placed. Our sources indicate that this vote will not be taken until sometime in March.

CATCH-19 will go into full swing again when we get back from Christmas break. Changing the law is a long and difficult process but it can be done. We've made excellent progress thus far and have contacted various colleges across the state, stimulating many of them to set up similar CATCH-19 committees. John McConagle, lobbyist for the Pennsylvania Tavern Association, is helping to coordinate student efforts as well as provide valuable information concerning this legislation.

PENNSYLVANIA RESIDENTS: Right now your help is needed to circulate petitions among your family and friends, over the Christmas break. You can pick them up in the S.G.A. Office, Rm. 204 Dougherty Hall anytime. Legislators tend to pay more attention to lobbyists holding a couple of thousand votes in their hand.

Get psyched and plan to spend some time with CATCH-19 next semester. There is going to be a lot of things to do between January and March and we'll need all the help we can get.

Tom Platt
Chairman,
CATCH-19

Thanks, Girls

To the Editor:

Very often, people, who work very hard for something, end up being overcome by sudden obstacles they didn't plan on. I would like to extend congratulations to a group of people who came through and overcame depressing odds this past weekend — The Women of Good Counsel Hall, who put on their annual Christmas Semi-Formal Dance.

These women, led by hall president Rosemarie Galante, deserve a warm thank you from all those people who enjoyed themselves.

To those sudden obstacles: WKVU, who forgot that they promised to provide the musical entertainment for the event and showed up an hour and a half late; the two unidentified, hungry Stanford males who attempted to steal a six foot roast beef hoagie, and ended up dumping it in the hallway; the not so unidentifiable Stanford males who tore down Christmas hall decorations to adorn a jeep; and the rest of the little incidents which when combined, could have ruined anyone's party, you all blew it — everyone had a good time in spite of you and your destructive behavior.

This story may be a corny story, but it's always good to see the good guy win one once in awhile. Thanks again girls, it was a fantastic party, the best all year.

Sincerely,
Thomas Ogrodowski

Best Bets For Area Christmas Shopping

By CAROL GOLDFARB

Santa Claus arrived on time as usual Thanksgiving Day, via the parades. His arrival heralds the Christmas season officially open. Though it is difficult to think of Christmas shopping now, with final exams coming and term papers due, it is not too soon to make up that all-important list. For the special man in your life, The Griffin, 845 Lancaster Ave., offers a complete line of men's wear; suede and leather coats, jackets, wool and cashmere sweaters, pleated pants, narrow ties, hats, jewelry, umbrellas, purses and belts.

The Griffin is now offering a special on sport coats, regularly $150-160, now $90. Also $20 dress pants, now $10. They also do monogramming on custom shirts. If you're looking for a really unusual gift, they have leather down-filled parkas.

For the woman who has everything, give her American-Indian jewelry from Fiesta, 1101 Lancaster Ave. Or choose clothing from Mexico and South America, ponchos, dresses and tops, or peasant skirts from Mexico.

Holiness is Wholeness

By Fr. Ray Jackson

I'm not too sure why, but most people feel somewhat uncomfortable when the subject of personal holiness comes up. Perhaps there is a strong aversion to being labled a goody-goody, or, more psychologically, most people have enough sense of their own limitations (inferiority feelings) that they know better than to see themselves as being holy. Yet, if we take the words of Jesus seriously, "Be perfect, as your heavenly Father is perfect," then the search for personal holiness is important. Let me share a few thoughts on the subject.

"Holiness is Wholeness." The phrase strikes a responsive cord for many people. Maturity of character, fully developed personality, well-rounded, integrated disposition all of these descriptions attempt to supply us with an understanding of the ideal person. To equate this with holiness is appealing. Unfortunately, we know that because of environmental genetic factors few of us mortals rise to the top of personality development. We muddle through life with hang-ups, masks, depression lows and euphoric highs and all the other assorted baggage that keeps us from an earthly nirvana. There would be few holy people around if we were to equate holiness and wholeness of personality. Perhaps the best we can say is that there is a relationship between the two, but not an identity.

Well then what is holiness? Is it a reverential piety? Hands folded, eyes lowered, head bowed? All those terribly mundane "holy card" pictures flash through the mind. Reject that!! Just think of Jesus castigating the Pharisees for their hypocritical gesturing at sanctity. Honest reverence is wholesome, but at most it is a by-product of a life spent in union with God. And that brings me to a definition. Personal holiness is the reality of union with God.

Reality, of course, means it's happening; not past, not future, but here and now. A holy person truly relates to God in a personal and intimate way. The remarkable thing about this relationship with God, however, is that it most frequently occurs indirectly. Let me explain.

"God is Love," says St. John in his gospel. If anyone lives a life of love, then God lives in him and he lives with God. We are touched here by a remarkable mystery; the mystery of God's hidden presence in our hearts. Whenever we are open and loving to people around us God is present. Whenever we attempt to bind up old wounds or arrive at a sense of forgiveness for those who've hurt us, God is present. Whenever we feed the hungry, cloth the naked, etc. God is there.

All I Want For Christmas...

By NEESIE PALAZZOLO
Photos by Cathy Apollonj

Christmas is coming and the geese are getting fat. Villanova students are preparing to leave as soon as finals are over. Has the Holiday Season been on your mind lately? This week, On Campus decided to ask the students what they would like for Christmas. You may be surprised to find that it wasn't candycanes or sugarplums! Her is what we heard:

"A new car. It will be good to go on vacation and get away from school. Mainly to just enjoy myself for a while and hopefully spend more time with Betty."

Rich Mascoll, Freshman

"I'd like to get away from the books, enjoy myself, and spend more time with Rich. I'd also like a lot of good surprises."

Betty D'Angelo, Freshman

"I want to remain insanely happy and I want the photographer!"

Mark Woolley, Junior

"Someone tall, dark and handsome."

Some Santas Are Real

By CAROL ANN BARRALE

He's faster than a speeding bullet, with more mileage than a locomotive, able to leap tall buildings with a single bound of his reindeer-pulled sleigh. Look, up in the sky! It's a bird! It's a plane! No, it's a strange old man in a red suit? It's Santa Claus!

Yes, it's Santa Claus, that legendary hero of Christmas from the North Pole. His famed, familiar figure can be found adorning nearly every department store across these United States. He comes in all shapes and sizes with a voice ranging from a glass-shattering soprano to an earth-shaking bass.

But who are the people behind the red suits and white beards? What kind of people willingly subject themselves to the screaming, tugging, kicking, childish antics that Santas sometimes are subject to? Why do they do it? Is it for the money, the love of the Christmas season, or could it possibly be for the love of children?

Curiosity, having taken hold of my better senses, led me to wander into downtown Philadelphia on Saturday — the day of the week when Christmas shopping is at a peak and an Excedrin headache number 23 is guaranteed. As I expected, the streets were brimming with hustling, bustling people immersed in the pursuit of gifts, for their loved ones.

Amidst the throng of frantic shoppers, lilting Christmas carols, luminous lights, red and green decorations, and children, unwillingly dragged along side their mothers, crying, "Mommy, I want a balloon!" and mothers yelling back at them between clenched teeth, "If you don't get over here right now, I'm going to hit you!" I interviewed a former Santa, Ned Holbrook. A somewhat lean-looking Santa, Ned was found last year delighting children with his "ho, ho, ho!" in Philadelphia's most popular and populated place to visit Santa — The Gallery, located at 9th and Market Sts.

Ned, a professional actor needing employment, found the Santa Claus job listed in a local paper. He had been Santa for Lit Brothers one year, and had also had an impressive background working with children, including appearances on The Gene London Show, The Sally Starr Show, and four years working in the Music Fair in New York.

"The job does not pay well," said Holbrook. So why does he not look for some kind of work? "Acting jobs are slow and hard to come by, and, besides being in need of money, I'm a ham. I time my entrance to come down the escalator just when everyone can glance up at me and applaud, and kids can say, 'Look, mommy, here comes Santa!' "

"Everytime I have to go to the men's room," Ned reflected, "I tell the kids I'm going to feed my reindeer." He gave a hearty laugh and added, "By the time Christmas comes, my reindeers are going to look like elephants."

When asked what strange or absurd requests has he been asked to fulfill, Ned replied, "A woman 20 to 21 years old sat on my lap and said, 'Santa, I want to get pregnant.' What could I say but, 'Well, I wish you luck!'"

I spoke next to Bernie Roberts, another Santa working the Gallery. Bernie is a jolly, loquacious, Philadelphia warehouse employee, who really looks like a holiday greeting card Santa. Roberts takes pride in being Santa and said heartfully, "I'm the best Santa Claus around and everyone knows it. Others can put on the red suit and look like Santa, but I look like him without the suit, and when I put on the suit, I am Santa!"

Bernie times his one-month warehouse vacation every year to fall in December, just in time for Christmas, so he can make some extra money. Bernie's prior experience as Santa includes working at Lit Brothers for 12 years as their star "singing Santa," attracting audiences as large as 1200 a show.

Roberts enjoys being Santa. He added, "I can make believers out of anybody. Just bring them to me."

Being Santa is not always "jolly," Roberts reflected. In fact, it is often "downright sad." A child once asked Bernie to "make his mommy and daddy not get a divorce." But these requests don't occur too frequently, and, when they do, Bernie gives them his "special attention."

Finally, to complete my inquisition and satisfy my curiosity as to who wears the red suit and why, I made my way through the pushing and shoving of crazed bargain-hunting women, and came to Gimbels, home of the Thanksgiving Day, ladder-climbing Santa.

John Cessato has been a San and a regular employee at Gimb for nine years. He is known friends and Gimbel associates "Santa John."

"Santa John" boasts of being chosen by the Inquirer year, as the "Most Original Best Looking Santa Claus." could not recall a particularly usual request, but said he is of asked for baby brothers sisters. One little boy, he recall asked for a washer and dryer his mom. When "Santa Joh said, "Isn't that nice of y thinking of your mother", the tle boy replied, "She told me say that."

So now, whenever you see t famed and familiar, red garbed men — Santa Claus, look beh the decorated exterior and beyo the legend that surrounds h For it is there behind the make white beard and red suit you'll find the real Christ hero, the man with the patienc a saint — Saint Nicholas forably.

Letters To Santa

Mr. S. Claus:

We regret to inform you that, in response to an anon mous complaint concerning Rudolph's red nose, we have i vestigated the alcoholic content of your reindeer and fou it to be in violation of the statutes of the Pa. Merry Christmas!

Hey! Santa, paisano,

Como 'sta, man. We were just hanging out around the Porta' Potti the other day, praying for rain so we could knock off early and trying to figure out how the commies finally managed to knock Frank out of office, and we came up with our Xmas list. Listen, first we'd like to ask for more of that beautiful weather we were having up until a week ago. We were really keeping the Cape May tan in shape until this cloudy, rainy stuff came in. Second, we'd like to see one of these upper middle class kids that always gets drunk and throws up in the holes we dig fall in some weekend. And third, we'd like to have those babes in the wing of Sheehan that faces Vasey keep their curtains open for a week.

grazia,
The boys on the third girder,
Center construction crew

Dear Santa,

Well, it's been quite a few years since we've all been together and made those Christmas messages to our fans that 'YSP and 'MMR always play around this time of year. Ya' know, the money's been getting tight for everyone but Paul and Linda; John's been pretty broken up since Yoko Ono or whatever her name was became a Moonie, George had to stoop to taking bucks for saying "Live from New York, It's Saturday Night," and Ringo, well, Ringo's been having the same luck as always.

We figured it's time to get back together again. Besides the bucks, chances are one of us is going to die of chromosome damage soon. The perfect present from you would be a gig at the Day Hop Coffee House at old VU, where our friends Croce and McClean played, but there seems to be some kind of union problem, the AFL-CIO or something. Try to work it out.

Thanks,
The Beatles

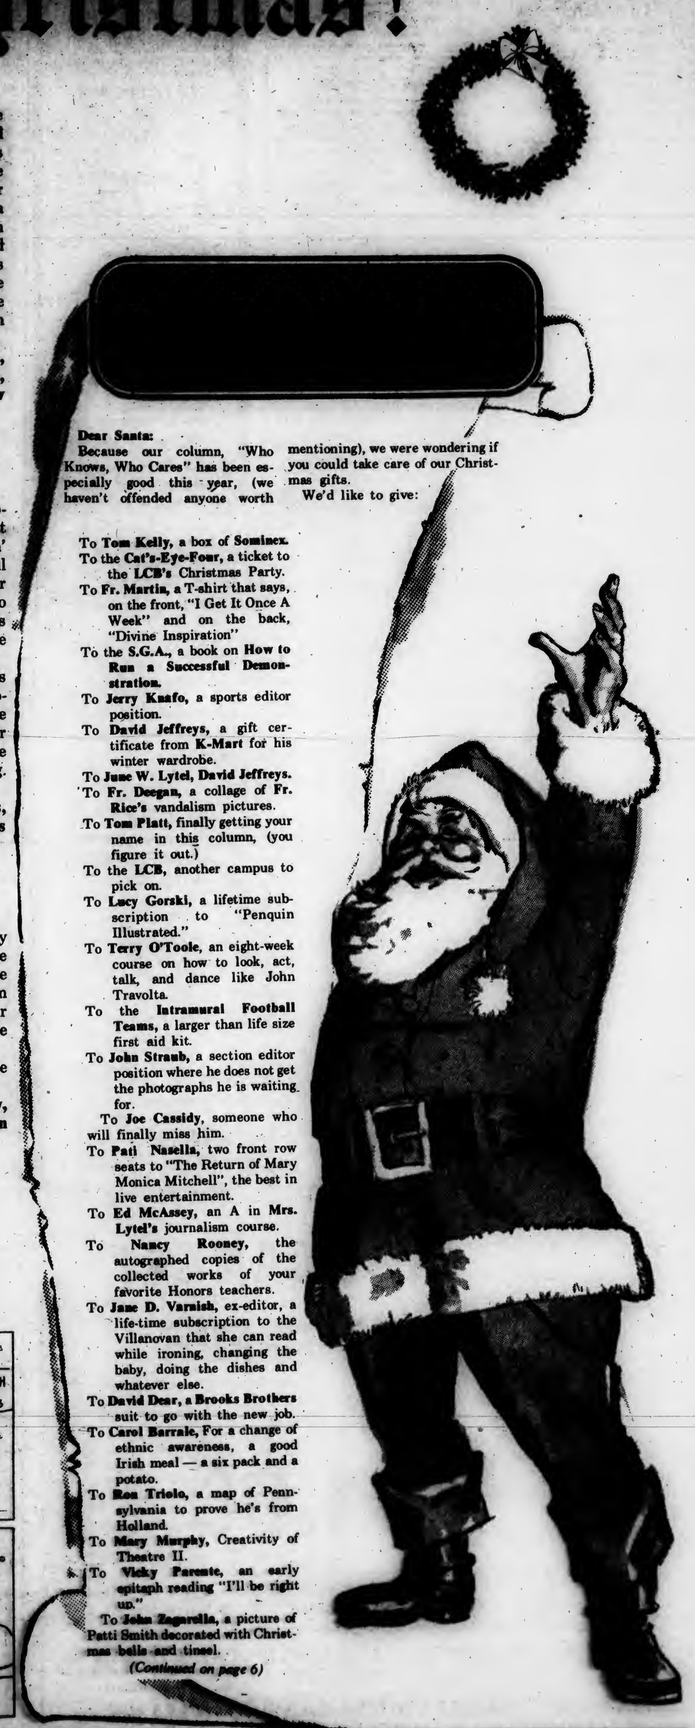
Dear Mr. Claus,

We'd like to ask for your help. We've been bothered by this unknown group who played high school dances in the 1960's or something, and they want to play a Coffee House here. Listen, we can judge talent. We know how to program successful events. Just look at the great response our cultural programs get. Get these guys off our back. We don't need some insect group here. This is VU.

How about Paul Revere and the Raiders. We really like them. We know our stuff. They'd draw.

Sincerely,
The Villanovan Union

Billy Santa



Dear Santa:

Because our column, "Who Knows, Who Cares" has been especially good this year, (we haven't offended anyone worth mentioning), we were wondering if you could take care of our Christmas gifts.

We'd like to give:

To Tom Kelly, a box of Sominex.
To the Cat's-Eye-Four, a ticket to the LCB's Christmas Party.
To Fr. Martin, a T-shirt that says, on the front, "I Get It Once A Week" and on the back, "Divine Inspiration"
To the S.G.A., a book on How to Run a Successful Demonstration.
To Jerry Knafo, a sports editor position.
To David Jeffreys, a gift certificate from K-Mart for his winter wardrobe.
To June W. Lytel, David Jeffreys.
To Fr. Deegan, a collage of Fr. Rice's vandalism pictures.
To Tom Platt, finally getting your name in this column, (you figure it out.)
To the LCB, another campus to pick on.
To Lucy Gorski, a lifetime subscription to "Penquin Illustrated."
To Terry O'Toole, an eight-week course on how to look, act, talk, and dance like John Travolta.
To the Intramural Football Teams, a larger than life size first aid kit.

Campus Christmas Spirit

Sheehan residents relax in front of their Christmas fireplace as exams draw near

By BRIAN BUINEWICZ

It's that time of year again. With only a few weeks left, the Christmas spirit is beginning to show its effects. A word to the wise — carry weapons when shopping and be especially careful of little old ladies. While standing in line at Sears this lady viciously attacked me, took a sweater I was going to buy as a present, and ran down the main aisle laughing madly.

After regaining consciousness, I decided to have my picture taken and give them out as presents — it seemed a lot safer. While standing in line patiently waiting my turn to sit on Santa's lap, store security convinced me it was a poor idea and gave me ten seconds to leave the store before calling Radnor police.

Campus is a much safer place to be. The spirit's showing up on campus — doors are being decorated, Fedigan has its Christmas lights out, and everyone looks like they have only two weeks to live.

I know everyone's on the edge of their seat waiting to hear what Villanova has planned for them to help ring in Christmas. As usual, the tree lighting ceremony will take place Tuesday, December 12 from 7 to 9 p.m. in Kennedy Mall. Music will be provided by Chestnut Brass and the Villanova singers will carol. Refreshments will be served in the North Lounge of Dougherty. The Glee Club concert in the Main Chapel begins at 8 p.m. on December 9. If you have nothing to do, why not decorate your dorm? The RSA is sponsoring a dorm decorating contest. The winner will be announced December 12.

Other events occuring on campus are: Kid's Day, December 9 — Santa will be there, punch and cookies will be served and a movie shown; the University College Student Council is having a Santa's party for children December 17 at 1 p.m. in Bartley cafeteria; some Christmas specials will be videotaped and shown during the day in the West Lounge; Sheehan and Sullivan are also throwing a semi-formal this Saturday, December 9 — the fun begins at 9 p.m.

Those with lots of bucks can enjoy a ski trip to Killington, Vermont from January 7-13. The package deal is $139; $53 extra for a lift ticket and a meal package is available for $60. For further information, contact the Union.

I almost forgot — just what everyone asked Santa for in their letters (you did write your letters, didn't you?) will be coming before Christmas (it'll definitely lift your spirits) EXAMS. Now, aren't all your Christmas wishes fulfilled?

There's still plenty of time for prayer, and for those who will try everything, Frank Rocco, a hypnotist, is coming to Villanova December 12 to help you prepare for finals. He'll show you how to relax, give you keys to study and relax, plus offer retention exercises. Also, remember that every person has a price; the problem could be in reaching it. Merry Christmas and good luck.

Movie

I feel some events were left untapped. The acting was generally good but I think Anne Ditchburn's acting wasn't as intense as her life was but emotion did flow from her when she danced. Again, I found the ballet to be the culmination of all emotions and the accompanying music was the foundation for the coherency of the acting and movements. Sarah Gantz came through in full blossom in this scene like a May fly (the meaning behind the May fly makes up the basic plot).

The plot was not obvious. It was like a thin, supporting thread which basically concerned Anne, her career, and the effect on those around her as she was supposed to be a spell-binder.

There's realism, beautiful music and dancing, light humor, and . . . well, what else do you need in a movie?

Daniels, Mason and McGowan

BY STEPHEN CASTELLANO

So you didn't think Villanova had talent. Wrong. The folk ensemble of Benjamin Daniels, Danny Mason, Peter McGowan and Bob Crawley, otherwise known as Daniels, Mason and McGowan are loaded with talent. And if you were at the Main Point last Saturday night, you would have had a great demonstration of it. All of these fine musicians are students at Villanova except Danny Mason who graduated last year.

This musical group is headed by Benjamin Daniels who is a sophomore. The majority of the music that is played is written by Daniels. His major influences are James Taylor and Neil Young, both of whom started similar to Daniels, playing Coffee Houses and doing talent showcases.

It seems that this group has great potential to go further than local Coffee Houses. When asked if they are considering making music a profession, Daniels replied, "It really depends on how well everything goes, we will definitely stay together until August. Bob and Peter may get jobs." Rumor has it that Ben and Danny are planning to make a career out of music. Daniels described his music as "relaxing to play, although at times it becomes depressing."

Daniels, Mason and McGowan stated that "our main idea is to do original music." The group really got started last December when Benjamin put up signs calling for musicians who wanted to get together to work and play original music.

Danny Mason, then a senior, was among the first to reply. Danny was playing the 6 o'clock Mass in the chapel then. Peter McGowen, banjo and bass player is a long time member of the Villanova Singers and he decided that he would give it a try.

Bob Crawley, also a member of the Villanova Singers, thought the same thing. Crawley plays bongos, aztec drum and handles all percussion.

Their first performance at the Main Point was October 31 in a talent showcase. They received a warm reception by all that were there and the Main Point asked them to come back to headline a show.

On Saturday night there wasn't a seat to be found at the Point. Daniels said, "We have a crowd that follows us and it is getting larger and larger all the time, many are from Villanova, and even some friends from Vermont, Massachusetts and New York."

The group played for the better part of two hours with a few breaks. They opened the first set with "Pete's Banjo Tune" which was a light and peppy instrumental with Peter playing the banjo and Bob on the bass. The tune seemed to get the crowd psyched out for the evening of good music ahead.

"Always Away" another original tune by the group was really well received by the crowd. "The Train Song," my favorite, was the song that I was waiting to hear. This song seems to be the most popular song that the group plays. Anyone who listens to their music frequently, would consider this song to be a "hit" of Daniels, Mason, and McGowen.

They also played a song by Neil Young which was just recently released, called "Look Out For My Love." Danny took the lead on this tune once following suit like the rest of the songs it was very well done. Neil Young would have been proud.

All in all, it was an excellent show. Anyone who enjoys good folk music should treat themselves to an evening with Daniels, Mason and McGowan. Rumor has it that the band will be playing at Haverford College in the near future, so keep an eye out.

Opening for Daniels, Mason and McGowan was Carolyn Murray, a junior at Villanova. Carolyn has been playing Coffee Houses at Villanova for two years. She has to her credit winning the Villanova Union talent show last April. Although most of her material comes from the likes of Carly Simon, Joni Mitchell, and Linda Ronstadt, she did two of her own compositions which went over well with the audience.

The members of Rock Group Foreigner.

Hot Blooded Foreigner

By STEVEN COMBS

Rock and roll is not music. It's a religion. And at the Foreigner concert last Friday a congregation assembled, altered their consciousness and paid homage to the guitar gods.

The show opened with The Cars, a Boston based group whose first album was released last spring and should go platinum this month. Their single Just What I Needed was number one in Boston before they had signed with a label. Their success is not surprising. The Spectrum crowd greeted them wildly. Elliot Easton, the lead guitarist, kneeled on the edge of the stage playing to a throng of especially enthusiastic fans up front while Benjamin Orr sent a beam of light from his mirrored bass guitar arcing through the haze. Although their performance was marred by feedback problems, The Cars played impressively. They promise to be one of the top bands in the country very soon.

Between sets, a black curtain was lowered around the stage. Fans were asked to move back because the stage was buckling and people were passing out in the crowd.

As the light dimmed, smoke billowed out from under the curtain. A locomotive was heard in the distance and the curtain was raised. Foreigner, bathed in smoke and red lights, thundered out Long, Long Way From Home. The crowd went beserk.

The band did material mostly from their first album. Ian McDonald played a superb saxophone on Spellbinder. Lou Gramm had the audience in his hand during Woman Oh Woman. And Cold As Ice shook the walls. At times it felt as if the music was warm water rushing through your ears and down your spine.

The song that everyone came to hear was Starrider, but Foreigner waited until well into the show to play it. By then the crowd's energy had subsided some due to exhaustion. A cloud of marijuana smoke had filled the Spectrum and everyone was ready to be taken to the stars. The fog machine churned out a layer three feet deep. Ian McDonald was alone in the cloud at center stage and green and pink lights filtered down on his flute. Long, lonely notes like a bird separated from its mate, soared into the night. There was magic to be heard. If you let yourself go, the music could carry you beyond the confines of reality.

After a long wait, the frenzied ovation drew them back to do Double Vision and Feels Like the First Time. But the lights did not come on after their exit. The expectant crowd cheered for the band's return. For some reason Foreigner delayed. After a while, many people began to leave. Suddenly the group was back on stage. The drum platform lit up with four rows of alternating lights dancing with the percussion. Hot Blooded rebounded from the walls. The last song of the evening was Headknocker, a rowdy ballad from their first lp. Spotlights were turned on the crowd as they clapped and threw roses.

Sorvino and Ditchburn Slow Dance

Anne Ditchburn and Paul Sorvino in 'Slow Dancing in the Big City.'

By PATI NASELLA

"Slow Dancing in the Big City," is not a deep and passionate story of love. There is no sex, violance or idealistic love, instead, there's just real people living their lives intensely and being open to opportunity and change.

The story revolves around a well-known newspaperman and a ballerina who meet due to their dwellings and eventually fall in love. Lou Friedlander is portrayed by Paul Sorvino who possesses many talents on the screen. Sarah Gantz is played by Anne Ditchburn, a dancer with the National Ballet of Canada.

Lou is a feature writer who is sincere and down to earth with a wholesome interest in everyone he meets. He's not great looking or athletic, in other words, he's not the typical Romeo, but there is just something about him that's so right. Lou meets Sarah who seems almost unattainable on the surface but he's got a pocketfull of persistence. He's like a Yogi Bear type and Sarah is the Sleeping Beauty. She has many conflicts, and has not been developed in her recent love relationship and through Lou's eyes she learns to love.

It sounds like a typical love story but everything is not a bowl of cherries in their lives. They have hang-ups, problems, and go through transitions. The intensity of each character's life and the influencing outside pressures mingle and clash, together producing a realistic love story. In fact, I don't think that the emotions were developed enough. They didn't flow together, one had to use the imagination a little. However, this subtle use of emotions culminated into the highlight of the movie, the ballet. The deep fury expressed in the ballet, "Visions of the Forest" was Bill Conti's baby to mature and develop. He had to set the movements to music which he did beautifully.

"Slow Dancing" was under the direction of John Avildsen who was the director of "Rocky" as was Bill Conti the music director. The immense contribution by these two top professionals shadowed the fact that Barra Grant was a newcomer and this was the first screenplay she had written.

Vasey Students Perform

By FATI NASELLA

Did you ever long to try out for a play but just didn't think you could be intense enough to act? Vasey offers many courses in theatre which help you develop any potential you may have.

The theatre classes will be performing in Vasey Theatre for their finals, and a lot of the students have never acted until this semester. It will be an evening of reality, absurdity and humor. It will be a combination of graduate classes and undergraduate classes. Contemporary drama, mime and films will be presented and all are welcome to come.

Many members of the department feel that having each class perform in front of an audience helps to create more of a happening for the individuals who are acting. Basically, there'll be scenes presented, not entire plays. So this will give the audience a taste of a play they may have heard about but were doubtful. It also gives eveyone a chance to discover themselves more, to be creative through their individuality.

On Mnday, Dec. 11, at 7 p.m., Terri Fimiano's Undergraduate Acting Class will present nine contemporary scenes from American and European drama. In this course the scenes are chosen according to the capabilities expressed by the students. These students are all beginners, so it should prove to be very entertaining.

On Tuesday, Dec. 12, at 7 p.m., DrJames Christy's Undergraduate Acting Class will perform their scenes, which are basically the same as the previous class. Also on this night at 9 p.m. is Irene Baird's Creativity in Theatre, which is different in that the scenes presented by the students are written, directed and acted by the students. It involves more than being creative in acting because one must be also creative with his ideas on writing plays.

On December 15, at 7 p.m., Irene Baird will present her Graduate Acting Class which will again do scenes from contemporary plays.

On Dec. 16, at 7 p.m., Dr. Christy's Graduate Directing Class will present its scenes in Rosemont at Good Counsel Hall. These students learn the technique of directing and will display scenes from turn-of-the-century European drama. In this course students study the technique of directing of playwrights such as Ibsen, Chekhov, and Strindberg, and will present scenes from these playwrights' works.

On Dec, 17, a t 7 p.m., Leslie Muchmore's Play Production class will present a short version of the play "The Time of Your Life" by William Saroyan.In this Class the students learn all technical aspects of production and they also act. The director is Anna Marie Coleman and, as director, she helped cast roles for each student, and she is invoved with all the technicalities of putting on the show such as lighting, costumes, and set design.

On Dec. 21, at 7 p.m., Christopher Sharrett's Cinematography Class, which is a change from the acting courses, will offer a variety of home-made films. The subject range from love relationships to an actual filming of a heart operation. In this class students learn about lighting, editing, angle shooting and also types of film for creating efforts.

Each course is different and has a variety of talent to offer. Why not stop over and see what your friends can do on stage.

Stallone No Longer In Paradise

Lee Canalito and Sylvester Stallone in Paradise Alley.

By PAUL VIGGIANO

"Nature's a funny, funny thing."
Cosmo Carboni

I'm sorry. It's just that I have what is known as, a "Rocky Complex." Everytime I see Sylvester Stallone, whether it be on the screen, the tube or on Dinah Shore, I see the slow-witted character of Rocky, the screen's answer to the American dream. Well it seems that Sly has another dream, to make his latest, Paradise Alley, a big hit. Too bad, he struck out.

Paradise Alley to put it mildly, is a weakly plotted and sometimes incoherently edited film, which has Stallone relying on his redundant mannerisms rather than pure talent. Instead of seeing Cosmo Carboni, a tough punk from the slums of New York, I see a frustrated Rocky in search of his long lost Adrian.

In one scene, Cosmo tells us that "there ain't no bones in ice cream." I wish I could find something decent in this flick. Stallone is the lead, author, director and even the singer of the title song, which may exemplify the case of a star tripping over his very own ego. It is said that actors, however talented, do not make the best directors and the same holds true for Stallone, who came to direct his own script after some much publicized disagreements with Norman Jewison (who was in charge of F.I.S.T.).

Paradise Alley is a period film built around the aspirations of the three Carboni brothers and their struggle to free themselves from Hell's Kitchen circa 1946. Cosmo (Stallone) poses as a fake crippled war vet for handouts, Lenny (Armand Assante) is an undertaker, and Victor (Lee Canalito) is a dimwitted iceman turned wrestler.

In this film, Stallone draws much attention to the technique of movie-making a la Hitchcock and shows that he has learned some lessons (but not many) from his previous two films. When someone sips a drink, we see a close-up of a glass and mouth. When a block of ice is hurled down a flight of stairs, we see shattering pieces of light. When a couple engage in a kiss, we practically see the inside of their mouths. The picture begins with Stallone racing a New York hood across rooftops in slow motion and freeze frames as we see the credits. The film ends with a drawn-out wrestling match in slow-motion, closely resembling the climax of Rocky. Like someone banging a hammer, Stallone tries vainly to express his talents through the art of cinema, but all it shows is that Stallone is much better in front of a camera than behind one.

Paradise Alley, a good theme, but far too ambitious for a novice director. The balance of the lives and interests of the Carboni brothers is lacking, and so is any real effort to convey time and space. Now that Stallone is busy at work on Rocky II, I'm not so sure that the writer-director-star and sometimes singer has many more moves left.

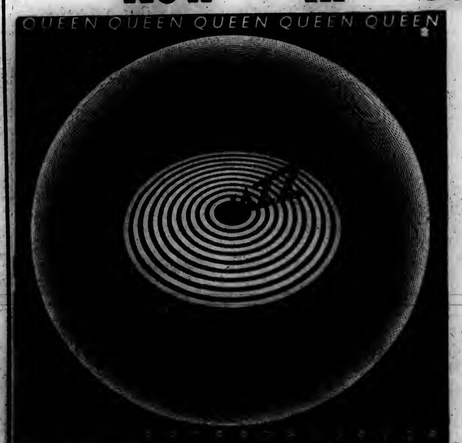
Rock Under the Mistletoe

By JOHN ZAGARELLA

Along with the mad rush of new albums available for Christmas shoppers, comes the seasonal singles. Right around now, AM radio is flooding the airwaves with Christmas tunes featuring some very familiar singers. For instance, Karen and Richard Carpenter have come up with a Christmas classic in "Merry Christmas, Darling." This number, though only appropriate for a short time each year, is probably one of their most famous. The reason for this is that they play it every five minutes during December. Another popular single for the holiday season is John Lennon and Yoko Ono's "Happy Christmas (War Is Over)." If you're lucky you might still be able to pick up this single pressed in green vinyl. If you're not after sentimentality or would like to disregard Christmas songs with an underlying war theme, then "Step into Christmas" with Elton John. This one isn't as popular as the others, but should be. Others include the Beach Boys and the notorious canines that melodiously bark out "Jingle Bells." This is not all. After 10 months, one of the most popular groups of the 70's came out with a new single, "Please Come Home For Christmas." Who is it? None other than the Eagles. Not your "Hotel California," but then again songs like that come only once a career. "Please Come Home For Christmas" falls somewhere between the Carpenters and the notorious barking dogs. The flip side of the Eagles' latest is — what else? — "Funky New Year." The Eagles should stay away from trying to sound like the Ohio Players. What would have done justice to "Please Come Home For Christmas" as a flip side "Stick Around for New Year's."

After the contemporaries you might want to dig out the old traditionals, like Bing Crosby's "White Christmas." This is the single that has sold more than any other — try 25 million copies. Don't forget Nat King Cole's "Chestnuts Roasting On an Open Fire," or Brenda Lee's snappy "Rockin' Around the Christmas Tree." The truth of the matter is that these, the old traditionals, along with the religious oriented songs, such as "O Holy Night," "Silent Night," "Little Drummer Boy," and "We Three Kings" bring out the true spirit of Christ.

New In Sound



By JOHN ZAGARILLA
Elektra 6E-106

Queen is always a band full of surprises. On their lastest, Jazz, Queen comes across quite well in a single album loaded with 13 songs. While listening to the album's opener, "Mustapha," one might swear they were in the depths of some Turkish boardwalk. Actually this unusual tune is quite good. Next, the self-explanatory "Fat Bottomed Girls," which proves to be a stronger studio cut than concert number. "Jealousy," is the song on this album that Mercury exhibits his unique balladeer style. On the bottom of this album cover, there is depicted a line of bicycle riders. Before Queen put this album together, they held a nude bicycle race in England, and penned a tune after these ambitious females called "Bicycle Race." Enclosed with the album is a poster of all the racers in their riding outfits. "If You Can't Beat Them" follows and is a high spirited song in which the boys show their keen ability to harmonize. "Let Me Entertain You," another Mercery rocker closes Side one.

"Dead on Time" commences the second side of Jazz, and here we have another loud track followed by two mellow songs. "In Only Seven Days" and "Dreamers' Ball," both of which are the exemplification of class. Queen pulls out all stops for the next song called "Fun It." I never thought Queen would play funk. But it comes off as one of the best and most powerful efforts on this band's seventh album. Sentimentality is the theme of "Leaving Home Ain't Easy," but "Don't Stop Me Now" dries the eyes and "More of that Jazz" closes this stupendous Lp with an interesting medley of all the preceding songs.

For some odd reason, I can't get this piece of vinyl off the turntable. It is easily this English band's best to date, and one of the finest of 1978. The music and accompanying poster make a good Christmas present.

STRIVING TO SERVE GOD AND MAN

Wildkittens Remain Undefeated

By BETH WHITE

The Wildkittens have compiled a 3-0 winning season with two impressive victories last week: Saturday over Glassboro State, 85-72, and 79-62 Tuesday over Widener College.

Sophomore guard Karen Hizney was high scorer, pulling in a total of 36 points in both games. Karen's performance Saturday was dazzling, scoring on 10 out of 20 shots from the floor and four out of five free throws. Forward Kathy Straccia scored 16 points and is credited with seven assists against Glassboro and four versus Widener. Kathy was second highest scorer against Glassboro (16 points) and third highest versus Widener (12 points).

Guard Mary Beth Gibson played well in both games: 12 points and seven assists in the first game and five assists and 17 points in the second. Sophomore center Joan Lobron has had a disappointing season so far, scoring 15 points in the Glassboro game and only six points against Widener, and almost fouling out both times. Joan is backed up by freshman Lisa Ortlip, who uses her height (6'4") to jump for rebounds and tip-ins. The other outstanding freshman is starting forward Lu-Ann Krothe, who scored 12 points versus Glassboro and 10 points against Widener.

Starting guard Sue Mullins had her best game opposing Widener, scoring seven points and giving six assists.

In both games, the Wildkittens held a twenty point lead at halftime but slacked off in the beginning minutes of the second half. They allowed their opponents to slice their lead in half before coming alive in the last minutes of the game to win by 17 over Widener and 13 against Glassboro.

The Wildkittens have increased their floor shooting to 39% and 40% and their free throw accuracy to 64% and 37% against Widener and Glassboro, respectively.

The Wildkittens used several technically difficult maneuvers, especially the "stack-up" and the "special," very effectively, feeding the ball to the player inside the key despite the defense. The passing outside of the key was also productive in forcing the defense to continuously shift.

The women's basketball team is following in the men's footsteps.

Women Swimmers Add Talent

By BRANDY JOHNSON

The 1978-79 Women's Swim team is very optimistic of their upcoming season and they've got plenty of reason to be.

Last year's squad had a losing season consisting of three wins and six losses. This year's team should have no problem bettering that record while also breaking the best team record set by the 1974 squad of 7-1.

The returning letter-winners for the 78-79 season are; Cathy Carter, Patty Hee, Mary Jarett, Alice Maben, Suzanne Manning, Jody McGuire, Betsy Mahar, Cathy Riordan, Collen Taylor, and co-captains; Nancy Bednarik and Ann Levenite.

The success of this year's squad, however, will be due to three new recruits; Jennifer Franks, Tara Barody, and Mary Maier. All three swimmers bring with them very impressive credentials.

Jennifer is the most talented swimmer on the team and a former AAU National record holder in the 200 and 400 individual medley. She represented the US in the Pan American Games, as well as numerous other occasions in international competition.

Tara is from the Ft. Lauderdale Swim Team and her specialty is the Backstroke. Tara also competed in the National Junior Olympics this summer.

Mary Maier is the youngest of the three swimmers. She has unlimited potential and her talents lie in the Butterfly and Freestyle. She comes to Villanova after completing a very successful season with the Plymouth Whitemarsh Aquatic Club.

Much of Villanova's depth will be supplied by sophomore sensation Alice Maben. Alice holds the school record in the 50 Free at 27.40 and 50 Breast at 33.13. She qualified for the Easterns as well as the Nationals last Spring.

Soccer Expects Success

By CHRIS BRENNER

Success. It can come in many degrees in many fields. It sometimes comes early, sometimes later. It never comes easy. Witness a final statistic from the 1978 season for Villanova's men's soccer squad and one initially is inclined to associate anything with the team's performance but success. 5 wins, 11 losses, 1 tie. Such a record might speak for itself if it represented the efforts of a disheartened, spiritless, easy-yielding group of athletes. For the Villanova booters however, such a record represents the culminatition of a year of fierce desire and formidable play in the face of injury and overlymatched competition. It represents success.

Youth and depth forecast even greater days ahead for Coach Howard Graff's players. The loss to graduation of Tim Armstrong, John Czipo, and Jay Collier marks the exit of some tremendous talent and the news of junior Randy Soriano not being able to play next year is depressing as well. The rest of the squad however, consists heavily of underclassmen, many of whom have seen extensive playing action.

Key returnees include this season's leading scorer Dave McHugh (8 goals), halfback Brian Purcel, and proven goaltender Bill Schamp.

What Ever Happened To Keith Herron

In the fourth quarter of a recent NBA game against the Denver Nuggets, the Atlanta Hawks found themselves in a desperate position. With three of their big men already fouled out, and Tom McMillen injured, the Hawks were forced to go with a line-up consisting of four guards and one forward. Out of necessity, the Hawks placed Villanova's Keith Herron at the center position. The former Wildcat cager had played both guard and forward in his collegiate days (1974-78), but now he was expected to battle the Nugget's All-Star Dan Issel in the pivot. Herron pumped home the winning basket with just 22 seconds remaining to defeat Denver.

A product of Washington, D.C. and Mackin High School, where he teamed with former Notre Dame star Duck Williams, the 6'6" Herron followed his older brother Larry to Villanova. A third Herron brother, Reggie, is currently on the Wildcat roster. In leading the team in points each of his four years, Herron finished as the all-time leading scorer at Villanova, ahead of such notables as Howard Porter, Bill Melchionni, and Chris Ford.

Named to numerous ECAC, EAA, and ECBL all-star squads, Herron also received nominations for All-American honors from the National Association of Baketball Coaches and The Sporting News.

Picked in the second round of the National Basketball Association draft by the Portland Trailblazers, Herron suffered an untimely slump in his play and was waived. When Atlanta's Charlie Crist separated his shoulder, the Hawks acquired Herron.

In Atlanta, Herron was played in just four of the club's 22 games to date. An explanation for his spot duty is offered by the Hawk's Public Relations director, Chet Wright.

"(While in Portland) . . . Keith missed our training camp, which is one of the toughest in the NBA. We have a complicated system, and it takes a while to learn," said Wright.

Trying to crack the lineup on a team featuring rookies Jack Givens (from Kentucky) and Butch Lee (Marquette), Herron has "played well in pressure situations" according to Wright. "He can play in this league."

While sitting on the bench for the Hawks must be frustrating for such a stellar athlete, Keith Herron has proven his talent and versatility, and you can expect to see him playing regularly in the future.

Track Gals Have Championship Caliber

By MARY ELLEN BORKOWSKI

For the first time in his five years as women's track coach, Jim Thompson heads a team that has both depth and versatility. Through excellent recruiting during the past year, Thompson has managed to assemble a squad of championship caliber athletes. This team represents the strongest and most diversified team of women tracksters ever to compete for Villanova.

Coach Thompson is very pleased with the depth of his young team. Although Mary Ellen Borkowski and Eileen Downey are the only seniors on the team, many of the freshmen have previous experience in AAU competition. These women will also be able to run several events aside from their specialty.

The Wildcats will be well represented this year in the invitational meets. Freshman Jennifer Whitfield has a 7.0 best in the 60 yard dash while sophomore Pat Robinson will be looking to improve on her 7.2 clocking.

Brigid Leddy, nationally ranked last spring in the 1500 meters, will be joined by Doriane Lambelet, N.Y. state champion in the 880 yards. Both have run under 2:14 in the half mile. Sue Shea, also a freshman, has turned in a time of 2:16 for the half.

School records should fall in the field events this winter. Shot putter Lyn Woods has already bettered the school record in practice. Sue Comly has a 5'6" high jump to her credit and she has sailed over 17'6" in the long jump.

Coach Thompson is pleased with the numbers of fine athletes that he has to choose from. In the past, the Wildcats have had champions in one or two events, but this year will be the start of a new trend. The women have the potential, says Thompson, to place in every event and do well in the invitationals. Thompson now has the depth on the team to place two or three women in an event in hopes of sweeping the finish.

The Wildcats open their season this Sunday in Jadwyn Gym at Princeton University. Thompson hopes to use this meet to establish the strong points of his team and to pinpoint any weaknesses they might have.

"We have a lot of talented girls this year and we should do well in all our meets, but we won't know exactly where we stand until we come up against some competition," said Thompson.

The women will get their competition this week as Princeton, Rutgers, St. John's and Temple will be among the teams at the opening meet. The Wildcats will have two meets before Christmas and then they will have two weeks off before they travel to Phila. to compete in the Mid-Atlantic AAU Champs on Jan. 11.

Lifters Open Sunday

The Villanova Powerlifting Team opens their home season in the fieldhouse this Sunday with Kutztown State College. The team is currently the Pennsylvania State Champion.

The team while underpublicized has one of the most successful records of any collegiate weightlifting team in the nation. Villanova's weightmen have a 43-0 dual record encompassing their 10 year existence.

Their work will be cut out for them this season since Mike Gulla, Paul Ruzicka and Bob Morton were lost to graduation. Only lifters with meet experience will return: senior captain Len Discenza, junior co-captain Nick Stagliano, Sam Correnti, John Morgan, Tom Batgos and Frank Verderame.

The veterans will be assisted by newcomers Joe Jocono, Brian McKenna, Vince Sferra, Ron Kidd, Tim Breslin, Vince Mattamira, Bill Van Sader and Willie DeMaio. These rookies have all seen some pre-season lifting action.

Co-captain Nick Stagliano states, "Despite the new team, I feel we can continue our winning tradition. Our new lifters seem to be coming along and should have enough experience by the State Championships."

The team is looking for new lifters. Anyone interested should contact Nick Stagliano, Len Discenzi or any weightlifter in the fieldhouse weight room.

Jaws Led By Big Three

By JOHN DOUGHERTY

In the hectic and grueling competition of Villanova intramural football, most successful teams are well organized and practiced. One would only have to walk by the various open fields to see the many teams and players diligently practicing and working towards their goal of intramural football champions. However, there is one team that seems to shun this ritual, and yet they have become one of the most successful intramural teams in the last two years.

Jaws football, led by their center and captain Dave Tortorello, has a two year record of 17 wins and 3 losses, and has appeared the playoffs both those years. Included in this record are impressive wins over the Attic, Wreckless Abandon and the Maulers, as Jaws took a tough road to the finals where they subsequently lost to DPE 20-6.

Their formula for success has not been constant practicing, but the outstanding talent which they possess and the friendship which the team members have among themselves.

Jaws is led by their "Big Three" Tony Pasquale, Tommy Hank and Jim Abromitis. Wide Receiver Pasquale has shown the ability to catch any ball thrown on the field and has come up with many key plays, while Tommy Hank handled the quarterbacking chores superbly and showed great poise in leading the team. But passing alone does not win games, so Jim Abromitis and Chris Brenner combined to form one of the most potent rushing attacks in the league.

The Jaws defense had given up only 3 touchdowns in two years before their final game loss and this stingy squad was led by one of the biggest lines in the league. Tim Hedges, Bill Raccio and Steve Clarke composed a fearsome sight, and the linebacking corps of Joe Grolio, Terry Bryne, Peter Merritt and Jim Abromitis proved to be very quick and strong. This stellar defensive unit would not be complete without the defensive backfield of Tony Pasquale and Mike Jones, which averaged over 3 interceptions a game.

Barry Sparrow (29) leads the hoopsters in scoring with 71 points.

Cats Edge George Washington

By PHIL SKENDER

It was a fitting prelude for the 1978-79 Villanova basketball season. The game was one of fast and furious action. It was a struggle that, in essence, should typify the current campaign. In their initial E.A.A. contest, the Wildcats rallied from a twelve point deficit in the first half, surged ahead in the final twenty minutes, never relinquished the lead, and increased their record to 4 and 0 with a 75-71 win over the George Washington Colonials.

4700 fans in the GW Smith Center watched as George Washington crept to within one point with four minutes left. Then, pressure free-throw shooting by guards Rory Sparrow and Steve Lincoln staved off the desperate Colonials.

It resembled last year's thrilling 59-58 last second Villanova victory in Washington, D.C. The difference in this year's game was the team's greater depth. Last Saturday, Villanova used nine players during the course of the game, all contributing to the Wildcat comeback. George Washington, on the other hand, failed to atone for the absences of 6-8 forward Tom Glenn, who fractured his hand in practice, and 6-4 guard Bob Lindsay, who suffered a slightly torn ligament in the knee early in the first half.

Villanova was a cold shooting team in the opening minutes and fell behind the Colonials 29-17, as 6-10 center Mike Zagardo took control on the offensive boards. Villanova's Aaron Howard, a freshman showing the poise and confidence of an upperclassman, and Steve Lincoln, a Washington, D.C. native, helped narrow the gap to 45-43 at halftime.

GW opened up to a quick seven point lead in the second half with assistance from Brian Magid, who connected on five field goal attempts in the game — all from twenty feet or more. Villanova battled to tie the game at 51-51 as Lincoln and Sparrow took advantage of the Colonial's slow guards. Then, with 12:43 remaining in the game, co-captain Rory Sparrow completed a three point play and the Wildcats never looked back.

George Washington lost Tom Tate and Mike Samson, two senior starters, in the second half because of fouls. Villanova, although no player fouled out, was in serious foul trouble in the final ten minutes when Alex Bradley, Aaron Howard, and Rory Sparrow each had to pass up valuable playing time due to four fouls.

Rory Sparrow scored a team high twenty points for Villanova, followed by Aaron Howard with 18 points (14 in the first half). George Washington's Mike Zagardo led all scorers with 24 points, but he was held to four points in the second half, a significant reason for the Wildcat win.

Villanova is now 1 and 0 in E.A.A. competition and their next league challenge comes against Rutgers on Saturday, December 9, at 3:00 p.m. in the Villanova Fieldhouse. The Scarlet Knights are again the pre-season favorite in the Eastern Eight and they are led by All-American candidate Jamee Bailey, a 6-9 senior center who averaged 23.5 points and 9.4 rebounds per game last year. Two other starters return from the 1977-78 Rutgers team that finished third in the NIT. They are 6-7 senior forward Abdel Anderson and 6-0 junior guard Rodney Duncan, a native Philadelphian.

Villanova's first exposure at the Palestra this season will take place on Tuesday, December 12, at 9:00 p.m. when the Princeton Tigers will be in opposition. Princeton graduated three of five starters from last year's 17 and 9 squad. Only 6-7 senior forward-center Bob Roma and 6-11 senior center Tom Young return with any valid starting experience. All in all, it should be a challanging year for head coach Pete Carril and his Tigers.

Tracksters Prep For Indoor

By NATE COOPER

The "boards" are slowly, but surely being re-erected behind the stadium signaling the start of another indoor track and field campaign for the Wildcats. When classes resume in mid-january the season will have been well underway. And what does another indoor season hold in store for Coach "Jumbo" Elliott, his 44th, and his heralded stable of studs? Another conference title and maybe the national championship that they came within one disqualified mile relay team last indoor season?

Yes. It is a team with lots of possibilities. The team have ten All-American returning from the previous indoor and outdoor campaign. Now add to that Kenyan Amos KipKorir, a transfer from Allegheny Community College, who is a 4:00.2 miller and has ran 2:11 in the 1000. Irishmen John Hunter comes to the Main Line with 1:50 800 meters to his credit and Mike England hails from Pittsburgh with a 1:52.3 half lap. Canadians Kevin Dillion and Rob Earl has has recorded 3:46.1 and 3:49.8 in the 1500 meters respectively. Dillion is 1:52.2 in the 800 and Earl's 8:07.4 in the 3000 meters makes them a flexible pair.

Peter Carroll a walk on from New Jersey has ran 1.52 in the half mile. David Cassidy threw the shot 59 feet as a schoolboy in Midway, Massachusetts. Brian Dalatri was the New Jersey state champ in that event, both are a welcome addition to a weak field team.

The Inter-Collegiate Ameteur Athletic Association of America (IC4A) champion, Tim Dale, IC4A runner-up John Burns, the versatile Jimmy Flynn and conference triple jump champ Nate Cooper hopes to end their college careers with three straight IC4A team titles. Paul Regan, Rick Kissell and John Kelley round out the departing seniors.

Junior Don Paige went undefeated in the 1000 last season becoming the IC4A and NCAA champ. Derrek Harbour was the conference runner-up in the 400 meters and the long jump. He was also a NCAA finalist in the 440.

Sophomore Anthony Tufariell was the IC4A conference runner up in the 600.

Keith Brown and Dana Shelto will be a threat in the 60. A Graves and cousin Willie Syndo adds depth in the sprints whil Dean Childs and Chris Shafe gives strength to the longer dis tances. Steve Hartford and Mik Morris are improving in the pol vault. The year should be fille with pleasant surprises.

The Lehigh Development Mee will be held this Saturday a Bethleham, Pa. The Muhamme Ali Invitational at Long Beach, California on January 6 is the first meet of the indoor season.

Watercats Lose To East Stroudsburg

By BETH WHITE

The Watercats suffered a surprising loss to a strong East Stroudsburg State swimming and diving team last Saturday by a 33 point margin, 40-73.

The Watercats won only five of the eleven events, including both diving events. Co-captains Kevin Quinn and Eric Wenger commended freshman Steve Tue for winning the one meter required dives and placing third in the optional dives, an outstanding accomplishment since this was Tue's first college meet. Ted Klinges won the optional dives off the three meter board and placed third in the required dives.

Sophomore Tom Popdan won the 100 yard freestyle event by four-tenths of a second, beating freshman Cameron Lawerance, who took second place. Lawerance triumphed in the 50 yard freestyle, grabbing first place with a time of 21.9 seconds.

Eric Wenger won the 1000 yard freestyle in 9:56.2, giving the Watercats their only other victory.

"The team was too confident going into the meet because we didn't think they could beat us. Only the divers did well, scoring twelve points for the team," said co-captains Wenger and Quinn. The team is working even harder for Thursday's meet at Monmouth, who will be "an even tougher opponent than East Stroudsburg. The team's morale is up, and we are counting on a victory Saturday when the team swims against George Wahsington University at GW.

Budget Stalled; Inflation Blamed

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

Because the Administrative Budget Committee cannot presently appropriate the money to meet expenses, the University budget for the fiscal year ending May 31, 1980 will not be prepared for the Senate until "March, or later," said Dean Alvin Clay, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

"The Administrative Budget Committee is having difficulty getting the budget in balance," said Clay. The first draft of the budget, handed to the Senate Committee in December, was not balanced.

"There are not enough resources to cover expenditures," said Clay. "The administration is trying to find places of increased revenue and places to cut expenditures," he said.

Clay would not venture to say what cuts or cost increases may be implemented to remedy the budget, but he affirmed, "We can't have all the services without the income. We either get more income or cut services. Probably there will be increases all along the line, and cuts all along the line."

According to Clay, inflation poses the problem. "Fixed costs went up. Utility costs went up, and social security taxes went up substantially," he said. "We still have to heat the buildings, and still have to pay the government," he said.

After the Administrative Budget Committee completes the budget, they will send it to the Senate Budget Committee, who will prepare it for the Senate floor. The Senate Budget Committee has met several times, and will meet again in about two weeks, but "until the budget is in some sort of order," said Clay, there is not much to be done. "You can waste a lot of time working on what is not the final draft," he said.

If the budget appears before the Senate in March, it will precede the important tenure reports by the Senate Faculty Affairs Committee and the Senate Rank and Tenure Committee, also due by the March meeting.

Last year, the budget was discussed in Senate on February 10. "That is because the first draft of the budget was balanced," said Clay.

Clay said that there is a chance the budget will not be completed by March. If necessary, an extraneous meeting will be called. "But I have a feeling it will be finished before April," said Clay.

Campus Security Foils Break-in

By NANCY ROONEY

On the evening of December 23, an intruder entered Austin Hall through a window, forcibly entered rooms on the third floor, and removed stereo equipment. The attempted burglary was abandoned, however, since all means of exit were securely chained and unable to be opened.

According to Captain Cunnane, chief of security, four stereo receivers, three turntables, two speakers, and one T.V. were recovered in the hallway. An inventory of the rooms disturbed revealed that stereo equipment was the only item disturbed while other valuables were ignored. All items were recovered and no items have been reported missing by Austin residents. Cunnane explained, "There is a market for stereos and turntables because these are high turn-over items. It's amazing what wasn't touched. The same type of items were taken from each room and nothing else was disturbed."

A precautionary security measure of locking and chaining all doors and entrances was responsible for thwarting the burglary. "We had everything locked up so nobody could get in or out," Cunnane noted. He believes, however, that the timing and choice of location for the attempted robbery points to a student or an insider as the burglar.

Burglaries have plagued the campus over vacation periods in the past. Over the Christmas holidays last year, Simpson Hall was burglarized and four stereo speakers, a turntable, and a complete stereo system were taken.

Similar to the Austin theft, only stereo equipment was taken and the thief appeared to be familiar with campus security and maintenance routines. Cunnane, however, discounts the idea that a burglary ring could be operating on campus.

Cunnane promises that security measures will remain strict and future burglaries will be dealt with harshly. "We're serving notice to whoever is involved in this, that if it continues, someone will get hurt. Furthermore, if anyone is caught, they will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law and it makes no difference whether that person is an outsider or a student."

Nuclear Energy Debated

By ANTHONY ONOFRIETTI

A nuclear energy forum, sponsored by the Engineering Joint Council and the Energy Education Advisory Council of PECO, was held last Tuesday night in St. Mary's auditorium. Many noted experts in the field addressed an audience of over 300 people.

"The purpose of the program was to make the students more aware of how we use nuclear energy," stated Paul Egitto, senior engineering major and member of the EJC.

The many speakers included Dr. William Pollard, former executive director of Oakridge Associated Universities, who presented a view of the theology of nuclear power.

"We may view nuclear energy as either a curse or a blessing," stated Pollard. "If we try to lessen the curse, let us not forget the importance of retaining the blessing."

Dr. Warren Witsig of Pennsylvania State University provided a slide show concerning the technology of nuclear power. Interesting statistics were displayed as to the safety of nuclear power plants in the environment. These figures showed that less than one in two billion fatalities have been attributed to nuclear energy plants.

Dr. John Fielder of Villanova's philosophy department was one of four respondents at the energy forum.

"There is a conflict of interest between the people who set the standards for nuclear energy and the fact that their careers and lifestyles are dependent upon the institution of nuclear power," stated Fielder.

On assessing the value of the forum, sophomore economics major Robert Montserrat stated, "Originally, I was against nuclear power. Now, however, I realize we have no other viable alternative to the energy shortage and we must address ourselves to the complex ethical questions involved."

Mike O'Brien, also a sophomore economics major, added, "I found it very interesting, especially Dr. Witzig's presentation, which was excellent. Dr. Fielder's insights into the possible conflicts of interests were also very enlightening. My belief in nuclear power as a solution to the energy problem was reinforced."

The other guest speakers included Dr. Fred Hopkins, chairman of the Energy Education Council; and Dr. George Pickering, associate professor of social ethics at the University of Detroit.

The other members of the panel, representing Villanova University, were Dr. James Cleary, vice-president for Academic Affairs; Dr. Arthur Crabtree, professor, religious studies; Dr. Edward McAssey, professor, mechanical engineering; and Dr. Bernard Prusak, professor, religious studies.

Who Makes The Decisions?

The campus abounds with advisory and investigatory committees. University bulletin boast of tri-partite structures offering opportunities for self-governance. Are the recommendations of these groups effective or ignored?

This article is the first in a series of articles which will examine the decision-making process at Villanova University.

By NANCY ROONEY

In March, 1978, the University Senate, following established protocol for the selection of deans, charged a tri-partite committee to "consult with and advise the President during the period of search and nomination of candidates" for the vacated position of Dean of Arts and Sciences.

After more than forty hours of actual committee meetings, the Dean Search Committee recommended Dr. Charles B. Cherry and Dr. Donald B. Kelley for the deanship.

In July, Father President John Driscoll named Rev. John P. O'Malley, O.S.A. as the new Arts and Science Dean, despite the Committee's previous recommendations. This situation sparked questions on the value of the dean search procedure.

The Dean Search Committee was composed of one administrator, Dr. James J. Cleary, chairman; five faculty members: Dr. John Caputo, Fr. Lawrence Gallen, Dr. Charles Helmetag, Dr. Peter Keliher, and Dr. Bernard Reilly; and two students: Lou Montressor and Cathy Pelesky.

The Committee initially established criteria for evaluating the candidates. The only stipulation established by Fr. Driscoll was that it be an "in-house" search, meaning that only members of the Villanova or Augustinian community could be considered.

Next, the Committee developed a standard series of questions to be asked all candidates during the interview. After reviewing the submitted resumes and interviewing and evaluating the candidates, the Committee made their recommendations.

The final Committee report submitted to Father Driscoll included the following materials: a copy of the Senate protocol for selection of academic deans, the statement of attributes sought, the names of the two Committee recommendations, and the individual Committee members' rationales for their vote as to the most qualified candidate.

Committee reaction to Father Driscoll's final choice in light of the Committee's work was mixed.

"I have no problem with Fr. Driscoll's choice because our recommendations were not binding. The President is ultimately responsible for the selection and he must answer to the Board of Trustees. The dean search process is valuable because ideally there is a tremendous amount of value in forcing the college to decide where it wants to go," stated Dr. James Cleary, vice-president for Academic Affairs and chairman of the Search Committee.

I wasn't too surprised, primarily because the committee was advisory. It was ironic, however, that Father O'Malley was the only candidate not from Villanova University," stated Dr. Helmetag.

"I think it was a mistake," Dr. Bernard Reilly asserted. "The final choice indicates the University is still timid about its ability to compete in full academic marketplace."

Student Cathy Pelesky noted, "I feel that the work we did as a committee was very valuable but I wonder if the selection that was made took this into account. If it didn't, the whole process is very frustrating."

The general reaction of most of the Committee members was that their role was viewed as strictly organizational in establishing an application process and narrowing down candidates.

Lou Montressor also expressed frustration: "I am dismayed that so much of our Committee's work did not result in a direct concrete action."

In addition, differences of opinion within the Committee seemed to result on the type of candidate sought. Dr. Cleary stated, "One of the problems of this type of Committee is its being truly representative." Dr. Reilly further noted, "Some of the ways our Committee finally applied our established criteria could be open to question."

Several faculty committee members alluded to the fact that the Committee sought a research-oriented person — someone recognized as a scholar in his field. Others sought a candidate who would reach out and overcome Villanova's provincialism. Dr. Cleary stated, "I have made no bones about the fact that all things being equal, I would prefer to have an Augustinian."

In a summer meeting, Father Driscoll met with Committee members to announce his choice. Father Driscoll re-affirmed the Committee's confidence in their recommendations, cited Fr. O'Malley's positive qualities, and then alluded to "other factors" that the Committee hadn't considered. Most committee members believed one of these factors to be the need for an Augustinian to administer the last non-secular academic dean position.

Father Driscoll explained his decision: "In my opinion, Father O'Malley was the best qualified for this position at this time." He stated that "considerable" weight had been given to the importance of an Augustinian in the position. Noting that although the Committee was not "specially informed" of the weight assigned to being an Augustinian, Father explained, "The importance of an Augustinian serving in an administrative position is given. Augustinians can contribute things that others cannot."

Father Driscoll cited the Committee work as "extremely helpful because they did the basic work of examining and screening the candidates." In assessing the weight of the Committee on his decision, Father Driscoll noted, "I forgot what information I received from the Committee on the candidates but I'm sure that their reports were fine."

University reaction to the fact that the Committee's choice was ignored was marked by cynicism. Dr. Reilly summed the University's feeling: "The forms may change but the substance doesn't. Perhaps some day, we will operate here as in an ideal world — decisions will be collar-blind."

Dean Selection: Committee vs. The Collar

"The importance of an Augustinian serving in an administrative position is a given. Augustinians can contribute things that others cannot."

Alumni Head Appointed

The appointment of Robert J. Capone as director of the Villanova alumni association was announced today by Rev. George F. Riley, O.S.A., vice president for University relations.

Capone succeeds Edward J. Rideout, who now heads the alumni annual fund office.

Capone's association with Villanova goes back to his college days. In 1962, he received his bachelor's degree in economics. He completed a master's degree in educational administration in 1973.

After receiving his undergraduate degree, he joined the faculty of Bishop Neumann High School in South Philadelphia. He taught courses in English, mathematics and business, and coached the football team. During his tenure at Bishop Neumann, he also served as a part-time football coach at Villanova under Lou Ferry.

In 1974, he left Bishop Neumann, and joined Villanova's staff full-time. His duties included serving as a recruiting coordinator and liaison between the University and alumni, prospective athletes and students, and professional organizations.

Capone sees his new job as "a way to share the University and its resources with my fellow graduates and serve as the vehicle through which they remain in the Villanova family." He is already working on a number of projects that will increase the University's services to, and contact with, its alumni.

A native of South Philadelphia, Capone now resides in Villanova with his wife, Frances, and two children.

WKVU Elects New Staff

By PATRICK FLYNN

WKVU, Villanova's student-operated radio has a new general manager. Gregg Schowengert was elected by the active staff members of the station shortly before Christmas vacation began. He defeated News Director Jim Coyle and Chief Engineer Steve Russo in an election which lasted two ballots.

Schowengert replaces Tom Hayford, who had served as GM for a year. Reflecting on his term, Hayford cited the major accomplishments of WKVU over the past year, mentioning two specific events which he felt were particularly important. One was the revision of the station's 4-year-old constitution. The other was WKVU's Muscular Dystrophy marathon in November.

"That was as physical a thing that a radio station can be presented with as proof that what they're doing is worth something," Hayford remarked. "It was a great motivating factor as well as a service to the community."

Schowengert, discussed the major objectives of his new administration. "Of course, we're going to try to get more people to listen to us. We'll try to upgrade our program," he said, "by having some more specialty shows and by providing a more professional overall product. What has gone on the air has always been a good product at WKVU, but we'll be looking for more consistency in our work."

The first responsibility for the new GM was to select new staff heads. Joe Jasek will fill the post of Programming Director, replacing Tom Kelly. "There won't be too many changes," commented Jasek. "I'll be trying to further Tom's policy as a progressive rock and roll PD. It's not that I don't like Top 40 or jezz, but I believe that Progressive Rock is what people want to hear because it provides a taste of everything." Jasek did add, however, that there would be special programming for soul, disco, Top 40 and other areas of music. "We'd like to keep everybody happy and still follow a basic format," he added.

Marianne Lavelle replaces Coyle as News Director. She said, "We have a good staff. They are really creative. We'll especially work on giving the students information on class cancellations during snow storms this winter."

Coyle became the station's Business Director, replacing Bill Carroll, and Betty Ruthowski took over the reigns of the Promotion Department from Pat Arcand. In other departmental changes, Martin Favis replaces John Mullin as Production Director and Mignon Miller is the new Intern Coordinator, replacing Paul Viggiano.

For the first time, several freshmen were selected for staff-head positions. Al Drenreiter and Rochelle Langinestra were chosen to share Gina Collis' position as Music Director. Connie Clay, whose brother, Alvin Clay, was succeeded as Sales Director, became the new Personnel Director. Diane Mishel previously held that office. Favis' old position, that of Traffic Director, was filled by another freshman, Tony Speranza.

Two positions have not changed hands. Steve Russo is staying on as Chief Engineer. And in the Sports Department, Phil Skender will remain in charge until the end of the current basketball season. No successor has been named for that post.

Schowengert is optimistic about his job as General Manager at WKVU. "Our major asset is our people," he contends. "We have good people and we have the desire. Everybody is interested in doing a good job and putting forth the effort."

Hayford echoed that optimism in reference to his successor. "The people who take over WKVU now have, in my opinion, the best organized WKVU ever," he said, adding, "With his (Schowengert's) enthusiasm and with the people he has working for him, I'm sure he'll do a good job."

VILLANOVAN Editor Awarded

RON TRIOLO

Villanovan editor Terence O'Toole has been named the recipient of a prestigious Newspaper Fund internship at the Wall Street Journal.

The Editing Internship Program, which is one of two internship opportunities offered by the Fund, selects only 40 students from a nationwide pool of applicants. The award puts O'Toole in the company of some of the most talented (and luckiest) collegiate journalists in the country.

Selection for participation in the program is based on six samples of the applicant's writing, a 500 word letter of introduction explaining motivation and reasons for applying for the award, a full transcript, and letters of recommendation.

As one of the elite internship finalists O'Toole has earned the opportunity to work for a full summer on the Journal's wireservice and other copydesks. In addition to the priceless experiences awaiting the junior economics major in New York City, he will also receive a $700 scholarship check upon verification of his final report at the summer's end. The stipend is intended to offset some of the expenses incurred by relocating in New York for the duration of the internship.

O'Toole, a Presidential Scholar and three year veteran Villanovan staffer, will be required to complete an intensive copyediting training course at Temple University immediately prior to his departure for the Big Apple. The scholarship and editing course costs will be paid both by the Newspaper Fund and the Wall Street Journal.

"I'm excited," O'Toole said when asked to comment on his achievement, "very excited, even my mother was surprised." He was quick to add, however, that he was slightly apprehensive about living in New York and that his plans at this time are far from firm. "The paper has reserved a place for me as an intern," he stated, "but I've still got to interview and negotiate with them before I make a commitment."

Faculty Promoted

By BILL CLARK

During the Christmas break, faculty promotions were finalized for next year. "The qualifications for promotion," according to Dr. James Cleary, vice-president for academic affairs, "are teaching ability, research, and community service, both to Villanova and to the area."

According to the Villanova University Faculty Handbook, a promotion must be initiated by filling out an application with Dr. Cleary's office. The application and all related materials are evaluated by the college dean and then finally by the committee on rank and tenure. The final responsibility for promotion rests with the President.

The various levels of employment for teachers at Villanova are Lecturer, Instructor, Assistant Professor, Associate Professor, and Professor. Each level requires more research and accomplishment.

The list of faculty promotions, effective Sept. 1, 1979, are as follows:

Dr. Angelo Armenti, Jr.-Professor, Physics; Miss Irene Baird-Associate Professor, Theatre; Dr. G. Lee Christensen-Associate Professor, Civil Engineering; Dr. Robert P. Derstine-Associate Professor, Accounting; Dr. Margaret P. Esmonde-Associate Professor, English; Dr. John H. Fielder, III-Associate Professor, Philosophy; Dr. Don Goelman-Associate Professor, Mathematics; Dr. Peter N. Keliher-Professor, Chemistry; and Dr. Lewis B. Morgan-Professor, Education.

Also, Dr. James J. Murphy-Associate Professor, English; Dr. Alain J. Phares-Associate Professor, Physics; Rev. Anthony Roman-Associate Professor, Modern Languages; Dr. Laurence Romero-Associate Professor, Modern Languages; and Dr. Stephen C. Weinrach-Associate Professor, Education.

(Washington) — The government has released its latest report on consumer prices, and it shows inflation during 1978 was nine percent — the worst in four years. Looking just at December, prices rose six-tenths of one percent, which is less than some had expected. But food prices jumped eight-tenths percent during the month. For the year as a whole, food prices rose more than eleven and a-half percent, housing was up nearly ten percent, and medical care was up nearly nine percent.

In an address heard Tuesday by millions of Americans, President Carter declared: "The state of the union is sound." and he asked Congress to help him build a "New Foundation" for prosperity at home and peace abroad.

The President challenged Americans to — in his words — "Build the foundations for a stronger economy with lower inflation." He dismissed as a "Myth" the idea that Americans "Must choose endlessly between inflation and recession."

The President also dismissed as "Unworkable" mandatory government controls on the economy.

As for the 1980 budget, the president emphasized that the "clear message" of the budget is his determination to bring inflation under control. He said the budget figures — in his words — "Provide enough spending restraint to begin unwinding inflation, but enough support to keep American workers productive and to encourage investment to provide new jobs."

The budget calls for spending nearly 532 (b) billion dollars, with a deficit of about 29 (b) billion.

President Carter staked out a peacemaker role for the United States in his speech, saying "We have no desire to be the world's policeman." The President promised an attempt to cap the nuclear arms race, telling congress: "The choice . . . is between a world of anarchy and destruction, or a world of cooperation and peace."

But he promised he would not sign a "SALT" treaty with the Russians unless it advances American safety. And he defended his request for an increased defense budget.

In the Middle East, Carter affirmed his intention to press for an Egyptian-Israeli Peace Treaty. And he restated the United States' commitment to Israel.

.....

Other key programs the President outlined for the coming year included:

Legislation to hold down hospital costs; efforts to deregulate the transportation and other key industries; and making a start toward enacting a National Health Program.

(Washington) — An aide to Herman Talmadge says the senator has been admitted to Bethesda Naval Hospital in Maryland for treatment of alcohol abuse and other complaints.

Talmadge is 65 years old and a 22-year veteran of the senate from Georgia. He's said to have entered the hospital last night on the advice of his physician.

Talmadge's news secretary, Gordon Roberts, spoke of exhaustion, fatigue and alcohol abuse, possibly resulting from prolonged stress and pressures.

He said Talmadge also has requested a thorough physical evaluation, which "combined with bed rest and medical care, will require several days."

The Senate Ethics Committee is investigating allegations that Talmadge ordered the diversion of 39 thousand dollars in campaign contributions and expense funds into a secret Washington bank account. The panel is scheduled to hold a hearing next month.

(Washington, D.C.) — A witness at the bribery-perjury trial of Congressman Daniel Flood testified this week that he gave the Pennsylvania democrat five thousand dollars as an advance payoff. Convicted briber William Peters said the money was for help he got from Flood in selling temporary housing to the government for disaster victims. That came in the wake of the floods of 1972.

Peters said he met the congressman at a disaster command post not far from the Wilkes-Barre airport in 1972. Peters said he was acting as an agent for a company called Sterling Homes, which allegedly had 20 thousand modular homes available for immediate delivery. It was the second time at Flood's trial that a witness has testified he gave a bribe personally to Flood.

(Washington) — State department sources say the administration wants to grant "most-favored-nation" trade status to China and the Soviet Union. According to the sources, the administration is now looking for ways to accomplish that goal in Congress.

(Washington) — According to a new senate committee report, President Carter should halt the pullout of U.S. troops from South Korea. The report says new intelligence estimates indicate North Korea has 550 thousand to 600 thousand men in its armed forces — about one-fifth more than previously estimated.

A spokesman for the Shah of Iran says he is indefinitely postponing his trip to the United States. The Shah arrived in Morocco Monday for what was to be a three-day visit. There's no word on whether he'll stay in Morocco or go elsewhere.

(Washington) — Subaru is recalling 170 thousand of its 1977 and '78 model vehicles because of poor engine operation and because the throttle valve may stick in cold weather.

The problems apparently are caused by condensed water vapor drawn from the crankcase ventilation system, which freezes in the carburetor. The federal agency says it knows of no accidents or injuries caused by the defects.

Women Priests - Heretical Or Acceptable?

By CAROL GOLDFARB

It has been said that while the women sleep, the earth shall sleep. But listen! We are waking up and rising and soon our sister will find her strength. The earth-moving day is here. We women wake to move in fire.

Alla Bozarth-Campbell, Episcopal priest

A controversial and much discussed question today is the ordination of women. Speaking authoritatively, the National Conference of Catholic Bishops (NCCB) has announced it will "encourage further study and discussion of the ordination of women." The NCCB report is not definitive and admits that "the question of ordaining women is an old one in the church."

The Vatican issued a decree subsequent to the NCCB report reaffirming that women may not be ordained. Although many church members maintain that the question is still open for discussion, others consider the decree final.

The bishops' report excludes women from Holy Orders by assuming male importance. It is argued that since the Word of God became incarnate as a male, and that because the priest is to act in the place of Christ, he obviously also must be a male.

Yet why is only sex paramountly important? What about skin color? Jesus was "white" therefore blacks cannot become priests?

Dr. Virginia Ratigan, supporter of women in Ministry.

Another argument is that Jesus chose only men to be his apostles, therefore the church must also choose only men to be priests. Yet Jesus chose only Jews as his Apostles and disciples.

The bishops' report contends that God speaks through tradition, that the Christian tradition has never allowed women in Holy Orders, and therefore, God's revelation is that women not be ordained. Ironically the bishops' report gives this reason the most weight, when in this instance so many uncertainties are involved.

Dr. Virginia Ratigan, instructor of Religious Studies at Villanova has been deeply involved in the movement to ordain women. As a religious educator with the Catholic Church she "felt the need of women's presence in the Catholic Ordained Ministry."

Dr. Ratigan feels there are many women who feel they have been called and have experienced institutionalized inequality because of the Church's stand today. Many women have gone through the seminary only to find ordination closed to them.

Dr. Ratigan, as a result of her involvement in women's ordination and her appearance on TV 10 editorial feels she has "raised awareness on the part of both men and women to the uniqueness of a vocation to the priesthood."

Many schools of Theology, the Pontifical Biblical Commission and various theologians have all

Well, here we are, back at good ol' swingin' VU, where the action never stops . . . and where your friends never stop telling you about what a great vacation they had, when you know all the time they stayed home and waited for the mailman to come every day so they could intercept the grades . . . don't you love it when you find out that that kid that sent your accounting prof a Christmas card still got a C . . .. Now that you're back at school, you can finally file away those blue and red argyle socks your mother gave you . . . but now you can break out the new bong your best friend gave you . . . in past years, Radnor residents looked forward to VU's Christmas break, when they could get a break from life at college, but this year they couldn't tell the difference . . . Does anyone have any New Year's resolutions left that haven't been broken . . . speaking of January 1, we naturally have to mention the Mummers . . . South Philadelphia's version of, well, we're not exactly sure what . . . bad weather forced postponement of the parade until January 6, the day of the Notre Dame-Villanova game, forcing Wildcat/Mummers fans to make a tough decision — where to go to see the best comics . . . VU's latest sport to replace chain hanging — sitting by the windows in the Pit and watching people slip and fall on the ice that Maintenance should have cleared away . . . don't you hate it when you have to sit through a class in shoes that are soaked from that puddle in front of Bartley that you can feel the mud in your socks . . . Ed Geisz, the varsity swimming coach, is thinking of covering Mendel Field with plastic for a new racing pool . . . Don't you feel sorry for those people who come back from having to spend their vacations at their parent's condominium in Florida, sweating in that tropical heat, getting bombarded with harmful solar radiation, getting that itchy sand down their suits . . . Thank Heaven for Pennsylvania weather . . . We've decided that the worst thing about the winter is when your girlfriend has a cold and you have to kiss her goodnight and you realize that you haven't seen her blow her nose in a while . . . If you think we have it bad here at VU, how'd you like to be the son or daughter of an LCB agent . . . It must be a really swinging New Year's Eve at their houses . . . When you're 20 years old and still have to drink root beer at midnight . . . Do you remember hearing about those workers that spent all their lives building the great European cathedrals? Well, we've discovered that those guys are alive and are working on the Connelly Center . . . Would somebody please tell those people waiting in front of Dougherty Hall that 1) Drop/Add was moved to Butler Annex and 2) that Drop/Add ended three days ago . . . The Registrar decided that Butler Annex was safer — when you got closed out of that sure A course, there's a lot less to break there . . . Well, who knows, who cares . . .

Parody Place

Around the Annex in Eighty Days

By VICKY PARENTE

It sometimes occurs to me that Drop and Add is Villanova's version of "Outward Bound" a program which maintains that the best way to teach young adults maturity and endurance is to drop them into a tropical jungle, or other such dire circumstances, and let them fight their way out.

Anyone who went through Drop and Add last week can attest to the fact that waiting in line for hour after hour certainly teaches endurance, and restraining yourself from screaming out loud in frustration is a sure sign of maturity.

To the uninitiated, the long, long, long line that stretches from the doors of Butler Annex, down the alley, up the stairs and around the Field House twice could only mean one thing — the LCB has called off the dogs and there's free beer in the Field House for everybody!

Those of us who have recently survived Drop and Add would like to pass on a list of a few things to take along if you are unlucky enough to have to go next semester — a sleeping bag, a care package from Campus Corner, a change of clothes, some old tests and term papers — you never know when you can bribe somebody and get a better place in line, and finally a good book, you know something you can finish while waiting in line, maybe "War and Peace" or "Gone With the Wind."

But let's not be unfair — some very nice things happen in the Drop and Add line. Just last Wednesday, a couple of seniors met and got married there. They were standing next to each other in line for two days and fell into a meaningful relationship, so they called Father Bob over from Student Activities, borrowed a little rice from the Pie Shoppe and what do you know — there goes the bride! OK, OK, so I'm stretching it a little bit — they only got engaged; but I'm sure that some of you who have endured Drop and Add in the past can identify with the following more realistic experience.

You've been standing in line since eight in the morning with 627 people in front of you, and you finally get into Butler Annex at 9:30 (the next morning). You sit down and open your mouth to say, "I'd like to add History 2040, section 7," when one of the ladies from the Registrar's office two chairs down calls out, "History 2040, section 7 — the last seat has just been filled." With your mouth still open, you watch nine women flip, in unison, to the history courses listed in the computer printout sheet, and carefully placing their rulers, draw a long black line through those five little numbers that have been the focal point of your life for the past 24 hours. At this point you promptly fall out of your chair and pass out cold. As a friend of mine says, "It's a classic!"

Art Dept. Sponsors Italian Summer

Students on the Italy Program enjoy the view of Florence.

By JOYCE POGGI

You may not be lucky enough to be Italian, but you can get real Italian flavor by participating in the nationally and internationally known Summer Program in Italy.

For the eighth consecutive year, Villanova University and Rosemont College are sponsoring the program which is open to all students.

Students will live in a family-style hotel in a residential section of Siena. A Renaissance city in north-central Italy, Siena is almost perfectly preserved.

Program Director Dr. George Radan notes "it is a highly cultural experience." Some high points of interest are St. Maria Novella, the Cathedral of Florence, Padua, Venice.

Perugia, Assisi and the neighboring hilltop cities of Tuscany. A stay in Rome will conclude the program. In the past, students have also visited the Riviera in their leisure time.

Courses (up to 6 credits) may be taken for college credit or audited. Students may choose from various courses in Studio Art, Art History, History of Italian Cities, Italian language and Italian literature. Instruction is in English by Villanova and Rosemont professors and by visiting lecturers from Italy.

At their leisure, students may take advantage of concerts (free of charge), discos and civic center activities.

The cost is $989. This includes hotel accomodations, meals, transportation, tuition and all tours. Round trip air fare is additional at a special low rate.

The program runs from May 28 to June 26. Students may return home or continue to vacation. Last year, 30% of the students decided to continue.

Any student interested in participating should contact Dr. Radan of the Art History Department in St. Mary's immediately.

You may get thick on fettucini and Chianti, but the overall experience is bound to be worth every penny.

By Fr. RAY JACKSON O.S.A.

Jesus is a healer. How many scenes in the life of Christ spring to mind when we think of Jesus as healer? Luke's version of the Good News tells of Jesus curing Simon's mother-in-law, driving evil spirits from a man possessed, cleansing lepers, healing paralytics, restoring a man's withered hand, and many many other incidents of compassion and care.

It would, however, be the height of folly to think that Jesus' concern as healer was limited to his historical presence in Palestine some two thousand years ago. We know, in fact, that part of God's plan was to allow Jesus' work to continue in his community which we call "church." On the evening of his Resurrection Jesus appeared to his diciples and said, "My peace I give to you; whose sins you forgive they are forgiven, whose sins you retain they are retained." It was an Easter gift to his followers that through the healing grace of penance we could be reconciled with God.

Throughout the course of history this sign, or sacrament (a holy sign) of healing has undergone many changes. At present there is the traditional "confessional box" at the rear of most churches where the reconciliation of the penitent is done with anonymity. But, increasingly more and more people are taking advantage of a "room of reconciliation." This provides a more relaxed atmosphere which is hopefully conducive to discussion and the sorting out of one's life with a spiritual director.

Here at the University both types of confession are available. Noonday confessions are provided on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday in the traditional manner. A "room of reconciliation" is open Monday thru Thursday from 3 p.m. until 5 p.m. to provide an opportunity for an extended conversation on personal spiritual growth. The place of reconciliation in either case is located at the rear of the main chapel.

All of us from time to time need to seek spiritual healing from our many faults and failings. Jesus offers us a special opportunity to seek his healing power in this sacramental way. Perhaps there are faith questions on your mind, or moral conflicts which need resolution — perhaps there is a need to reform your life and accept God into your life again. In any event, a source of healing is at hand. "Seek and you shall find, knock and it shall be open to you."

Women Priests

agreed that there is no substantial reason why women should not be ordained.

Although the decision to ordain women as priests would have to come from the Pope, in communion with the Bishops, there is some indication that the Catholic Bishops are more than ever aware of the issues and may begin to listen more attentively to the voice of women in their church.

Dr. Ratigan is presently teaching a course at Villanova called "Women in Judaeo Christian Tradition." The course presents some contemporary issues and teaches the student to deal with "Linguistic Sexism" in the use of modern language.

Combining Concern And Responsibility

To Be Fair, Equitable, Accurate, Relevant...

Twelve years ago, a Villanova student named Ron Javers sat down at his typewriter and wrote editorials as the editor-in-chief of the first Villanovan published without prior censorship. Unencumbered by restrictive controls, Javers and his staff proceeded to publish prose that proponents of the "new journalism" would, if not applaud, at least notice.

Both Javers and The Villanovan have come a long way since 1967. The former editor-in-chief survived one of the most bizarre incidents in American history in Guyana, vaulting overnight to national attention. And The Villanovan no longer preaches anti-war rhetroic or editorializes on professors and LSD.

The impact of Javers and his "radical" newspaper is not lost on the new Villanovan staff, however. As we publish our first issue today, we begin an undertaking in which we will seek to represent the views of the Villanova community both accurately and actively. We pledge to be journalists first and foremost, examining the issues which require a closer inspection, seeking to clarify and enlighten. Our commentary and suggestions will, we trust, be relevant and constructive, and will be delegated to the editorial pages where opinionated writing belongs. We welcome letters on any subject, and will seek to print as many as possible. We will make every attempt to be fair and equitable in the scope of our coverage.

Our most valuable lesson from the days of Javers and his contemporaries is a recognition of the mortal sin of collegiate journalism — dormancy. It would be nice to be content with life at Villanova, but we cannot, and we will not. We will try as hard as we can to work for constructive change in areas ranging from the drinking age and the budget to problems of smaller scope. Surely controversy will arise somewhere down the line, but we will make every attempt to insure an evenhanded treatment of all issues.

Dan Rather once said that journalists must be prepared to be received with dislike, but never with disrespect. We think that's a pretty good philosophy. If we can combine the eagerness and concern of those old radicals while earning the respect of our peers, we will have accomplished a great deal.

Letters To The Editor

Book Return Policy

Dear Editor,

The intention of this letter is to make my fellow students aware of a stringent policy, upheld by the University Book Shop, which forbids them from exchanging a text book without a drop-add slip. I found out about this policy the hard way.

It all started when I discovered that I had immediate access to a text book I needed for my Calculus 1300 class, for free. One minor detail — I had already purchased the book I needed in the Book Shop for $15.95.

"No problem," I said naively, to myself. "I'll just bring the book back, in its original condition, with my receipt, and they'll give me my money back or credit for another book I have to buy."

Wrong! The man at the Book Shop's Office told me no books are returned without a drop-add slip. No exceptions. The result — I was out $15.95.

Just for the sake of conscience, I took the matter to Fr. John Deegan, vice president for Student Life. Fr. Deegan was more than understanding and sincerely wanted to be helpful. He inquired to the Book Shop as to its "return" policy, and requested a statement of that policy be sent to his office. He promised to bring the situation to the Committee for Student Life.

It is my sincere hope that a serious attempt is made to reform this policy. But for now, when you buy a text book from the University Book Shop, make certain that you need it. Otherwide, be prepared to p a y for your mistake!

Sincerely,
Sante D. Marabella

For our first On Campus of the w semester, we decided to find t just how recognizable the Rev. hn M. Driscoll, president of the iversity, was to members of the undergraduate community. We took a photograph of Father President out of our files and showed it to students, asking them if they knew who the man in the photograph was, if they had ever heard him speak, if they had ever met him, and if they thought Father Driscoll should be more visible.

"I've seen him, but I didn't know ho he was. I've never heard him peak or met him. I'm sure someme I will see him. I guess I hould."

Jeneen Cairo, junior

"Yes, that's Father Driscoll. I've probably seen him around the campus and not known it. I think he was supposed to be at an RSA meeting I was going to last semester, but he didn't come."

Wally Hanley, sophomore

"That's Father Driscoll, isn't it? I've heard him speak twice, let me see if I can remember when. Once during freshman orientation, and I'm not sure about the other time. Part of it's my fault for not going to see him, but part of it is the fact that the opportunity isn't always there."

Jerry Leddy, senior

"Isn't it the president, Father riscoll? I did hear him speak once, think, when I first came here on andidate's Day. I guess you should e him more, but you're here to get n education and he's not the man at's giving it to you."

Lynn Alberieci, sophomore

"It's Father Driscoll. No, I've never heard him speak. As a student I should. It's his fault. There's no student-administration rapport here. There probably never will be."

Ray Bauso, junior

"That's President Deegan. I heard him speak during Orientation. I really don't think we should see more of him. If he talks to us just once a year, just to let us know he's around, and for us to tell him what we're thinking."

Rob Franks, freshman

"That's Father Driscoll, the president. I've seen him a couple of times, at the football banquets. I think it's important for a student to see him at least once before they graduate."

Angelo Ganguzza, sophomore

The Villanovan wishes to apologize for an error in the December 9, 1978 issue of the paper, when the time for the Villanova Singer's Christmas concert was misprinted.

Supermovie!

By PAUL VIGGIANO

All the gods are dead; so we now want the Superman to live.
Nietzsche

"You have got to be kidding. I am not going to see a movie about Superman. That's for kids." Well I looked like I would watch this one alone. Somehow I couldn't see Hollywood making much money by appealing to the younger generation. After all, how many little tots had two bucks (four bucks if you're a little taller) to throw away on a movie about a guy in blue tights who wears his underwear on the outside? Warner Communications and producer Richard Donner ("The Omen") must have had the same thought because they are banking that adults, as well as children, will flock to the theaters to see the "man of steel" for one good reason — pure entertainment.

The most super thing about the movie "Superman" may well be the super money spent on it. The recipe reads as follows: Hire a superb novelist and script writer (Mario Puzo of "Godfather" fame for $600,000) to write a screenplay based on comic books. Sign on a big name actor (Marlon Brando as Jor-El) with a platinum wig and a spit curl at a supercharged price of $3.7 million for little more than a cameo role. Throw in another Gene Hackman as arch-villain Lex Luthor for $2 million for flavor. After that, throw in Valerie Perrine spilling out of her costumes, good old Glenn Ford, Susannah York and Jackie Cooper as Perry White. On top of all of that, toss in about $10 million on promotion. The result: $45 million spent on Hollywood hype gone wild, but if it sells, it will be termed an example of marketing genius.

The movie itself has many strong points, one of them being the role of Superman as played by Christopher Reeve. (By the way, it was George Reeves, with an 's', who played the hero on TV.) Reeve is a 6-foot-4, 24 year-old actor whose biggest commercial splash until now has been a Mafia hit-man in the TV soap opera "Love of Life." Now, due to his relaxed style as Superman, Reeve can kiss the soaps good-bye. His career is moving faster than — aw, forget it.

It appears as though Reeve is the perfect Superman. (One little note, Robert Redford was originally cast for the role but refused.) He flies better than he used to on TV. He's younger. The paunch is gone, and the way he has the hots for Lois Lane (played by Canadian Margot Kidder) makes one wonder if he really is the man of steel. In one scene, when Lois asks Superman if he can see through anything, he answers, "Yes." She then asks him, "OK, what color underwear am I wearing?" He says, "Pink." She then becomes very flustered and asks him a few other questions. But attracted to him, she eventually asks, "Do you like pink?" In the sequel, "Superman 2" (which is almost completed), Superman and Lois are said to have a torrid love scene. Isn't anything sacred?

Vasey
In The Spring

By JEANNE SALVATORE

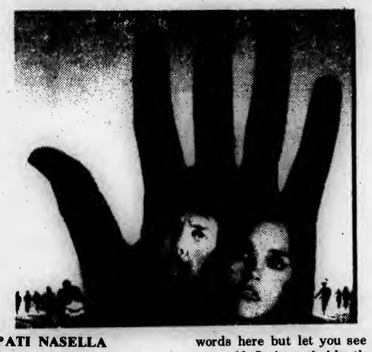
The spring semester at Vasey Theatre should prove to be an interesting and exciting season. The productions are varied and extremely appealing. Tickets are minimal in price, yet offer the opportunity to experience really good theatre.

The first production is A Doll's House by Henrik Ibsen. The play is a classic expression of a women's role in society, and was originally written as propaganda for women's rights. Suzanne Barabas will direct this production, bringing a woman's perspective to the plays universal themes of freedom, individuality and responsibility. This play will be performed February 7-10 and the 14-17. The curtain opens at 8:00 p.m. and student tickets are $2.00 during the week and $3.00 on the weekend.

The next performance will be Cabaret on March 14-18 and 21-25. This musical portrays the story of Sally Bowles and her romance with an English writer. It examines the decadence and forced gaiety of Berlin night life prior to the Nazi take over. Dr. Christy, who has just returned from a nine month sabbatical in Germany, will direct this musical, bringing a deep insight into the production. The show will begin at 8:00 p.m. and student tickets are $3.00 during the week and $4.00 on the weekend.

Scapino is the third and final play of the spring season. It is an adaptation of a classic Moliere farce, That Scoundrel Scapin. It will be directed by Terri Fimiano "and is packed to the brim with slapstick humor and sight gags." This production is the popular "italianized" adaptation by Jim Dale and Frank Dunlop. Scapino is fun and should prove to be an extremely entertaining production. It will be performed on April 18-21 and 25-28. Student tickets are $2.00 during the week and $3.00 on the weekend.

They Are Coming!



By PATI NASELLA

"Invasion of the Body Snatchers" is one of those movies one reacts to while viewing which leaves no lingering afterthoughts. It just doesn't raise one's galactic curiosity.

Little flowers from space which seem beautiful as well as harmless silently capture mankind by destroying the human bodies and replacing them with emotionless ones. Void of human inquisitiveness, they represent willing workers for this elusive evil force. Since this miraculous transition is the only (quickee) segment of blood and gore, I'll not waste any words here but let you see it for yourself. It is probably the only original idea offered in the film.

Donald Sutherland and Brooke Adams, both with the Department of Health, noticed a changing civilization which consisted of odd conspiracies. They then put on their white hats, thus entering a never-ending battle. It wasn't long before they were overwhelmingly outnumbered. This small but significant group that remained untouched by the corrupt happenings represented the good and the familiar while the plant people

Die Laughing with Camille

By PATI NASELLA
and MAURICE FURLONG

A true theatrical experience is to be had in Charles Ludlam's creation of Marguerite. This sadiantly fair damsel can only be compared quite recently to a drag queen, faintly resembling John Belushi.

Tuesday night, at Univ. of Penn's Annenberg Center, the Ridiculous Theatrical Company presented it's production of Camille. It proved to be an ingenious satire on anything they could think of which had a span ranging from the stiff and pompous Victorian era to the candid vulgarities of the 1970's Animal House crew.

The Company has been active since 1967 when they first introduced this innovative and refreshing style of theatre. They have not been awed by serious literature. This can be best observed in such stirring productions as Conquest of the Universe/When Queens Collide and the ever popular Turds in Hell.

The play is a free adaptation of "La Dame Aux Camilias" by Alexandre Dumas. Ludlam's Company sets a loud, bawdy and recognizably decadent mood so characteristic of our own 1970's. The sacrifice of love for money is predominant, though why Ludlam seems to think that this has any relevance today remains obscure.

Camille is self-explanatory. It leaves you with a smile on your face and a nagging doubt in the back of your mind as to why you found it amusing. A masterpiece.

Incidentally, Dr. James Christy, Chairman of Vasey Theatre Department will host a discussion after the January 30 show. So if you choose to expand on your sense of humor you can see Camille until February 4.

Concert

The Dead Arise at Spectrum

By BILL GUERIN

There were no fireworks, no iridescent costumes, no stories to the audience, no fantastic light show. Just 4-1/2 hours of pure rock music.

After performing an all-night New Year's Eve concert at the closing of the Winterland Theater in San Francisco, the Grateful Dead returned to the Spectrum on January 5 and 12 for two sold-out engagements.

Opening the first concert with "Sugaree," lead guitarist Jerry Garcia's voice showed little sign of the hoarseness which forced the postponement of two Philadelphia concerts in November. As the band continued with "Candyman," the vocals and riffs of the graying Garcia proved to be in top form.

After dancing in the aisles during a arousing rendition of "Mexicali Blues," the crowd was soon entranced by vocalist Donna Jean Godchaux's "From the Heart of Me," a captivating cut from the group's latest album, Shakedown Street. Following such classics as "Black Peter," "Mama Tried," and "Brown-eyed Woman," the band prophetically ended the first set with "The Music Never Stopped."

Returning from the 45-minute break, the Dead revivified the audience with a combination of "Bertha" and "Good Lovin'." The crowd-incensing medley limelighted the superior skills of accomplished guitarist-vocalist Bob Weir, who plucked, picked, strummed, strummed, bounded, and sounded his way around the stage.

Having mellowed the audience with "It Must Have Been the Roses," the San Francisco-based group struck up a moderately-tempoed "Estimated Prophet." At the conclusion of this Terrapin Station favorite, the band engaged in an overwhelming jam session during which the drumsticks of percussionists Mickey Hart and Bill Kreutzmann went flying into the awed crowd.

As the amazing instrumental subsided and Garcia shook hands with Kreutzmann, the band eased right into "Eyes of the World." Following this Wake of the Flood crowd-pleaser, bassist Phil Lesh joined Garcia and Weir for CSN-style harmony on the classic "Truckin'," while the euphoric fans chanted "what a long strange trip it's been."

Rounding out the second set was the Steal Your Face favorite, "Around and Around," during which the dancing fingers of Keith Godchaux animated his keyboards as Gepetto did Pinocchio. To conclude the marathon rock festival, the Dead sent the already high crowd to the rafters with an encore presentation of "Johnny B. Goode."

The second of the two January Dead concerts was equally

NEW MCAT

Your future is the most important reason to choose Multiprep to prepare for the New MCAT. Below are eleven other good reasons . . .

What Multiprep Offers	What Most "Popular" Firms Offer
14 sessions (66 hours)	• 8 sessions or less (32 hours or less)
Facsimile exams, each reflecting all aspects of the New MCAT: looks, format, same wording of directions, "replica" of the actual answer sheet, etc. All facsimile exams are professionally prepared (typeset and printed booklets). Taking a Multiprep test is like taking the actual New MCAT.	• No facsimile exams – only practice tests. Same quality of questions as that of Multiprep, but tests are poorly prepared (typed and mimeographed) – does not reflect actual New MCAT format and does not give you the the "practice effect" and psychological advantage of experiencing a New MCAT.
Two full-length (8-hour) facsimiles of the New MCAT (PMCAT).	• No facsimile MCAT. Longest practice test is about 4 hours or less.
Scoring of both PMCATs, with equivalent score reports and percentile rankings. One PMCAT at the beginning of the program and one at the end enables you to evaluate your improvement.	• No such scoring done at other test-preparation centers. Difficult to evaluate your improvement throughout the course of the program.
Classes average 18 to 20 students. Classes guaranteed not to exceed 35 students.	• No guarantee on class size. It may be anywhere from 50 to 150 students.
Six different instructors, each a specialist in a particular discipline (biology, chemistry, physics, etc.), conducting the program.	• Usually one instructor, considered to be a "master of all disciplines", conducting entire program.
Video-tapes and tape-recordings for review and make-up purposes. Video-recordings especially helpful for review of physics, chemistry, and quantitative sections.	• Tape recordings only (no video-tapes); at certain other firms, no recordings are available at all. Some do not even have a test center.
Proximity and ease of access to our test-center from Villanova University – 15-20 minutes by car, 10-15 minutes by train from Villanova train station.	• Access to the "most popular" prep-course test-center usually takes 50-60 minutes by car, and 1-2 hours by public transportation.
You may repeat our program for a re-registration fee of $45.	• To repeat their course, most other firms require full tuition charges.
Refund policy.	• No refund policy
Voluminous home-study. Excellent material.	• Voluminous home-study. Excellent material.

Sound

Rod Stewart

By STEVEN COMBS

Rod Stewart is ugly. He does sing, he squeaks and screams. His lyrics are devoid of depth. Rod's latest album Blondes Have More Fun is enjoyable listening. Somehow, his straining, impassioned vocals and gently pounding melodies combine to make what is best described as an honest plea for understanding.

The album opens with "Do Ya Think I'm Sexy?" The lyrics ponder the lack of communication between men and women when it comes down to yes or no. Personally, I think the problem is not women's ability to say yes or no but men's ability to take no for an answer. "Dirty Weekend" has some nicely raunchy lyrics that go well with the thumping and screaming sound that characterizes much of this album. "Ain't Love a Bitch" should have been the title track since 8 of the 10 songs are complaints about love relationships. Stewart slows down the pace with "The Best Days of My Life." Since it's hard to thump and scream quietly, this one sounds sort of silly. Side one ends with "Is That The Thanks I Get?"

I guess I should say more about the actual music on this disc. But most of the songs are so similar that they become indistinguishable. Although I enjoy listening to Rod Stewart, an album side is more than enough. That being so, there is little need for comment on side two because you'll probably never get that far, unless you listen to it first. That would be a good move since it's the superior side.

"Attractive Female Wanted" is a bachelor's song of desperation. My favorite cut, it is helped by the horns of Phil Kenzie, Steve Madaio, and Tom Scott. They give needed boosts throughout the album. The rowdy "Blondes (Have More Fun)" explains why Rod bleaches his hair. This song is the only one that gets up and moves. It is more thumping and screaming but louder and faster.

"Last Summer" is another silly sounding slow number. It is an ideal time to go to the refrigerator. After "Standing In The Shadows Of Love," "Scarred and Scared" finishes the album. Stewart tries to get serious with minimal success. The major flaw on this album is that you just get tired of the repititious sound.

amazing and equally well-received; the only differences between the shows were the songs played. During the second performance, the group only repeated two of the songs from the earlier show.

Drawing on such classics as "Jack Straw," "El Paso," "Tennessee Jed," "Beat It On Down the Line," "Deal," "Sugar Magnolia," and "U.S. Blues," as well as the relatively recent "Samson and Delilah" and "Dancing in the Streets," the Grateful Dead played many of the songs which have highlighted their 15-year history.

Throughout the two concerts, by performing such diverse types of music as bluegrass, 50's-style rock-and-roll, and even some up-beat disco tunes, the band proved to their loyal fans once again that the Dead are not ready to die.

Movie

By STEPHEN M. CASTELLANO

The story of the Blues Brothers is something like this.

Joliet Jake had a vision. It was his, the only one he'd ever had. And he clung to it. There had been too many messy gas station holdups with only some green stamps and a case of Valvoline to show for the risk. Joliet Jake has always been full of schemes. But this was different; it played across his tiled cell wall 24 hours a day. And the ending was always the same. Jake and his younger brother Elwood cruising out of Calumet City, Ill., with the sun on their shades and a full tank of gas. He absent-mindedly rubbed his Buddah belly; even on a diet of jail food and Chesterfields, Jake had gained weight. Someday they'd have a penthouse on Lake Shore Drive . . . float around with bourbons and blonds. It was out there for the taking, and Jake could smell it like damp air. . ." And so ends the story of Joliet Jake and Elwood Blues.

Recently I was at King of Prussia Mall looking around for possible Christmas gifts. Records generally seem to be a good gift to give if they are appreciated and they are the type of gift that keeps on giving.

In the Best Sellers rack sat an album, The Blues Brothers; Briefcase Full of Blues. I looked at the cover and thought, that can't be John Belushi from Animal House, and Saturday Night Live. The person on the front cover had to be someone that looked just like him. We all know what's going on with Look Alike contests today, i.e. Steve Martin, Dolly Parton, Elvis Presley, etc. (Obviously, I did not see the edition of Saturday Night Live when the Blues Brothers made their Debut on National Television.)

Not only is John Belushi on the record but his colleague Dan Aykroyd also appears. Their names appear in the "Special Thanks" section. Under the players, Belushi and Aykroyd are listed as Joliet Jake Blues, and Elwood Blues. According to many sources the debut album by the Blues Brothers, Briefcase Full of Blues was supposed to be a joke, it was something that Belushi always wanted to do. However, at this point in time it is the number one selling album in Philadelphia, give it a listen and you will see why.

One would never recognize John Belushi as the lead singer. He really has a phenomenal set of vocal chords. He comes across with true professionalism as a singer/performer. His counterpart Dan Aykroyd plays all the harmonica and also sings one song on the album "Rubber Biscuit" and he seems to come across just as well as Belushi.

The Blues Brothers debut album was recorded live in Los Angeles. It is rather unusual for a group to record their first album live and have it become a hit.

Superman

One of the factors that holds the movie together is Superman's unexpected sense of humor. Like when he first runs down the street to change his clothes in a phone booth, only to find it has been abbreviated in the last 20 years to a phone with a glass cover. He shrugs and runs on to find a handy revolving door.

After Reeve, the next best thing about the movie is that special effects. Superman can fly; any 5-year-old knows that. But how? In the old "Superman" TV series, it was a wind machine and a moving background, but today's sophisticates won't settle for that. What really makes Superman fly is a special piece of mobile equipment designed by a Hungarian technician never before used in a movie. The big moment of the picture is an aerial ballet. On screen it lasts about five minutes, while it took three months to shoot. Lois is doing an interview with Superman. At the end of it, he plucks her from a balcony and takes her whirling, dipping, spinning and diving across the New York skyline — all to John Williams' dramatic "Superman's Love Theme."

"Superman" is a full-blown romantic adventure. The audience must not confuse it with a comic-strip with actors. It is a movie that celebrates the wizardry of film technicians, while camera work, editing and directorial craftsmanship turn illusion into reality. "Superman," the story of "truth, justice and the American way," is for everyone. Don't miss it.

GO GREEK

Modern Greek Life has become an integral part of the Villanova community. But many students are unaware of the academic, athletic and social opportunities available to them through the Greek system. For this purpose, fraternities and sororities hold Rush meetings, which are non-commital, so students can find out the real facts about Greek Life. Attending Rush meetings can be highly revealing and could change your college experience for the better. The Interfraternity Council of Villanova invites all students to participate in rushing by attending as many meetings as possible. Meetings will be held on the following dates:

Ft. Lauderdale - Spring Break '79 has sold out, but due to overwhelming demand the Union is also sponsoring a party in Nassau and Paradise Island from Friday, March 2, to Sunday, March 11, for only $295.00. Thank You for your support.

RAISE A LITTLE HELL IN PARADISE.

How do you feel about the idea of a party? If you can't stand them, don't waste your time on this invitation.

Because the party we're throwing has all the possibilities of reaching super proportions.

We've got all the right ingredients: good people, good music and good, cold adult beverages of your choice. And we've got a great place to celebrate. Nassau/Paradise Island College Week is going to be the best opportunity you'll have (before summer vacation) to bask in the sun and howl at the moon, both in the company of people who relate to the party philosophy.

Now, the fact that you'll be with a group of people doesn't mean you're headed for a "tour." This effort is going to be incredibly inexpensive but it's not a "package" type package. Everything's included as far as airfare and hotel are concerned, but at no time will anybody push you into a planned event or blow a whistle and pack you onto a museum-bound bus. We'll give you the itinerary, just for the record, but after the "Get Acquainted party" You're invited to improvise. O.K?

On with it.

Itinerary

SUNDAY
GET-ACQUAINTED PARTY featuring a live band. It will be an opportunity to meet one another and get acquainted with the island.

MONDAY
COLLEGE DAY AT THE BEACH. A full day of activities on the beach including "the first beer on the house," music and dancing on the beach. The special event will be a Fashion Show of the latest Bahamian styles. This will provide an opportunity for island designers to display their talents to an important segment of the consumer population.

TUESDAY
A LIMBO PARTY at the College Week official hotel. Student Limbo contests with prizes to the winners.

WEDNESDAY
ATHLETIC COMPETITION. A day of competition in tennis, track and field, and other sports.

THURSDAY
COLLEGE WEEK RUM FESTIVAL To be sponsored by a leading rum distillery, it will feature live music and dancing. A complementary rum cocktail.

FRIDAY FAREWELL COCKTAIL PARTY.

A Little Bit About What You Can Expect From Nassau & Paradise Island.

If you've never had the opportunity to visit the Bahamas before, don't let this one pass you by. There are reasons why the islands have attracted visitors for the last few hundred years, including 18th century tour groups consisting mostly of pirates.

Among the attractions:

The Best Weather. Average temperature is 70° Farenheit. The best beaches. Paradise Island could easily be one of the world's most beautiful.

The best hangouts. Old forts and buildings, modern night spots, lively markets and good restaurants.

The best accommodations for the money. Theee people are wonderful hosts. Your hotel will have considerable charm and comfort.

And the best people. Bahamians depend on visitors for their livelihood. So, even though they're friendly to begin with, they'll make an extra effort to shake the hand that feeds them. All things considered, there's one way you're not going to have a really good time.

Stay home.

Paige Sets Record

By NATE COOPER

"It was my first open race this year," remarked Don Paige about his record setting effort last weekend. "I was lucky." He thought for a moment. "No, that's a joke," he decided. "I've been working out on 'the boards' since early December."

Whether luck or the result of hard work, Paige's 2:20.3 effort in the Olympic Invitational's 1000 meter run was quite impressive. It established a new American record shading one tenth off Tom Van Ruden's 2:20.4 clocking in 1971.

The Olympic Invitation at Madison Square Garden highlighted a weekend of high caliber competition for Villanova. The night before there was the Philadelphia Track Classic at the Spectrum. There the Wildcat relay teams chalked up two winning performances. Kevin Dillon, Al Graves, Dean Childs and Amos Korir combined for a 9:32 clocking in the distance medley beating Georgetown and Tennessee handily. Chris Shafer, Mike England, John Hunter and Don Paige went uncontested in the two mile relay with a time of 7:33, but Paige had to outkick former teammate Mark Belger on the anchor leg of the 3200 meter relay Saturday at the Garden for a victory. The 7:30.2 effort bested Belger's Athletic Attic team by less than two seconds. England, Hunter and John Burns ran the initial legs for Villanova.

The mile relay team was less successful in their bid for a weekend sweep. After running away from Morgan State and Maryland at the Spectrum; Keith Brown, Anthony Tufariello, Derrek Harbour and Tim Dale finished third behind the Philadelphia Pioneers and the D C International team.

Sydney Maree has yet to win a major mile run this season. At the Ali Invitationals he ran 3:38.2, a South African national mark and an indoor college record, but New Zealand's John Walker set a world record and Paul Cummings established an American record in the same race. At the Spectrum Wilson Waigwa and Nyambia of El Paso, Texas finished before Maree. Saturday it was Waigwa again, Niel O'Shaugnessy second and Maree third. Maree's times were 4:02.4 and 3:42.6.

Senior John Burns placed fourth in the two mile run with an 8:47.7 effort at the Spectrum. Amos Korir was second in 8:03.5 in the Garden's 3000 meter field. Anthony Tufariello finished second behind Stan Vincent in 1:03.7 in the 500 meter run there.

In other action at the Spectrum, Paul Reagan, John Kelly, Willie Syndor and Al Graves ran 3:25.9 in the Quaker City mile relay finishing behind LaSalle and Saint Joe's.

The mile relay team opened the season with a 3:08.8, their best effort to date, at the Ali Invitational in Long Beach. The time established an indoor collegiate record. Anthony Tufariello chased Herman Frazier to a collegiate record in the 600 also. His time of 1:01.8 was six tenths slower than Frazier's world record effort.

Amos Korir's 3:59.3 in the CYO Invitational mile at College Park, Md. made him the fourth runner on the Wildcats current roster to break the four minute mile barrier. Dean Childs, Sydney Maree and Don Paige are the others.

John Burns ran well in the Philadelphia Track Classic

Woody Hayes An Endangered Species

By ELMORE SMITH

Throughout the course of the holiday season, the sports fanatic was given ample opportunity to satiate his role as spectator. He was Cotton Bowled, Rose Bowled, Sugar Bowled, and just plain bowled over. We live in a society that thrives on the sweat and pain derived from the athlete that plays the game. The news and media overwhelms us with the most minute details; everything from John Madden's ulcer to Terry Bradshaw's spelling ability. The exposure that college and professional athletes get, either through the press or television, is phenomenal.

As the fanatic screams and yells, jumps up and down and throws the nearest ashtray at a inanimate object (didn't anyone tell him that the pass that Charlie Waters intercepted wasn't thrown by the RCA in his living room?), we have to question the values of the fanatic; the very same values that were formed by the sports media. The controversy that surrounded the National Champion this year in college football received almost as much attention as the Guyana Massacre. The hype that surrounded the two week countdown to the Super Bowl is unparalleled. We are involved in a situation in which we allow sports commentators and writers to dictate our preferences and values regarding coaches and athletes and their respective philosophies. We have allowed them to make value judgements for us. It simply comes down to the fact that the old addage, "It's not whether you win or lose; it's how you play the game," has gone out the window. Sports philosophs have transcended the old philosophy and adapted the doctrine, "Winning is not everything, it is the only thing."

As Bowlamania neared it's pinnacle this holiday season, the entire national TV audience was witness to the "Winning is the only thing" philosophy when Ohio State coach Woody Hayes ran out onto the Gator Bowl field and decked a Clemson player, obviously in mania-frustration. Hayes, who comes from the same school of thought as Vince Lombardi, is the archetypé of the dictator coach, who doesn't believe in losing, ever!

It appears to be a sad state of affairs when it gets to the point that all elements of sports have been removed in favor of a "Winning is the only thing" attitude. Hayes has been removed from the football program at Ohio State, and well he should have been. Perhaps, if I may contradict myself a bit, the news media in this case has accomplished some good. They Hayes episode has been replayed thousands and thousands of times. Perhaps the public and the media will be more introspective in their outlook of the sporting world and the hype that surrounds it. Perhaps the pendulum will swing back the other way and sport will once again be placed in its proper prespective. — And perhaps the Woody Hayes archetype is becoming endangered species. And perhaps it will rain twenty dollar bills tomorrow.

Women Hoopsters Raise Record To 8-3

By MARY GRACE MURRAY

Moving closer to post-season action, the woman's basketball team raised its record to 8-3 after a successful Christmas break.

The Wildkittens beat Mercer County Community College 74-55 and then won a close game at West Chester 49-43. The team had balanced scoring against MCCC with three players contributing significantly. Mary Beth Gibson was high scorer with 22 points, followed by Lu-Ann Krothe with 18 and Lisa Ortlip with 16. Karen Hiznay had 14 points in the game against West Chester.

In the opening round of their Christmas tournament, the Poinsettia Classic, the Wildkittens brought their record to 6-0 by beating Canisius 75-62. Their first loss came against the tournament's host, Scranton, 75-56 in the final round.

After a month layoff the team resumed play on January 15 and lost to a tough Edinboro squad, 70-49. It was a poor showing offensively as the Wildkittens shot only 33% from the field.

In what was probably the team's best defensive game, they beat Kutztown 62-21. The 21 points was the lowest point total by an opponent in 72 games, which stretches back into the 1974-75 season.

The third loss of the season was against one of the top women's teams in the country. Cheyney State, 67-42. Cheyney State is currently 9th in the women's standings. Lisa Ortlip led Villanova with 15 points and 8 rebounds.

Ortlip was the high scorer over Christmas with 82 points. She also is rebounding well for the team with 7.3 average, which is second only to Joan Lobron's 8.6 average.

The girls play their next home game Tuesday, January 31, against West Virginia before starting a streak of seven away games.

Lifters Record Now 44-0

The Villanova Powercats successfully defended their undefeated dual meet record by outlifting Kutztown State College, raising their 11 year record to 44-0. Villanova took the first 3 places, led by John Morgan, Len Discenza and Vince Sferra. Dual meet scoring is based on an average coefficient total, the highest average being the winner. Villanova averaged a 739 coefficient, Kutztown 714.

The Spring semester is the highlight of the lifting season for the Powercats. Right now, they are heavily training for the State Collegiate Championships at Kutztown on February 18. This meet is also the last one at which V.U.'s lifters can qualify for the National Championships at Pensacola Jr. College, Fla. on March 16-17. The team also has two more meets scheduled for this semester against Temple and the Sr. Mid-Atlantic Championships.

Junior Co-captain Nick Stagliano believes, "We are the two-time defending state champions, so everyone will be gunning for us. We lost 3 state champs from last year's squad and at the beginning of the year I didn't think we had a chance to win another title, but now I really think we have a legitimate shot at the championship."

Stagliano cited the hard work of seniors Len Discenza, John Morgan and Sam Correnti as being very inspiring to the team. Also, the emergence of underclassmen Joe Jocono, Vince Sferra, John Jefferson, Ron Kidd, Vince Mattamira and Brian McKenna has brightened the hopes of the team. All the team needs now is fan support in their remaining meets. Anyone interested in joining the team, simply enter the weightroom in the fieldhouse and ask any of the lifters for information.

Swimmers Drop Two

By CHRIS BRENNER

The Villanova men's swimming team had its New Year's wishes dampened a bit this past week as two powerhouses, Penn State and LaSalle, handed the Cats their third and fourth losses of the season by scores of 81-32, and 78-35, respectively. The squad's record now stands at 1-4, a not too familiar clip for a Coach Ed Geisz team.

Indeed, last year's record of 5-6 marked the first losing season for Villanova in almost twenty years. A rich well of underclassmen, however, precludes any chance of this most recent trend continuing.

Coach Geisz has had tremendous praise for a few of his veteran performers thus far. "Senior Eric Wenger is my best, most versatile swimmer," put the coach. Wenger has been very productive this season in the free-style sprints for the Wildcats. "Jerry Byrne has been doing an outstanding job for me in the sprints also," added Geisz.

Senior diver Ted Klinges is the only veteran Wildcat specialist and has performed consistently well under pressure.

Geisz finally expressed concern over recent scholarship quotas placed on his recruiting program. "To maintain our traditional level of top competition we need more money. The demand is very great." NCAA schools allow 15 yearly scholarships to swimming teams. Geisz is allowed 9-1/2 over 4 years.

The squad's next two meets against St. John's and Penn, look within reach of the Cats. The Penn meet is home tomorrow at 2:00 p.m. at the Field House pool.

Ice Cats In Second Place

By MIKE FITZGERALD

On Saturday, Jan. 13, the Villanova Ice Hockey Team defeated Penn State 4-2 at the Spectrum. Penn State's downfall came mostly at the hands of junior goaltender Mike 'Chief' Alegado, who was voted the games Most Valuable Player. When the first period opened it looked as though the Christmas Break had taken its toll on the Cats with Penn State jumping out to a quick 2-0 lead. Then sparked by the stellar play of the 'Chief', the Cats came alive. Senior left-wing Ray Mateer scored close in on the Penn State goalie on a beautiful feed from linemates Tommy Curran and Chip Kenney. The first period came to a close with the score 2-1.

The second and third periods were highlighted by spectacular defensive plays by the entire Villanova defense. Frosh es Jim Femia, Paul Lafond, Billy Quinlan and Junior Mike Fitzgerald showed that there are no weak links in the V.U. defensive unit. Backed by the consistent play of the 'Chief', the Icecats defense shut the door on Penn State The rest was left up to the Icecats offense, which put Penn State away for good.

Junior Vito Canuso scored early in the second period to tie the score at 2-2. Then early in the third period junior left-wing Mike Kane deflected an off speed shot by frosh Jerry Murphy to beat the Penn State goalie and give the Icecats a 3-2 lead. Later in the third period it was Jerry Murphy again, this time feeding frosh defenseman Billy Quinlan streaking down the slot. "Q" showed the Penn State goalie no mercy, drilling home the shot and giving the Icecats their 4-2 victory.

The game was highlighted by excellent defensive play by senior Captain Steve Starr and junior Assistant captain Steve Carr whose heroics shocking neutralized Penn State's highest scoring line.

This game boosted the Cats over the .500 mark making them 6-5-1 overall and 4-2 in league play. The Cats are currently 3 points behind Penn State in second place with two games in hand. Thus the season may possibly come down to the last meeting between Villanova and Penn State at the Philadelphia Civic Center on Saturday, Feb. 10.

One unpleasant note : Junior Assistant Captain Jack "Hooligan" O'Hanlan will not be playing for the Icecats the rest of this season due to personal reasons, hopefully he will not be badly missed. Junior defenseman Mike Fitzgerald has been appointed Assistant Captain in his place.

This Thursday at 8:30 the Icecats play Drexel at Radnor Rink and on Saturday at 4:30 Villanova plays another home game at Radnor Rink against Wagner College. This game marks the return in net of last years starting Goalie Rich Longey. Both games promise exciting, hard hitting contests. Be There.

Trackstars Break Records

The women's track team, under the guidance of Jim Thompson, have spent their vacation rewriting the record books. Since the beginning of January, six individual or relay records have fallen and the end is nowhere in sight.

To start the year off, the team traveled to the Civic Center in Phila. for the Middle Atlantic Champs on Jan. 11. There Doriane Lambelet set the 440 mark of 59.5, breaking the previous record by 2 seconds and taking fourth place in the event. The 880 medley team of Amalia Cain (440), Mary Ellen Borkowski (110), Carol Gilsinger (110) and Pat Robinson (220) set a school record of 2:00.0.

The next day the CYO Invitational in College Park, Md., Jennifer Whitfield smashed Lambelet's day-old record in the 440, taking third in the event with 57.4.

On Jan. 13, Sue Shea traveled 22 circuits of the banked track at the East Coast Invitational in Richmond, Va. in 11:87.2. She captured fifth in the two mile run, shaving two-tenths of a second off the school record.

This past weekend at the Phila. Track Classic, two more marks fell. Brigid Leddy ran 4:55.2 for an 8th place finish in the mile behind world record holder Francie Larrieu. Lambelet took 9th in the 880 with a time of 2:15.1.

On Jan. 21, the team competed in the West Chester Invitational. The Cats finished a close second to a strong Temple squad. Individual winners included Lambelet in the 880, Leddy in the mile and the two mile relay. The team of Eileen Downey, Borkowski, Shea and Leddy ran 10:09.38 to smash the reocrd by 18 seconds.

After such a rigorous "vacation," the Wildcats will enjoy a well deserved rest this weekend. Their next meet will be Feb. 2-3 at the Pittsburgh Invitational.

What Ever Happened To .....

Mark Belger

By PATRICK FLYNN

Mark Belger was one of the most successful and unique athletes ever to perform at Villanova. The 22-year-old native of Bellmore, New York, who graduated from VU last spring, was an integral member of Coach Jumbo Elliott's track team for four years. He captained the squad last year and still lays claim to three world records as a member of relay teams which set marks in the indoor two-mile relay (7:25.5, in 1975), indoor four-mile relay (16:19.0, in 1976), and indoor distance medley relay (9:38.4, also in 1976).

Belger gained numerous National Collegiate Athletic Association Championships during his years as a Wildcat. In 1977, he was selected as "Collegian of the Year" by a panel of 16 eastern track authorities, edging Fairleigh-Dickinson's Franklin Jacobs, who later shattered the world record in the high jump. Holder of the U.S. record for the 880-yard run, Belger broke several school and NCAA records on his way to All-American status.

However, Mark Belger might best be remembered for a loss that he suffered in 1976. At the U.S. Olympic trials in June of that year, Belger was up against eventual Montreal bronze medalist Rick Wohlhuter in the 800 meters. A second or third place finish would qualify him for the Olympic squad, but that wasn't enough for Belger. "The Villanova way," he explained later, "is to win."

Belger set out after Wohlhuter and the effort exhausted him. He ran out of gas and was passed by James Robinson, and then Mark Enyeart, finishing only 9/100ths of a second out of the money. Not a disgrace, but not a trip to Canada, either. But Belger didn't stop there. Armed with a cardboard sign adorned with only the Olympic emblem and the word "North," Mark Belger hitchhiked to Montreal for the Olympic Games, not as a competitor, but as a proud and determined spectator.

Currently, Belger is running on the indoor circuit. He won the KYW News Radio Super 1000-Yard Run at the Philadelphia Track Classic last Friday at the Spectrum. Running for the Athletic Attic Track Club out of New York, he has been a consistent winner so far this season on the tour, and missed the world indoor record in the 880 by just one second earlier this month at the CYO National Invitational in College Park, Maryland.

Last year, Belger was quoted in Parade Magazine as saying, in reference to the 1980 Olympic Games, "You hear all the Moscow horror stories. Not enough food, not enough hotel rooms, language difficulties, lack of facilities. I don't worry about these things. All I need is a track, some competitors and a finish line."

It's a long, long way to Moscow. Far too long to hitchhike. But Belger seems to have his sights set on getting there. With a little luck, he'll be there, wearing not a set of binoculars, but instead, a pair of track shoes and the red, white, and blue. And he'll be looking past the food, the hotels, the language difficulties, the facilities. Mark Belger's eyes will be focused on the track, the competitors . . . and the finish line.

Cagers Undefeated In EAA

By PHIL SKENDER

When we last left the Villanova basketball team, they were carrying a two game losing streak into the holiday recess. Since that time there have been three wins in Eastern Eight play, a runner-up spot in the Blade Glass City Classic, and losses to perennial powers Providence, Notre Dame, and St. John's.

On December 21, Villanova met Duquesne in an E.A.A. clash. The Dukes built a 14 point lead with 13 minutes remaining behind the strong play of freshmen Doug Arnold and Bruce Atkins. However, the Wildcats then scored 12 unanswered points to pull within two. Alex Bradley's free throws with 5:24 left gave Villanova their first lead since the opening minutes. As the lead changed hands again, Villanova relied on Tom Sienkiewicz. He sealed the victory with two free throws and a breakaway lay-up as the clock wound down. The 78-75 triumph gave Villanova their fourth consecutive win at the Pittsburgh Civic Arena.

As Christmas was upon us, visions of a Blade Glass City Tournament Championship were dancing in Coach Rollie Massimino's head. Spurred on by the few Villanova faithful in attendance (included were members of the Villanova Pep Band, who made the only tremors in the otherwise listless Toledo crowd), the Wildcats bested Toledo in the opening round as Coach Massimino strategically packed in a zone defense. It held the explosive Rockets to their lowest point total since the 1974-75 season. The 55-50 Villanova win advanced the Wildcats to the finals versus Bowling Green on December 30. Villanova led at halftime 33-30, behind the outside shooting of Rory Sparrow and Tom Sienkiewicz. In the final twenty minutes, Bowling Green zoned Villanova silent, and won their first tournament since 1961 by a 67-64 count.

Villanova returned to Philadelphia for a date with Providence on January 3. Alex Bradley scored 27 points, Rory Sparrow added 10 — but not another Wildcat scored more than 4 points. With eight seconds remaining in the game, Bradley attempted a jump shot in the lane, but it was blocked, and Dave Gavitt's disciplined Friar team upset Villanova 51-50.

The Palestra jinx continued the following Saturday afternoon on a regionally televised game with Notre Dame. Irish Coach Digger Phelps substituted fresh troops throughout, and forced the tired Wildcats to play come-from-behind basketball. The result was a 75-64 win for the multi-talented Irish.

In their fourth conference game of the year, Villanova pulled away from Massachusetts early in the second half and coasted on to a 66-51 victory. Marty Caron had his best all-around performance of the season, and it was before home-town fans from near Fitchbu Massachusetts. Caron scored points and added 7 rebounds to the Wildcat's cause.

Villanova ended their first h of the 1978-79 season with a p zling 8 and 6 record. "By the of January, we'll be able to t what kind of team we hav predicted Coach Massimino, as focused on the month ahead.

Meet West Virginia Tonight; Rutgers Tomorrow

By PHIL SKENDER

Villanova dropped their eighth game of the season last Tuesday evening at Boston College by the score of 83-75. For the Eagles, it was their eleventh consecutive win at home, and their fifteenth victory in nineteen games played this season.

B.C. grabbed the lead at 14:54 of the first half, and never allowed Villanova to move any closer than three. "They (B.C.) made key baskets and key free throws down the stretch," said Coach Rollie Massimino. Each team converted 31 field goals in the contest but the difference was on the foul line. B.C. connected on 21 of 29 free throw attempts while Villanova made 13 of 17.

The Eagles 5-11 Senior guard Ernie Cobb played a brilliant game both offensively and defensively. He led B.C. with 3 steals and 26 points. Alex Bradley and Rory Sparrow combined to lead the Wildcats in points with 15 apiece. Freshman forward Aaron Howard led both squads with 12 rebounds.

Villanova plays two E.A.A. games in the span of twenty hours starting this Friday evening at 7:00. Tip-off is slated for tonite's Palestra doubleheader. Villanova and West Virginia face-off in the first game. Saturday at Rut University, the Wildcats and Scarlet Knights are scheduled meet in a regionally televis game beginning at 1:30.

Marty Caron has to become more aggressive.

CATCH-19 Back

Gears Up For Spring Rally

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

In its continued efforts to effect change in the Pennsylvania inking age (21), CATCH 19, t's Assembled To Change arrisburg, has reconsidered its cus, solidified its base of sup rt, and paved the way for an in sive lobbying effort which will minate in a Harrisburg trip is semester.

"We feel the most effective ans of achieving our goal is ving a solid group of interested dents with a focalized view int to do the lobbying," declared k O'Brien, program director the Villanova Union and co-coordinator of CATCH 19.

"Starting out by working together with the committee that writes the actual bill (The House Liquor Committee)," stated Tom Platt, vice-president of the Student Government Association, 'insures we will have the best chance of success."

Both Platt and O'Brien, along with Father Robert Martin, O.S.A., dean of Student Activities, and members of key student organizations were instrumental in bringing together administration, faculty, and student support in October of 1978 to form CATCH 19 — a response to a September 14, 1978 Liquor Control Board raid of the Villanova Union-sponsored Cat's Eye. Four students were charged and the case was later dismissed in that raid.

The effects of that raid are still being felt as Villanova's alcohol policy is still under question.

The Committee at present has Harrisburg as its definitive goal as all plans are awaiting a specific date.

"We are prepared for the trip," explained Platt. "Mary Ellen Boyle, chairman of the Harrisburg Committee of CATCH 19, has made all contacts and is awaiting a target date. The essential thing is that we'll be in Harrisburg when the bill comes to a vote."

"We are prepared for the trip," explained Platt. "Mary Ellen Boyle, chairman of the Harrisburg Committee of CATCH 19, has made all contacts and is awaiting a target date. The essential thing is that we be in Harrisburg thwn the bill comes to a vote."

The nature of the Pennsylvania legislature is such that a definite day when a bill comes up on the floor is difficult to predict.

The Committee is working closely with John C. McMonagle, executive secretary for the United Tavern Owners of Philadelphia. McMonagle is an experienced lobbyist and active in many legislative areas.

McGonagle had advised the Committee to coordinate main effort in the area of enlisting college and community support. "One hundred letters were sent to both Student Activity and Student Government Presidents," stated Anthony Perrella, chairman of the Buildings Settle

Damage Minor

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

At 6:00 a.m. Tuesday morning (January 23) a tile wall which spans the height of Mendel Hall and is located adjacent to the main entrance of the building gave way and collapsed under pressure caused by exterior settling.

"A small amount of settlement in Mendel's exterior wall caused the tiles, which were already under pressure, to pop," declared Thomas Trucks, head of the department of maintenance.

Trucks indicated that there is no major structural damage in the building and estimated the cost of repairs, which includes obtaining special tile that can "give" and prevent a recurrence, at four thousand dollars.

Trucks also explained that there might be a delay in obtaining all the special tile and insulation necessary for repairs.

"There is no serious problem with Mendel," stated Father Patrick Rice, O.S.A., vice-president for administration. Rice explained that the Dean Robert Lynch (Engineering) and others were sent to the scene to survey the damage and that settling, not water damage or other problems, was responsible for the collapse.

In related events, the Villanova Garey School of Law has also been settling causing little damage. It seems that as the building settles a ramp area which is a recent addition to the building, is causing some difficulty. Rice noted that the school will continue to settle slightly. There was no major damage incurred.

There were no injuries in either incident.

Board Elects Four New Trustees

A top executive with the Union Carbide Corporation and a former president of the University are among four persons elected to the Board of Trustees at Villanova University, it was announced Monday by the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., president.

Dr. Eugene Barr, senior vice president of Union Carbide, and the Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O.S.A., president of Villanova from 1971 to 1975, will assume membership during the board's February meeting.

Also named to the University's governing body are the Rev. William J. Krupa, O.S.A., pastor of St. Thomas Church, Rosemont, Pennsylvania, and Mr. Edward J. Caughlin, prominent Pennsylvania business executive and resident of Merion, Pennsylvania.

The new trustees bring the board membership to 23.

Dr. Barr, a 1937 graduate of Villanova, is a resident of Bridgewater, New Jersey. He has been with the Union Carbide Corporation for many years, serving in a number of managerial posts. He is a chemical engineer.

Edward J. Caughlin

The Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O.S.A. Former Villanova President

Father McCarthy is assistant pastor of St. Nicholas of Tolentine Church in the Bronx, New York. He spent many years in Cuba as an educator before the Castro takeover and is the founder of Biscayne College in Florida.

Father Krupa was a faculty member at Villanova for several years, but most of his priestly life has been in parish work. He was appointed pastor of the Rosemont Church last year.

Mr. Caughlin, president of the American Insulator Corporation, New Freedom, Pennsylvania, has been associated with Villanova for nearly 20 years as a member of the development council. In 1968, he was awarded the honorary degree of doctor of commercial science in recognition of his counsel and support of University programs.

Mr. Thomas F. Devine, senior vice president and general counsel, Albert Greenfield and Co., Philadelphia, is chairman of Villanova's Board of Trustees.

Fewer Teachers To Be Hired In Future

Villanova's Faculty Increased

By JERRY DOUGHERTY

Last September saw the appointment of thirty-four new faculty members to either temporary or permanent positions in the University.

The number of new faculty was high in relation to that of recent years. An insight into the process by which the University evaluates and selects new faculty was provided this week by Dr. James J. Cleary, whose office of Vice-President for Academic Affairs announced the appointments.

Regarding the actual number of new faculty, Cleary stated that this figure is divided into two categories: new appointments and replacement appointments. Fourteen of the number are new appointments; the rest being replacements for faculty who have resigned or who are on leaves of absence.

The distribution of new appointments reflects increased enrollment in certain colleges, Cleary explained. In light of this criterion, five of the new positions went to the College of Commerce and Finance, four to the College of Nursing — one among them being the position of Associate Dean to develop continuing education programs and a complete nursing program on evenings and Saturdays, three to Religious Studies, two to Speech Communications, one to Mathematics, and one to the Sociology Department.

As for the possible ramifications of a decreased in enrollment, Dr. Cleary said, "No faculty have been let go because of enrollment."

New faculty who are appointed to full time positions find themselves placed under a seven-year probationary period. At the end of the sixth year the appointee receives notice whether or not tenure will be granted.

The subject of the University's policy toward the hiring of minority faculty (women, blacks, etc.) was discussed by Dr. Cleary. He emphasized the consistent efforts the various departments and his office have made in attempting to place minority faculty into the academic community.

Cleary gave as the reason for the scarcity of minority faculty the difficulty in offering a salary competitive to that offered by larger state and private universities. "We don't have the money to compete with the other schools," Cleary observed.

The process of faculty appointments begins in the offices of the department chairmen. They inform the Deans of their respective colleges as to the number of positions to be filled and the qualifications required for them. Following this, advertisements are placed in numerous professional publications; the resulting applications for the positions are forwarded to the appropriate Department Chairman, who screens them on the basis of qualifications and sends between two and four to the Dean for his evaluation.

The Dean, in turn, forwards them to Dr. Cleary's office, and from there are sent out the invitations to the applicants for interviews. The applicant is then first interviewed by the chairman and faculty of his prospective department, then by the Dean, and finally by Dr. Cleary. The process of selection is completed by a consultation among the interviewers. An offer is then made in writing by Dr. Cleary to those applicants who are selected.

In light of the recent difficulties in balancing the University's budget, Dr. Cleary stated, "It will be more difficult for the departments to show the need for their replacing or hiring additional faculty."

Nurses Rally To Support Act

By LAURA STECKLAIR

On Thursday, January 25, 1300 nurses, nursing students and educators gathered at the Irvine Auditorium on the University of Pennsylvania campus to rally in support of the Nurse Training Act.

Those involved in the nursing profession were angered by the presidential veto of the act, and congregated to articulate their displeasure. President Carter rescinded the Nurses Training Act on November 10, 1978, and in doing so removed the funding essential to over 1000 nursing schools and their students.

Without the aid of the funding which the act provided many nursing schools might be forced to close.

Many undergraduate nursing loans and grants have already been cut. Also included in the cutback are funds for both nursing research and graduate studies. Villanova's College of Nursing will be hard hit by the veto since many training tools of vital importance, such as audio visual aides and other simulation equipment, are obtained through government funding.

One possible result of the removal of the subsidies is a national decline in the number of nursing students, especially at the graduate level. Many might be forced to opt for clinical or technical positions.

Dean Louise Fitzpatrick

Villanova nursing students and faculty were well represented at the rally, and Dean Louise Fitzpatrick of the College of Nursing addressed the crowd, urging legislative action to propose a new Nurse Training Act. A letter writing campaign, petitions, mass demonstrations and visits from nursing delegations senators and representatives in Washington are planned as future parts of this action.

Residents Regroup
RSA Restructured

By ANTHONY C. ONOFRIETTI

Last Thursday night the executive committee and over forty select members voted unanimously to reform the constitution of the Resident Student Association.

The decision was the second of its kind in the past two years.

Under the reconstruction, dormitories on campus will be grouped into five districts, each headed by a vice-president. In addition, four of eight committees formerly on the executive level will be placed in the individual hall councils. Also, the new executive position of Office Administrator will be formed.

"We hope to bring the residents back into the whole organization. Last semester the executive committee and the campus council did most of the activity planning. This semester we plan to let the residents take the initiative. Our emphasis will be on bringing the campus council closer to the dorm level. It will definitely be a better organization for it," stated Al Oliveri, executive secretary of the RSA.

Scott Mackin, presently a Resident Assistant at Stanford Hall and formerly President of the RSA, is responsible for the development of the new system. After two months of planning, Mackin feels it is time to put the plan into action.

"We have to realize where we are in relationship to the residents and start off fresh in the dorms," stated Mackin. "Our intention is to build an RSA from the dorm level up. The focus will be placed upon the 240 area representatives in working with the residents to form a functional hall government."

Although much of the campus activities are sponsored by the Villanova Union, Coleen Corcoran, president of the RSA, states "I don't feel the Union is our competition at all. The Union runs events and hopes for campus-wide support. We want to work within the dorms themselves to promote residents' interests."

Kevin Burke, executive-at-large, commented on the value of the new system: "We basically tore apart the whole structure with the intention of making the organization a tool of the residents rather than using the residents as a tool of the RSA. Without the residents working for the executives, the association will very definitely be serving the residents. This enables all the residents and the area reps to utilize all the various aspects available to them. This will be a brand new RSA."

RA Selection: Counseling Introduced For Candidates

By JOE FINIO

The Dean of Men's Office has instituted a new male resident assistant orientation course in an effort to educate and professionalize their resident staff.

The program will consist of an introduction, overview, and session with current resident assistants, Father John E. Deegan, vice-president for student life, Allan B. Wechsler, dean of men, Gene Schaefer, program director, and Jeffrey Quin, resident director.

Resident Hall Assistants (RA's) carry a great amount of responsibility and hold many duties. Although students tend to think of them as working from a strictly disciplinary standpoint, R.A.'s must meet specific requirements and are expected to maintain a certain image throughout their term of appointment.

Previously, male R.A.'s had consisted of a majority of Law School students but this has since changed. The R.A. program is now seeking individuals who can create a good environment while balancing social duties with obligations to the Univereity. No one type of person is being sought, according to Quin.

Some qualifications for male resident assistant positions include: personal attributes of integrity, dependability, initiative, and creativity. Experience is preferred but not required. The R.A. program, according to Quin, would like to obtain someone who can stay in the area for a while.

The Dean of Women's office is also accepting applications for a female program. The female program is much smaller with less positions (16 as compared to 36 male positions) to be filled.

Compensation for R.A.'s (both male and female) comes in the form of room and board during the term of appointment.

The male orientation course will be offered either Tuesdays from 6:00 — 7:00 p.m. or Wednesdays from 4:00 — 5:30 p.m., The second scheduled meeting of this year will be held on Tuesday, February 6.

Applicants will be considered for the Fall 1979 semester.

Illegal Parking Now Costs $25

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

Villanova Security has placed notices issuing $25 fines on cars illegally parked on campus.

"Every weekend, the same people are parking around Alumni, Austin, and St. Rita's Halls. It's not fair to the students who abide by rules and regulations. We have problems if fire equipment has to come in," said Joseph Cunnane, captain of Villanova Security.

Cunnane said that "since the [illegible] started," students have been warned not to park on campus.

Notices placed on cars issue a $25 fine which is, according to Cunnane, to be assessed by the business office.

"This is not for first time offenders, but for the ones who continue to park on campus," said Cunnane. He said that Security has "access to license information all over the country" through the national computer. "We know who the offenders are," he said.

(Washington) — Informed sources say the Carter Administration have expelled a Taiwanese official from the United States for violating what's termed "General Diplomatic Practice." They say Loh Cheng — a veteran of 15 years in the US — had publicly criticized America's decision to cut official ties with Taiwan.

Cheng had written criticisms of US policy which appeared in several American newspapers.

Four state department officials known to have knowledge of the case all refused to discuss it. That, apparently on orders from their superiors.

Spring Week Planned

By BILL CLARK

In an attempt to enliven the coming of Spring at Villanova, the various clubs and organizations of the school are planning "Spring Week" from April 1-7. The theme of this week of activities will be "Spring Fever; I Caught It at Villanova."

"Spring Week will be a week of activities to celebrate the coming of spring," said Kevin Smith, president of the Villanova Union. "All the school organizations are contributing and the proceeds of the week will be donated to charity."

Several of the activities include a Balloon Day, a Campus Talent Show, and a Concert at the end of the week. Specific dates for the events have not been set as yet.

A Steering Committee has already been organized to plan the activities. The Committee is planning a meeting for February 15 for all interested in helping with Spring Week.

This is the first year that Spring Week will be held at Villanova. Depending on the success of this years' event, it could become an annual affair at Villanova.

state-wide college committee.

"We received some twenty responses (including Penn State and Kutztown) from colleges eager and willing to go to Harrisburg," continued Perrella.

Both Perrella and Platt emphasized outer area (college and community) enlisting of support. The former noted the impact of state colleges and their tremendous and influential voting power and the latter, stressing local area petitioning drives, stated, "The legislature looks for this, it is essential in backing up a lobbying effort."

The possibility of holding lobbying seminars is also being discussed and considered by the Educational Committee of CATCH 19.

In other related events the University, in its attempts to secure a liquor license, is arguing that Villanova students, as voting residents, should be considered a valid population, thereby should be granted a license which is given out on the basis of population.

Sig Ep Shoots For M.A.R.C.

By TONY CENTONE

Little Lynn Armburst strode onto the court to replace a Rosemont regular. Filling in at point guard, she brought the ball up court, drove halfway down the center of the lane and deposited a jump shot cleanly through the hoop. The crowd went wild!

> ...if it wasn't for groups like Sig Ep contributing their time and effort, many of M.A.R.C.'s facilities would have to shut down.

Lynn's not a member of the Rosemont team but that doesn't matter. Because this past weekend in the Butler Annex everyone of the 48 hours of basketball was played exclusively for Lynn and many children just like her. You see Lynn's mentally handicapped and so are many of her friends. They are all part of the Montgomery County Association for Retarded Children (M.A.R.C.) and this past weekend all the many jump-shots and fast-breaks were done to raise money for that association.

The marathon got under way Friday evening at 7 p.m. and lasted until Sunday at 7 p.m. Sigma Pi Epsilon sponsored the event and many other groups and individuals both on and off campus contributed. There was a $2.00 fee for all who wished to participate and proceeds went directly to M.A.R.C. Sig Ep spokesman Jack McGarry reports the marathon was a huge success, raising over $1,000 for the home which survives almost exclusively on contributions. M.A.R.C. Director, Ethel Armburst stated, if it wasn't for groups like Sig Ep contributing their time and effort, many of M.A.R.C.'s facilities would have to shut down. "The government," said Mrs. Armburst, "federal, state, and local, provides us with funds only for remedial (teaching) purposes. The rest comes entirely from businesses, service groups (like Sig Ep), and the like."

Many of the Association's children showed up on Saturday to play ball. Before they went on the court, however, they too wanted to pay the $2,00 fee. Sig Ep members naturally would not accept the money but Mrs. Armburst told me this is the attitude M.A.R.C. tries to quell. "By not accepting their fee," she said, "we're not accepting their fee," she said, "we're not accepting them. They're becoming alienated. The association tries to prevent this attitude by bringing the children closer to society. This is M.A.R.C.'s purpose."

Sig Ep hoopster Tim Chiocco skies for charity while brothers Ray Georgen and Steve Mann look on.

Most of the 80 Sig Ep brothers contributed 5 to 10 hours court time (after finding pledges at $2.00 an hour) but some played as much as 20 hours. Other groups that contributed time and money were Villanova frats LXA and APO, the ROTC's, the Campus Corner, Rosemont's Girls Basketball Team (who by the way gave the Sig Ep's best all they could handle in a Sunday afternoon game), Lancaster Hardware, Villanova Drugstore, just to name a few. Congratulations to all the Sig Ep's, especially Mark DeFusco and Jack McGarry, along with

Hypnotist Mesmerizes Villanova Audience

By DIANE M. MISKEL

Hypnotist James J. Mapes appeared in the Fieldhouse last weekend as part of his PSI Training Seminar. It is a new program for colleges and executive workshops that teaches self-hypnosis and mind control for personal improvement.

Besides presenting over 200 shows a year and making television appearances nationwide, Mapes heads The New York Center for Hypnosis and Mind Control. In that capacity he has worked with members of the psychiatric, medical and law enforcement professions as well as sports figures, show business personalities and others.

While attending California State University at Northridge, Mapes lost 100 lbs. and stopped smoking three packs of cigarettes a day with the help of a hypnotist. He became very curious about the subject and in 1969 studied hypnosis in Europe.

Besides the entertainment value, Mapes feels it is most important that people realize the limitless potential of the mind. "Extra Sensory Perception (ESP) implies that I have something unique. That's just not true. We're all born with Intra Sensory Perception (ISP) but lose it unless its existence is acknowledged and developed."

Of all the means of altering consciousness, hypnosis is perhaps the way most widely known about and least understood. Hypnosis has been popularized as a technique for the control of others for one's own gain as in "The Shadow," of the 1940's radio-serial fame, he used hypnosis to "cloud men's minds" and discover "the secrets that lurk in the hearts of men."

The name hypnosis is derived from the Greek word hypnos, the name of the god of Sleep. It was demonstrated that this special state of sleep could be produced merely by concentrated attention or "fixity of gaze." The person in this state was found very responsive to verbal suggestions given by the hypnotist.

Chip Kenney, a sophomore Chemical Engineer, was a strong believer in ESP and hypnosis before the presentation and went to get hypnotized." Chip got his wish, as he was called upon by Mapes as part of the performance. After it was all over, he commented that he felt great and that the expreience only proved to strengthen his belief in the power of the mind.

Hypnotist James J. Mapes

Mapes claims that everything is registered in our conscious mind. We are all two people, the people we are now and the people we would like to be. The only limitations to the human mind are

Villanovans March For Life

By EILEEN CUNNIFFE

Last Monday, January 22, marked the sixth anniversary of the Supreme Court's Roe vs. Wade decision which legalized abortion-on-demand across our nation. Since this 1973 decision the legal battles have raged continously, with compromises being made both by pro-lifers and by pro-abortionists. Last Monday also marked the fifth consecutive year that Pro-lifers from around the nation gathered in Washington D.C. to insist upon reform and to impress upon legislators and upon all Americans the necessity of "No Compromise" protection of all stages of human life.

The 60,000 marchers ranged from small children (many of whom rode in strollers) to senior citizens (many of whom rode in wheelchairs); they came from every state between California and Maine; some walked through the streets distributing rosaries, while others addressed motorists with shouts of "Honk your horn for Life!"; in short, the types of demonstrations were as varied as the people who marched. There was, however, one underlying, unifying sentiment which was shared by all, the conviction that Life is worthy of respect and of protection, and, just as importantly, of celebration. For above all, the 1979 March For Life was a concentrated celebration of Life — as well as a symbol of committment to Life.

A group of about forty Villanova students were proud to be among those who joined in last week's Pro-life activities. One student commented that "It is extremely encouraging to see so many concerned people. It's especially reassuring to see how very many of the marchers are students like ourselves — we know that the Pro-life movement is young and that it will continue to be strong for many years to come."

After marching from the Ellipse to Capitol Hill for a Life Rally, pro-lifers spent some time lobbying with their elected representatives — both senators and congressmen — as to the current status of Pro-life legislation. Villanova students met with their legislators from Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Illinois. Some of the students were among the large group of Pro-lifers who met with Senator John Heinz III , of Pennsylvania and took him to task for his voting record on life-related issues. John Levy, chairman of the Villanovans For Life political committee, noted that, "It was a great experience becoming directly involved in the workings of the government by lobbying, protesting, and talking with the senators and congressmen."

The Villanovans for Life recognize that the March For Life is merely the tip of the iceburg in terms of pro-life activity. It is representative of the time and the energy that keep Pro-lifers at Villanova and across the nation "on the march" year-round. Like the red roses worn or carried by so many Pro-lifers, which symbolize both beauty and martyrdom, the march itself symbolizes the commitment to Life which is being made by so many Americans. As one banner explained it, "We march because they can't!"

Frat Life Is One Big Party

By GEORGE BOZUTTI

Ed. Note: Mr. Bozutti is a member of LXA and Vice President of the Intra Fraternity Council.

— "But, Dad ,there is nothing else to do around here! I'm going stir crazy!"

— "You don't even get along with your own brother why in the hell do you want fifty besides your first semester grades were pretty lousy. you're just plain lucky you're still in school at all."

— "This will help bring up my marks because Brother Fisheye told me that if I join his fraternity the brothers will help me with my schoolwork."

— "What's a fisheye? I think you oughta ....."

—"Oh! He's a brother in Tappa Kegga."

— "Listen you, I said no and that's final. No son of mine is going to hang around with a bunch of beer-drinking, lazy, radical, no good, alcoholic, low-life, immoral, prodigal, degenerate, rabble-rousing, pot-smokin, sadistic, despicable slobs! I watch T.V. too you know and besides your mother said no! Do you hear me? Hello! Hello! Hello! operator I've been disconnected!"

— "Hey! Mike what are you trying to do — break the phone?"

— "No! I was just talking to my old man."

— "Well anyway what are you doing tonight? I hear there are some neat frat parties going on."

— "Yea, there's a 'Transvestite Party' over at Wreck Hi Low, and a SM party at the S.Z.M. (Sec Zona Mu's) House. Have you hear of any?"

— "Uh! Yeaaah! There's a "Guyana Punch" party at S.B.D. (Summa Beta Ded) House. I know the president of that frat ... somebody ... Jones.

— "And there's a 'Wheelchair Party' at I.L.D. (Ima Lama Duca) House, and a 'Poison Apple Party' at the L.C.D. (Little Crusty Dwarves) House on Beagle Road in Lardmore.

— "Right near there at the L.C.A. (Lecherous Creatures of America) House they're having a Tupperware Party."

— "Joe, whatever happened to your good, old fashioned ten keg fraternity party. You know the kind of party where you pay your two bucks and go in and just drink until you can't see where you're going?"

— "Well, I guess everybody's got a gimmick these days, if its not a 'Boxer Short Party' its a 'luau' and if its not a 'French Sewer Party' it s a 'Watergate Party!' Its always something!"

— "I've had enough! I've got an idea. Let's start our own fraternity!"

— "Yeah! We'll call it Dog House and we can have toga parties and ..."

— "And learn to drink Jack and wear pirate bandanas and sing rude songs and chug beers like Dad used to do."

— "Then we can kidnap administrators and roll marbles in the street and be DIFFERENT!"

— "Hey! You never know, maybe we'll get our own T.V. show and be the "new American heroes!"

Mapes conducted a seminar at the university during the weekend to prove this point. He taught the audience self-hypnosis for those who wanted to lose weight, quit smoking, stop nail-biting, improve memory and much more.

Mapes combined his extraordinary mental powers, mastery of hypnosis and flair for showmanship to provide an evening of enlightenment as well as entertainment.

Swimmers Drop Two Meets

By BRUCE MURRAY

The Villanova Men's Swimming Team suffered two tough losses recently to St. John's and Penn. The scores were 66-47 and 62-51 respectively. The Penn meet was a heartbreaker which went down to the last relay before the watercats finally lost. Coach Ed Geisz and his squad were disappointed and bewildered that they did not win both meets. The Cats' record currently stands at one win and six losses, but this record does not reflect the talent that makes this year's team.

Senior Co-Captains Kevin Quinn and Eric Wenger have continually produced outstanding times throughout the season. Eric Wenger, who is one of the best Wildcat swimmers of all time, has been dominant and extremely versatile. In the St. John's meet, Eric took three first places; he won the 1000 and 200 yard freestyles, which are back to back events, and later won the 500 free style. Junior Jerry Byrne, who has greatly improved during the past year, is swimming very well in the sprint freestyle events. Senior diver Ted Klinges has also performed well thus far and his consistency should spring him to a very successful season.

The underclassmen, who make up the bulk of this year's team, have been maturing greatly and deserve praise. Freshmen Dan Ahern and Matt Rafferty have both been swimming extremely well. Junior Steve Quindlen is improving and so is sophomore Bob Baltera. These are just a few of the standouts who make the watercats outlook bright for the future.

"Everyone has been working hard," Geisz said, "and so far this season has been frustrating ... we're all disappointed. We know we are better than what our record indicates. We're soul searching now," he continued, "and we're looking for that needed psychological edge."

The team hopes that psychological advantage will appear this week as the entire team will "shave down" for the Drexel Meet. A victory over Drexel would give the watercats that extra momentum needed for their clash with Fordham tomorrow 2:00 p.m. at the Field House pool.

Organ Grinder Brings Nostalgia To V.U.

By DIANE CLEARY

What was that monkey business going on in Dougherty Hall on Tuesday, January 30th, you say? Nothing but organ grinder Joe Boscio and his monkey companion, George.

There are only eight genuine organ grinders left in the United States and only three are in the northeast. Although the other seven organ grinders make appearances, George and Joe are the only ones left in the country who do performances and concerts. As Joe said, "It's nice to be unique!"

For both, organ grinding is not merely a hobby but a business. Joe, a member of the Italian-American Society of Cherry Hill, used to be a television cameraman. For the last four years, however, he and George have been appearing at concerts, luncheons, dinners, weddings, fairs, parties, and many other performances. Their repertoire consists of a half dozen songs ranging from "East Side, West Side" to "O Solo Mio." They have a variety of tunes to please young and old alike.

Organ grinder Joe Boscio and friend delighted V.U. students on Tuesday.

George is a white-faced capuchin. A capuchin is a long tailed monkey which comes from Central and South America. They are known to have a hoodlike cluster of black hair topping their head. His face is as soft as a baby's skin. George is only eight years old but his life expectancy is as much as 35 to 40 years.

Although monkeys have a reputation of being vicious, George proved wrong when he charmed the crowd of spectators with his delightful antics and personality. When offered a coin, George tipped his hat in thanks, and deposited it in the tin cup on top of the music box. Always a gentleman, George kissed the hands of passing ladies and tipped his hat to greet all. Monkeys are not as dirty as most people think. George has a variety of clothes that are all made by Joe and his girlfriend. They vary, according to the occasion, from a Santa Claus outfit to the green pants, black velvet jacket, and black hat that he wore to Villanova.

In addition to George, Joe has a female monkey at home. One could imagine it is easy to grow attached to monkeys as pets. As Joe puts it, "they become part of the family."

White Dwarf Study At Villanova

By BRIAN BUINEWICZ

Two of Villanova's faculty members, Dr. George P. McCook and Dr. Edward M. Sion recently received a research grant from the National Science Foundation for further study of white dwarf stars.

White dwarf stars are incredibly dense and faint. These stars were originally named because they at first appeared white and small, but other white dwarfs have been located-yellow white dwarfs, blue white dwarfs, and the like. The extreme density of these stars cause curious phenomena to occur to other stars and gases in the area. Normally sized stars, like our sun, are believed to evolve into white dwarf stars. More massive stars are thought to turn into "black holes."

Both Sion, assistant professor of astronomy and McCook, chairman of the astronomy department, have been involved in the study of white dwarves. They decided to pool their efforts and published a catalog on white dwarf stars. The grant from the National Science Foundation is to update and expand the catalog in a second edition, and to perform statistical studies on the data on the white dwarves.

McCook came to Villanova in 1961, the year the astronomy department was founded. He obtained an undergraduate degree from Villanova University and a Ph.D. from the University of Pennsylvania. Sion studied at the University of Kansas and at the University of Pennsylvania.

A Page In Search Of An Editorial

Are There Any Issues Anymore?

We sat down in the empty office on Tuesday night, already past deadline, and put a crisp sheet of white paper into the typewriter. The first words came easy, "Villanovan Editorials," then the date, then silence, nothing. Deflowered, the page sits there, waiting.

Topics are proposed. The budget, or the lack of one is a problem which should outrage the entire student population if we are forced to wait much longer for its release. Yet, we decide to delay at least one more week before editorializing on the subject to allow all sides of the story to unfold.

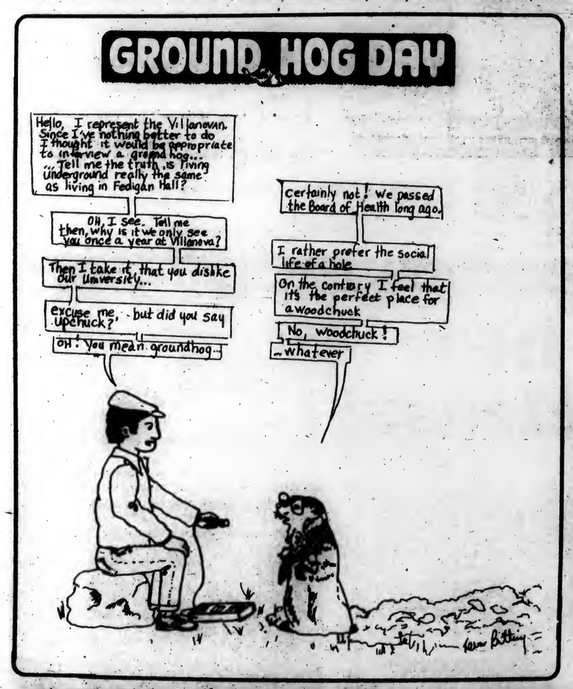
CATCH-19, which is gearing up for a second semester attack on the drinking age, is dismissed because editors feel it is too soon to write on a subject which received much editorial page coverage in the fall. We have already written on our social life, our apathy, our spirit, our lives.

Are there any issues anymore? Certainly, there are, and there will always be, those individual complaints about bureaucracy or cases of mistreatment or unfairness. In an institution of this size, people will always be stepped on and will always grow angry, and their clamor against injustice deserves to be heard.

But is there any one issue which could motivate the majority, or at least a sizable portion, of the student body to action? Four years ago, students staged Tolentine sit-ins over visitation rights. Two years ago, the Field House was the site of budget rallies which earned coverage from local TV stations. This fall, students blocked, well, kind of blocked, Lancaster; that is, until the Dean of Men appeared and told them to go home. They went home. After all, it was a sunny Friday afternoon; and Kelly's was open.

Are we spoiled, do we have it too good at Villanova? Evidently not, because the complaints never stop in the Pie Shoppe or the Pit. We felt that our editorial space should be devoted to issue which involve the University community as a whole, and not individuals. But what will involve our fellow students, our faculty, our administration, prompting them to action rather than providing a topic for conversation between classes.

If the budget is released and promises an unusually large tuition increase, which some are predicting, will we see another Field House budget rally? We might, if it's not a sunny Friday afternoon and Kelly's isn't open.



BYOB Policy

To the University Community:

The question of having alcohol at University-sponsored events has been a subject of controversy and legal action during the 1st semester. In order to determine what events with alcohol the University can legally sponsor we have sought the advice of our University Counsel. The program outlined below meets the requirements of the law as understood by our attorneys. Therefore, I am, after consultation with Fr. Driscoll, giving permission for this event on a trial basis. Your cooperation and understanding is greatly appreciated. Thank you.

Rev. John E. Deegan, O.S.A.

To the University Community:

The Student Life area has felt that, along with the educational process, socialization is important to college life. One aspect of socialization is the appropriate and responsible use of alcohol. After consultation with the University lawyers, we believe that the only way to institute programs with alcohol legally is to establish a BYOB policy. With your help and support this can be done. The Villanova Union will be sponsoring a BYOB function for the traditional "100 Days Celebration" on Thursday, Feb. 9, 1979 in the Day Hop Cafeteria. Certain guidelines must be placed on this program especially since it is on a trial basis. The guidelines are as follows:

1. Twenty one year old seniors only.
2. V.U. I.D. card and proof of age must be shown to purchase tickets and to gain entry to event.
3. Tickets will be sold at announced times prior to the event only.
4. The amount of alcohol per person admitted cannot exceed 48 ounces of beer, or 25 ounces of wine or champagne; no combinations, no kegs, and no hard alcohol.
5. There is no re-admittance with alcohol.
6. Soda will be supplied at cost; munchies, ice and cups will be supplied at no cost.
7. Those bringing excess alcohol must surrender excess to door person. It will be tagged and returned after the event.
8. Judgement of the event workers is final.

We feel that these guidelines will insure a well organized event. Questions should be directed to' Lucy Gorski, Program Director, Villanova Union.

Sincerely,
Lucy Gorski
Program Director

To the Editor:

With graduation in the near future, it has come to our attention that because of the present alcohol policy on campus, that there may be a problem with getting together a 100-days party for seniors. This is par for the course!

CATCH-19 Is Important Enough To Warrant Support

By Fr. Robert J. Martin, O.S.A.

Certainly one of the most talked of topics campus during the fall semester was the d on the first Cat's Eye by Pennsylvania quor Control Board agents. In the wake of t event, Villanova was required to ssess its alcohol programming and ovide competent defense for the four dents charged with dispensing malt verages without a license. Though the paration for the defense was a protract- affair, it was ultimately successful. ssing programs with alcohol has met th less than success, however, because an egral part of the process had been the tablishment of a committee to study the ue of alcohol related programs and lobby state legislature on a variety of issues, cluding lowering the drinking age in nnsylvania to 18 or 19.

The committee, once established, took e name of CATCH-19. The Cats made eir goal changing the legal age for conming alcohol to 19. Subcommittees began form on education, communication, bbying and the like. Things began gearing up. There was excitement on campus. The possibility of changing Harrisburg's mind didn't seem so far-fetched after all.

However, as the obstacles appeared (and they were significant: the legislature did not consider the bill in November, as had been anticipated) the commitment began to fade. Now the committee (which has remained intact and dedicated throughout) is meeting again. Priorities will be set and action will be taken. But the committee, if it is to be effective and not just survive, needs the support (time, dedication, and creativity) of the student body.

CATCH-19 — a committee of students, faculty and staff — thinks that the issue of alcohol-related programming on college campuses is an important enough issue to warrant its attention, but it requires the support of the students at large to validate its decision.

ED. NOTE: Fr. Robert J. Martin, OSA, served as Assistant Dean of Student Activities last year and is presently the Dean of Student Activities.

An Elections Approach

By Lou Montresor

"There comes a time in the affairs of men when you must take the bull by the tail and face the situation for what it is."
W.C. Fields

Get it straight. This editorial is strictly esoteric rhetoric. For you laymen, that means you're not supposed to understand it. For you second floor candidate types, please read repeatedly!

Elections approach. Now's the time for secret organizational meetings, fabrication of issues and undermining the opponent, right? Wrong. Do not pass go. Do not collect election day titles.

This method is a proven failure on both the individual and organizational levels. Grab the bull's tail. Take a look. That's the condition of the — shhh! — SGA. Haven't you seen Student Government crumble as a result of campaign ambushing the past few years?

The students need skilled officeholders, not devious campaigners. Decide whether you've something to offer AFTER the election. Don't delude yourself.

"You can observe a lot just by watching."
Yogi Berra

Find out what is involved first. Ask yourself if you've a concept of what the SGA should do, how it should function.

Are you still willing to run? Fine. Now let's try a revolutionary concept. Cooperation. Winning an election doesn't classify you as a demagogue. Other people have the ability to contribute also. Since so few are willing to put effort into student government, you can't afford to turn away the "opposition." There'll be no one left.

"Anybody can win, unless there happens to be a second entry."
George Ade

Out of the ruins of the SGA, these commandments arise:

1. Don't prostitute the campus with campaign propaganda.
2. Don't compromise yourself or manipulate others.
3. Take a stand, for yourself and FOR the students you represent.

Be realistic. You can't KO Harrisburg. Clean up the mess here first.

Oh, and you laymen. When you return from Spring break, check out the SGA. Plenty of positions available. Excellent opportunity for advancement. If you can handle the bull.

ED NOTE: Lou Montresor is a former Arts and Sciences Senator who has been involved with the SGA during the past three years.

freshman year? If you are an Arts major, did you enjoy three sciences instead of two? Do you realize there will be a business concentration next year? Did you lost your roommate to the lottery? After going to school here for four years, did you ever think you'd have to show proof at the library? And our senior year, when we finally have seniority on the chains, there are no chains.

But, Noooooooooo . . .!!!

Villanova doesn't stop at that — if we want to have a 100-days party we have to B.Y.O.B., so we won't get caught for dispensing alcohol without a license.

Fact: There are approximately 1200 seniors.

Dump: Only 300 are invited to the party.

We think we've been dumped on long enough and something ought to be done so all the seniors can go.

The Class of 1979 has tolerated more than they deserve for four years and just once we'd like to do it up right. Just give us that chance.

Concerned Conshohockenites

Dear Editor.

In recent years the literary magazine of the University has been severely criticized for its low literary standards. This year the staff of RUNES (formerly The Lynx) has raised these standards by publishing a magazine which we feel, as well as many of the English professors here, is of much literary merit. We realized in taking over the magazine that an upward battle was to be fought in a University that is at times anti-intellectual and almost always anti-literary. Of course, there are those that are dedicated to the written word; it is to that group of individuals that the magazine's appeal is made.

However, there are those here who do not share the same respect for literature and for those attempting to acquaint others with good literature. We are referring, in specific, to those who take it upon themselves to deface posters, flyers and the magazine itself. We are appalled at the immaturity and selfishness of students who commit such acts.

The magazine is published by Villanova University; therefore our funding is your money. These immature students are denying others the opportunity of having and reading a good literary magazine. It is our sincere hope that such thinking and activity will cease.

Sincerely,
the Editors of RUNES

Dear Editors:

I would like to commend you on including such an article as Carol Goldfarb's on WOMEN PRIESTS, Jan. 26, 1979.

By way of correction, though, I would like to note that both theologians and biblical scholars agree that there is no substantial theological or biblical reason why women should not be ordained. The fact of the Vatican Decree, and the refusal of recent Popes and many bishops to listen attentively to the point of view of women who do feel called to priesthood are certainly substantial reasons why women are not being ordained.

And by way of expansion, the course on Women in Judaeo-Christian Tradition now being offered by Religious Studies is much broader than "contemporary issues" or "linguistic sexism." In the course we are examining the role of women from historical, cultural, biblical and theological perspectives. Students are being given the opportunity to go back into history and examine myths, symbols and language in the development of religious doctrines and practices. This is being coupled with contemporary issues arising from the women's liberation movement.

Students are encouraged to bring their own questions and concerns to be examined in this context.

Thank you,
Dr. Virginia Ratigan

All-star lineup.

Performance and price are the keys in choosing a calculator. One of these Texas Instruments slide-rules is right for you.

Capability. Quality. Value. The right combination can help you make short work of problems in fields like math, engineering, science and business statistics and give you more time for other important things. Choose the TI calculator that's right for you and get ahead of the game.

TI-55. Advanced slide-rule functions with statistics, programmability and valuable problem-solving applications book.

The versatile TI-55 calculating system is packed with the features and functions you need to handle almost any mathematical operation, from logarithms and trigonometry to advanced statistical problems. Thirty-two steps of programmability add new dimensions of accuracy, speed and ease to performing repetitive calculations and "what-if" analyses. You just teach the TI-55 a series of operations and it performs those steps for you.

For more help in making quantitative decisions, the TI-55 comes with the Calculator Decision-Making Sourcebook, a $5.00 value. The book, 140 pages of easy-to-understand, real-life applications, shows you how to use the power of statistics, financial math and programmability in analyzing relationships in data, verifying quality and performance, measuring change, forecasting trends and projecting returns... in short, how to make better decisions, today and tomorrow. Calculator and book combination, only $50.00*.

Slimline TI-50. A powerful, stylish slide-rule with new Constant Memory™ feature.

The pocket-portable Slimline TI-50 is today's most powerful liquid crystal display (LCD) slide-rule calculator. It has 60 functions including common and natural logarithms and six trigonometric operations that can be performed in three angular modes (degrees, radians or grads).

Seven built-in statistical functions make it easy to "boil down" large amounts of data so you can perform accurate analyses and draw reliable conclusions.

Two constant memories retain their contents even when the calculator is turned off, so frequently used constants and other basic values are at your fingertips when you need them.

Two miniature batteries provide over 1000 hours of operation in normal use; TI's APD™ automatic power down feature helps prevent accidental battery drain by turning off the calculator after approximately 10 minutes of non-use. With imitation leather wallet, $40.00*.

Slimline TI-25. Slide-rule power at a small price.

Economy and value go hand-in-hand with the Slimline TI-25, a pocket-portable LCD scientific calculator that has what it takes to handle advanced math. It provides the most-needed slide-rule functions. Trigonometry in degrees, radians or grads. Plus basic statistical power, too: Mean, Variance, Standard Deviation.

Three levels of parentheses can handle up to three pending operations to make your work easier. Four-key memory allows you to store and recall values, add-to memory contents and exchange stored and displayed numbers.

The TI-25 goes far on a pair of miniature batteries—includes APD™ circuitry. Vinyl wallet included, $33.00*.

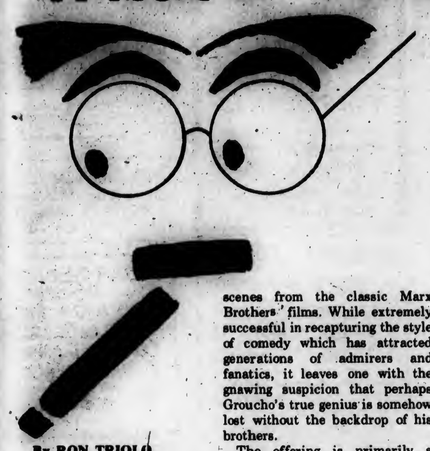
What D'Ya Shay, Shweetheart?



By RON TRIOLO and TOM PARISI

If you're looking for an evening of thoroughly enjoyable entertainment, you've only until Sunday to catch An Evening With Groucho Marx at the Academy of Music's Cabaret Theatre.

The play, currently in a pre-Broadway engagement in Philadelphia, is a montage of famous Groucho wisecracks, one-liners, and insults; a collage of reminiscences intermixed with some of the comedian's funniest scenes from the classic Marx Brothers films. While extremely successful in recapturing the style of comedy which has attracted generations of admirers and fanatics, it leaves one with the gnawing suspicion that perhaps Groucho's true genius is somehow lost without the backdrop of his brothers.

The offering is primarily a vehicle for Lewis J. Stadlen, its co-author and star. Stadlen recreates Groucho's character with stunning accuracy. Every raise of the eyebrow, wag of the cigar, and bent-knee step, every word he speaks, every note he sings, every crack he stingingly delivers is pure and unadulterated Groucho. Stadlen struts like Groucho, dances like Groucho, talks like Goucho and even looks uncannily like the late entertainer. His characterization is so precise that one must constantly remind oneself that it is 1979, not 1939 again, to keep from running on stage for the comic's autograph.

Stadlen is joined on stage by Nancy Evers as the buxom Miss Emily Smallhausen. She serves as piano accompanist and straight woman. Miss Evers is the distillation of Margaret Dumont and anyone else who has been on the wrong end of Marx's double-edged wit. She handles (or is handled by) Stadlen's Groucho admirably. Their interplay is exceptionally funny, and a joy to watch.

In spite of their excellent performances (or maybe because of them) and the timelessness of the material, neither nostalgia nor the next best thing to reincarnation can carry the show for its entirely. The show's major strength is also its primary weakness. The swaggering gait and cigar chomping insults which have become a standard tool in the repetoire of every aspiring young comedian (and certain Lamda Kappa Delta brothers), remains nothing more than a caricature.

"Groucho" is always "on." Hardly is a glimpse given of Julius Marx, the man. Barely do we see beneath the greasepaint mustache and wire rimmed glasses and the infamous sneer. While you may tear with laughter, you can't help coming away slightly hungry for what Holbrook's Twain, Fonda's Darrow, and Whitmore's Rogers and Truman provided in their one man tours — a bit of meat to sink your teeth into. You might even feel cheated, until you realize (and it's a realization that's slow in coming) that throughtout it all, Groucho ultimately played himself, the irreverent one, tearing to shreds the pomposities of the conventional world in which he seemed surprised to see himself.

Stadlen's Groucho ages gracefully with the evening without the aid of makeup or costume change. While deftly done, the passage of time markedly slows the second act and subtracts from the retrospective nature characteristic of other one man shows. Without the transformation, however, the show would have denied its audience of the vital energy of a youthful Groucho, and the mellow humor of Groucho, the octogenarian.

The pace never slows enough to be burdensome, and although such topics as parenthood, war, success and discrimination are the target of many of Groucho's pointed barbs, the show never becomes heavy. The evening always remains good fun.

The intimate setting of the Cabaret Theatre lent an excellent atmosphere to the show. Small four person tables illuminated only by candlelight surround a stage bared of everything save a piano, a stool, and the spirit of a comic genius who is sorely missed.

I wouldn't have missed the revue, to paraphrase the master, "for a million dollars . . . unless, of course, it was tax free."

When the Lights Go Out... Halloween

By JOHN ZAGARELLA

In light of the fact that recent movie thrillers such as "Damien: The Omen II," "The Fury," and "The Manitou" have promised to be superior horror flicks and turned out to be the laughing stock of the film industry, one might shy away from further offerings in this cinematic genre.

Fear no more, or should I say, fear once again, as Hollywood has produced a film guaranteed to scare the wits out of even the most thick-skinned of people. That film is currently showing at area theatres and is entitled "Halloween."

Written and directed by John Carpenter, "Halloween" is a film that focuses on evil in its purest form. In this case, evil is conveyed in the guise of a human body. The evil has no name, but is referred to as "it" or "the boogie man."

Usually, the prime target of the sinister force is young women after they have had a sexual encounter. I say "usually," because the boogie man kills anything or anyone that he has to in order to devastate the unsuspecting female.

Perhaps the most frightening aspect of evil, as presented here, is that it is totally devoid of a concept of feeling or emotion — "it" simply goes on a stabbing and or strangling spree, and stops at nothing.

The film commences, naturally, on October 31, 1963 — and that's when the fun begins. A young boy, dressed in his Halloween costume, of course, proceeds to mutilate the body of his sister in her bedroom after her boyfriend leaves. He is then committed to a mental institution, and fifteen years later, "it" escapes — on October 30. You can let your imagination run wild or you can muster up some nerve and go see "Halloween."

The last half hour of "Halloween" is certainly one of the most effective and terrifying film sequences to date. During the first hour, the tension and suspense crescendo to make way for an intense, spine-tingling finale.

As effective as "Halloween" is, it does have it's problems. It is not always logical, nor is it always believable. However, if you're a horror fanatic and want to indulge in a taste of terror, "Halloween" will not disappoint you. It should be noted that the boogie man changes costume for a few of his fatal escapades, which provides the movie with variety and an interesting twist. Also, "Halloween" is just what it says it is-a horror movie. It doesn't try to impress the audience with an over abundance of blood, guts and gore.

"Halloween" is set in Haddonfield, Illinois and stars Donald Pleasence, Jamie Curtis, P.J. Soles, Nancy Loomis, and oh yes, the boogie man. Trick or treat anyone?

Vasey Opens the Doors to A DOLL'S HOUSE

The Helmer Family in Ibsen's "A Doll House." (l. to r.) Francesca Ross, Marion Fox, Alice Mazarie, Lisa Jo Epstein, Daniel Baker.

A Doll's House, the classic play by Henrik Ibsen, is the first production of the spring season at Vasey Theatre at Villanova University. It will play from February 7, 1979 thru February 10; and from February 14 thru February 17. Curtain time for all performances is 8:00 p.m.

A Doll's House is a driving piece of theatre which engages the audience in a swirl of passion and intrigue. The glow of a happy home at Christmas time is shocked by an untimely event that threatens to destroy it. A devoted mother is faced with the most difficult decision of her life: whether or not to leave her husband and her children whom she loves so dearly.

Some critics consider A Doll's House to be Ibsen's best play. Indeed, it confronts the contemporary ideas of individuality, freedom, and responsibility, but it does so in a very honest, human fashion.

This Graduate Theatre production, directed by SuzAnne Barabas, will be set in a lovely "doll's house" in Norway in 1879. The set design by Dave Hearn and the lush Victorian clothing (designed by Ms. Barabas) will be complemented by original music by Barbara Moore. This production promises to be a treat for all the senses. It is an evening to be shared with the whole family.

For reservations and group rates call 527-2100 (340) or the box office at 525-6288 between the hours of 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. Monday thru Friday.

The Black Cultural Society will present a Black History Program, Feb. 5 to 9. Judy Wood, the director of the program, has planned a fantastic week of theatre, art, movies, poetry and politics pertinent to Black culture. It is a wonderful opportunity to experience and explore Black History.

There will be an art exhibit and film festival in the North Lounge of Dougherty on February 5, 6, and 7 from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. The artwork, that will be on display, is the creation of talented Black students from the Philadelphia School of Art. The selection of movies should prove to be extremely interesting, and will be short enough to enjoy between classes.

Black History Week will formally begin with an invocation by Dr. J. Custis at 3 p.m. in the North Lounge of Dougherty Hall. Refreshments will be served. On Thursday, February 8, there will be a political workshop at 8 p.m. in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall. The workshop will address the multi-faceted problems of education, employment and urban planning.

The program will culminate with a show on Friday, February 9. This presentation will begin at 8 p.m. in St. Mary's Hall.

Elvis Costello

By JOSEPH DEWEY and STEPHEN M. CASTELLANO

See the funny man.
See his funny name. See his collapsable knees. See him push up his big funny glasses. See his bulging eyes. But see him grab a guitar and watch him scorch like wildfire.

When music was deluged by the New Wave, a curious collection of mostly British groups, outrageous, angry, and anxious to ignite a revolution, most of the bands riding in were swamped in the backwaters of punk rock, the victims of excessive Press Hype. Their cultish followers were unsure that their reputations will be limited or their influence casual. A few, however, struggled up from the beach, crippled by the New Wave label, but confident that the music would speak for itself.

Elvis Costello is such a survivor, the "wunderkind" of the New Wave, the computer programmer converted to rock. His first album conquered American radio without lavish press support until we got the message. — Elvis Costello was more than an outrageous pose. He could play guitar, he seemed hungry and angry, and this guy was pure rock stripped down to the bone.

Elvis' third album, Armed Forces, is the inevitable step in any artist's climb to success. It is generously ornamented by studio excesses. But the power still throbs. And make no mistake, Elvis' power has always been the music. Rage spits out his "lyrics," the words frequently submerged in the blitzgrieg of music. Track to track, the cannonade is still there, the thundering rumble of drums, the dry spark of the guitar's primitive rock and roll chords. And the unmistakeable voice. Hard and accusing, hurt but getting even. He is not pleasant to listen to, nor nice to watch on stage. He is not flashy, nor pretty, nor particularly profound, but there is always the music, the great healer and forgiver.

And there are many things the music must forgive here. The production of pure pop-ist Nick Lowe threatens to overcome Elvis, douse his rage by underscoring the hooks and by creating walls of sound. And the lyrics intrude, obscure political put-downs and heavy romatic spite. The pervading sense of paranoia.

The distrust of women. The taste for anarchy. For all his "lyrics" it would be difficult to define a vision of life, short of the anger. Ultimately, he is the music. Whatever sense of rage people expect from Elvis radiates from the music. Here, there are few spared punches. In spite of the pointless excesses Nick Lowe ladled in, the heavy guns are out. Elvis is going for the jugular, and, as always, his aim is true.

I cherish the early efforts of artists, particularly artists who make it big, as Elvis certainly will. I regret the embellishing of the basic Elvis formula. Drums and straight guitar. It was an exciting posture in an age of music excess. In this album, clouds are gathering. Terminal overproduction may spoil Elvis for his early fans. But for now the combination is tightly balanced. Armed Forces roars in, relentless as a calvary charge.

So watch this funny man. At a time where we are asked if we are men or perhaps Devo, we can cling to his rock of ages. For now.

The Babys

By THOM STYLES

Back in the year 1129 CHR, a band called the Babys was born unto the airwaves, bashing and wailing a hit entitled 'Looking For Love.' From all indications, their initial album heralded a new English rock band based on the unlikely ingredients of love, power chords, amour, ponderous arrangements, romance, et cetera, passion, et cetera. "The Babys" was a moderately successful album, though the band's American tour met with mixed reviews.

Back in the studio, the Babys made a few adjustments in an attempt to focus on a distinctive sound; in addition to the original quartet, a trio of female background vocalists were added. Greater attention was given to little touches like strings and horns, though the original slow pace was still present.

"Head First" came out late last year. So far, local radio stations have been fishing around for a hit, probably either 'Love Don't Prove I'm Right' or the title cut, 'Head First.' From a historical standpoint, this is the most comfortable LP the Babys have done. The musicians are substantially the same as on the "Broken Heart" record, with Ron Nevison continuing as producer, the Babettes again appearing. The recording facilities are the same, however, there have been a few changes since the album that will be apparent the next time the band hits the road. Singer/bassist John Waite will concentrate on the vocals while Ricky Phillips handles the string chores. Keyboard player Mike Corby left at the completion of "Head First" and is replaced by J. Cain, a former Warners artist.

The Babys prove, once again, that they are not the least bit bashful about heaping on the orchestration. 'White Lightning' on side one is a bizarre song lyrically, made even more so by the thick backing instrumentals. 'Love Don't Prove I'm Right' and 'Head First' are two "classic" Babys-style rockers, complete with thumping bass lines and Tony Brock's bashing percussion, and in the case of 'Head First,' Wally Stocker does a neat dual lead on the bridges. 'California' features Rundgrensque production and sounds strangely like Al Stewart, but the words are definitely a John Waite concoction.

Don't Waste a "Moment."

Tomlin and Travolta in Lily's Jacuzzi.

By JANEMARIE T. COYLE

Love is the exchange of two fantasies and the contact of two skins".

Nicholas Chamfort

If you think the opening quote of this review is hokey, then my friends, prepare yourself for much worse in "Moment by Moment", featuring John "Revolta" Travolta and Lilly Tomlin.

For the first football-less weekend since September, I decided to fulfill this assignment on a Sunday afternoon matinee. I am by no means a football fan, however after enduring "moment by boring moment" for two long hours, I realize now that I would have welcomed watching the San Francisco 49er's playing the New Orlean Saints.

"Moment by Moment" revolves exclusively around the contact of two skins, namely Lily Tomlin's and John Travolta's.

Tomlin plays Trish Rawlings, a bored, frustrated Beverly Hills housewife with nothing better to do than cruise around in her Mercedes and check out the stock at Gucci's.

Travolta plays Strip, a shallow, ... boy toy who is half Trish's age. He's looking for love, but not exactly in the motherly sense. In one of his more eloquent dialogues Strip says "I'm ready for a commitment in a beautiful relationship, I'm through with cheap sex because cheap sex leaves me feeling cheap.""Moment by Moment" is Jane Wagner's directorial debut, a fact that remains quite evident. What might have been a "cute" idea on paper turned out to be a bomb on film. Wagner makes a futile attempt in depicting a passionate love affair between a young man and an older woman. It is a role reversal type film that women libbers would enjoy because for a change, the woman is intellectually, socially and financially superior. She enjoys Strip solely for his body while Strip is looking for something deeper. (and what a body!)

Tomlin and Travolta as lovers are a likely a combination as Barbarino, the Sweathog, and Ernestine, the telephone operator.

If you are tempted to see "Moment By Moment," don't, you'll be better off staying at home watching a Japanese horror movie without subtitles on UHF.

Chief Is Modest But A Good Goalie

By RALPH MANOPPELLO

Talking to a guy wearing a fur jacket, ski cap and cowboy boots wouldn't give a person the impression of an athlete whose playing position is one of importance and skill.

"My white boots were custom made in Texas and they're the best piece of footwear on campus," brags Mike "Chief" Alegado. His boastfulness is tempered by his deep awareness of what his job is as goaltender of Villanova's hockey team.

"Chief," a nickname Mike picked up during his freshman year, began playing organized hockey during his junior year in high school. After not playing his freshman year at Villanova, Mike made the team the following year but suffered through a long season. "I was put in the background," Chief explained. "It was definitely a coaching mistake and after a while I lost my attitude."

The current season opened with chief as starting goalie for the Icecats. He received plenty of action but tough scheduling caused Mike to burn out physically. According to Chief, goalie Rich Longhi will hopefully see some ice time during the remaining games and relieve him of the pressures of playing every game.

Playing the position of a hockey goaltender is one few attempt to try. Only a unique person is willing to hold the outcome of a game on his shoulders.

"Goaltending is really intense. Every mistake you make is recorded behind you on the scoreboard," Chief explained. "People mention how they would never play goalie because they're afraid. But, a goalie's only fears are ones of failure."

During a recent game at the Spectrum where Mike was named MVP against Penn State, he received a bruise on his thigh the size of a grapefruit. "Fear of a serious injury never entered my mind," Alegado added. Usually, athletes are keyed up before a game. They are often one body of nerves. Mike claims he is just the opposite come game time. "I'm more quiet than normal."

Athletes often pattern themselves like well-known professionals. Chief is no exception. His playing manner is taken from three National Hockey League goaltenders who have a fancy flair. "Fancy goaltending is a type of artistic choreography, therefore, my style is flamboyant," remarked the Psychology major.

"Some of my moves after saves are impractical and showy. I use them to perform for the crowds. In visiting rinks I love to tantalize crowds with my moves."

So far this year, Mike has enjoyed a good season. But, 'just good' isn't enought for him. He is a hard judge of his own performances. His dream as a goaltender is perfection. Mike's personal goal for this season is to lead the league with the lowest goals against average.

What the future holds for Chief is still up in the air. He believes the best place for his hockey career to go would be to European hockey. If not, though, Mike could fall back on his education and his impressive 3.64 grade average.

Having a cocky attitude is essential in goaltending and Chief's moves and performances show that trait with abundance.

Mile Relay To Face Test

Timmy Dale, senior anchorman of Villanova's 1600 meter (Mile) relay team, doesn't think the relay team has gotten it all together yet. Together or not, however, there is little doubt in anyones mind that Villanova's 1600 meter relay is the cream of this years college crop.

This years team of juniors Keith Brown and Derrek Harbour, sophomore Anthony Tufariello and senior Tim Dale remains pretty much the same as last years. Glenn Bogue, a Canadian Olympian and consistently strong relay runner, was the only team member lost to graduation last year, and with Keith and Derrek both healthy this year the team should be at least as strong as last years.

Junior Al Graves and Willie Sydnore, a sophomore in his first season of athletic eligibility after transferring from Northwestern last fall, will add both depth and versatility to the squad.

So far, however, depth hasn't been much of a problem. For that matter, there haven't really been many problems.

Coming off last years IC4A and NCAA Outdoor titles the team started this season right where they left off, in the lead, and they have already lowered their own collegiate record time from 3:09.6 to 3:08.8 while remaining undefeated in head to head collegiate competition.

The team has lost only twice this year, taking second to the strong Philadelphia Pioneer Club team of Alfred Daley, Mike Solomon, Tom McLean and Tony Darden at the Muhammad Ali Invitational and finishing third at the Vitalis-Olympic Invitational behind the Pioneers and the D.C. International team of Ed Preston, Fred Sowerby, Maurice Peoples and Kevin Price.

Timmy feels that both of these losses were the result of the teams slower start this year, he doesn't think that the team is as "sharp" as either the Pioneers of the D.C. Internationals are yet. He did add, however, that by the time the IC4A's and NCAA's roll around the team would be capable of defeating any college, or club, team in the country.

The mile relay team will be competing with the rest of the track team this Sunday in Princeton New Jersey at the Princeton Relays. A strong field, including IC4A runner-up Maryland, Seton Hall and Rutgers has been assembled and Villanova, ranked as the "Best Relay Team in America" by Track and Field News, will face the first real test of their relay supremacy this year.

Divers Do It On The Boards

By GINGER FANNON

The Villanova Diving Team is a winner, even though it is one of the least publicized teams on campus. Outstanding placement in four meets last week proves this.

The men's team is captained by a senior Marketing major, Ted Klinges, who has "blossomed this year into an excellent diver and the standout of the team," according to coach Cliff Harwick.

Mark Feldner is a sophomore Marketing major, whom Harwick says "has shown remarkable improvement and adds much depth to the team."

The surprise sensation of the team is Steve Tue, a freshman, who has placed in many meets.

Klinges, Tue, and Feldner placed first, second and third, respectively, in Villanova's win last weekend against Penn.

The women's team is led by junior Ann Levenite, the team captain. Another consistant diver is sophomore Mary Jarrett. Despite being a first year diver, Marcia Gregory, a sophomore, is the most impressive women's diver, says Harwick.

Women's competitions last week included Penn, Drexel and Ursinus. At Ursinus, Gregory placed first and Jarett second. Against Penn and Drexel, consistantly good results were shown by Gregory placing first, Jarett second and Leventine third.

Harwick, a former diver for the Cats, feels that his two best divers are Ted Klinges and Marcia Gregory. He attributes their improvement to increased aggressiveness.

Harwick believes that all of his divers will make the Eastern Championships, but feels that Gregory has an excellent shot at the Nationals.

Overall, the team is very supportive of each other and really seems to enjoy college competition. The interest shown by coach Harwick for each member of the team is evident by their winning results.

Women Swimmers Are Winners

By BRANDY JOHNSON

Quality rather than quantity defines this years women's swim team is and this was indicated in their performance last week. Their current 5-2 record surpasses their losing 3-6 record of last year.

Last Tuesday coach Jane Ackerman, accompanied by only seven swimmers and three divers, traveled to the University of Pennsylvania and returned victorious. It was an impressive win, decided by the final 200 meter relay. Villanova won the relay with Mary Maier leading off in a personal best of 24.7. She was followed by Alice Maben, newcomer Cathy Carter, and anchor Jenni Franks.

Individual victories by this talented squad were earned by Mary Maier, Jenni Franks and Tara Baroody. Mary won the 100 free, 100 fly and 100 individual medley. Jenni won the 200 free 100 breast and swam the butterfly in the medley relay. Tara Baroody won the 100 back and 500 freestyle and placed third in the 50 fly.

Alice Maben was also a key to Villanova's win over Penn. Although she did not secure an individual victory, Alice came up with a second in the 50 free and 50 breast. She also swam the breaststroke on the winning medley relay.

The women's swim team had a tri-meet Thursday against Ursinus and Drexel. Although they romped Ursinus they were not as successful in their efforts against Drexel.

The sole victories for Villanova were scored by Jenni Franks. She won the 500 freestyle and then returned to win the 100 individual medley and 200 freestyle, which she swam back to back. Jenni Franks is the most talented swimmer on the team and certainly the most versatile, according to coach Jane Ackerman. She is a former AAU record holder in the 200 and 400 individual medley. Jenni is the leading scorer on the team and the key to every victory.

The 1978-79 Womens Swim team may be small but its talent is unlimited. They have already begun to rewrite the record books and by the end of the season should have them all.

Cagers Down West Virginia Fall To Rutgers

By ED McASSEY

The basketball team encountered two important "firsts" of the season this past weekend with back to back Eastern Eight contests. On Friday night the Cats won their first Palestra contest with a 99-58 explosion over West Virginia. Things burst for the worst on Saturday afternoon as Rutgers clipped Villanova 64-55 at the Rutgers Athletic Center in their first EAA disappointment of the season. After the smoke cleared from the basketball weekend the Cats found themselves 6-1 in the EAA and 10-9 on the season.

The Cats displayed a flawless game last Friday night in the sparsely populated Palestra with intelligent passing and strong rebounding against West Virginia. Villanova established their margin early (15-2) in the contest with a fatal zone press. The Mountaineers were plagued with 17 turnovers in the first half, five of which were Alex Bradley steals. First year coach Gale Catlett tried desperately to rescue his squad with replacements but the rout continued. The Cats enjoyed a 51-26 margin at the half.

"I told them this was Wildcat weekend," said coach Massimino after the first Palestra victory. "That's why this was such an important win. All of our hard work in the pre-season like getting up at 6 in the morning, finally showed some results."

The results came from everyone. Alex Bradley led the Cats with 27 points and 8 rebounds and was deadly at the point in the zone defense as he forced several West Virginia turnovers. Rory Sparrow alleviated a potential threat by holding West Virginia's Lowes Moore (averaging 18 ppg) to eight point Sparrow finished with 15 points (7-8 from the field). Larry Sock exploded with 13 points (6-7 from the field) coming off the bench. Tom Sienkiewicz had 10 rallies to contribute to the Cat victory.

The Mountaineers have only played four road games this season and lost to Louisville by an even more painfull 46 points margin.

On Saturday Rutgers rallied from a six point halftime deficit to down the Cats 64-55. Both squads displayed signs of back to back contests as the first half was marked by turnovers.

Villanova received a much tougher challange than the last Rutgers game in the Field House where the Cats won by 19. Rutgers' Kelvin Troy held Alex Bradley to two points in the first half. Bradley continued to lead the team with nine rebounds in the first half. The Cats assumed the lead with 14 minutes still ticking away in the first half and maintained it till 11 minutes remained in the second half.

The Knights scored nine straight points with key buckets from 'King' James Bailey, Daryl Strickland and Kelvin Troy. Rutgers were able to capitalize on three offensive rebounds during the comback which aided the Knight's rally. Villanova exchanged the advantage with Rutgers seven times in the following three minutes before losing it for good.

Massimino was forced to play Marty Caron and Rory Sparrow, who were both in foul trouble, in the second half. "We don't like to play two people with foul trouble but felt we needed their rebounding and scoring." stated a somber Massimino, "Our foul trouble was certainly a factor." Caron and Sparrow fouled out.

Villanova came close to recovering the lead with four minutes remaining when an Arron Howard jumper closed the margin to 55-53; but some costly fouls afflicted the Cats in the final minutes.

Howard, Caron and Sparrow all finished with 11 points. Bradley was held to nine points but managed 15 rebounds. Tom Sienkiewicz retired with eight points. Larry Sock who had a spectator performance the night before against West Virginia only plays eight minutes.

James Bailey led the Knights with 14 points; however, he only contributed two rebounds which hurts the North Jersey school. Daryl Strickland and Kelvin Troy finished with 13 and 10.

Women's Hoop Loses At St. Joe's

By MARY GRACE MURRAY

The women's basketball team began their toughest road trip of the season by losing to St. Joseph's, 58-46. The Wildkittens scored two victories earlier in the week, over Temple (58-50) and West Virginia (71-64), to bring their record to 10-4.

The Wildkitten's lack of rebounding was their downfall against a powerful St. Joe squad. St. Joe's was getting numerous tries on offense, while usually allowing Villanova only one shot. The Hawk's Debbie Descano (18 pts.) played a tough game against Lisa Ortlip, allowing her only nine points.

The Wildkittens opened the score early, taking a 12-8 lead, but St. Joe's battled back for a 32-27 half-time advantage. During the second half, St. Joe's outscored the Wildkittens 12-2 in a six minute stretch to open the lead to 56-42 with 3:53 remaining.

High scorers for Villanova were Kathy Straccia and Mary Beth Gibson with 10 points apiece.

In another Big 5 game, Villanova beat Temple 58-50. The game was very close but behind accurate shooting of Ortlip, seven for seven from the field, the Cats pulled out the victory. Ortlip ended the game with 17 points and Bess McGinn was high scorer with 20 points.

Against West Virginia, Kathy Straccia set a school record with nine assists as she led the team to their 71-64 victory. Ortlip was high scorer with 21 points and Gibson, hot from the outside, scored 20 points.

This weekend, the Wildkittens face a busy weekend schedule on the road against Salisbury State, Virginia and Loyola.

LaSalle Evens Cat's Record

By JIM SAVAGE

The Lynam brothers stole the show at the Palestra Wednesday night. Jimmy coached St. Joseph's to a 92-68 romp over American University and Kevin propelled La Salle's 84-78 victory over Big-5 rival Villanova.

The younger Lynam, a 6-2 sophomore from nearby Havertown, scored 17 points as the Explorers raised their record to 11-9, 1-1 in the Big-5. Villanova dropped to 10-10 and was eliminated from the Big-5 race due to their 0-2 city series mark.

La Salle won the game at the foul line and off the backboards. Junior guard Darryl Gladden scored a game high 20 points and sank 12 of 13 free throws, including four crucial shots in the last two minutes. Gladden, it may be recalled, stung the Wildcats 71-70 with two foul shots in the 1977 contest's final second.

"We played well, but didn't make key baskets at the end." lamented Villanova coach Rollie Massimino, "and the rebound margin was more than two-to-one in La Salle's favor (46-21). There's no way that should happen with them playing three guards."

Standout center Michael Brooks totalled 15 points and 13 rebounds in his first performance since being named Amateur Athlete of the Year by Philadelphia sportswriters. The Explorers' 6-7 junior played the final 14 minutes with four personal fouls.

Villanova sharpshooter Alex Bradley led the Wildcats with 16 points, despite going only 4 for 13 from the floor. Bradley was matched up against Lynam most of the game, prompting Massimino to comment, "A 6-2 guard shouldn't be able to handle Alex. But Lynam played aggressive defense and forced Alex to take tough shots all night long."

With Bradley and Brooks neutralizing each other, the spotlight was cast upon the backcourt. Lynam, Gladden and Kurt Kanaskie all contributed to the La Salle victory, but Villanova's Tom Bethea and Rory Sparrow dazzled the 5,243 fans. Bethea, a freshman from Durham, N.C., blocked successive shots to foil an Explorer fast break; while the dependable Sparrow engineered a floor game that brought the Cats back from a nine point defecit.

In fact, Rory had just set up a Bethea lay-up to give Villanova their largest lead, 64-59, when he was charged with his fourth fo Momentum shifted noticably w Sparrow on the bench.

With all hope for a seco straight Big-5 crown go Villanova turns its attention to t Eastern 8, where they hold fi place with a 6-1 record. On Sund afternoon the Wildcats travel Penn State to face the Nitt Lions. They then return to t Palestra February 9th again Jimmy Lynam's St. Joe's Hawk

Did someone say that na Lynam again?

Polocats Establish Tradition

By CHRIS BRENNER

Villanova's athletic community has consistently placed non-varsity teams in NCAA competition in less popular sports, especially water polo.

Last season, the Villanova water polo club failed to qualify for the Eastern championships for the first time in its history. Quite a feat, considering the many talent-laden schools that dominate the Water Cats' schedule each year.

Villanova is one of ten schools comprising the Mid-Atlantic Conference. The top three finishers in the conference qualify for post-season tourney play. John Hopkins, Slippery Rock, Columbia, Penn State, and Villanova have been the traditional contestants for these spots.

Unfortunately, next season looks rather bleak for Villanova as graduation will deplete the squad of some of its most gifted athletes. Gary Stengo, the Cats' only All-League first-team selection, will take most of the offensive punch with him when he leaves. Stengo scored a league-high 66 goals in just seven games last season. Eddy Opalach (Honorable Mention, All-League) and Jim McCarrick are key defensive losses.

Presently, Coach Bob Fazio is trying to arrange practice accommodations at the university's pool facilities. As soon as a schedule can be worked out, an AAU spring season will begin for the Wildcats with preparation for the regular fall season.

Communication Major Proposed

Degrees Anticipated For 1980

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

A twenty-six page proposal to institute Communication Arts as a major in the Villanova undergraduate school curriculum is complete.

The proposal must now undergo a lengthy process of administrative consideration and approval.

The proposal, which calls for a required 30 credit hours (increased from 24 credit hours for the present Communication Arts concentration), must initially pass the Liberal Arts Curriculum Committee, Father John O'Malley, O.S.A., dean of arts and sciences, and the Academic Policy Committee before going on to Dr. James Cleary, vice president for Academic Affairs, and Father President Driscoll.

"I would hope that the essential idea of a Communication major will go through," stated O'Malley. "It is a very attractive idea."

O'Malley, however, added that the administrative process is an involved one entailing budget, staff, student enrollment, and other considerations.

Mr. Warren O. Richardson, Communication department chairman, expressed his confidence in the proposal's feasibility: "The proposal will have a minimum impact financially. Present faculty and courses will be utilized."

With regard to equipment, Richardson noted that a recent unrelated $81,000 purchase of equipment for a broadcasting course will also be employed.

Four years ago Dr. Robert McGowan, chairman of the English department, Dr. James Christy, chairman of the Theatre department, and Mr. Richardson conceived the idea of a communication concentration. That proposal met with approval and was instituted in 1976.

The Communication concentration was well received and the number of students enrolled in the program increased from approximately 13 people in 1976 to 85 at present.

In May, 1978 the initial plan for a Communication major met with administrative approval and was described as "workable" by Dr. Cleary.

"The Communication major will consist of basically the same format as the concentration," continued Richardson. "It will consist of 30 hours of study, 24 of which are required credits: new rotating courses (those made available at least once to an under-

Students To Work In Appalachia

By BILL CLARK

Campus Ministry has organized a trip to Appalachia for 30 students to take place over spring break. The students, led by Barbara Haenn, assistant director of Campus Ministry, will stay at the Jesuit Center in Hot Springs, North Carolina.

"The students will mostly be doing manual labor such as repairing homes, roofs and porches for the elderly. They will also be working at a country store and preparing gardens for the Spring," said Haenn.

Haenn feels that the students are in for an educational experience. "It is a totally different culture in Appalachia. Everything is a community experience because they all live for each other. There is a wealth of loving values in Appalachia and no one is in a rush. After coming back, everyone will be in for a rude awakening."

Jody Lynch, a student going on the Appalachia trip, expressed the same sentiments. "There is a totally different culture in Appalachia. This is the second time I will be going, and I have developed an appreciation for their lifestyle."

There have already been twelve hours of orientation and planning put in by the students. The thirty students will be split into six teams, with one remaining at the Center to cook and make repairs to cover expenses.

The trip will cost approximately $1600. To raise money, Campus Ministry is sponsoring a fast during lunch on February 15, with Food Services donating one dollar for each student not eating lunch. Also, there will be a volleyball marathon in the Butler Annex, from 6:00 p.m. tonight until 6 p.m. tomorrow evening.

Estates Renamed

By BILL ROCK

Villanova University will submit a proposal to the Radnor Township Zoning Board on February 22 for the re-zoning the area commonly known as the Morris Estates.

"The law firm representing Villanova did not believe it had gathered enough of the background information to go before the Board in January, so it was decided to wait until the February meeting," explained Rev. Thomas M. Mahoney, O.S.A., vice-president for financial affairs.

"There is little we can do in regard to the Morris Estates until after that meeting," continued Mahoney. "Our goal is to use the Dundale house as a dormitory. If, however, the zoning does not come through, we will use the house for some other purpose. We may move some offices over there."

Mahoney also indicated that the four buildings comprising the Morris Estates have been renamed. They will take the names of four former Augustinian members of the Villanova faculty and administration.

The largest of the houses, Dundale, is being named after Rev. William E. Farrell, O.S.A. Farrell was vice-president for development during the late sixties and the early seventies. The other buildings are taking the names of Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., Rev. John Klekotka, O.S.A., and Rev. Joseph Burns, O.S.A.

Father Donnellon was president of the University from 1954-1959 and served as provincial of the St. Thomas of Villanova province for several years after that. Father Klekotka, who passed away this past November, was president from 1959-1965. He had served on the Board of Trustees since 1969. Father Burns, a member of the religious studies department, was described by Father Mahoney as "one of the most popular teachers ever at Villanova."

In a related matter, the Vassar Club, a group of alumnee of Vassar College, will be refurnishing the Dundale house during March and April. Each year the club renovates a few of the more impressive homes in the area, then opens them to the public. The Dundale house will be open to public inspection during May.

Living Costs Outpace Salaries

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

Villanova University pays its teachers an average salary $130 less than it did in 1971, according to an analysis by Professor Michael Levitan, president of the Villanova chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP.)

"We're not even close to keeping pace with inflation," said Levitan. According to the AAUP bulletin, the faculty salary was $12,400 for 1971/72 and $18,600 for 1977/78. Matching this against Philadelphia's constantly rising consumer price index (C.P.I.), Levitan determined the buying power of the 1977/78 salary to be $12,273 in 1971/72 dollars.

The average faculty salary in 1971/72 dollars rose for the year 1972/73 and has decreased steadily ever since. "Year after year, we're losing money," said Levitan.

Levitan also noted that while instructional expenses increased 5.06 percent in 1977/78 over 1976/77, general administration expenses increased 11.73 percent. "Administration costs rise faster than instruction costs," said Levitan. "I'd like to know why."

"The way I see it — without the administration, there is still a university, but without the faculty, there is no university," said Levitan. "We wouldn't mind small increments, but it is a matter of concern when we, who are the university, get poorer and poorer every year."

Levitan observed that the University operating revenue has exceeded the operating expenses in each of the past seven years.

Number of faculty members, consumer price index, average Villanova faculty salary, and average salary in 1971/72 dollars from 1971 to 1978.

The average yearly surplus for seven years has been 1.07 million dollars. The surplus for 1977/78 was 1.11 million dollars.

The minutes of the last Villanova Chapter AAUP meeting reported Father President John Driscoll's expressed concern for "more realistic estimates of operating income. He would like to see projections that did not result in operating surpluses while needs were not as fully met as might be within the community."

Levitan said that it is necessary to "change the priorities with which money is spent."

He added that there should be more force from the faculty, "so that we're not just spinning wheels."

Members of the Salary and Fringe Benefits' Committee of the Faculty Assembly reported to the Villanova Chapter of AAUP that "a cost of living plus 2 percent approach had been worked out with the administration in budget planning for next year," according to the AAUP minutes.

"It would be nice just to get the cost of living, period," said Levitan.

McCarthy: Portrait Of A New Trustee

By NANCY ROONEY and MARGUERITE ESMONDE

"I am very pleased to be on the Board because of my very long association with the University," former President the Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O.S.A., stated in an interview this week.

The Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., Villanova's current President, announced the appointment of Father McCarthy, along with three other new members to the University's Board of Trustees last week.

Perhaps one of Villanova's most controversial Presidents in recent years, Father McCarthy served from 1971 until his resignation in 1975, citing his age as a factor in leaving. He was 63. His administration was marked by much internal turmoil at the University.

Summarizing the McCarthy Presidency, Dr. Robert Langran, chairman of the University Senate for most of the McCarthy years, stated: "The school took a more conservative stance in his era than previously. Those years were marked by many student problems. Students were inclined to speak out but they were met by a President who didn't welcome outspokenness.

"Father McCarthy always ruled firmly."

Administrative policies regarding visitation and student rights were visibly contested by the student body, leading to demonstrations and sit-ins.

Perhaps the most memorable incident was the occupation of Tolentine Hall by 1200 students in February, 1974, to demonstrate student concern with student rights on campus.

The students' fight for more rights was carried to the courts after strict disciplinary action was taken by the University against students for the violation of parietal regulations at a Sheehan Hall party in 1974. Twelve students, punished by suspension or explusion, brought suit against the University, charging state and federal civil rights violations by the administration.

The Rev. Raymond Jackson, O.S.A., director of Campus Ministry, commented on the nature of the administration-student tension, saying, "If you are not a liberal when you're 20, you have no heart; but if you are not a conservative when you are 40, you have no brain."

Reflecting on his years as President, Father McCarthy stated, "Those were very difficult years from student relations viewpoint because the Vietnam War was in the background. Student reaction to the War was to rebel against all authority."

The years were also difficult from the faculty standpoint. In 1973, Father McCarthy drew faculty and Senate ire with his announcement of major policy changes concerning academics and athletics. Academically, faculty members teaching loads were increased from 9 to 12 teaching hours and departments were urged to reduced faculty members whenever possible. In addition, departments were to reassess a wide divergence of course offerings and adjust by offering fewer courses.

The Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O.S.A.

In the athletic area, the football program was to continue and be expanded to a higher level of competition, while efforts would be made to broaden the scope of intramurals.

The Faculty Affairs Committee strongly opposed the changes, criticizing retrenchment in academics with simultaneous expansion in athletics.

The University Senate charged the President with a violation of its Constitution in spirit and

Financial Aid Info

By JERRY DOUGHERTY

A new procedure by which data on student financial aid is gathered has been introduced by the Financial Aid Office.

This procedural change took effect the first of the year, and it amounts to a streamlining of the financial aid application process.

The primary innovation in this procedure involves the Uniform Methodology need analysis, which entails a computer link-up from Villanova to the Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency (PHEAA) data bank in Harrisburg.

University use of PHEAA financial data means that all students re-applying for financial aid, whether residents of Pennsylvania or not, must complete the PHEAA/Basic Educational Opportunity Grant (BEOG) application form.

Another ramification of this adopted procedure is the separate Villanova Financial Aid Application, which must be filled out and submitted to the Financial Aid Office along with the student's and parents' 1978 U.S. Income Tax Return 1040 form.

The deadline for applicants to submit the PHEAA/BEOG form to Harrisburg and the Villanova form to the Financial Aid Office is March 15th. It is recommended that they should be forwarded for processing as soon as possible.

A monetary advantage of this newly-inaugurated procedure is that it eliminates the Financial Aid Form (FAF), the former source of the University's financial aid data; a fee of $4.75 was charged for this form to be processed.

The elimination of the FAF pertains only to students of the University who re-apply for financial aid. It will remain necessary for all incoming applicants to complete it.

Students who are residents of a state other than Pennsylvania must fill out their state's financial aid applications, and in some states, particularly New Jersey and Massachusetts, this requires the completion of the Financial Aid Form.

The data received by the Financial Aid Office from the PHEAA computer bank will be used to determine student need. Financial need determines the University's awarding of Villanova Grants, Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants, National Direct Student Loans, and Work Study.

More detailed information and instructions concerning this procedural change, as well as the pertinent forms, are obtainable in the Financial Aid Office, located on the second floor of Kennedy Hall.

Dean Search Prompts Response

By NANCY ROONEY

A recent article in The Villanovan examined the administration's response to a tripartite advisory committee's work on the selection of the Dean of Arts and Sciences. In response to this article, Dr. John Mulligan of the Modern Languages Department offered a different perspective of the proceedings. In a recent interview, he stated his belief that the Committee could have performed its work more professionally.

Dr. John Mulligan, Languages Dept.

"I was not a member of the Search Committee, but as a senior full professor in Arts and Sciences, I was as much interested in its workings as I was in its ultimate selection of candidates. Any of my thoughts exclude Dr. Cleary and the two student members," he stated.

Mulligan based his position on the fact that the Dean Search Committee was "elected" and "advisory," and maintained that the Committee did not fulfill all the implications of these two functions.

Citing an excerpt from the Protocol on the Selection of Deans, which listed the Committee's duty "to act as a clearinghouse of pertinent information from the entire community of the college concerned," Mulligan explained that "as an elected Committee, the Dean Search group had a continuing obligation to its constituency, the Arts and Science faculty."

Mulligan noted, "The Committee should have, sua sponte (on one's own volition), contacted members of the Arts and Science faculty at least once in the proceedings. They did not intend to do so."

In an effort to have some input on the Committee's proceedings, Dr. Mulligan invited the faculty members of the Search Committee, to meet with interested ARts and Science faculty members. The Committee scheduled a meeting on a Friday at 4 p.m. Dr. Mulligan estimated that approximately 30-35 faculty members attended the meeting.

"In the 18 years that I have been at Villanova, I don't think that we have ever scheduled a late Friday afternoon meeting of this kind," Mulligan remarked. "Is it possible that this was the only day and time to meet? I find it highly improbable!"

Commenting on the Committee's duty, Mulligan summarized, "I believe it was their intention not to make any contact with the Arts and Science faculty, the constituency which elected them."

"In truth, the Dean Search Committee gave Father Driscoll one name and accordingly no choice. To receive a choice was his right and to offer him a choice was their duty. They did not do it."

Dr. John Mulligan

Still dissatisfied with the weight given to the faculty input, Mulligan and other Arts and Science faculty members offered the possibility of a straw vote of faculty preferences. Mulligan charged, "The Committee decided this was not necessary since it would not affect their vote!"

Mulligan criticized the committee's failure in its advisory capacity, Dr. Mulligan cited the Committee's arbitrary choice to recommend only two candidates from the 13 applicants. He con-

Honors Formed

A chapter of Theta Alpha Kappa, the national honor society for religious studies, has been established at Villanova University. Four outstanding students composed the first group inducted into the new society at special ceremonies on January 24.

Rev. John O'Malley, O.S.A., dean of Villanova's college of arts and sciences, performed the official induction ceremony. Rev. Edward Hamel, O.S.A., assistant professor of religious studies, will serve as the chapter's faculty advisor.

Election to the honor society represents significant scholastic achievement. Students must have a 3.75 out of a possible 4.0 academic average in the field of religious studies, and an overall average of 3.5 or better.

Honored students include senior Mary Nadine Wesoski, and Villanova graduates Noreen Buckley, Ellen Marie Keneza, and John Lozano.

Ms. Wesoski, of Newtown Square, Pennsylvania, is the daughter of Joseph and Mary Wesoski. Majoring in religious studies, she is enrolled in the Honors Program at Villanova, an accelerated liberal arts course for gifted students. She plans to go on to graduate school following her graduation in May.

Ms. Buckley, of Garden City, New York, graduated from Villanova in May, 1978, and is presently pursuing a master's degree at Catholic University in Washington, D.C. She works with the campus ministry there, and is a dormitory counsellor.

A Philadelphia resident Mary Ellen Kemeza is a graduate student in religious studies at Villanova and the 1977 winner of the Religious Studies Medal.

John Lazano of West Hempstead, New York, was the first winner of the Religious Studies Medal. He, too, is presently pursuing graduate studies at Villanova.

graduate student) will also be offered."

Richardson added that Don Tollefson, sports director for WPVI Channel 6 in Philadelphia, has expressed interest in teaching a course on television news.

Course proposals in Broadcasting Management and Radio News have also come from Chuck Heiser (KYW, Channel 3) and Bill Roher, (WCAU Radio), respectively. The above proposals would be offered at least once in four years.

"We are in the business of training communicators," added Richardson, "so that students will be able to pursue careers in public relations, advertising, and other related fields with a strongly based liberal arts background."

Richardson noted that the planned major will follow the same approach. The program is both academic and practical.

"Our purpose is not specifically to get students jobs at radio stations but to make them good communicators," said Richardson. "This is the reason for required theory and introduction to language courses. Internships, in the radio/television world, are still being offered."

The proposed major will borrow heavily from three areas — Communication, Theatre, and English.

"English courses will make a major contribution to the success of the program," declared McGowan, "with Communication Arts as the central part of the tripartite structure."

Dr. McGowan described the proposal as versatile and believes that there is no reason for pessimism in regard to the proposal being passed.

"Hopefully, there is a strong possibility that we could award a degree in 1980," confided Richardson.

Father O'Malley was also enthusiastic about the major. "The students in Communications have reached a degree of expertise that is the core of a good major."

The Communication Arts concentration will continue should the major be offered in the 1979-80 academic year.

Mulligan

jectured that this number was chosen to reflect the anti-Augustinian attitude of some Committee members.

"Logically and in justice, they might have submitted three names out of a total of 13 candidates," Mulligan stated. "Three would have been a ticklish situation. Could they have endorsed a third neck-tie wearer and omitted all three Augustinian candidates?"

"They steered away from a third choice — it probably would have been an Augustinian," Mulligan asserted. "Most probably, it would have been the current dean since he was superior in diversified experience to his fellow Augustinian candidates and possibly to others. Father Driscoll would have then felt comfortable in choosing an Augustinian if he chose to do so."

"In truth, the Committee gave Father Driscoll only one name and accordingly no choice. To receive a choice was his right and to offer him a choice was their duty. They did not do it. The Committee intended to dictate the choice of the new dean to the President. The President, who wanted the faculty to have the first clean shot at the job, exhibited a patience that was truly admirable," Mulligan concluded.

Convocation For Nurses Debated

By STEPHEN HAGGERTY

A Convocation Ceremony is being planned by faculty members and representatives of the sophomore nursing students. This "coming together" of the students will take place on Sunday, April 22.

Second year nursing students see this ceremony as a chance to show their parents how far they have come in the program and how close they have come as a class. At the ceremony, the students will also pledge themselves to medicine.

Lynn Nelson, sophomore representative, believes the event will strengthen the students' dedication to medicine and increase the pride in what they've accomplished so far.

"The ceremony will show our families and friends what we have done as nursing students," explained Nelson. "The second year is the most difficult. If by April you're still in nursing, then you've cleared the biggest obstacle."

Initially, there was some misunderstanding as to what the ceremony should be. Some students though it was going to be a capping ceremony.

Dean of Nursing, Louise Fitzpatrick, was in favor of some kind of ceremony but not one that included capping.

"Capping is not a tradition for professional university programs," Dean Fitzpatrick explained. "The idea of capping is a remnant of the three year technical programs. Some students thought that we should have something similar to a capping, but it is really inappropriate."

Fitzpatrick cited the nursing programs at Brown University and the University of Pennsylvania as examples. Neither of these schools has a capping ceremony.

"In most hospitals today, you will find that nurses don't even wear their caps anymore since they tend to get in the way," stated Fitzpatrick.

Nelson and fellow representative Patricia Murphy met recently to find out the kind of event the nursing students would like to have. Nursing students were concerned that since there was not going to be a capping ceremony there would be no ceremony at all.

"Dean Fitzpatrick was really in favor of the students having some kind of ceremony. She just though that it should be appropriate to our professional stiuation. This is where the misunderstanding arose," Nelson stated.

The ceremony, which will be intertwined with a Mass, is being arranged with the help of Rev. Raymond Jackson O.S.A., director of Campus Ministry.

Villanova nurses look forward to practical hospital experience complementing their academic work.

Engineers To Convene

The President of the National Academy of Engineering, Courtland Perkins, will be a participant in Villanova's First Annual Engineering Convocation on February 22, 1979.

The convocation is one of a number of special events planned by the university in observance of National Engineers' Week, February 16-24.

Held each year near the birthday of America's first recognized engineer, George Washington, National Engineers' Week serves as a way to call public attention to the roles of engineers and their contributions to technology, as well as to create interest in engineering as a profession.

The week begins with Villanova's participation on February 16 in the Delaware Valley Engineering Society's proclamation luncheon, the function officially opening the week in the Delaware Valley. Two of the University's students have submitted original work to a competition whose winners are announced during the luncheon ceremonies. A Villanova freshman was among lst year's honored students.

Back on campus, many of Villanova's 900 engineering students (15 percent of the total undergraduate population) and faculty will be taking part in career development activities and panel discussions. They will also be introducing future engineering students to the campus, discussing engineering with high school teachers and counselors, and exhibiting projects throughout the campus.

The college of engineering is also sponsoring its first annual convocation. It is a two-part program, consisting of an open house and public lecture by a distinguished engineer. This year's special guest is Dr. Courtland Perkins, who will speak at 2 p.m. in the Field House following a state of the college address by College of Engineering Dean Robert D. Lynch.

Dr. Perkins was named president of the National Academy of Engineering, a subdivision of the National Academy of Sciences, in 1975. Since 1956, he has worked with the United States Air Force in various capacities, and is now a senior scientist of the U.S.A.F. Scientific Advisory board. He is also an associate dean of the school of engineering and applied science at Princeton University.

Tollefson Talks

By DENNIS BONNER

Action News' Sports Director Don Tollefson addressed a crowd of approximately eighty Villanova students in Saint Mary's auditorium last Tuesday night. The talk was sponsored by the Dean of Men and organized by Kevin Connors, a resident assistant in Austin Hall.

Tollefson, who had replaced Joe Pellegrino as the Channel 6 sports anchor, was greeted by a "Bring back Pellegrino" sign as he took the stage. His good natured response to the barb set the tone for the remainder of the evening.

A Stanford University product, Tollefson got his big break in the television industry as ABC's College Football sideline commentator. He was hired by Channel 6 in Philadelphia, an ABC affiliate, at the tender age of twenty one. In four years has taken over as Sports Director, a rapid ascent from his first assignment as sportscaster covering a Cub Scout Pinewood Auto Derby.

In his talk, Tollefson pointed out many of the positive aspects of his job, including the recognition he receives from the public and his six figure salary.

He also spoke of the many negative factors of the job. He cited the intense pressure created by the ratings, the insecurity, lack of privacy, and the twelve hour work days.

The lively question and answer period was centered on the local sports scene. Phillies manager Danny Ozark was the topic of much of the discussion. Tollefson, a long time Ozark critic, said, "I don't think any Ozark managed team will ever win the World Series."

Tollefson fielded a number of questions on pro basketball, and expressed displeasure over the style of NBA play. He cited former 76er Lloyd "All World" Free as typifying the individualistic NBA player, who, in his opinion, will ruin pro basketball. Tollefson added,"I also can't see the Sixers winning the NBA title."

Addressing the subject of area colleges, Tollefson blamed insufficient coverage of the area colleges on a lack of broadcast time. However, he emphatically disagreed with the theory that this lack of coverage is hurting local recruiting. "I can't see how ten or twenty minutes a month of Villanova' highlights will affect their recruiting.", He blamed the loss of top basketball prospects on the poor recruiting tactics of the Big Five coaches.

possibly in fact for his unilateral decision making process.

Father McCarthy's response was to reassert that apart from consulations, implications of the changes were the responsibility of the President and the Board of Trustees.

Dr. Langran recalled, "Father McCarthy was not a particular fan of the Senate and he didn't agree with most of the resolutions which the Senate passed.

"Father McCarthy always wanted what was best for Villanova though in different ways from those of the Senate. It was difficult because there were many ideological differences," Langran added.

Assessing Villanova now, Father McCarthy noted that the University has changed since his administration.

Alerted to the fact that many issues, such as visitation and student and faculty decision making involvement are the same, McCarthy said, "Issues that pertain to student discipline, such as parietals, or to faculty input, will more or less keep on occurring and change only in emphasis. These issues are never going to be completely resolved."

Father McCarthy listed inflation and balancing the budget as the major problems facing Villanova today.

"With his insider's knowledge of Villanova, Father McCarthy's insights will be especially valuable to the Board members not particularly familiar with Villanova," Langran noted.

Yes, You Can Come Home Again

By PAUL F. VIGGIANO

Education is not preparation for life; education is life itself.
John Dewey

A student spends four years at Villanova, a fraction of his total life. It is up to the student as to whether those four years feel like four centuries or four days. Either way, Villanova will have made a lasting impression on the individual, an unexplainable force that makes a graduate look back and see what a short span of time can accommplish.

Robert J. Capone, newly appointed Alumni Director, had the opportunity to remember his days at Villanova (Class of '62). "It was a different environment for me since I was raised in South Philadelphia, the Garden Spot of America. The people weren't so much different because you meet good people everywhere. It was new and the fact that after every football practice I got a clean pair of sweat socks and a clean shirt and towel was something. I couldn't believe that you didn't have to take your dirty clothes home with you everyday after practice. That was a revelation!"

During his college days, Capone was publicity director for a group known as "Turf and Tinsel." He explains, "It was an all male production that consisted of a week of shows that was climaxed during Junior Week. On Sunday evening it was 'Mother's Night'. All of the mothers would come in and we would pack the Fieldhouse. Junior Week was probably the biggest single week I can remember enjoying at Villanova." It wasn't serious theater, but it was fun."

"...We have enough to be Villanova and From that Standpoint, we don't have to take a back seat to anyone in the country..."

As for that unexplainable force, Capone has another term for it — a thread. "Students are brighter and more open but I also think that there is a basic thread that runs through the Villanova student. Honesty and sincerity are part of the framework, the fabric of our place. Psychologically, I think we get that from the Augustinians. They were strict, fair and very good educators."

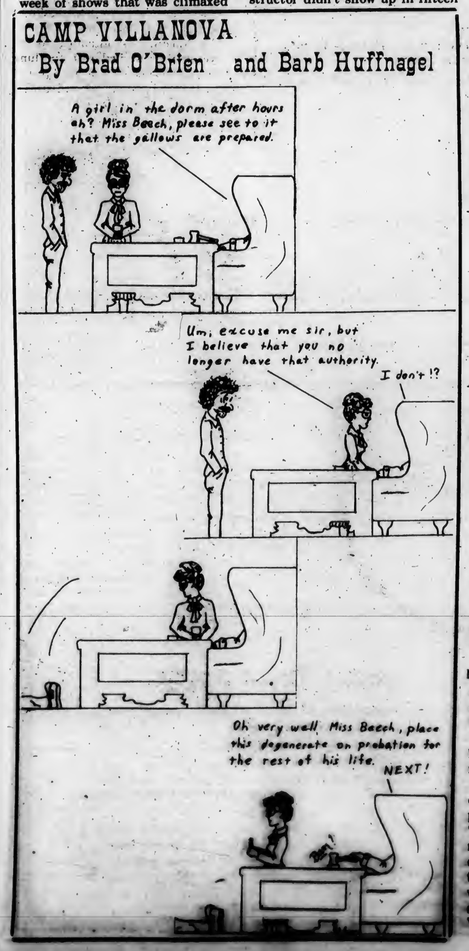
What were the students like in the early sixties? "In my time, we were kind of passive. The most demanding students were the Korean Vets, who were very serious. Today, if an instructor doesn't show in ten or fifteen minutes, the students leave. Well when I was in school, if the instructor didn't show up in fifteen minutes and hadn't notified us, the Vets would go to the dean and complain. These people had a job and a family to support and, if a teacher wasn't going to be in, they wanted to know.

"The freshmen were freshmen. We participated in our own league, our own team and a camaraderie developed between us that doesn't always exist in today's athletes. The main reason is that they are integrated immediately with the varsity. I don't know if that is a good or bad thing, individuals are different. Another thing that has changed is drop and add. Back in the sixties, drop and add did not even exist (pity the thought) and whatever courses you were given were very permanent."

Many of Capone's college memories deal with the always colorful Jake Nevin. "When I worked with the athletic department, the problem of facilities always arose. That is tinsel and we are dealing with character, we are dealing with people. Take Jake Nevin. If you come to Villanova and play sports and become involved, you will remember Jake Nevin the rest of your life. The very first time I met Jake, he put his cigar out in my hand and being of Italian Heritage, I used to have some hair there."

As Alumni Director, Capone must deal with the past, that is, the graduates of Villanova. He is the channel of communications between the alumni and the University. The Alumni office has a file of 38,000 graduates and about 12% move each year. Maintaining these files is a very important duty because they are used by various campus offices including clubs and orgainizations. Capone states, "My purpose is to get as many Villanovans as I can back into the folds and stay active and keep an interest. There are an awful lot of good Villanova people out there. The Class of '30 and the Class of '80 have many things in common, that thread, and it's up to me to tie it.

"I have received many things from Villanova. When you are done, you sit back and look back to what you had, and it is something very good. We have a good thing going and we really don't have to beat anybody else. We have enough to be Villanova and from that standpoint, we don't have to take a back seat to anyone in the country." Here, Here.



Parody Place

A "Hard Hat" View Of Villanova

By TONY CENTONE

For those of you who haven't noticed yet, there's a great deal of construction going on in the center of campus. No kidding! This huge edifice is beginning to appear where once there was nothing but an empty Sullivan field. Maybe you've noticed it's become quite difficult to travel from the north end of campus to Bartley without going through or around Dougherty. Or maybe you've become aware that there's less "chain room" to sit on between Kennedy and Dougherty, far less than there was last May. If this hasn't been enough to convince you, try standing in the "Quad" some afternoon and yelling — "Construction workers shave their legs." This is sure to bring an immediate response, quite probably in the form of bricks and 2x4's.

"...try standing in the Quad some afternoon and yelling-'Construction Workers Shave their legs'..."

I recently had the privilege of conducting an interview with some of the so-called "hard-hats" working on the Connelly Center and I asked them their views toward Villanova students. What contact, if any, they had with students and what was their opinion of the "Villanova collegiate?" Here's how it went:

"Excuse me, sir," I said to a burly man of about 40, standing on a scaffold wearing enough clothing to keep the entire Villanova security crew warm.

"Whads' ya want kid?" he returned in a deep and commanding tone.

"Well," I said, my voice cracking as though I was at the peak of my puberty once again, "I'm from the Villanova school newspaper," I said, returning to a deeply exaggerated voice as though not to be intimidated, "and we're doing an article on the construction workers' views toward Villanova students. I was wondering how do you feel about the students here at the big V.U.?"

"Where?"

"Uh, at Villanova."

"Oh, well, I don't know. The girls are pretty I guess."

"Yes, and how do you feel about the students having a 'Rathskeller' built on campus?"

"Huh, oh fine I guess. Yeh, come to think of it the girls are pretty foxy."

"I see . . . And have you had any specific encounters with students that you'd like to share with our readers?"

"What . . . well yeh, come to think of it. The other day I saw this gorgeous blonde walk by, you see, and I whistled, you see, and then she turned around and smiled."

"I see. Well, thank you very much. I'm sure our readers will appreciate your candid comments."

I then moved on to another gentleman who was quite a bit older and was shouting instructions to a man below.

"Hey Charley, move them pilings a little bit to the left."

"Excuse me, sir. I'm . . . "

"I know, you're the new apprentice. Start working on those floor boards and I'll be with you in a sec' . Hey, what are you doing with that pad and pencil anyway? This ain't no classroom."

"No sir, you see I'm not a worker. I'm from the Villanovan and . . . "

"The what? Hey, if you're from one of them licensing bureaus you got the wrong guy. Ask for Vito, second camper on the left."

"No sir, you see the Villanovan is Villanova's school newspaper. We want to get the opinions of some of the workers here at Connelly Center toward Villanova students."

"You mean you gonna' print what I say in the newspaper?"

"Perhaps sir, yes."

"Will my name be in it. too?"

"I got a wife, three children, eight grandchildren . . . "

"Sir, we'd just like your opinion . . . "

"Kids names are Tommy, he's got . . . "

"Congratulations sir, but what we'd really like to know is . . . "

"I think I got a few pictures here in my wallet . . . "

"That's great sir, but what I really need to know is . . . "

"Yeh, I know, and I been working for this here firm 35 years, you see . . . "

Villanova's Decision-making Process

We Must Give It A Chance

In two seemingly unrelated articles this week, one of those issues which lingers in the attic of Tolentine or the minds of those who fancy themselves campus politicos has resurfaced unexpectedly, well before its usual resurrection with campaign battles, budget fights or Senate evaluations — the perennial rites of spring.

Dr. John J. Mulligan of the modern languages department has responded to an article in the January 26 issue of The Villanovan, "Who Makes the Decisions," which examined the dean selection process in the College of Arts and Sciences. And members of the University community, both past and present, have reacted to last Monday's announcement of former President the Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O.S.A.'s election to Villanova's Board of Trustees.

The 1978-79 Blue Book proclaims that the University Senate "offers an opportunity to become involved in the policy-making decisions of Villanova . . . " and that the "S.G.A. performs the double role of providing student representation in the formulation of University policies and expanding student services."

Yet, when the eight member, tri-partite dean search committee seeking a replacement for the Rev. Richard Breslin in Arts and Science submitted two names to Father President John M. Driscoll, their recommendations were bypassed in favor of an Augustinian. And neither students nor faculty were consulted when Father McCarthy, one of Villanova's most controversial presidents in recent years, was placed on the Board.

We are, of course, looking at only two situations, and we may be overlooking a failure in the student-faculty decision-making process which gave the administration cause to veto their recommendations — as Dr. Mulligan contends, the dean search committee may simply have not done its job.

If that is true, it points to a glaring flaw in the system. If members of the student body or the faculty are not willing to bear the responsibility of proposing realistic, constructive solutions to University problems, the administration is justified in its actions.

If, on the other hand, the administration and the Board of Trustees believe that student/faculty committees are not doing their job, whether that belief is justified or not, nothing can be accomplished. If Father President and the Board approach decisions of import with the preconceived idea that student/faculty recommendations should be regarded with a skeptical eye, a truly representative decision can never be reached.

The S.G.A. has fought to put a student representative on the Board for several years and has met unrelenting rejection at each attempt. Now we see yet another committee decision bypassed, another name added to a Board of Trustees which has been criticized for its lack of big fund-raisers without campus-wide consultation.

Is it time to revise the Blue Book's description of the University's decision making process? We hope not. We believe the system outlined in the Blue Book, if given a chance, can make countless positive contributions to Villanova.

We must utilize the resources at our disposal.

We must give it a chance.

Most students have heard the words "Catch-19" but how many really know what it is? This week in order to measure student interest in this effort, On Campus asked students 1) What is Catch-19? and 2) What do you think about its efforts to lower the drinking age? Here are the results:

"It's about alcohol and raising the drinking age to 19. I'd get involved because I come from New Jersey where the drinking age is 18. I think we would be a lot better off if we had a pub on campus."

Greg Loncola, Junior

"No, I don't. I think it would be worthwhile. I'd like to see what type of people would show. If they are intelligent or responsible or what. I would definitely like to see the age lowered."

Liz McMurtrie, Junior

"I think it's a good idea they just don't seem to be getting any place. I would get involved. The administration does care and I think the students should."

Dana Thonet, Freshman

"It's the act to change the drinking age. I think it's a good idea. I think I would get involved if they made a serious effort."

Dave Schmidt, Sophomore

"I know what it is. It's people from Villanova who go to Harrisburg to change the drinking age to 19. I feel there's a good and a bad side to it but I think it's good that the students get involved with the government."

Tom Powers, Senior

"I know what it is. It's a student attempt to speak out against the drinking laws. I don't think the students listen too much."

Jule Roberts, Sophomore

"Catch-19 was the Villanova organization to lower the drinking age to 19. It was a good idea but it's too bad not enough went out for it. But I think they have the power to do it."

Peggy Spath, Senior

"I know what it is. I think the Student Government went out of their way. Last year I was on the alcohol committee but the students didn't go for it. I think they are too apathetic."

Vincent Caprio, Senior

University Bureaucracy

Dear Sir:

A fact little known by students, faculty and administration is the current state of affairs in the Dean of Men's office at Villanova.

Since the beginning of this academic year approximately 25 percent of this staff have fallen to resignation, forced resignation or firing. For those who realize the necessity of stability in this area, the statistics would seem alarmingly high. Coupled with the unusually low returning rate of last year's R.A.'s the problem appears to becoming acute.

A question needs to be asked here, as well as answered: What is happening to this previously stable segment of the University? As I see it there are three possibilities: 1) new staff, 2) V.U. Regs, or 3) internal mis-management. Having been familiar with this department for the past four years I am certain the first two, while likely, are not, in fact, the root of this problem. Various segments of the department frequently know not what the others are doing. As a result either important items are either overlooked and passed over while minute details are given overwhelming attention.

Consistency, forthrightness and fairness, once expected virtues of this office have long since disappeared. It is time for this University to reassess the value of those who have become entrenched in its bureaucracy. Hopefully cleaning out those who fail to perpetuate the true spirit of V.U.

Sincerely,
A Concerned Alumni

Van Service

Dear Sirs:

On a frigid cold day in early February, a few friends and I stopped an empty security van and asked if we could get a ride from Dougherty to O'Dwyer Hall. We were told that only girls and injured males could ride in the van.

If these vans aren't going to service those who pay for them, what are they used for — transportation of drugs? Seeing how girls are supposedly the weaker sex I would gladly relinquish my place on the van for one of them, but now I see why a large percentage of Villanova girls resemble Sumu wrestlers.

There is no sane reason for denying us males a ride. Girls don't pay any more tuition, so they should get no extra considerations.

Whatever happened to Title IX? Does it only apply when it favors women? Let's have a little equality, by discontinuing this "service" and doing something constructive with our tuition, or allowing both males and females to ride the van.

Villanova Security

Dear Editor:

Allow me to relate an incident that occurred last week. It was 3:20 p.m. and I was in Alumni Gym trying to warm up for an intramural basketball game that was due to take place at 3:30. As one of my corner jumpers fell short I heard a door open, slam shut and a very loud voice bellow out "Okay, let's have them ID, meal card or room keys. Let's go!"

Well glory be, if it wasn't Frank Cummings, Snow White of Villanova security. Now I have interviewed Frank in the past for this publication and I know very well that he can speak in clear, logical sentences and in a normal speaking voice. But why must he continually play the part of the tough guy? When Frank plays the tough guy, the students, being college students, tend to rebel. He should realize that a pleasant demeanor can accomplish miracles. I don't know whether it's an ego kind of thing or his job (you know what they say about men in uniform) but I seriously think that Fearless Frank should seek some professional help. (Maybe he can join the Conrail conductors in some transactional analysis classes.)

After Frank had wreaked his havoc, including a near fight, he called us aside to explain. He mentioned that there have been many non-Villanovans playing ball on campus and by checking ID's he is helping us. Fair enough, but why wait until you have flared everyone's temper to tell us? It would have been much simpler if this bit of information was stated before the tough guy routine. That's about it, except for the fact that we lost the game. As a matter of fact, both of them, but we do want a rematch against Frank.

Sincerely,
Paul F. Viggiano

CENTER FOR CONCERN

Don't Sleep With J. P. Stevens

By ELLEN KEMEZNA

J. P. Stevens Company, the second largest textile manufacturer in the country, has a record of discriminatory hiring practices, safety violations, tax evasion, and resistance to unionization efforts (documented by federal agencies), which is second to none.

Brown lung disease, an undeniable threat to all textile workers, is an even greater threat in J. P. Stevens plants, where the levels of cotton dust far exceed the permissible level under the Occupational Safety and Health Act standard.

The Stevens Company is also under investigation by the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission for alleged multiple violations of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

For over 15 years, the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers' Union (A.C.T.W.U.) has been working to help organize Stevens' employees. Not only has the company fired union supporters, but has also committed over 1200 violations of the National Labor Relations Act, and has been found guilty of well over 100 cases of illegal activity by the National Labor Relations Board.

Due to this offensive record of labor violations, hundreds of church groups (including the Southeast Bishops, National Assembly of Women Religious, National Federation of Priests' Councils, and National Assembly of Religious Brothers), universities (for example, Temple and Princeton) and other national organizations have united with the A.C.T.W.U. in a nationwide boycott of J. P. Stevens products are sold under the following labels: Beauti-Blend, Beauticale, Fine Arts, Peanuts, Tastemaker, Utica, Mohawk, Yves St. Laurent, Angelo Donghia, Forstmann, Contender, Gullistan, Merryweather, Simitex, Finesse, Hip-Lets, and Spirit.

"...Brown lung disease...is an even greater threat in J.P. Stevens plants..."

The A.C.T.W.U. in Philadelphia is especially concerned with the fact that Gimbels and Strawbridge's continue to sell J. P. Stevens.

Note: Mur. Gene Carroll of the A.C.T.W.U. will be on hand to answer questions on the boycott and show an excerpt from "60 Minutes" on the J. P. Stevens controversy on Tuesday, February 13, at 2:30 p.m. in Tolentine Room 215.

Vasey's Spring Season opens with:

A Doll's House

Daniel Baker and Alice Mazurie in "A Doll House."

By JOHN GREEN

The Villanova Theater is currently reviving A Doll's House, Ibsen's classic play dealing with the rights of individuals — particularly women — in a society which recognizes social forms as paramount in human relationships, rather than the need for growth and expression of the person. This controversial play opened in 1879, and although it is in some respects a social melodrama, it has lost little of its power in the intervening century. Its vitality stems from the fact that it focuses on the perennial danger that we may base our lives on an illusion rather than the truth.

Judging from a viewing of the dress rehearsal, I would say that SuzAnne Barabas' centennial production at Vasey Theater is a solid, thoughtful one. Dave Hearn's set is striking; I believe it is the most elaborately realistic one in the history of Vasey Theater. It is a multi-functional cutaway of two floors of an apartment, combining the "invisible fourth wall" convention with the suggestion of a child's doll's house. The props, as well as Director Barabas' costumes, depict the solidity and weight of the furnishings and decor of the period, perhaps suggesting the massiveness and weight of social convention. (On a minor note, black does not seem right for Mrs. Linde; her husband has been dead three years. Gray might be appropriate to suggest her state of mind.)

The performance was also solid, with a few annoying flaws which may be ironed out. For one thing, the pacing was rather slow, particularly in the first act. It's true that the pace should pick up as the play proceeds, but parts of the first act drag. Nora is played attractively, with strength and competence, by Alice Maguire, but we don't see why Torvald, her husband, calls her his "lark" and "songbird." She could at least hum, as the stage directions indicate. Again, her outburst "Damn — damn — damn it all!" should be delivered with more spirit, expressing a suddenly realized exasperation. Nor is her rehearsal of the "Tarantella" dance lively enough to warrant Torvald's solicitous "Not so violent — calm yourself, dear!"

Except for a few forceful outbursts, Jeff Musmanno plays the luckless Nils Krogstad in a monotonous shuffle. Like most of the play, his tempo should be more rapid. (Even though he is a little seedy, he is nevertheless a competent employee at the bank, and even Torvald grants that he is a hard worker. Especially in the third act, when he achieves the promise of happiness with Kristine Linde, he should brighten up.) There are moments when he shows what he could do if he were at ease in his role.

Danny Baker plays Torvald as an almost complete ass. It must be granted that Ibsen is guilty of leaving an actor little leeway in this role. He sets up a straw man to be knocked down, as he does again with Pastor Manders in Ghosts. Still, I think perhaps more of an effort could be made to make this character more humanly believable. I believe that it is this role which makes the play more of a social-problem drama rather than a domestic tragedy. It must be added, though, that the role of Torvald, like the play itself, picks up as the action proceeds, until both culminate in the explosive third act. Even for Torvald, there is hope of redemption.

In general, there was a tendency for the actors, particularly in Acts One and Two, to swallow some key lines that require subtle stress, such as Torvald's ironic statement, "There can be no freedom or beauty in a home that depends on borrowing and debt."

Bernard Schaaf III plays the dying father-figure Dr. Rank with a deliberate listlessness. Susan Trimble was very good as Kristine Linde. Like Krogstad, these major but secondary characters develop the sub-theme that the patterns of the past tend to repeat themselves in the present, and that our actions often have unforeseen consequences, deeply affecting other people.

If you want to see a somewhat flawed but imaginative production of a seriously flawed but powerful play, this reviewer strongly recommends that you go to Vasey Theater tonight or tomorrow night, or Wednesday through Saturday next week. All performances start at 8 p.m. Student price is two dollars on Wednesdays and Thursdays; three on Fridays and Saturdays.

The Fieldhouse to Host Kinderhook

By John Arness

On Saturday, Feb. 10, KINDERHOOK brings their substantial musical talent to the stage of the Villanova Fieldhouse in a concert sponsored by the Union. Appearing with them is Villanova's own Steve Merritt Band. The Concert begins at 8:00 p.m. and tickets are available in the CIC — $3 general admission/$2 V.U. ID.

Kinderhook is a six piece band hailing from New Jersey where they have been polishing and refining their act for about seven years to reach their present state of excellence. Their efforts have yielded a unique sound which does not quite fit into a stock category but is perhaps best termed "country-flavored rock." Their music selection is diverse, highlighted by tight three and four part harmonizing, and smooth energetic tradeoffs between standout pedal steel guitarist Stan Taylor, fiddler Yuri Turchyn, and lead guitarist Joe Breitenbach.

Although best known and loved as a New Jersey bar band, Kinderhook is merely biding time before moving onward and upward. They have played at the Capitol Theater in Passaic, The Other End in New York, the New England Folk Festival in Maine, and The Palladium in New York to name a few, along with turning in impressive performances as opening acts for the likes of Pure Prairie League, The New Riders, Poco, and the Outlaws.

Even though Kinderhook has been together for so long, sometimes playing twenty nights a month, they have lost none of their enthusiasm on stage. Their emotionalism is successfully transmitted to their audiences, most notably after bass player Andy Fediw dons his hat and they get down to serious business with such songs as "Thunderbird," "The Fast One" and "Sundance." So come judge for yourself February 10 at the Fieldhouse. The show promises to be one of the best concerts you will attend this year.

Cheech and Chong at Music Fair

By STEPHEN M. CASTELLANO

Two of the original masters of funny stuff will be appearing at Valley Forge Music Fair on February 23. I'm not talking about Steve Martin, Bill Cosby, or Rich Little . . . but Cheech and Chong.

Cheech and Chong, supposedly their real names, have been around for quite some time even before they recorded their first album "Big Bambu" for Ode Records. The big hit from "Big Bambu" is "Sister Mary Elephant" and "Lets Make a Dope Deal." When this album first hit the market I was a junior in High School and the album was taboo according to the Catholic School Authorities but that made it even more fun to play the album on the library record players.

Before recording their first album Cheech and Chong were doing the night club circuit until a producer spotted them and signed them up. They have been holding their own ever since. However, they have not released an album for several years now, it is possible that they may come out with a "live album" from their current tour.

Some of their albums on Ode Records are "The Wedding Album", "Big Bambu", "Los Cochinoes", and "Sleeping Beauty". Cheech and Chong aren't quite the Ramblin Guy buth they should be amusing to all.

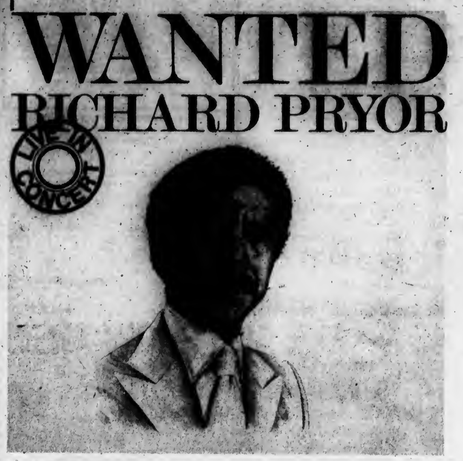
How In Sound



By ED ENDERS
and CHRIS RAFANO

One "boring" Friday night at Villanova as the boys were downing beers and scoffing pizzas, we heard a voice echoing down the hallway, followed by roaring laughter. We listened for a second and then realized who it was. Yes, it was Richard Pryor, with his four letter word vocabulary, racial jokes and uninhibited style. The album is called "Wanted: Richard Pryor." It is a live album recorded from his latest tours in New York, Washington, D.C., Chicago and L.A. It is a two record set, and all of the material he uses is new. The concerts performed in L.A. were given free of charge, due to a court ruling because of his arrest for shooting his wife's car. The album opens with a brief comical description of the shooting incident. From there on the album continues in Pryor's usual dirty but funny style.

Listening to this album, one can hardly help but to laugh at his treatment of everyday situations, ranging from Leon Spinks being busted for 'a dolla an fifty cents wortha cocaine" to a stuttering Chinese waiter, and what we feel is his funniest skit about the famous football runningback Jim Brown. Richard Pryor changes his versatile voice to fit the situations, describing a man wanting to commit suicide, so he says "I can't find a building to jump off, let's go to Jim Brown's house and &*?★ %/ with him." Upon reflection we would recommend the album to anyone who enjoys Richard Pryor's style of comedy. This is obviously one of his funnier albums. So if you're doing nothing on a Friday night at V.U. (what else is new), why don't you put on the Wanted: Richard Pryor album and sit back, drink a few beers, and get set for a couple hours of laughter.

EARN OVER $600 A MONTH FOR THE REST OF YOUR SENIOR YEAR.

If you are interested in math, physics or engineering, the Navy has a program you should know about.

It's called the NUPOC-Collegiate Program (NUPOC is short for Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate), and if you qualify it can pay you as much as $611 a month for the remainder of your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you will receive an additional year of advanced technical education. Education that would cost thousands in a civilian school, but in the Navy we pay you.

It isn't easy. Only one of every six applicants will be selected, and there are fewer than 300 openings. But those who make it find themselves in one of the most elite engineering training programs anywhere. With unequalled hands-on responsibility, a $24,000 salary in four years, plus travel, medical benefits and education opportunities. (Juniors eligible to apply after first semester)

For more details on this program, ask your placement officer when a Navy representative will be on campus, or call the Officer Program Office listed below.

Amos Korir Sets Mark In Two-Mile

By JOHN COOK

The organizer of the Princeton Relays, should be upset. Everything written prior to the meet seemed to indicate that it was a pre-Millrose Games practice, not really a meet. As far as the athletes competing were concerned, it was an important meet.

Notably absent from last Sundays' meet at Jadwyn Gym was Villanova's undefeated two-mile relay team. Leadoff man Mike England, a frosh from Allison Park, Pennsylvania, had become this year's victim of the Villanova track team stress fracture syndrome, following in the footsteps of Sydney Maree and Don Paige. Mike, who hopes to be back in time for the NCAA meet, had run consistently strong leadoff legs all year and will definitely be missed.

Of the relay teams that did run for Villanova, the distance medley was the most powerful, thanks largely to junior Don Paige.

Dean Childs, a gutty little junior from Canada, ran a solid half mile leadoff leg and handed off to John Hunter, an Irish frosh specializing in the half mile, for the quarter mile leg. John also ran a good leg but due to some confusion in the exchange zone, Don got the baton 60 yards behind at the start of the 3/4 mile leg. This didn't seem to bother Don very much as he ran the fastest 3/4 mile leg in memory and handed off in the lead to senior John Burns who brought Villanova across the tape in 9:47.7.

Also taking first was the sprint medley team of Willie Sydnor (440), Keith Brown (220), Tim Dale (220) and Anthony Tufarielo (880) in a time of 3:26.2.

Timmy and Keith went on to join Al Graves and Derrek Harbour on Villanova's mile relay team and finished second to Maryland in that race. This was the first head to head loss to another collegiate team for the mile relay and I dare say the last. The time of 3:13.8 was among their slowest of the year and not at all indicative of their capabilities.

Amos Korir was the only other runner to compete and he handily won the two mile run in a meet record time of 8:42.2.

Also setting a meet record was triple jumper Nate Cooper. Nate, four time IC4A triple jump champ, uncorked a jump of 16.43 meters (53'11") to pace the field.

Also of interest was Brian Dalatri's toss in the shot put of over 50 feet. Although he didn't place, Brian's toss of 50' 1-1/2" seems to be the start of Villanova's resurgence in the field events. Brian and javelin thrower Bob Bizzaro, should bring a lot of valuable and unexpected points to the team this spring.

The Wildcats will highlight the Millrose games at Madison Square Garden, New York, Friday night.

Swimmers Split

By BRUCE MURRAY

The Men's Swimming Team broke into the top 20 in the East last week with a 62-51 victory over previously eighth ranked Drexel. The dunking of the Dragons moved the Watercats into the number 17 spot. But the Cats were not as fortunate against the highly talented, undefeated (9-0) and seventh ranked Fordham team losing 75-38. "Everyone swam super times in both meets," said Coach Geisz, "but in the Fordham meet they just had too much talent."

The Drexel meet went down to the final event, the 400 yard freestyle relay, in which the quartet of Jerry Byrne, Kevin Quinn, Lou Petrozziello and Eric Wenger pulled out the victory. The fired-up Cats set the stage early in the meet as the medley relay beat a strong Drexel relay for the win. The Dragons were stunned. Co-Captain Wenger produced his usual three first places, and sophomore Bob Baltera won both the 100 and 200 freestyles. Baltera swam his best times in both events, swimming the 100 free in 47.7 seconds. Senior Ted Klinges won both diving events and senior Lou Petrozziello swam well in the final relay. Freshman Dan Ahern set a new school record in the 100 backstroke (55.1) in leading off the medley relay; Ahern also did well in the 200 backstroke.

The Watercats "shaved down" for the Drexel meet, and came up with that psychological edge they had been searching for. The Cats will need that edge again this week when they swim another talented opponent, Temple.

"The victory over Drexel put us back on the right track, and we're off and running now," said Coach Geisz. "If we hang tough we should beat Temple. Temple is the same type of team we are," he continued, "so psyche and emotion will be the big factors. Whoever wants this meet the most will win it."

Today the team travels up to West Point for a clash on the Hudson. It will be a tough meet for the Watercats since Army is one of the best teams in the nation.

Eagles To Play Villanova

By PETER J. RYAN

The Philadelphia Eagles to do battle with the Villanova football team? Well, almost. Fifth year head coach Jim Thompson and the women's track team have attained the services of the two respective squads in a benefit basketball game in an effort to defray the cost of airfare and accommodations for a meet at the University of Hawaii.

This is the second such trip for the team to Hawaii and Thompson hopes to bring 12 to 15 girls to compete. "We usually overspend our budget and these benefits are the only way we can meet the costs of trips like this one," comments Thompson.

Besides the February 22, (7:30 p.m.) meeting between the Eagles and the Wildcats the female tracksters have also engineered raffles, a disco dance and a hoagie sale to supplement their budget and enable them to attend other meets.

At $2.00 a seat general admission, the team expects a sellout and have been given the go ahead to allow an additional 300 spectators in over the 3,000 capacity of the Field House. "We have the support of the Ticket Office and the S.I.D. (Sports Information Department) with regards to publicity for the event," said Thompson "so we expect it to be a success."

The cost of the eight-day, seven night trip will come to $6,500 and the meet itself will take place in late April. Tickets for this benefit game should be on sale today at the Ticket Office located on the ground floor of the Field House.

TKO

By NATE COOPER

The Wildcat Boxing Club will host their first home meet tonight at the fieldhouse. The team was ranked fourth in the country last season and with five veterans returning they should be as strong this season. The veterans includes Coach Joe "TKO" McAllister who was second in the nation in the 147 pound division, and Steve Connely who placed third in the country at 160 pounds. John Kurtz (139,) Pete Ferari (165,) Bret Miller (156,) Mark Heck (130,) and Matt Novak (139) are also returning. To back up the vets are Jim Salvatore, Kevin Gallaghner, Steve Leblanc, Rudi Polombi, and Fran Freeman. Freeman won a decision in his first outing at West Chester last week.

Bret Miller who also had a decision in his favor at West Chester, Mark Heck, "TKO" McAllister, Pete Ferari, Jim Salvatore, Don Graham and Steve Leblanc will be featured in tonight's matches. The first bout is scheduled for 8 p.m.

Track Gals Take Mile Relay

The time has finally come when men are no longer in the spot light. It is time for men to move over and allow a little of the light fall upon women. Women's track at Villanova is making a name for itself this winter.

The team, under the careful guidance of Coach Jim Thompson, traveled to the University of Pittsburgh Invitational this weekend. They came away with an impressive seventh place finish out of 24 schools.

The highlight of the meet came during the two mile relay which Villanova won in 9:17.9. This smashed the Pittsburgh Field House record of 9:51.0 set earlier this year by a Penn State quartet. Jennifer Whitfield (2:.9.4) led off for the Cats, followed by Sue Shea (2:23.1), Brigid Leddy (2:19.3) and anchor-runner Doriane Lambelet (2:16.1).

"I was very pleased with the relay," said Coach Thompson. "It was the first time that the girls had run together as a group and they performed well. We were hoping to break 9:10, but there was no one near us to push us, so we are happy with this time. Jennifer moved up from the quarter and Brigid and Sue moved down from the mile to run. They all ran well."

Villanova also received strong performances from Leddy and Lambelet in the open events. Lambelet won the half mile in 2:12.7 over Paula Clagon of Morgan State by 1.5 seconds. This is Lambelet's best time in indoor or outdoor competitions.

Leddy led for over seven laps of the mile run only to be outkicked by Kim Dunlap of Maryland in the last 100 yards. Both were timed in 4:51.4 but the judges awarded first place to Dunlap. The time was a personal best for both runners, as well as a school record for Villanova's Leddy.

The Wildcats also picked up points from a fifth place finish in the 440-yard dash by freshman Jennifer Whitfield. Whitfield's time of 57.3 qualifies her for the AIAW and the AAU nationals to be held later this month.

Other highlights of the meet included a :25.9 220-yard split for Pat Robinson in the 880 relay, which is the fastest 220 split this year for the team. Katie Thompson also ran two tough races in the two and three mile runs. Because of a judges' error, Katie was forced to run an extra lap in the three mile and her time was not valid. Her time of 12:00 in the two mile qualifies her for the EAIAW Championships to be held in March.

Villanova's Supersports champion, Joint Effort, gives it their best in the tug-of-war event in the State Supersports finals at Widener College last Saturday. The team, which placed first among nearly 20 other teams from Villanova, fared well against five other schools in the state championship. Joint Effort took first places in both the shuttle run and the obstacle course, and went on to finish second overall. They will compete in the Regional Supersports Finals to be held in Maryland on March 3 and 4. Members of Joint Effort, Pictured from right to left are: Bob Leonetti, Lis Sagalnik, Lori Stasse, Ray Tierney, Ellen McDonough, Kathy Leonetti, Tim Shanahan and Jim Boggs.

Let's Go Wildcats

Cagers Clip Nittany Lions

By PATRICK FLYNN

Chapter ten in the saga of Coach Dick Harter versus Villanova is in the books and is very much in keeping with the unpredictable tradition that Eastern basketball fans have come to know so well. Upsets and the unexpected have become almost commonplace regarding this rivalry.

The first surprise took place in 1969, when Harter's University of Pennsylvania club avenged a 75-44 shellacking at the hands of Villanova the year before with a 32-30 edging of Jack Kraft's Wildcats.

Then it was Villanova's turn. The Quakers saw their hopes for the 1971 NCAA championship dashed after a 28-0 season when the Cats humiliated Penn to the tune of 90-47 in the Eastern regionals.

Then in Eugene, Oregon, Coach Harter's Oregon Ducks helped Rollie Massimino's cagers to their most recent losing season with a 116-77 embarassment in the Far West in 1974.

So it should have come as no shock when Harter's upstart Penn State squad gave a strong performance against Eastern Athletic Association leader Villanova last Sunday at Recreation Hall in State College, Pennsylvania.

The Nittany Lions out-shot the Wildcats, 55 percent to 30 percent. They outrebounded Villanova 23-15. They held the Eastern Eight's second leading offense to just ten field goals. And they lost, 36-34.

Sophomore Alex Bradley, who scored half of Villanova's points, sank a pair of free throws with five seconds remaining to give the Wildcats their seventh victory in eight conference games.

Bradley tallied the last six Villanova points, all from the free throw line. He was 12-12 from the stripe, where the Wildcats outscored the Lions, 16-2.

Neither team led by more than two points throughout the game, which was characterized by tough defense and the determined offense of Penn State which dropped to 8-15 on the season, 2-5 in the EAA.

Junior guard Rory Sparrow sent Villanova to the locker room at halftime tied 18-18 when he converted on two free throws with no time left in the first half after being fouled by Penn State's Frank Brickowski.

The teams exchanged infrequent baskets throughout the second half, with the Nittany Lions taking their last lead of the game on a layup by freshman Craig Buffie with 9:06 to go. The Wildcats held Penn State scoreless for the next eight and a half minutes, capitalizing on Bradley's foul shooting to take a 34-32 lead.

Mike Edelman, Penn State's leading scorer at 13 p.p.g. and a freshman guard from Haverford High, ended the drought with a 20-foot fade-away jumper with 35 seconds left to knot the score.

Villanova ran the clock down to under ten seconds, when Sparrow attempted a pass to Bradley at the right side of the lane. The 6'6" product of Long Branch, N.J., was fouled by PSU's senior center, Carvin Jefferson. Following a Penn State time-out, Bradley canned his two shots for the winning margin.

Edelman's 25-footer from the left sideline was short and the Nittany Lion's attempt for a tie was foiled when Villanova's Aaron Howard tied up Brickowski on the carom.

Bradley was also the game's top rebounder, hauling a half-dozen errant shots. In addition, he collected six steals on the way to one of his best all-around performances of the year, despite going 3-10 from the floor.

Sparrow, scoring seven, was the only other Wildcat to tally more than four points. Brickowski and Edelman led Penn State with six points apiece.

Two of Villanova's key performers this year failed to score. Marty Caron, the starting center, and Tom Sienkiewicz, replaced in the starting lineup by freshman Tom Bethea, each were absent from the scoring column.

Villanova's next game is tonight against the rejuvenated Hawks of St. Joseph's. New coach Jim Lynam leads his cagers on to the floor of the Palestra to face the Wildcats at 9:00, following an important Ivy League game between Penn and Columbia. Following tonight's action, the Cats will take on the Penn Quakers Tuesday night, also at the Palestra.

Intramural Hoop Action Is Very Close

By BETH WHITE

The Intramural Basketball League is off to a strong start this year fielding 72 teams, eight fraternity teams and a lot of talent.

In each of the leagues, there is at least one undefeated team and close competition for second and third places in the rankings.

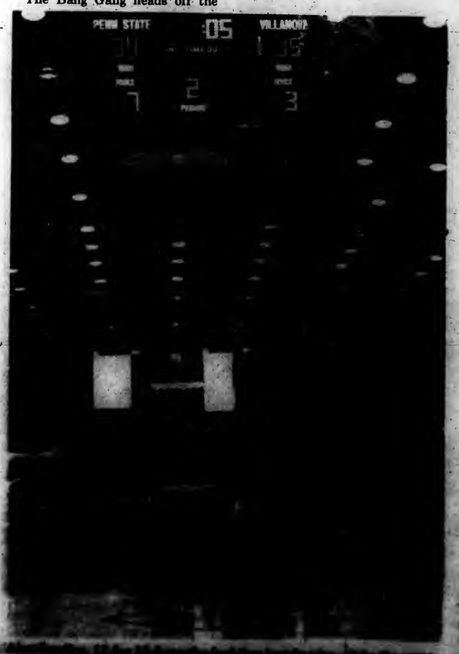
The 3:30 league is dominated by the Cougars, currently 3-0. Phil Farrell, who organizes the leagues, claims that the Cougars are one of the best in all the leagues. Led by point-guard Brian Costello, leading rebounder Tom Powers and captain Steve Crispin, the Cougars have defeated their opponents by scoring almost three times as many points each game. The Bomb Squad (2-0) follows the Cougars and Zeus is third (1-0).

The Bang Gang heads off the 4:30 group, trailed by the Sun Kings (2-0) and the Superstars (1-0). The Sun Kings' team is almost the same one who placed high in the Intramural Football competition.

Express is unbeaten in the 5:30 league, and the 6:30 teams are led by the Ice Men (2-0) and the Wildmen (2-1).

Captain John Caughlin and the Spoas have conquered the 7:30 league, winning all three of their games thus far. With so many undefeated teams, the playoffs this year should be more competitive than last year's.

Last year's champ DTD and the typically strong LKD team are both undefeated in the fraternity league. SPE and DPE are tied for third place with records of 2-1.



Hockey Team Plays Penn State Tomorrow

By MIKE FITZGERALD

Over the previous two weeks, the Villanova Ice Cats have boosted their overall record to 9-6-1 and their Middle Atlantic Collegiate Hockey Association record to 5-2. The Cats are currently in second place behind Penn State, with the showdown game being played this Saturday, February 10, at the Philadelphia Civic Center. This game will probably decide the regular season champs. The Cats and Penn State have split their two previous league matches.

On Thursday, January 5, the V.U. Ice Cats skated away with an 8-5 victory and boosted their league to 5-2.

The Cats next played Wagner College at Radnor Rink on Saturday, January 27, and walked away with a 10-3 victory. The most notable point is that three players scored two goals each: Captain Steve Shorr, senior defenseman Rich Curley and frosh Tommy Curran. The following Thursday, February 1, the Cats played their third consecutive home game at Radnor Rink before an enthusiastic home crowd against Textile. The score was 12-3 with the Cats on top. This was probably the most physical game played so far. The Cars lost an entire line due to fights.

The Cats then took to the road. They traveled to West Point to play the Cadet's J.V. team on February 3. The game started with the Cats jumping off to a quick 3-1 lead in the opening minutes of the first period, but their lead was cut to one goal when the Cadets scored with 30 seconds left in the first period.

At the beginning of the second period, it looked as though fatigue from the bus trip had taken its toll on the Cats. The Cadets capitalized on this and scored three unanswered goals to take the lead 5-3. At the twelve minute mark, the Cats came back to life and showed signs of turning the game around when frosh Tom Carson, substituting as left wing for injured Ray Mateer, scored to cut the Cadets' lead to 5-4. the Cats wound up exchanging goals at the end of the second period and the Cadets skated to the locker room with a 6-5 halftime lead.

When the third period opened, the Cats began outskating, outhustling, and especially outhitting the Cadets at every turn. Even though the Cadets were outshot by a count of 18-6 at this point, the Cats couldn't find the mark. The Cadets skated off with a 7-5 victory by scoring an empty net goal when the Cats tried to score with an extra skater in the closing minute.

This Saturday the Ice Cats are playing Penn State at the Philadelphia Civic Center in what will probably be the most exciting match of the season. This is the Year of the Ice Cats.

Women Hoopsters Continue Road Trip

By TONY PANGONAS

The Villanova women's basketball team traveled south last weekend for three games in three days. The Wildcats defeated Salisbury State 82-75 and Virginia 59-55 before losing to Loyola 77-66. Their record is now 12-5.

Against Salisbury State, the Wildcats used a balanced scoring attack, which included four players in double figures, to achieve their eleventh victory. Lu Ann Krothe led the way with 22 points followed by Lisa Ortlip with 14, Mary Beth Gibson with 13, and Karen Hizney with 12.

Next the Wildcats invaded ACC country by taking on Virginia. The Cats came out of the gates slow and fell behind at halftime 27-19. By using tough defense, they were able to come back to outscore Virginia 40-28 in the second half to pull out the victory.

Villanova was led by top scorer Hiznay with 17 and Straccia with 16. Lisa Ortlip chipped in with 10 points and a team high 9 rebounds.

The weekend ended on a low note with a 77-68 defeat at the hands of Loyola. High scorers for the Cats were again Hiznay and Straccia with 20 and 16, respectively.

Senior Co-Captain Kathy Straccia is rapidly closing in on some individual records. She needs only 11 points to become Villanova's all time leading woman scorer, which is now held by Mary Ellen Boylan who played from 1972-1976 and scored 974 points. Coincidentally, she needs only 11 assists to surpass the season mark of 74 set by teammate Hiznay last year.

The Wildcats remain on the road this week against Big 5 rival La Salle on Tuesday and Princeton on Thursday.

Playoff Tickets

Ticket Manager Bud Mernin announced that tickets will probably go on sale next Wednesday for the First Round of the Eastern Eight Playoffs in the Field House on February 27. Only two tickets per student will be permitted for this game. Student tickets will be $3.00, and $5.00 for adults and children. In order to receive the student price a Matriculation Card, which accompanies the validation sticker must be presented.

Senate To Discuss Student Cheating

By BILL CLARK

The Villanova University Senate will hold its first meeting of the new semester today at 4:00 p.m. in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall. Several important items are on the agenda.

The first order of business will be to hear from the Senate Budget Committee, chaired by Senator A. Clay. The committee is still in the process of finalizing the University Budget for next year and will report on its progress.

The next line of business will be a motion from the Academic Policy Committee, chaired by Senator John J. O'Malley. A motion concerning cheating and plagiarism, which has received unanimous passage in committee, will be proposed.

The motion reads as follows: "Villanova University condemns Cheating and Plagiarism in all forms by any member of the Villanova Community and supports appropriate penalties. The Villanova University Senate recommends to Father President Driscoll that a Procedure on Cheating and Plagiarism be developed, promulgated, and implemented by the University with all deliberate speed. Since it is imperative that any such procedure protect the rights of all concerned parties, it is specifically recommended that the procedure provide appropriate safeguards for the accused, as well as appropriate penalties for violators."

"This motion started in the Academic Policy Committee three years ago," said Dean O'Malley of Arts and Sciences. "This motion is in harmony with the mission of the University. This is merely an expression of philosophy and ethics. There is nothing specific in this motion, but this will be a preface to any future regulations concerning cheating and plagiarism."

Among the other items to be considered is a motion from the Student Life Committee recommending that the area between Sullivan and Sheehan Halls be closed to all vehicular traffic. The purpose of this resolution is to provide an area for students to congregate. Because of the University Center construction, the Mall is unusable for this purpose.

Tuition To Increase

Student Aid To Follow

By JERRY DOUGHERTY

The Villanovan learned Tuesday that undergraduate tuition at Villanova University may increase by approximately 10 percent next year.

The 10 percent figure is a tentative one; it is included in the proposed University budget for the next fiscal year. The Administrative Budget Committee drafted this budget Monday.

If there were to be a 10 percent increase it would boost tuition by $320.

A five percent increase in salary funding for faculty and staff is also called for in the proposed budget. This figure, if it stands, would fall short of the past seven years' average cost of living increase.

Charles B. Dietzler, University controller, commented on one factor which could affect the finalized tuition figure. "If the faculty and staff put pressure on us to raise the salary increase, the funds for it must come from somewhere. In this event the most likely solution would be to raise the tuition increase beyond 10 percent," Dietzler said.

As for any ultimate determination of tuition or salary increases, Dietzler indicated that it wouldn't be made until March at the earliest.

In the tentative budget drawn up on Monday the amount of funds to be allocated to student financial aid is $2,556,400; this computes to a 13.4 percent increase over the $2,253,000 spent during the present fiscal year. Undergraduate day student aid, a sub-division of financial aid, is to be boosted by 13.7 percent to a sum of $1,906,700 in the recently drafted budget.

This proposed budget, as it exists now, contains a net increase of approximately 3.5 percent in funds for student financial aid.

The apparent net increase in student aid supports an opinion held by W. Arthur Switzer, associate director of financial aid. "The administration seems to be receptive to the fact that more dollars will be needed for student financial aid," Switzer said. "I'd hope there would be a more scientific way of allocating part of tuition increases to student aid funds," he added.

When the subject of outside financing was discussed, Switzer expressed hope that the Middle Income Student Assistance Act (MISAA), signed by President Carter, would provide a modest increase in funds for middle income students.

Mr. Switzer is not totally satisfied with Congress' enactment of MISAA. "If the new federal act was fully funded it would have a tremendous effect, but it doesn't seem that Congress and the President are leaning toward full funding," he stated. The "tremendous effect" Switzer speaks of is his estimate that full funding of MISAA would make 4000 students eligible for Basic Grants.

At the present time 600 Villanova students are eligible for funds from the Basic Grant Program.

University Controller Charles B. Dietzler

Switzer does not expect any increases in funding from the Pennsylvania scholarship program.

New Drinking Age Supported

State Rep. John Alden (R-Delaware) said that, as a newly-appointed member of the House Liquor Control Committee, he will be glad to listen to student concerns about regulations and enforcement of the State Liquor Code.

"It is my understanding that there have been many problems in the past between the State Liquor Control Board and university students. I would like to define these problems and try to find out if there are possible solutions to them," Alden said.

The freshman legislator, who is a graduate of Villanova University and Villanova Law School, said he would like to hear from students regarding liquor control issues.

"Since Villanova is in my district, I will have the opportunity of representing you on the Liquor Control Committee in the House of Representatives. I will be one of 23 members on that committee, but I will do my best to provide a voice," the Wayne legislator said.

He noted that the committee is responsible for all legislation that deals with the distribution and consumption of alcoholic beverages. It also oversees the implementation of the rules and regulations of the Pennsylvania Liquor code.

Issues with which the committee is expected to deal this session include legislation to permit the sale of beer in grocery stores, 19-year-old drinking and changing state stores to private enterprise.

Also, reiterating his stand against the legislative pay hike and the Commonwealth Compensation Commission, Alden

Seniors Celebrate Last 100 Days

By MARGUERITE ESMONDE

Villanova sponsored its first on-campus party allowing the consumption of alchohol since an LCB raid on September 14, 1978. Approximately 240 seniors attended the 100 Days Celebration held last Thursday, February 9.

Strict regulations were imposed on the party, requiring proof of age and a Villanova I.D. card to get in, and allowing each senior to bring in either 25 ounces of wine or champagne or 48 ounces of beer. No hard liquor was permitted.

"Everybody was checked at the door and was very cooperative," commented Jim Keale, chairman of Social Functions for the Union.

LCB agents did not attend the party. "They didn't show up at all," Lucy Gorski, program director, said. "There was nothing they could catch us on, since overall, everybody did basically adhere to the policy."

There had been rumors of a boycott by the seniors, protesting the strict alchohol regulations. "We were expecting it, but nothing happened at all," Ms. Gorski stated.

250 students purchased the 50 cent tickets before the party, and 240 of those students attended. "There might have been some that just avoided it from the beginning," Keale remarked.

Asked to evaluate the celebration, senior Tom Park stated, "As far as I'm concerned, it was a success. We needed something like this for class unity. I'd like to see more of them."

"I thought it went over very well," Keale said. "The administration was very happy with it. We hope to do it again, too."

Ms. Gorski commented, "We needed to try it out and see if people wanted it. I consider it really successful."

The Union is now proposing a 79 day celebration for the seniors, although it's still in the planning stage.

"Now that this one went that well, we want to keep it up," Ms. Gorski remarked. "We don't want the campus dry."

Two not-so-dazed seniors enjoy the celebration of their last 100 days.

The National Student Consumer Protection Council will sponsor a lecture by Mr. Frank C. Nicholas, president and chairman of the board of Beechnut Foods Corporation, on the topic of Marketing To The Public Interest; an Executive View. The lecture will be held on February 21 at 12:30 p.m., Bartley 110. All students and faculty are invited to attend.

Nicholas is a graduate of Northwestern University Law School. He has headed Beechnut Foods, makers of Beechnut Baby Foods, since 1973. Nicholas has been recently appointed as the chairman of the Corporate Involvement Committee for the United Nations' International Year of the Child. He will be working with major Fortune 500 corporations and the United Nations to place the concerns of child nutrition at the forefront of world attention during 1979. Nicholas and Beechnut were also recognized with excellence in nutrition awards from the International Preventive Medicine Foundation and the Juvenile Diabetes Association for their consumer efforts.

Liberation Analyzed

By JOSEPH B. FINIO

John Foster Dulles, secretary of state of the Eisenhower Administration was the subject of a lecture presented by Dr. Donald Kelly of Villanova's History Department last Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. The lecture titled "John Foster Dulles — Ideology of Liberation" gave an in-depth view on some of Dulles' positions and actions while secretary of state.

According to Dr. Kelly, Dulles saw Christianity as a driving force against communism and described Eisenhower as "Christ the redeemer against the forces of Godless communism." Although Dulles set the style of foreign diplomacy in the 1950's, Eisenhower had the wisdom to intervene in any action taken by Dulles when he felt Dulles had overstepped his authority. Dulles wanted to bring the force of Christianity into international diplomacy and break the tide of communism.

In a 1956 interview with Life magazine, Dulles publicized what was later to be called Brinksmanship. This was the ability to take every step towards war, including the threat of nuclear weapons without ever getting involved in it. While Dulles thought this method was effective, it had disastrous and serious consequences for those in other parts of the world.

Dulles manipulated ambiguity when throwing out threats to enemies. He implied support but did not promise it for the liberation of Eastern Europe. A case in point is the 1956 Hungarian revolution which pitted rebel Hungarian forces against the communist Russians.

Dulles reacted to the situation in Hungary by persisting in a rhetoric of implication that continued to give hope to freedom fighters. It made the revolutionaries rise up believing they would be receiving help from the United States. The rebel Hungarian forces went down in miserable defeat.

Dulles had the power for stirring up trouble in his actions and even in attempts to explain actions. "This is the only case of a bull I know that carries his china closet with him," commented Winston Churchill.

Dulles greatest misgiving was probably his inability to compromise. He was not criticized for his contempt of communism but for his techniques to rid the world of it. He believed that the peaceful coexistence being exposed by the communists was a rouse to confuse the peaceful Western allies.

Dulles allied himself with Christian leaders of the world. He wanted to hold onto Christian sections in an attempt to block the wave of communism. Dulles believed the brute force of American determination would solve the world's problems.

Later, Dulles became increasingly ill and the world acknowledged that he was dying cancer. An era was passing and Dulles was recognized as a protector from the forces of evil. On his death, Kruchev praised him and Eisenhower said he was the greatest secretary of state he had ever known.

"John Foster Dulles — Ideology of Liberation" was the second in a series of lectures presented by the History Department of Villanova in a course titled "Cold War and Detente." According to Dr. Carrier of the history department, although there are students taking this course for credit, the lectures, which are held every Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Bartley 110 are open to the public. Next week, Professor Kiley will lecture on the "Roots of Cold War in Asia." On Tuesday February 27, Professor Rofinot will give a lecture on "The Vietnam War Era."

Debaters Fall To Penn In Naval Academy Tourney

By DIANE M. MISKEL

The Villanova University Debate Team recently participated in a tournament held at the Naval Academy in Annapolis, Maryland. In the preliminary rounds, the team of senior John Reinerth and freshman Bob Clougherty fared well with a score of 6-2, but in the octafinals they lost to the University of Pennsylvania. In this tournament, John Reinerth received the fourth place speaker award.

The team has been debating the same topic thus far this year, Resolved: The Federal Government should implement programs to guarantee employment opportunities for all U.S. citizens in the labor force.

In January, Villanova hosted a tournament of 56 teams from all along the east coast, which was won by the varsity team from George Mason University. Later that month, Villanova met George Mason at a tournament they hosted, where the team of Larry Maggitti and Laura Proske took second place. Individually, Maggitti and Proske were awarded fourth and second place speaking honors respectively out of 56 speakers.

Before the Christmas break, the team of Bob Clougherty and sophomore Cathy Olanich participated in a tournament held at Towson State University. In the preliminary rounds they won 5-1 but lost in the quarter finals to James Madison University from Harrisonburg, Virginia. In this particular tournament, Reinerth was awarded second place speaking honors.

Reinerth also won speaking honors at a tournament held at Pace University. He was awarded fifth place honors despite the team's loss to Tufts University in the quarter finals.

The team opened up their debating schedule in a tournament held at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Maryland. In the preliminary rounds, the team of Reinerth and Clougherty came out with a score of 5-3. They met Rutgers University in the octafinals and won. However, the team from George Mason University proved to be too much for Villanova in the quarter finals.

Tuition, Aid Up

sylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency data for Financial Aid Form data — Switzer emphasized his office's continued use of uniform methodology in evaluating student financial need.

Switzer indicated that financial aid applications will be evaluated by the financial aid office's staff in a personal manner; he suggests that any unusual financial circumstances be made known to the office.

Switzer stated that the processing of financial aid applications will not begin until later this month. Many factors have contributed to this delay in processing.

The use of the 1976 Federal Income Tax 1040 form delays the completion of applications. Income tax returns are not accepted before January 1st, and the 1040 forms are not mailed out by the government until late December. Switzer said that inclusion of 1040 forms for the prior year in the application process is mandated by the Federal government as a means of cross-checking data.

Basic Grant forms also require information regarding the prior year income, whereas in previous years two-year-old financial data was required, allowing students, particularly incoming Freshmen, to have their applications processed in November or December.

"It would simplify the process if all programs used a uniform methodology based on two-year-old income data," Switzer observed.

(Tehran) — Iran's state radio says Provisional Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan has named seven members of his new cabinet. National front leader Karim Sanjaby reportedly will serve as Foreign Minister. The announcement came hours after the arrest of former Prime Minister Bakhtiar, who was taken to the headquarters of Ayatollah Khomeini.

And Byrd indicated to reporters at the White House today he may side with those in Congress who favor some linkage of treaty approval with Moscow's military activity in Africa and Asia.

Byrd's support is considered a key factor if the administration is to be successful in a senate showdown over a new "SALT" agreement.

A report from the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, issued this week, says nearly half of the country's minority children continue to go to segregated schools, and, it says, segregation is the most intense outside the south.

The Commission is critical of Congress and the executive branch of government for only reluctantly carrying out the mandate on integrated schools handed down by the Supreme Court 25 years ago. And, it says, the High Court itself seems to be retreating from its position.

Commission Chairman Arthur Flemming told a new conference he's convinced the American people by and large still support the idea that every child should attend an integrated school. He said it would be indefensible if the effort to desegregate education continues at its present unsatisfactory pace.

Conrail also reports that it expects its total losses for 1978 to amount to about 385 million dollars — 227 million of that in the first six months. Conrail attributes the early losses to last winter's severe weather and the longest coal strike in the history of the United Mine Workers' Union.

voted to reject the measure that would provide salary increases to legislators in the 1981-82 session.

The Delaware County Republican, who was one of 90 members opposing the delayed pay raise, said he has introduced legislation to abolish the Compensation Commission which recommends salary increases for the lawmakers.

"I am extremely disappointed that the pay increase, even though delayed, was approved. This Legislature's top priority should be controlling government spending and you do not accomplish that by giving yourself a salary boost," Alden said.

"I do not approve of the current set-up by which the Compensation Commission's recommendations on pay hikes automatically take effect in thirty days, with or without legislative action. To allow this system to continue would be irresponsible.

"Therefore, I am preparing that we eliminate the Compensation Commission and save some money also by eliminating the jobs of the members of this body. The General Assembly should not hide behind a commission's recommendations in approving pay increases," Alden stated.

The legislator added that he has introduced alternate legislation just in case his plan to abolish the Commission does not succeed.

"My second plan is to make the Commission an advisory board to prevent the recommendations from becoming law automatically as is now the case.

"A third bill I have introduced as another alternative would make it mandatory for the General Assembly to vote on the recommendations of the commission within 30 days, removing the automatic clause now in effect. This would ensure that all future legislatures take full responsibility for their actions on pay raises," Alden said.

Students with questions or comments should contact Rep. Alden by writing to P.O. Box 313, 94 Castle Court, Wayne, Pa., or by calling 688-6644.

Antique Car Buff At V.U.

By JOAN BARNISH

On these sub-zero days have you ever felt like opening the hood of your beat-up jalopy and screaming, "I hate you?'. To you it might be hate, but to one Villanova senior it's love.

John Rendemonti loves antique cars. In fact, he doesn't just love antique cars he collects them. Totaling eight, the cars range from a 1925 Franklin to a 1956 Chevrolet pick-up truck.

"I started collecting the cars when I was 13-years-old," said Rendemonti. "I worked on weekends and bought my first car for $500 from a man who was a founding member of a local New Jersey antique car club and realizing my interest gave me a break on the car."

The cars include; a 1925 Franklin, four-door Landau Limosine which is one of only eleven left in the country; a 1926 Custom Landau Chevrolet; a 1927 Franklin, yellow Custom Doctor's Coupe which is one of 16 ever made and the only one left in the world; 1932 Ford V-Eight Pick-up Truck; 1941 Packard, a perfect original Dual Sidemount Sedan; 1948 Packard, yellow four-door Sedan; 1948 Packard Convertible and one of ten registered in the United States today; and a 1956 Chevrolet Pick-up Truck.

Rzendemonti, a resident of Pt. Pleasant Beach, N.J., works in his spare time on the cars. Four cars have been restored and one was an original requiring no work at all.

Is it an expensive hobby? Rendemonti says if you put your own time and effort into it, it doesn't get to be too expensive, but it takes years to finish a car.

Rendemonti is a member of four antique clubs including the H.H. Franklin Club, a national organization of which he is the youngest member.

The cars are stored in three different garages in Pt. Pleasant and Trenton where his father owns a car wash.

In 1976, for the Bicentennial, Rendemonti entered the 1927 Franklin in a show in New Hope, Pa., and won first place in the Custom/Classic Division.

"That was the first day I had the car on the road," recalled Rendemonti. "I always drive my cars wherever I go, instead of towing them like most owners."

What makes a college senior have such an unusual hobby? "You get to meet a lot of people that way," said Rendemonti. "But it just isn't the same anymore. People who really love the cars can't afford them anymore because speculators have gotten into the field. They buy the cars for large amounts of money, win some prizes and then sell them for a large profit."

Rendemonti's plans for the future are law school and "to settle on a bay in Jersey — a little home with a garage six times as big."

So, if you are fed up with your own heap-of-junk, just maybe there is a buyer closer than you think, because as Rendemonti says, "I'm always looking for new "old" cars, I never stop, it is an obsession and all part of the fun."

John Rendemonti stands beside his 1927 Franklin custom doctor's coupe. One of sixteen ever made and the only one left in the world today.

Belly Dancer Shakes

By JOHN ZAGARELLA

"Top dog, top cat, move that muscle and shake that fat . . ." Elton John and Bernie Taupin, 1976

The last thing I thought I'd be doing Tuesday afternoon was interviewing a belly dancer. Yes, that's right, with pen and note pad in hand, I conversed with Carla Brigandi, also known in these parts as Carla the Belly Dancer whose performance in the North Lounge of Dougherty Hall Tuesday was sponsored by the Villanova Union.

It just so happens that Carla's interview proved both interesting and informative. When asked about audience participation in her act Carla replied, "Women don't get up, but older men do because they want to get up and dance." Mrs. Brigandi, who has been in the dancing profession fifteen years, has proven her immense talent not only as a dancer, but as a teacher. She teaches at least two hundred students a year, who range in age from 7 to 72.

Carla also provided me with a brief history of this ancient art. It appears that the earliest recorded evidence of this type of dance dates back to 1500 B.C. in the caves of Palermo, Sicily. The coins that are draped throughout the costume are symbolic of a young bride's dowry, which were worn as a symbol of marriage. The bells are Indian wedding bells.

Belly Dancer Carla Brigandi.

The term "belly dancing" is actually an American slang, as the sensuous movements involve more than an over active tummy. The proper term for "belly dancing" is Middle Eastern Dance. Apparently, Middle Eastern Dance is a combination of all the dances native to the Middle East.

How does a person get interested in belly dancing? Carla relates her personal experience: "I worked as a show girl at the Latin Casino and I used to watch the style of the other girls." Carla is self taught — it only took her three months to go professional, although she still contends, after seven years, "I'm always learning."

Belly dancing is a highly competative field. Carla explains that the pay is reasonable, but it "takes alot of practice, alot of effort, and alot of late hours — that's why most girls don't make it." She is very successful — as of now, and is booked well into the summer, with Christmas and New Years taken as well. "I advertise once a year, the rest is word of mouth." The various jobs can be essentric, to say the least. Mrs. Brigandi was once asked to perform a fertility dance at a conception party. Who would throw a conception party? A woman who was so glad to hear about her pregnancy that she threw a party to make sure it didn't go any place. "This week I'm a birthday present for a husband!," she exclaims.

As for her routine, there is no set pattern, "the steps are in my head. I dance what I feel." Belly dancing takes enormous concentration, "I get totally enrapt in it," confesses the performer.

Sometimes men get out of hand during her performance, but Mrs. Brigandi says that you have to expect this. But she knows just how to handle these people, "I smile at them and step on their feet so no one else sees. They get the message!"

So all you gals out there who have talented stomach muscles, take you and your belly over to Carla and learn how to shake 'em up!.

Women In Art At Falvey

By ANNE HEALY

The art and art history department is now sponsoring an exhibit featuring eight Philadelphia artists which will continue through March 3. The exhibit is the inaugural event in a series of activities scheduled for the coming months related to the course "Women In Art," offered by the University College.

All of the women are prominent Philadelphia artists and each offers an exciting and fresh interpretation of her particular aesthetic concern. Pat Nugent, Jan Morgan, Sherri Feldman and Kathy Halton will exhibit collages, drawings, and paintings.

Joanne Circle and Barbara Yonkers will offer jewelry in precious metals, while Judy Wilson and Gloria DeArcangelis will display both functional and sculptural ceramics. The variation in the artists' work should provide an interesting and diversified exhibit.

Ms. Mary Sentner of the art and art history department feels "the artists are trying to offer a contemporary art and craft that shows more than one approach to today's art. These women are not feminists; they are serious artists who want to be known as artist."

On March 3 at 11 a.m. several of the exhibiting artists will be at Villanova to discuss their work at an informal colloquim. In the meantime stop by the library and look over the exhibit — the first of its kind at Villanova.

Healing is central to human life. We are all aware of the energy and time that the human family invests in the ministry of healing, whether it be the physical healing of a wounded body, the emotional healing of a troubled mind, or the spiritual healing of an anguished conscience. Jesus, the healer, spent much of his ministry in curing the blind and lame, driving evil spirits from the possessed, and forgiving sinners.

One form of healing within the church community, reconciliation, or penance, or confession, or whatever one prefers to call it, focuses attention on the need we all have to seek forgiveness for the sins against ourselves, others, and God. Jesus gave to his community this gift of spiritual healing, through the ministry of the priest, so that we might be restored to wholeness, to grow again into the image and likeness of God as we were created.

The questions, then, are always, "who am I?," and "what am I becoming?" When I take time to assess my life I find so much ambivalence. "The good that I will, I do not do; the evil I try to avoid, I find myself doing," says St. Paul. Dietrich Bonhoeffer, a Christian theologian killed by the Nazis, wrote from a prison cell, "Am I really that which others tell of? Or am I only what I myself know of myself? Restless, longing, and sick, like a bird in a cage, struggling for breath, as though hands were compressing my throat, yearning for colours, for flowers, for the voices of birds, thirsting for words of kindness, for neighborliness, tossing in expectation of great events, powerlessly trembling for friends at an infinite distance, weary and empty at praying, at thinking, at making, faint, and ready to say farewell to it all."

A first step in seeking the healing power of God is to admit our own personal weaknesses. We often fall prey to pride, greed, lust, anger, etc. We abuse and misuse our bodies and minds, we squander our personal resources as did the prodigal son in the gospel story. Like him we need to return to the Father and seek forgiveness.

And oh, what forgiveness awaits us! Jesus says the Father ran to meet his son, lavishing him with affection. Have you ever felt the burden of anxiety lifted from your shoulders by admitting your faults and seeking forgiveness through the Sacrament of Reconciliation? God's healing mercy is mediated by the community of faith and the priestly ministry of forgiving sins.

Perhaps this is an opportune time to ask the Lord to drive out the evil spirits of selfishness and sin. His grace and mercy are always present in the healing ministry of confession.

Commuter Alienation

Is There A Solution?

It is time again to voice an issue which has never been remedied. An issue which, like a chronic illness, annually afflects the Villanova community placing the afflicted as well as the University in jeopardy.

The illness is diagnosed as commuter misrepresentation and alienation, and it is a definite problem.

The issue has undergone its share of yearly analysis by University professionals and concerned commuter constitutents.

Rev. John E. Deegan, vice president for Student Life has expressed his anxiety and support for aid and future studies. Former Senator Matt Christenson founded a Commuter Council which examined "day hop" needs and compiled a 24-page affirmative action plan recommending, most importantly, elected commuter representation. The University Senate's Student Life Committee assigned the commuter problem to an investigative sub-committee. This year, another commuter survey was completed

And what are the results of all these efforts?

There are none. Year after year, commuter problems are addressed, councils are formed, statistical studies completed and affirmative action plans instituted, but not one effort has resulted in a solution or any true affirmative, tangible result to the overwhelming and increasing problem.

Where have they all gone wrong? Can it be there is no solution?

This year, the Association of Non-Resident Students (ANS) has made concentrated efforts to eliminate this alienation and to foster commuter involvement by formulating carpools, increased social activities and above all, representation for the cries of discontented commuters.

However, of an approximate 55 per cent undergraduate day hop population, only 40 are active members of the ANS. Thus, is the root of the problem merely commuter apathy? Is the commuter, who should be enraged about his predicament and who invests $3,200 yearly in tuition, content in simply attending classes and in leaving without getting his money's worth of social life — as vital a part of the "college experience" as academics?

Apathy, although a major component, is not the solitary root of misrepresentation and alienation. Perhaps it is precisely because there is no single cause that there has been no solution.

A key word to the commuter problem is "discrimination." No, Villanova does not discriminate on the basis of race, color or creed, but it does permit the existence of resident/commuter social discrimination despite the proportionate equality in numbers.

The commuter himself discriminates in perceiving himself as part of a paralyzed, unfruitful minority in a realm of a productive, organized majority of residents.

Organizations discriminate by scheduling the bulk of significant meetings and social events at night when the commuting majority either works or can or will not make the effort to return to school. Consequently commuter/resident social relationships are rare.

The University discriminates lumping residents and commuters into one category, "the Villanova student" when each has a distinctive set of needs, and a unique set of categories.

How do we rid ourselves from this discriminating tendency? Is there a solution?

We believe the problem can never be completely eliminated with an all-encompassing solution. There is far too wide a variety of commuters (off-campus, public transportation users, employed, car-owners, etc.) to appease.

However, as long as the commuter perceives himself as a part of this powerless minority, he will remain powerless. It is up to him to make the most of his situation. If he is satisfied, he knows what he wants. If he seeks change, the vehicles are there to initiate it — the ANS, the SGA, the Vice President for Student Life, and the Dean of Student Activities.

Unless some cries of dissatisfaction and outrage are clearly heard, no one will feel compelled to act.

Finally, it is up to the University to ensure and reassure this indispensable sector that it is concerned and willing to help. The University and concerned commuters must no longer settle for ignorance and dormacy as solutions to its problems. For without the $10,172,800 which commuters contribute in tuition alone, the University could not exist.

Dean Search Reply

Dear Sir:

I wish to comment on Dr. John Mulligan's statements about the inadequate job performed by the committee appointed last year to advise the president in the search for a new dean of the College of Arts and Sciences (Villanova, Feb. 9.)

One aspect of the committee's work which needs more attention is their complete failure to present to Father Driscoll a slate of nominees for the office which would reflect both faculty and student opinion. Instead of a single meeting with faculty members called at the most inconvenient time of the working week, the committee should have sent out questionnaires to all faculty members and a sizable number of students in the College of Arts and Sciences. They sould have interviewed all or most chairmen, as well as a large and representative selection of faculty members and students.

Is this too much to expect, one may ask? When the office in question is as important as that of Dean of Arts and Sciences, the answer must be a decisive no. What happened last spring was that the search committee sent to the president a slate of nominees for the office of dean which did not at all represent faculty or student thinking, and may in fact have misrepresented their true opinions. If Father Driscoll was guilty of ignoring the search committee's recommendations, he was at least guilty of a minor fault: he ignored the opinions of about one percent of the people who would be affected by the appointment of a new dean.

Sincerely yours,
J.P. McGowan
Chairman, English Department

Trustee McCarthy

Dear Sir:

Your article in last week's Villanovan concerning the appointment of Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O.S.A. to the Board of Trustees brought to light some interesting information. As concerned Villanova students, we wonder if Father McCarthy's background does not raise questions about his suitability for serving on the Board. His stint as President can be referred to as stormy, at best. While he was President, student-administration relations reached an all time low, due to a total disregard for student input. Frustrated with their apparent helplessness, students were driven as far as the famous occupation of Tolentine Hall.

Father McCarthy is a man who was willing to sacrifice Villanova's academic reputation in order to bolster the football program. Such action may satisfy irate alumni, tired of losing football teams, but what about the student who comes to Villanova for a good education? Father McCarthy is also known to be strongly against the extension of student rights. He has openly stated that issues such as parietals and faculty input are not major concerns of the University. What kind of a Board member will this man make, especially with the visitation policy coming up for review in the near future?

Perhaps the most important question is how Father McCarthy could be so easily appointed to th Board. What is the selection procedure? Does the president arbitrarily select the new members? If so, how can Villanova's Board of Trustees ever become truly responsive to the needs of all segments of the Villanova community. In the wake of the appointment of the rather controversial Father McCarthy, we believe the Villanovan has the obligation to pursue these questions. It is time that the students stop blindly accepting the dictates of administrative authority. We have the right to know.

The RSA Page

Are We In This Together?

By PATRICIA KOSINSKI
and HELEN O'ROURKE

On Saturday morning, January 20, members of the Resident Student Association executive committee, committee chairmen and dorm presidents were presented with a new structure for the RSA. Scott Mackin, former president of the RSA, presented the new format, the functions of the various positions in the RSA and issues that the RSA faces.

Because of the type of structure the RSA had and its role as an organization for resident students certain issues had risen. First was the communication throughout the organization and therefore the dorms and the cohesiveness and the individuality of each of the dorms. The programming of events through the old system raised problems, especially during the fall semester. The goals and objectives, and organizational clarity of the RSA were also looked at. The most important issue brought up was organizational unity; as Mackin made this point he asked, "Are we in this together or not?" The functions of the president, executive committee, campus council, hall presidents, area representatives and committee chairmen were reviewed. All of these issues and functions were evaluated in the old system and reviewed in light of the new structure.

As Mackin reviewed the functions of the president, executive committee and committee chairmen of the old structure, he described these positions as having a "demi-god" separation from the dorms. Programming of events was initiated by a small group at the top of the structure for the general population in the dorms. But, as Mackin noted, the real power of the RSA is located in the dorms — the area chairmen. Another problem noted at the Saturday meeting was that students in the dorms trying to initiate activities have faced problems because of the organizational structure and lack of awareness of the resources available in the committees.

Under the new structure these problems and others will be eliminated. The focus of the RSA will be primarily on the dorms; the initiation of any activity will arise from there. The vice president, vice president-treasurer, executive secretary, and executive-at-large will change to five vice-president positions. Each V.P. will be in charge of a group of dorms. The V.P., working with the social committees and organizational and development committees will aid the students in setting up the events they want.

One of the problems that the new structure eliminates is that when students in the dorms want an event, there are resource people readily available to aid them. Also the events programmed will be ones the students want. Secondly, the dorms have common concerns, although they are individual. Under the new system they can be treated as individuals yet easily work together.

To review the new structure: an evaluating committee will be formed each month composed of one V.P. and two hall presidents. The purpose of the committee will be to evaluate the new positions in light of the issues noted — communication, programming, goals and objectives, organizational clarity and organizational unity. "Are we in this together or not?"

On Friday, January 26, the executive committee and hall presidents showed that they "were in it together" by unanimously voting to reform the constitution of the RSA. The new structure is being implemented while a committee is working on the formal details of the constitution, which will be voted on by the campus council.

This Is The ANS

By JOHN GARBARINO

The Association of Non-Resident Students is a dynamic organization which aids the non-resident student body in becoming an integral part of the Villanova community through various on-campus functions, encouraging the participation of non-residents in campus affairs. Being a commuter is the only criteria for membership, and the organization is looking for active members who are interested in commuter affairs.

The Executive Committee is the overseeing body of the association. The members consist of a President, John Garbarino, Vice President, Laura Stecklair, and Secretary, Kathy Scott. The chairman of the standing committees are also members of this committee.

The Social Committee is responsible for all social functions. Plans for this year include bingo, day trips, a lecture by a professional mixologist (bartender lecture) and a skip trip.

The Athletic Committee organizes intramural sports under the direction of Don Meade. Presently, the association has men's football, softball and basketball teams. And the ladies have volleyball and basketball teams participating in the league. All teams welcome additional players.

The Communications Committee handles publicity and notices within the organization. Mary Foti and her committee organized this article. Look for information which is posted by this committee. They will inform you of general meetings and activities.

The Academic Committee aids students seeking information concerning academic problems. The members of this committee will refer students to qualified persons in their field.

The Ad-Hoc Committee, headed by Christine Henny, provides information to commuters for car pools among other duties. This information is available in the ANS office. This committee will also be working on getting commuter lounges in the University Center.

The ANS is a growing organization looking for active members who's ideas can be incorporated into a program which will help the commuter become an integral part of the Villanova Community.

On The Move

By MARY FOTI

The Association of Non-Resident Students, otherwise known as the ANS, is a rapidly growing organization that is beginning to expand and do more and more for commuters. The ANS has ideas and plans that will make every off-campus student want to be a member.

To join, all one has to do is stop by the ANS office in Dougherty 213 and sign up. Or you can come to the ANS meetings which are held every Tuesday at 12:45 in Bartley 203: any commuter is eligible to join.

Today the ANS has planned a ski trip to Spring Mountain. The trip was organized by Leo Koletas, who searched everywhere for the best deal. A group of students will be leaving Villanova in car pools to head for the ski resort and an evening of great skiing. The trip will cost under $10.

The ANS is also selling T-shirts! The shirts, with the slogan "Commuters DO It On Wheels" are on sale in Dougherty during lunch on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and in Bartley Cafeteria during lunch on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

COMMUTER QUESTIONNAIRE

Each week in this space you will find a question pertinent to non-resident students. By answering this question the A.N.S. will be better able to solve problems faced by commuters.

What do you think is a major problem faced by commuters?

Please answer and return to the A.N.S. office — Room 213 in Dougherty.

Questionaire

Another project of the ANS is trying to organize car pools. In the ANS Office there is an envelope of all the commuters in zip code order. All one has to do is check for their zip code and the zip codes of areas around them. The ANS will then contact the people in your area to see if they want to form a car pool. So, stop on up to the office and form your own car pool. In the end you'll save time, gas, and money.

Basketball is one of the ANS' strongest points. Already the team is undefeated after three games. The next game is Wednesday, February 21st at 5:30 in the Alumni gym. If you want to join a winning team, contact Don Meade.

The next event of the ANS is Bingo! Friday, February 16, there is a meeting to make plans for an evening of fun. Plenty of prizes for the winners! The date and time will be announced at a later date.

THE UNION CENTER

We've Expanded!

The Villanova Union is the largest student run organization of Villanova University. Yet, many of you may not be aware of the various activities and opportunities it sets up for you.

In an effort to provide better communication between you and the Union, we have expanded the Union page to two pages. This will give us the opportunity to describe coming Union events for you and to review previous activities.

Because the Villanova Union is the center of our student life, we have appropriately named our section "The Union Center." It will be compiled weekly by the Union Publicity Committee and will be distributed with the Villanovan.

We hope that each and every week you will open your copy of the Villanovan straight to "The Union Center" to find out what movies, games, or shows have been set up for your pleasant enjoyment.

If you have any questions or comments about the Union or its activities, please feel free to write to or visit the Union office, Rm. 208, Dougherty Hall.

Kinderhook Rocks FH

By ROSE MARSICO

Near zero-degree temperatures didn't keep Kinderhook fans — hats and all — from crowding the Fieldhouse on Saturday, February 10. Their country flavored rock and roll music quickly caused the audience to participate in clapping, bumping, and foot-stomping that continued for the entire concert. Those familiar with the Jersey Shore band felt quite at home crowding around the stage and swaying with the music. Their songs for the evening were mostly originals, including "Sundance" and "Thunderbird." Familiar songs, such as "Running on Empty" and "I Still Feel the Same Way," caused even the reserved to clap to the music. The sounds of their banjo, fiddle and pedal steel guitar were unique and very pleasing.

Villanova's own Steve Merritt Band added their own unique style of music to the concert. Songs such as "One More Day," "Amsterdam" — an instrumental original — and "For Your Love" complemented Kinderhook's music perfectly.

Amityville Horror Haunts Campus

By SUSANNE LAWLER

The Amityville Horror. Does it ring a bell? To some the name sounds vaguely familiar, to others it is the notorious haunted mansion of Long Island. On February 22 at 8:30 p.m. in the Day Hop, the well-known writer and filmmaker, Jay Anson, will be speaking about this house of terror in which supernatural incidents have occurred: the ceramic walking lion, green slime oozing out of walls, windows swarmed with flies, bolted doors flying open in the middle of the night. Jay Anson claims not to be superstitious, yet his new bestseller The Amityville Horror describes these and other subsequent experiences in full detail.

Come out Thursday night if you dare — to hear Jay Anson's lecture — then draw your own conclusions! Admission is $3 or $2.50 with Union ID.

In addition, Jeanne Quinn — Psychic — will mesmermize Villanova students at 12:00 on Thursday (Feb. 22) in the North Lounge. Don't miss it!

Plunger Plunges By

By DONNA VIDAS

"What came first, the plunger or the clogged drain?" The man who poses that question everyday of his life is coming here to Villanova. On Monday, Friday 19 in the West Lounge at 12:00, you can enjoy the unique pleasure of viewing the art of plunger throwing. Jay Cerney of Germantown is one of the foremost artists in balancing, juggling, spinning, manipulating, and discussing that wonderful apparatus that no dorm could do without. "In 1971 at Earlham College, two roommates and I began experimenting with the aerial potential of the common household plunger." From there he developed such feats as the slap-cap reversals with slap-cap-tip-tap chains and an astounding "dance of death." He is now an expert on Marxist plungosophy, pathoplugology (disease of the plunger), and has also begun a publication, "Plunjournal, the International Plunger Quarterly." He also helped form NAPAS, the National Academy of the Plunger Arts and Sciences.

So, if you are one of the many who need intense intellectual stimulation in order to fully communicate with your plunger, be sure to come to the West Lounge at noon on Monday.

Let's Rally!

By M. TOUKAN

Start Your Engines! Auto enthusiasts, car freaks, and people who generally know other bodies who drive cars. Instead of driving you car, how about rallying it? That's right. The recreation committee of the Villanova Union is sponsoring its third road rally slated for Saturday, February 24, at 10 a.m., in the main parking lot adjacent to Ithan Ave.

What's a rally? Well, you start with your basic:

1) Car
2) Driver
3) Navigator

The navigator is supplied with cryptic instructions which he or she translates into intelligent directions which are forwarded to the driver (Coed teams are recommended for sensuous driving pleasure). The two work together to achieve what will hopefully be the climactic finish (of the rally). Knowledge of the area in which the course will be runned will not significantly help the team. Anyone can participate competitively.

For those who misinterpret (blow it), a sealed envelope is provided containing easy-to-follow instructions on how to get yourself out of the jam you've gotten yourself into.

Additional details will be discussed at the participants meeting on Wed. Feb. 21st in B110 at 7:00 p.m. For those who can't wait until the meeting, contact Mark Toukan at the Union office for additional info.

You Think Carter Has Problems...

Balancing The Budget

"... It (the Board of Trustees) has asked me to point out to the Senate, however, that the procedure of delaying the budget was an exceptional one and will not be repeated in the future."

The Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O.S.A., in his Presidential Address to the University Senate, April 17, 1974.

Although there has been a change in administration in the years since this statement was made, the composition of the Board of Trustees and the problem of drafting a budget for Villanova have remained relatively constant. This year, the Administrative Budget Committee again finds itself hard-pressed to balance the budget and consequently, the members of the University Senate, and the Senate Budget Committee in particular, are seemingly unable to effectively fulfill their functions of monitoring the University Budget.

Last year, the University Senate passed a motion which requires the budget proceedings to begin "at least fourteen months preceeding the fiscal year for which the budget is being prepared." This resolution was intended to insure that the budget would be presented to the Senate in a timely manner. In turn, the Senators could evaluate the budget and verify that the major allocations of funds are in accordance with the University's policies and priorities. This resolution was signed by President Driscoll and the Board of Trustees.

This year, even though the Administration began working on the budget fourteen months ago, the budget itself is still not balanced. Neither the Budget Committee nor the University Senate has received any concrete indication of when it will be received. Because of this delay, both the Budget Committee and the Senate will be rushed in their evaluation of the budget and, as a result, students may again face higher room and board and tuition while the faculty salary increment may be less than anticipated.

There have been many contributing factors that are acting as a hindrance to balancing the budget. Social Security costs have risen, thus increasing the school's payroll, the value of the dollar has declined, and there have been changes made in Federal Aid to college students. All of these factors are adding to the expenditures of the University and the responsibility of this additional burden will ultimately and undeniably rest on the student and his/her parents.

Research grants and funds are severely lacking at Villanova. The school of business is in need of expansion, and the MBA program is becoming necessary to remain competitive. There are also numerous other examples of an academic nature where Villanova needs to expand. In addition, the Villanovan last week cited the fact that faculty salaries and their accompanying increments are not keeping up with the rising cost of living. The Student Center, first proposed at least six years ago, is now slowly becoming a reality because of the generosity of Mr. John Connelly, but the Athletic-Intramural Complex which was considered at the same time is still a distant light at the end of a dark tunnel. All of these programs and proposed expansions are going to cost the school a great deal of money. As concerned members of the Villanova community we must again call upon the Board of Trustees and Alumni Association to take a more vigorous and aggressive fund raising posture.

It is apparent that the time has come for the students and faculty to unite in an effort to persuade the Board of Trustees to embark on various income producing ventures. Not only is the Board responsible for the general welfare of the Villanova Community, but they are also obligated to help the University in any problems concerning the social and academic atmosphere here at Villanova.

It is evident that the morale here at Villanova is on the downswing. In order to maintain a competitive and dynamic faculty, one has to make the investment. In order to encourage morale and school spirit, one has to take the time. We are encouraging all parties involved to act in concert and help Villanova remain a highly respected and loved institution. You can show your support by attending the Senate meeting on Friday, February 16, in the West Lounge in Dougherty Hall at 4:00 p.m.

Be A Senator

If you're thinking about running for Senate this year, there are a lot of things to consider. You have to get your petitions on February 19th and have them filled out by the 28th. Go to the candidates' meeting on February 28th and start thinking about campaign strategy. But that's all groundwork. Most importantly, you have to know what's involved in the job. I can tell you some of that . . .

As a Senator from Arts and Sciences, I sit on the University Senate when they meet each month. To me, that's the most worthwhile part of my job. On the Senate floor, my vote is worth as much as anyone else's, be they administrator, faculty, or student. And my right to speak is honored as much as their's. Since University policy is made in the Senate, my vote represents real student input. Of course you have to be prepared, be on top of the issues, and be able to comment on them.

Aside from actual Senate meetings, each student Senator is also a member of a Senate Standing Committee, which works on motions before they hit the Senate floor. I'm on Rules and Review, which considers issues concerning the structure and efficient operation of the Senate itself. Some of our agenda items come to us through the Executive Committee of Senate, which often redirects individuals' ideas and motions to a committee formed to study that particular type of issue. We can also generate motions of our own. In either case, a motion from a committee is often more efficiently handled by the Senate, than one from an individual Senator, because it's already been debated and hashed out in the committee. (That means administrators, faculty and students on the committee, not all of which are Senators, have already thought of objections and figured out rationale to get it passed).

Motions from individual Senators are not any less important, however. Being a student Senator, you're expected to have at least a few new ideas for motions every year. A Senator should be attuned to what his/her constituency is interested in today and what they might want tomorrow. That means knowing your college pretty well, and getting to know and listen to as many people as you can. A lot of comments are gripes and complaints, but how else can you get enough info to honestly say, "This is what the students want!" We also keep office hours up here in the SGA office and talk and talk (and talk) as much as we can.

Sometimes it can get frustrating when you put in a lot of effort on a motion and it fails, or hear a lot of complaints which aren't Senate business so you can't really handle them as easily as you'd like, but the job has its advantages too. After all, we are the people anyone can come to with any problem. If we can't solve it, we can at least direct you to someone who might. I feel that we are performing a service to the students as well as representing them.

The student Senators caucus once a week (Tuesday, 7:30) to discuss issues and help each other with ideas and ways to handle them. The meetings are open to anyone, so why don't you stop up and listen in . . . you can contribute too, if you'd like. It'll help you get the feel of things, and we can answer any questions you might have.

Good luck, Hope to see you soon.

— Cathy Pelesky

As everyone knows, Villanova is not solely financed through student tuition payments. Part of the large amount needed to run the University is received through Alumni contributions. During 1977-78, the Alumni Annual Fund received $318,697 from Villanova graduates. — surprised? On Campus asked the students to guess what the figure was. After hearing their reaction we asked if they planned to contribute after they graduate. This is what we heard:

"I imagine they contribute a good amount but not as much as needed or anticipated . . . That's a lot! Yes, I'll contribute. I think that the money spent from the alumni should be publicized a little more."

Maria King, Sophmore

"I'd say about $5,000 a year . . . I think I underestimated a little. Yes, I think I'll contribute when I graduate."

Bob LaNicca, Freshman

"I don't really know, 500,000? . . . I'm surprised, I didn't think it was that much. You don't really hear that much about the alumni. Yes I will contribute . ."

Carol Ingnaggiato, Freshman

"I know they contribute 2.7% of the work in capital. I'd say 500,000 . . . I'm not surprised. I don't think that's a lot, the school's been around for so long. I'll give as much as I can to my high school, but I don't feel Villanova has gone out of their way for me."

Nursing Clarifications

Dear Sir:

Thank you for your balanced discussion of the convocation. I do support a sophomore activity and believe it should reflect our identity as a church related school. The sophomores are moving along well with the planning. I still do not understand how all this became newsworthy. There was no controversy. There are two inaccuracies in the coverage that I wish to call to your attention.

1) Nursing students do not nor will they dedicate themselves to medicine. They are nursing students committing themselves to nursing care and the health care of people. Nursing is a distinct profession from medicine. Medicine and medical education are not in any way related to what we do in the College of Nursing. To make that statement is the same as saying that nursing students dedicate themselves to engineering or any other field. I was concerned about the wrong impression in that the use of that term conveys and would like it clarified for the readership.

2) The record correction has to do with your comment about Brown University. Brown has never had a nursing program. You must have misunderstood what I said. Thank you for your article. Let me know if I could be of future assistance.

Dean of College of Nursing

Adopt A Student

Dear Editor:

In response to the editorial in The Villanovan (Feb. 2) "Are There Any Issues Anymore?" I contend that there are multitudes of issues that cry out for attention. There are causes for which to fight and social injustices that need to be recognized and dealt with accordingly. Unfortunately the campus spirit of protest that dominated the social consciousness of our nation in the sixties seems to have dissolved into a pile of apathetic ashes in the meantime.

It is in this light that the Jewish Union in cooperation with Campus Ministry, Amnesty International, and The Center for Concern has adopted a 21-year old student "Refusnik" from the Soviet Union. Sasha Yakir, a handsome engineering student at Moscow University has been denied his request to emigrate to the free world.

In the fall of this year he will be called to the army and then chances are he will never be allowed to leave the Soviet Union. His plight is one that warrants support. In the past other Refusniks' have been awarded exit visas as a direct result of student concern. Temple University is just one campus that successfully completed such a task.

The student body and faculty at Villanova has the opportunity to determine the course of a man's life. If we act now, we can secure freedom for Sasha, something that he has never really known at all. I urge the entire Villanova Community to take a pen in hand and write to Sasha or to your congressman.

Security

To the Editor:

I fully sympathize with Paul F. Viggiano's complaint against security guard Frank Cummings ("Villanova Security," 2/9/79). I was involved in an unpleasant situation with Frank the Crank a number of months ago, in which I was subjected to extreme verbal abuse and threats due to an incident which he chose to blow way out of proper proportion.

Since I have witnessed that grouch treating other people similarly he obviously needs a good lesson in manners and a reminder that he is serving a university campus instead of a Nazi concentration camp. A couple other ill-tempered guards here (namely Officers Travaglini and Kleshick) can stand similar lessons and reminders.

Yours truly,
Skip Bowers

Academia: Past And Present

By Anne Leopold

From the late 60's to the mid 70's Villanova University held the respect of the international academic community. Even beyond this time the students of Villanova have been fortunate enough to have the opportunity to gain personal intellectual enhancement from faculty and guest lecturers of exceptional academic achievments. Should Villanova not encourage its high standards now?

During the week of January 21 two occasions caused me to question the present state of academic leadership.

The first instance was a forum entitled "Nuclear Energy and Theology Today," at which Dr. William Pollard was to have presented a theological view of nuclear energy. In Anthony Onofrietti's article, "Nuclear Energy Debated," (The Villanovan, Jan. 26, 1979) Pollard was quoted as stating, "We may view nuclear energy as either a curse or a blessing. If we try to lesson the curse, let us not forget the importance of retaining the blessing." This statement, which lacks the element of Christian theological thought, was typical of Pollard's speech. In contrast, an example of a true theological statement, pertinent to the topic discusses, is, "Man today is threatened by loss of his understanding of history in connection with eschatological history." (J. Papin, "Second Sight: From Aggiornamento to Approfondimento," Christian Action, ed. J. Papin, Vol. II, Villanova Theological Institute, Villanova University Press, 1970.)

The ideas of immanence, trancendence and the Trinity remained unspoken throughout Pollard's lecture, setting an inadequate precedent for the ensuing theological and philosophical discussion. In light of the context of the featured speaker's lecture, Villanova's faculty responded well, demonstrating a great amount of social awareness.

When compared with the academic acknowledgement received in the past, it appears that Villanova's reputation might well be on the decline. At one time this University set the standard by which the world sounded the depth of its theology. The thoughts of leading theologians such as Bonhoeffer, ("Eschaton and Resurrection," The Eschaton: A Community of Love, Vol. V, Vill. Theo. Inst., ed. J. Papin, Villanova University Press, 1971), Dulles, ("The Meaning of Revelation," The Dynamic in Christian Thought, Vol. I, Vill. Theo. Inst., 1968, ed. J. Papin, VU Press, 1970, c.f. "Knowledge, Wisdom and Theology," The Papin Festschrift, Vol. II, Wisdom and Knowledge, ed. Joseph Armenti. VU Press, 1976) and Peter, ("The Church — Can It Help Man Move Forwar?" The Church and Human Society at the Threshold of the Third Millenium, Vol. VI, Vill Theo. Inst., ed. J. Papin, VU Press, 1974; c.f. "Christian Eschatology and a Theology of Exceptions," The Papin Festschrift, Vol. I. Transcendence and Immanence: Reconstruction in the Light of Process Thinking, ed. Joseph Armenti, 1972, and Vol. II) resounded across the campus to the world academic community.

The success of Villanova's Theology Institutes and their subsequent impact on international academia was in no small way due to the untiring efforts of Father President J.M. Driscoll, then Vice President of Villanova.

The second occasion of the week was a lecture on "Faith and Philosophizing — According to St. Thomas Aquinas," presented by Dr. Ralph McInerny of Notre Dame. He reiterated in a pleasant, simple manner some of the thoughts of the great Catholic thinker concerning the connection between faith and reason. He stated that the truths of faith and the truths of reason can not contradict each other. Reason can destroy, but not establish, a truth of faith, although faith can be used as a standard of reason.

It was not until after the lecture, in a critical response from J. Armenti, editor of Papin Festschrift, that St. Thomas' terms were defined in the original Latin and translated into English, and important distinctions between faith, belief and presupposition were made. In his dialogue with the speaker, Armenti illustrated his arguement with Greek and Hebrew sources, and brought the level of thinking onto a far more significant plane.

Although there are many worthwhile events at Villanova, it is hoped that the presentations of the future will be more in keeping with the high standards of the past Considering the present and possible intellectual resources, there seems to be no good reason why Villanova should permit itself to move from international pioneers to parochial settlers.

Your Wildest Dreams Come True

By JANET McGARRIGLE

So you haven't been mountain climbing, scuba diving, or studying primates in Ecuador lately, huh? Well, don't be distraught. Expedition Research, the brainchild of two recent college graduates, can make it possible for all adventure seeking individuals to put their interest and talents to practical use.

Expedition Research, a membership organization in Annapolis, Maryland, serves as a matchmaker for adventurers and expedition organizers alike.

"There is a terrific need for people with interests ranging from archaeology to scuba diving to zoological research. We put them in touch with expedition organizers from all over the world who have registered with us," says Chris White, one of the directors of Expedition Research.

Chris White and friend James Stout first came up with the idea of Expedition Research five years ago while in college. Their own interest in mountain climbing led them to make way for all others seeking varied types of adventure. Their project became a reality six months ago and has so far attracted 100 individuals.

The organization sends out resumes of all their members to registered expeditions which are in the formation stage. Stout says, "We are now accepting requests from expeditions worldwide. Organizers are able to see at a glance the qualifications and references of a variety of individuals. Those whole interests meet the needs of the specific expedition may then be contacted directly."

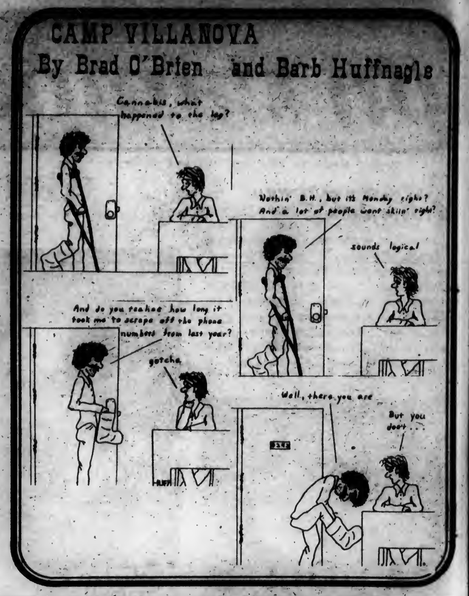
Undergraduate or post-graduate students are in demand. Expedition Research enables them to gain field experience by working with professors and scientists involved in their field of study.

Individuals who register with the organization not only have their resumes kept on file for a year, but they also receive two publications which will keep them informed of the latest expeditionary developments around the world.

Other services around the country which place individuals in adventure or field-educating oriented trips usually cost $500 to $1000. The registration fee for Expedition Research is only $15 and its members are sometimes paid to assist professors or join expedition teams.

Discounts on all types of equipment are available as well. Members save up to 40% on nationally advertised equipment ranging from climbing gear to hang gliders.

There are now 10 expeditions registered with Expedition Research which are still in the formation stage. The expeditions may last from a day to a few months. There is a large demand for anyone interested in sailing who would like to join a crew for various cruises around the world. Anyone interested in Expedition Research should write: Expedition Research, Inc., P.O. Box 467R, Annapolis, Md. 21404.



NROTC Sponsors Lecture

By CAROL GOLDFARB

Villanova was visited recently by U.S. Marine Corps Reserve Colonel Ernest Brydon who addressed Villanova's NROTC on the topic of Desert Warfare.

Brydon recently returned from a visit to Israel, where he was the guest of the Commanding General, Israeli Defense Forces. He observed Israeli-Lebanese activity along the Israel-Lebanon border.

According to Brydon, who saw fighting in the six-day Yom Kippur war in 1973, the Sinai desert is the worst for "it cooks you in the day and freezes you at night."

The first job is to "climitize" you because dysentery is a big problem in the Sinai. You must drink a lot of water. During the six-day war the Egyptians, who are used to the rough desert climate, had 20,000 casualties.

If you open a can in the desert, 1000 flies are there for lunch. The sand blows on the food and acts as a razor blade on the equipment. Clothing must be beat continually to eliminate bugs.

Brydon was the only American to go through Israeli jump school. According to Brydon, in Israel men and women are drafted in the Army for three years. If you have a slight disability, you are still drafted. "It is a tremendous moral to that person. He's put in an administrative position."

Israeli high school students spend one month in the summer in training so that by the time they are 18 they know how a tank works and they have been on patrol.

Even Israeli senior citizens are taken to military bases to clean and package ammunition, which makes them feel part of their country and is a great morale booster.

The women in the Israeli Army are not in combat units. They serve in administrative duties although some throw grenades.

According to Brydon, the Israeli's are not nice to their troops. "A platoon commander who fails to check the water level will be thrown in jail for 30 days."

Colonel Brydon's vast experience in desert warfare gave an up-to-date appreciation of this volatile area in present-day world affairs.

EARN OVER $650 A MONTH RIGHT THROUGH YOUR SENIOR YEAR.

If you're a junior or senior majoring in sciences like math, physics or engineering, the Navy has a program you should know about.

It's called the Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate-Collegiate Program (NUPOC-C for short) and if you qualify, you can earn as much as $650 a month right through your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you'll get an additional year of advanced technical education. This would cost thousands in a civilian school, but in the Navy, we pay you.

It isn't easy. There are fewer than 400 openings and only one of every six applicants will be selected. But if you make it, you'll have unequaled hands-on responsibility, a $24,000 salary in four years, and gilt-edged qualifications for jobs both in the Navy and out.

Ask your placement officer to set up an interview with a Navy representative when he visits the campus, or contact your Navy representative at 800-841-8000, or send in the coupon. The NUPOC-C Program. Not only can it help you complete college. It can be the start of an exciting career.

Kinderhook Live!

By ROCHELLE LAGINESTRA

On Saturday night, February 10, Kinderhook Creek appeared at the Villanova Fieldhouse in a concert which was sponsored by the Villanova Union. The warm-up band was Villanova's own Steve Merritt Band.

The sixpiece band from New Jersey, which included pedal steel guitarist Stan Taylor, fiddler Yuri Turchyn, Jerry Kopychuck on acoustic guitar and lead vocals, guitarist Joe Britlibach, bass guitarist Andy Feclin and C. Barry on drums. They played new as well as old tunes. The songs ranged from "Hey Good Lookin' " to a fiddle solo. They played a lot of famous tunes, but snuck their original works in very tighty. The general type of music was country-rock oriented. Their consistency while harmonizing as well as their flow from one song to another, was a true example of professionalism.

Although the band was at its best, the acoustics of the Fieldhouse couldn't handle the music, however, that didn't interfere with the spirit of the small crowd. There were many foot-stomping, hand-clapping country tunes which had many people dancing in the aisle. The lively spirit continued throughout the concert up until the final encore.

Kinderbook at the Fieldhouse.

The six band members are from different parts of New Jersey. They have played from New York to Maine, and such places as the Palladium, Capitol Theatre, Creations, and many folk festivals. They are basically a bar band but they were still able to project their warmness to a major audience. They had a lot of charisma and this was evident by the way they belted out each song with plenty of emotion. One could tell that they really enjoy performing together as a group. The audience response was equal to the band's enthusiasm.

Spectrum Thanks Patrons

By JOHN ZAGARELLA

Every year the Spectrum salutes the hundreds of thousands of patrons who help make it "America's No. 1 Showplace." Last Saturday night, Johnny Winter headlined the annual marathon rock concert that has appropriately become known as Audience Appreciation Night. This year, the deal was five bands for five dollars. Not bad considering the going price for a decent rock show these days.

As promised, the musical showcase began promptly at 6:00 with The Good Rats. The Rats are a relatively obscure band who have been playing the northeastern club circuit for 14 years. Warmly received at the Spectrum, the Good Rats tackled a very potent and convincing 45 minute set of very good and at times, clever rock and roll. Selections came, for the most part, from their fifth and latest LP, Birth Comes to us All. Highlights of the Rats' set included the opener, "School Days," "Don't Hate the Ones that Bring You Rock and Roll," and "Injun Joe." At the end of their act, lead singer Peppi Marchello actually began to "play" a trash-can. During the last number, he reached into the aluminum container and threw rubber rats into the audience.

The mood was strictly bluegrass for round two, Saturday night. The Flying Burrito Brothers were on hand to provide Audience Appreciation Night with the most polished, thoroughly enjoyable act of the evening. This band also took command of the stage for 45 minutes but for the Burrito Brothers, it seemed much too short. However, in a limited time, the fiddlers managed to display old as well as new numbers, never missing the mark of pure entertainment.

Some knee-slappin' tunes included "Close Up the Honky Tonk," "Dee Tappin, Foot Stompin', Beer Drinkin' Song," "Honky Tonk Tennessee," and Randy (Short People) Newman's "Rider in the Rain." Like the Good Rats, the Flying Burrito Brothers have been around for quite a few years. The Burrito Brothers, however, have enjoyed success.

Formed in 1968, the band has been through some trying times, including the death of Gram Parsons, an original member, in 1972. In 1979, the Burrito Brothers' sound is still distinct and still quite refreshing. Their latest album for CBS records is simply entitled, Airborne.

Perhaps the strangest act of the night followed the best. Straight from England, ladies and gentlemen, The Fabulous Poodles. Actually this four piece unit is difficult to describe. Primarily, they were inspired by none other than Frank Zappa. Secondly they began their set with a song called "Suicide Bridge," which is heavily punk accented. Thankfully, this was as close as the Poodles came to punk rock. At times, they sounded straight out of the 60's with "bop shu bop" chorus lines in the background of some of their numbers, and at times, they were more up to date. During a song entitled "Tit Photographer Blues," they coaxed the audience into a sing-a-long, after which they asked members of the crowd to name the first record they ever bought. Following this cue, lead singer, Tony de Meur began a somewhat perverted version of Donny Osmond's "Puppy Love." It was all downhill from there, as the Fabulous Poodles were the targets of various flying objects, not to mention an almost unanimous "boo" from an audience who did not appreciate their style. They were interesting, to say the least.

The Golden Boot Award, however, goes to band number 4 in the line-up. They call themselves Stars, but that is just wishful thinking. This was the only hard rock act on the bill. Stars came on the strongest of the five bands, but came off as one of the most tasteless and clueless groups I have ever seen. The first mistake made was when lead singer Michael Lee Smith tried to imitate Aerosmith's Steven Tyler. As a matter of fact, their entire performance exhibited no originality in any way, shape or form. In other words, they tried to act professional, but it backfired. The only thing Starz successfully accomplished was doubling the decibel level to that of painful. Nothing more should be said of an embarrassment to contemporary music.

Impressive describes headliner Johnny Winter and his two piece band. Winter sang and played the blues with commendable feeling. A clean, mellow sound stylishly capped the nearly six hour concert. The blues guitarist played a series of five rather lengthy numbers during his hour-long performance, focusing most of the attention of his latest release, White, Hot and Blue. After hypnotising his audience, Johnny got the Spectrum dancing to a fabulous version of Chuck Berry's classic, "Johnny B. Goode." As Winter left the stage, the ritual of screaming for more commenced, but Johnny and the boys never returned. They run a very close second to the Burrito Brothers as the number one band of Audience Appreciation Night 1979.

As the night progressed, the crowd got larger, and by the time Johnny Winter appeared, approximately 7,000 people managed to brave the February deep freeze to witness an interesting and worthwhile evening of diverse song. Who knows, you might be paying top dollar in a couple of years to see a concert starring The Good Rats.

Scott Saves Hardcore

By JOYCE POGGI

"Oh my God, what a waste" is an appropriate account for the recently released movie, "Hardcore," starring George C. Scott.

Written and directed by Paul Schrader who gave us "Taxi Driver," "Hardcore" also exposes the hardness and cold brutality of the big city. Both movies probe the debasing world of prostitution, yet Robert DeNiro gives "Taxi Driver" greater impact being part of the city whereas Scott is an outsider.

Scott plays Jake Van Dorn, a midwestern Calvinist whose teenage daughter gets involved in the Los Angeles world of prostitution and pornography. He hires a private detective, played by Peter Boyle, but, disgusted with the detective's efforts, Scott decides to search for his daughter on his own.

For five months, (and what seems like five months to the viewer,) he immerses himself into this incredibly tasteless society of sadism and "snuff" movies. He pretends to be a pornographer, befriends a prostitute, goes into private parlors, stores and shows just in hopes of getting a lead to his daughter's whereabouts. Everywhere there is neon lights and huge advertisements and "sex for sale," only increasing the enormity of his problem.

It is very tiresome to watch Scott cruise the streets and listen to the same raw language for 90 minutes. There is much degrading communication, both mentally and physically. It is so overwhelming that the viewer soon realizes there isn't any story at all, but only scenes of frustration for Scott.

Scott discovers it is not inconceivable that his daughter has become a victim for sex is drilled into every aspect of our society. Later, the prostitute who helps Scott in his search, comments on the unimportance of sex — for her that she doesn't care who her partner is, for him that he abstains.

The only worthwhile element of the movie is Scott's performance. However, it would be better to remember him as Patton than to see him as Jake Van Dorn.

New In Sound

By JOSEPH DEWEY and STEPHEN CASTELLANO

Promises. Promises. Count the times rock has produced a genuinely inspired debut album only to have it followed by a disappointing second album. Bolstered by success, bands frequently opt for the security of self-parody. Well, count your blessings. Now rock has a follow-up album with not only the energy and determination of the first, but a promise of yet newer direction.

The man is Eddie Money, New York cop turned high energy rocker, whose debut album last year shellshocked both the critics and the public. His intense touring schedule last year promoted his style of gutsy delivery and driving rock to assure him a more than casual following. Avid Eddie Money fans waited eagerly for his follow-up effort. Life For the Taking is more than a promise realized.

The few slower songs he tackles. On his last album the misery of deemed. It is a tense, tightly produced set which manages to cameo and to underscore the very best aspects of Eddie Money.

A consummate performer on stage, he is best when his music cooks, his lyrics bite hard, and Jimmy Lyon's guitar commands. The rockers featured in this album surpass the best of his last album. "Can't Keep A Good Man Down" complements the Eddie Money stance on stage so perfectly it is sure to become a standard in his concert program. "Rock and Roll the Place" has all the high energy and controlled frenzy of last year's sizzler "Two Tickets To Paradise." Again it is not parody, it is a step forward, an assured step towards even cleaner rock and roll.

His versatility enables him to coax tremendous feeling even from the lover in "Seve A Little Room In Your Heart" matched the best broken-hearted lamenting of early Rod Stewart. Here the shattered lover poignantly comes across in "Maybe I'm A Fool." He goes beyond, however, to deliver the forceful expression of the title track, a powerful affirmation of life and all its possibilities. It is the album's closer, however, that establishes his mastery of the slow style. "Call On Me," loving but not sentimental, is kept tightly under control to evocate the calm assurance of the touch of a friend's hand. In everything there is his characteristic sense of melody.

Unqualified praise is always suspect. While there are weaker songs on the album, by name "Maureen" and "Nightmare," even these are stronger than most of what is pawned on radio today.

Daniels, Mason and McGowan Entertain

By P.A.

Where were you on Saturday the third? Was the music too loud to speak to your roommate's girlfriend's cousin? Were you hungry and disgusted to discover the pretzels were soaked with beer? Or did the host simply forget to provide munchies? While the less fortunate watched the two hour Love Boat Special, 203 people (I was the odd one) had a wonderful evening. Jealous?

Playing to a near capacity crowd at The Main Point, Daniels, Mason and McGowan entertained. Come now, how did you miss their last coffeehouse performance at Villanova? We all know that functions on campus have suffered a drought of people, for lack of liquid, but the band packed them into the Day Hop.

The evening at the Main Point was great. They made no mistakes. For new fans it was an evening of delightful music, good munchies and warm feeling. (one had to sit close to the person next to you as the temperature was just cool enough).

The band started with "The Race is On." It was. I still can't decide who had a better time, the audience or the band. Incidently, the band is made up of four characters, two with hats and two hatless. The hatless include Ben Daniels, a sophomore FINE Arts Major at Villanova who writes their original material. He sings lead often and plays rhythmn guitar. Then there is Peter McGowan, a senior business major. He's the guy who hides behind the fiddle, except for a banjo number, appropriately named "Pete's Banjo Tune." Pete sings lead, as they all do at one time or another during the show, during (can you remember this), "Lesson Too Late For the Learning."

For the beginning of the hatted, Bob Crowley had his debut at the recent Villanova coffeehouse, when he sang, "Athens County." Bob does it sitting down as he sings backup vocals and plays all kinds of strange looking percussion instruments. Bob is also a senior business major at Villanova. (rumor has it he sings in the shower).

Last but first, Danny Mason does it with his hat on. Playing lead guitar, lead vocals and lead talking, this rare talent makes the show.

But all the past and future information I could tell you makes no difference. They are good. As all true entertainment works, you forget about the outside aggravations of life for a while. Their music picks you up and drops you off. Their repertoire includes many of Ben's originals', such as: "The Train Song "Inspiration", (my favorite) and a song for all of us who ever had a girl/boyfriend, "Rosemarie." There are also comfortable favorites for the folk-freak in you. Such as, "Everybody Knows Her," (Jonathan Edwards), "Blue sky," (Allman brothers) and Sugar Mountain, by Neil Young of course.

Its a mixture of original and old folk favorites. But never underestimate the power of a folk band. (if thats what they are). Their version of Rory Gallaghers' "Walk on Hot Coals," will make your spine tingle (that is if your normal). You spend a lot of time stamping your feet and clapping your hands, by the bands' chorus director, Danny Mason. Audience participation puts you with the band, its not Rocky Horror . . . But its GOOD.

Cats Pound Penn

By BETH WHITE

The Wildcats, led by sophomore guard Tom Sienkiewicz, broke the Penn Quakers 89-80 for the fourth consecutive year Tuesday night at the Palestra. Sienkiewicz, tallying 39 points, also broke three scoring records: 21 out of 23 free throws, a Villanova and Penn opponent record; and the most points scored in a Big Five game.

The victory provided the team's only win among the Big Five schools and boosted their record to 12-11 overall. Penn, favored by five points, got off to a slow start, falling behind 19-3 after eight minutes of play. Wildcat coach Massimino alternated between a man-to-man and zone defense to effectively hold the Quaker offense from mounting any scoring drives. Massimino implemented a three-guard offense to maximize the scoring capabilities of guards Sienkiewicz and Rory Sparrow, who compiled 24 and 12 points, respectively in the first half.

Senior Ron Cowan, the game's third leading scorer, displayed exceptional form, sinking eight points in the first half. Just seconds before halftime, Cowan blocked a breakaway shot and then hit his head on the backboard, requiring three stitches over his right eye. Cowan remained out of action until replacing center Marty Caron with two minutes left in the second half. Senior Larry Sock and Cowan exchanged positions on the floor several times during the last minutes of the game.

Freshman forward Aaron Howard led the team in rebounding, nabbing five in the first half and six in the second. Marty Caron pulled in five rebounds and forward Alex Bradley, grabbed four.

Foul trouble plagued the Penn Quakers in the second half. Five players fouled out, four of them from the starting line-up, and two more finished with four fouls. The Penn scoring was led by forward Tony Price with 27 points, followed by Tim Smith (13 points) and Matt Whitt (12) and guards James Salters and Bobby Willis, each with 10 points.

Sienkiewcz added another 12 points in the second half, boosting his game total to the record 39 points. Sparrow tallied eight more to finish with 20 points. Cowan contributed eight from his first half action, and Bradley and Caron scored seven points each. Freshmen Howard and Bethea both added four points to round out the scoring: Villanova 89 - U. of Penn 80.

Women Gagers Fall To Macs

By TONY PANGONAS

An outstanding 30 point and 22 rebound performance by Lisa Ortlip was not enough to keep the Villanova women's basketball team from losing a heartbreaker to the Mighty Macs of Immaculata, 65-63.

The first half saw the lead change hands several times before Immaculata grabbed the lead 28-27 at the end of the half.

The Wildcats struck quickly for the first six points in the second half to make it, 33-28. Their lead expanded to six points, 49-43 before the Macs came back. Freshman Eileen Hilton tied the game at 53, with 4:54 left. Hilton then sank the first half of a one-and-one for the Macs first lead since halftime 54-52 with 4:20 left.

The lead then switched five times before Karen Hizney scored on a pass from Kathy Straccia with 2:14 remaining, putting the Wildcats up, 61-56. After a rebound basket by Hilton with 1:48 left, Straccia put a great move on her defender and went back door on a layup and was fouled to give the Cats a 63-60 lead with 1:29 to play. Straccia missed her foul shot and 15 seconds later, the Macs' Cindy Mark hit a foul line jumper to cut the Cats lead to one.

With only 53 seconds to go in the game, the Cats' Beas McGinn was a split-second late on a pass to Straccia in the lane and Straccia's momentum carried her into Mark who stole the pass. Mark made both foul shots on a one-and-one to give Immaculata a 64-63 lead. The Cats had several opportunities to regain the lead but could not. In desperation, Hizney fouled Mark with two seconds left and Mark made the first of a one-and-one making the final score 65-63.

Besides Ortlip's efforts, Hizney chipped in with 14 points, while Straccia had 13 points and pulled down 8 rebounds.

The Wildcats return home tomorrow at 7 o'clock for a game with Ursinus and then Tuesday against Pittsburgh before going back on the road Thursday at Bloomsburg.

Waterkittens Take Two Big Meets

By GINGER FANNON

The Women's Swim Team won again last week, coming out ahead in 2 of its toughest meets of the season.

Villanova swam well in the meet against Temple, winning 69-62. Individual victories were Jenni Franks in the 100 and 200 free and 100 breast; Mary Maier in the 50 and 100 fly and 100 IM; Tara Baroody in the 50 and 100 back and 500 free; Alice Maben in the 50 breast and 50 free and Cathy Carter in the relay.

The Women Divers were also very impressive in the victory over Temple. Marcia Gregory, the first woman diver from Villanova to be sent to national competition, placed second. Ann Levenite and Mary Jarret tied for third place.

The win over La Salle was "a great team victory," explained Coach Jane Ackerman. "The girls swam their best individual times and the divers did well also." The team won 11 out of 15 events, scoring 72 points to La Salle's 59 points.

The girls are preparing for a meet this week against Widener and the PAIAW meet this weekend.

Their last meets are next week at Swarthmore and Immaculata. Ackerman expects to end the season with 11 wins and 2 losses.

March 1, 2 and 3 the swimmers and divers will be traveling to West Chester for the Easterns and then on to Reno, Nevada for the Nationals, March 7-10.

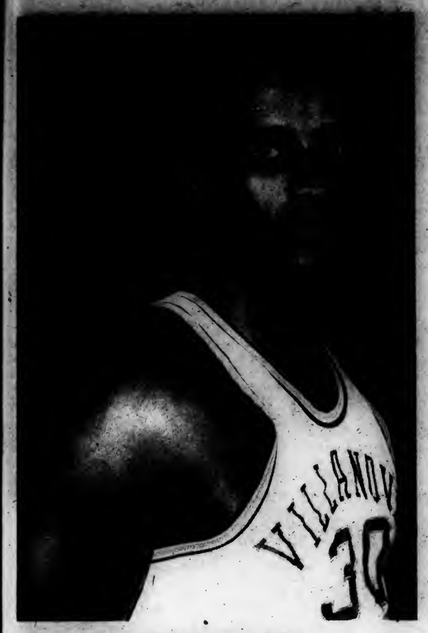
Against Army, the highlight of the meet was sophomore Kevin Connors who swam the 100 Breast in the B-medley relay in a time of 1:04.1; this qualifies him for the Wildcat A Medley relay. In the 200 breast, Kevin went 2:19.1, his best ever by more than two seconds, and this qualified him for the Eastern Championships, which will be held at Penn State, March 1st-3rd.

The Watercats face a tough season finale with meets against Rutgers, Navy, and Syracuse this week. The Cats have good shots at winning both the Rutgers and Syracuse meet today 4:00 p.m. at the Field House Pool meets. This weekend the National Catholic Swimming and Diving Championships will be held at the Field House. Coach Geiss will surely be inspecting the merchandise as the National Catholics is where Villanova does its major recruiting for the future.



What Ever Happened To ....

Sam Sims

By JIM SAVAGE

He came from Phoenix City, Alabama to be the most pleasant surprise on coach Jack Kraft's powerful Wildcat basketball team of the late 1960's. A scholar athlete who went on to graduate from Villanova Law School, Sammy Sims participated in post season tournaments each of his three varsity seasons.

The rugged 6'5", 205 pound forward was renowned for his ability to drive the baseline and score back door layups like no Villanovan since. Sims handed massive Bob Lanier of St. Bonaventure his only 1969 defeat in a memorable Field House contest, 64-62, by blocking a layup.

At a recent Big-5 "Old Timers'" game, Sammy Sims reflected on his greatest moment as a Wildcat, "It would have to be my initial start, sophomore year, against Duquesne. They came in with a very tall, talented team. We had a front line of Johnny Jones, myself and Joe Cruz. We averaged about 6'4" across the front line. As it turned out we beat them by two points, I think, and I scored the winning bucket that particular game."

Actually it was one point, 77-76 in double overtime. Sims remained in Philadelphia after graduation and served as an assistant for current coach Rollie Massimino's first season, 1973-74. He then retired from the sports scene.

"Presently I'm what you would call a businessman. I'm a lawyer with the federal government. I work with the Department of Housing and Urban Development in center city Philadelphia."

Sims summed his impressions of his playing years by saying, "Coach Kraft's style of discipline helped us win games with a small team. If we tried to battle opponents under the boards I don't think we could have done a good job, but we played our "ball" defense and were able to come out victorious."

Paige Sets World Record In Milrose Games

By JOHN J. COOK

In an exciting weekend of indoor track and field, Villanova's Don Paige set a world record in the 1000 yard run, Sydney Maree lowered the school record in the mile, Villanova qualified two more runners for the NCAA championships and seven more for the upcoming IC4A championship meet.

In Friday night's Wanamaker-Millrose games in New York City Don Paige set his second world record as he outkicked former Villanova star Mark Belger in the 1000 and broke Mike Boit's world record time of 2:05.5, finishing in 2:05.3. Don's other world record came in 1976 when he teamed with George MacKay, Mark Belger and Phil Kane at the Dartmouth USTFF Relays and set a world record of 16:19.0 in the indoor four-mile relay.

In the mile, former Villanova star Eamonn Coghlan missed former Villanova star Dick Buerkle's indoor world record in the mile by .1 second as he finished in 3:55.0. Sydney Maree, a current Villanova star, ran a personal best time of 3:57.1, lowering his own school record time and finishing third behind Eamonn and the Philadelphia Pioneer's Wilson Waigwa.

In a very fast half-mile Anthony Tufariello finished third behind Boston's Mark Lech and the Pacific Coast Club's Mark Enyeart in 1:51.5, only .5 seconds behind the first place Lech.

Tim Dale, in his "first and last" 500, finished out of the money in 58.5. Mike Solomon, Philadelphia Pioneer star, won the race in 56.9.

Dale then went on to anchor the victorious mile relay team of Keith Brown, Al Graves and Derrek Harbour as they easily beat Maryland and Seton Hall in a rather slow 3:17.0.

The two-mile relay team of Dean Childs, John Hunter, John Burns and Amos Korir also won. Korir, who's anchor leg of 1:51.7 qualified him for the IC4A half-mile championship, blew away his opposition and won in 7:36.7.

In the Knights of Columbus meet in Cleveland, Ohio, on Saturday night, hometown boy Derrek Harbour took fourth in the 440 behind Willie Smith after leading for much of the race.

Tufariello picked up another third, this time in the 600, as he crossed the tape in 1:12.1, 1.4 seconds behind winner Mike Solomon.

Korir was victorious in the 1000, beating second place Tom Byers by .6, and qualifying for both the NCAA's and IC4A's with his time of 2:09.0.

Paige stepped up in distance and won his second race of the weekend, the mile, in a slow, unchallenged 4:06.1. Paige, fourth in last year's outdoor NCAA mile, is expected to do at least as well in this year's indoor championships.

Dean Childs, in his best race of the season, ran 8:46.6 in the two-mile, his personal best at that distance, and finished fourth to Tony Stannings of the Mason-Dixon track club.

The mile relay was first with a time of 3:19.0, 10.2 seconds slower than the American and collegiate record they set earlier this season. Citing a slow track and mediocre competition as reasons for the slower times of recent past, anchorman Dale predicted a very fast NCAA and the possibility of lowering the record once again.

Also victorious was the mile relay team of John Hunter, John Burns, Amos Korir and Sydney Maree. Their time of 7:36.0 was .6 faster than their time the night before and once again they weren't challenged for the lead.

This weekend the team travels to Baton Rouge, Louisiana for the Pepsi-Cola International Track Festival on Saturday night. Very tough 880 and mile fields will be on hand and excellent times are expected.

On Sunday, Villanova runners have their last chance to qualify for the IC4A championships in the Delaware Invitational meet in Newark, New Jersey.

EAA Has Potential

By PATRICK FLYNN

On December 1, 1976, Penn State's Nittany Lion basketball team traveled to Amherst, Massachusetts to meet the Minutemen of the U. Mass. The outcome of that contest (a 72-70 Penn State triumph) is of no real importance. However, the game was significant in one respect; it was the inaugural match of the new-born Eastern Collegiate Basketball League.

The league changed its name the following year to the Eastern Athletic Association, and now it's commonly known as the Eastern Eight. But the same teams — Villanova, Rutgers, George Washington, Massachusetts, Pittsburgh, Penn State, West Virginia, and Duquesne — still comprise it.

Several factors were involved in Villanova's decision to enter the league after years as an independent. According to Athletic Director Dr. Ted Aceto, "We had several organizations, clubs and alumni groups, as well as the administration, review the pros and cons of independent and league play. We came to the conclusion that we had a better chance of making the NCAA playoffs as one of eight than as just another ECAC school." The EAA is granted an automatic bid to the national tournament for the champion of its own post-season playoff.

Head Basketball Coach Rollie Massimino also emphasizes the automatic qualifier as a major advantage of league play. "The conference is something to look forward to," he said, "because regardless of what happens the rest of the season, there's still the opportunity for a national championship."

There are other advantages, also. "One plus is the fact that you can play your games at the site of the home team, so we are able to bring calibre teams back to the Field House," commented Aceto.

The advantage can also be seen in dollars and cents. "Economically, you have to say that it helped, mainly because of all the money that was brought back by reaching the final eight last year," said Aceto. He added, "The avenue for that opportunity was the conference. The league took us there."

The Eastern Eight might also be seen as a factor in convincing high school players to attend Villanova. "It's somewhat of a recruiting tool. It helps to show these kids a definite shot at the NCAA," explains Aceto.

This season, another aspect of league play has emerged at Villanova. The Wildcats have hovered at the .500 mark for most of the season, but currently own a 7-1 slate in EAA play, somewhat of a surprise to many experts. "We were picked fifth by most of the sportswriters at the beginning of the year," said Massimino. "We felt we had something to prove. In the league, we've produced the way we're capable of producing. We've played extremely well."

Right now, Villanova stands atop the EAA standings, just one game ahead of Pittsburgh, who invades the Field House this Tuesday in a game which Massimino describes as "critical." Should the Cats emerge victorious in that one, they would earn the right to face last-place Massachusetts in the first round of the playoffs, an enviable distinction. A victory in that contest would send them to Pittsburgh for the final two rounds, and the possibility of another trip to the Eastern Regionals.

But for now the focus is on basketball's Eastern Eight. So where does the league stand currently and what is the outlook for the future? "Right now, we're

Intramural Hoop Action

By JERRY VENTRESCA

As the Intramural Basketball League approaches the halfway point of the 1978-79 season, 17 of the 72 teams remain undefeated. In the fraternity league, only one team (DTD) among eight is undefeated, but playoff hopes are high for at least two other teams.

In the 3:30 league, the powerhouse Cougars (3-0), led by sociology teacher Brian Jones, captain Steve Crispin, guard Brian Costello, and rebounder Tom Powers are averaging over 100 points per game. The Bomb Squad is the Cougars main concern with a 2-0 record holding of second place.

The 4:30 league is intense with the Bang Gang averaging over 90 points per game, and Super Stars II tied for first place with 3-0 records. The Sun Kings (2-0) dropped from second place to third. Express (3-0) remains unbeaten in the 5:30 league with the 69ers (2-1) hanging on to second place after losing to the Express, 75-26.

The Ice Men and Simple Dreams, both 3-0, are tied for first place in the 6:30 league. They meet on February 26, setting up a big showdown. The Wildmen trail in third place at 2-1.

"Gimmie-The-Ball" and captain John Caughlin's SPOA's are tied for first with 3-0 records in the 7:30 league. Trailing them are the Fighting Irish, now 2-0.

At St. Mary's, the 5:30 league is led by Home Grown and The Express, both with 3-0 records. In third place is The Noms, 2-1 coming off an early season loss. The 6:30 league is led by Stampede, currently 2-0. The 7:30 league, dominated by On Tap (3-0), leads Saco East and Clones, both 2-0.

In the fraternity league, last year's frat champ DTD (4-0), defeated LKD (3-1), 37-36, to claim sole possession of first place. Meanwhile, SPE now ties LKD for second place.

In the Resident League, "The Jones" of Stanford 4-D look promising. Phil Farrell, organizer of the intramural leagues, commented that the participation of the students and the facilities being used are remarkable and that Villanova could use more sports facilities for such student activities.

The Hawk Is Not Dead

By ED McASSEY

The near-extinct Hawk sailed from its deathbed last Friday night with a 54-50 win over Villanova at the Palestra. This decisive win snapped a ten-game Big Five losing streak which almost pronounced the City Line Avenue bird dead. It was also St. Joe's first win over Villanova in four years.

The contest was a typical City Series game as both schools packed the Palestra in the second part of a double header (Penn-Columbia in the first game,) but this game was even more dramatic. The game was extremely close and wasn't decided until the final buzzer of a five minute overtime.

St. Joe's Luke Griffin put up a 16 foot off-balance shot with the lights reading :02 to put the Hawks ahead 52-50 in overtime. Next the Cats' inbound pass was picked off and converted to another basket on a Jeff Clark layup with one second. The game winning bucket came after Alex Bradley missed the second of two free throws with 1:31 left and the count standing even at 50. This was Bradley's first miss after 17 straight free throws. Norman Black grabbed the rebound and led the Hawks into their four-to-score offense. Griffin began his move for the game breaker with 10-seconds still ticking, and the rest is history.

Villanova had dribbled onto the Palestra floor wearing T-shirts that said, "Four to score, but we'll get more," referring to the famed Hawk stall offense, and it appeared they would, judging by some of the Cats' first half leads. Villanova's shooting was more accurate than the Hawks' in the first half (V.U. 60 percent, S.J. 33 percent) with leads like 24-13, 26-15, and 33-22. St. Joe's staged a four point comeback just prior to halftime before entering the locker room at 33-26.

The Cats came out in the second half looking strong and widening the advantage to 43-31 with buckets by Marty Caron and Tom Sienkiewicz. Once again the Hawks informed the Cats they weren't dead, as they began to revive with just under ten minutes ticking away. Jeff Clark hit for two on a jumper with 9:55 left, and he connected again on a 12 foot jumper to close the gap to 45-43.

St. Joe's was able to tie the contest at 45-45 (6:52) after Norman Black made two shots from the charity line after being fouled by Rory Sparrow. To complicate matters even more, it was Sparrow's fourth foul. Later Clark picked off a pass from the Wildcats, and the Hawks started to sit on the ball. They quickly forced Villanova out of a 1-2-2 zone and into a man-to-man defense. St. Joe's went four-to-score until Aaron Howard swiped the ball from Black on a drive to the basket at 2:44.

With the boards showing 45-45, Massimino knew he had no choice but to hold the ball for a last shot. This final shot would be even tougher since the Cats were a bit rusty after not making a field goal since 13:22 into the half. With six seconds remaining, Rory "Mr. Clutch" Sparrow pumped an errant shot, which was rebounded by Luke Griffin. The Hawks couldn't get another shot off before the culmination of regular play.

Tom Sienkiewicz and Aaron Howard both tallied for the Cats from the field in the extra five minutes. Alex Bradley made one of his two free throws at 1:31 before the Hawks went into the four-to-score. Griffin put the game winner in with two seconds left. The Hawk's game-saver had a feeling all week that it was going to end this way. "I missed my first shot tonight, and at other times this season I might not have taken another shot all night," Griffin remarked. "But tonight I said that if it comes I'm going to take it."

Massimino and his quintet did everything possible to contain the Hawks in the final minutes considering that two players were in foul trouble. "I thought we played great defense. I thought we defended their four-to-score perfectly. At the end we had them where we wanted them," stated the exhausted Villanova coach in the Palestra press room. "It was perfect for us. We had two players with four fouls apiece and we needed the rest, so we let them hold the ball."

This loss gives Villanova sole possession of last place in the City Series for the moment. Things are brighter in the Eastern Eight picture, where the Cats have clinched a home court playoff spot with their record of 7-1 in the league.

Swimmers Down Temple

By BRUCE MURRAY

The Men's Swimming Team went one for two last week with a win over local rival Temple (69-44) and a loss to national powerhouse Army (74-39). The record now stands at (3-8).

"The season is coming to an end now," said senior Co-Captain Kevin Quinn," and wins over Rutgers and Syracuse this week would make the season satisfying both morally and perspectively. The first half of the season was frustrating," he continued, "but the victories over Temple and Drexel have turned us around; everyone has been swimming well. We're a young team, and we've improved a great deal over this season."

For the Temple meet, Coach Ed Geisz employed a different strategy, and in doing so, he caught Temple off guard. In the 1000 Freestyle, sophomore Tom Popdan swam along with senior co-captain Eric Wenger; the result was a one-two finish. Along with Jerry Byrne, captain Quinn swam the 50 free, and again the result was a one two finish. These one-two finishes put a serious dent

Progress In Women's Sports

By JOAN BARNISH

The effects of the 1972 Education Amendment, better known as Title IX are finally being felt at Villanova.

"Last year was the first year for scholarships in the women's program and I definitely want to include more next year." said Villanova Women's Coordinator Mary Ann Steenrod. "I eventually want to include all eight sports not just field hockey, basketball, swimming and track and field."

Title IX was passed to ensure against sex discrimmination in federally-assisted education programs.

The women's program is in the process of declaring a division in the newly founded American Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW). In division one, up to 100 percent scholarships can be offered; division two, up to 50 percent and up to 10 percent in division 3. The basketball team is the only sport which qualifies for division one and all other varsity sports are in division two. The division competition will begin in the 1979-80 academic year.

"I have been here for five years and there were no scholarships, but now there are and I can see a lot of improvement," said Jim Thompson, cross country and track coach. "Attitudes towards women have improved but they are not where they should be. Compared to the men, budget and salary-wise women are not nearly equal."

Mary Ann Steenrod

"Distribution of the funds should be done by the percentage of female athletes and male athletes but I don't think it is being done," continued Thompson.

"There should be equal opportunity in the training room facilities, not just saying it's equal to get service," said Thompson. "We are still second place when it comes to the facilities."

"I think the men's and women's programs are very compatible as far as scheduling the facilities," said Steenrod. "Many changes have taken place over the past year and a half such as: the first women's lockerroom in St. Mary's and access to the training room and the weight room being open to everyone."

Harry Perreta, in his first season as head women's basketball coach said, "It is like a transition period, women's sports were nothing but now we are turning it into something. The transition is taking place all over the country, but some colleges change faster than others."

The administration's whole philosophy and outlook on sports is much more competitive. Villanova has a commitment to women and what they want to do on this campus, commented Steenrod.

"Basically, we get attention since the admissions office and alumni are interested in the women's program," said Jane Ackerman, swimming and diving coach. "Overall, I don't have that much contact with the administration but what I have seen of it, they are interested."

Another problem that could hold women back in the future is being under the men's program director said Thompson. A change back to women's athletic director instead of coordinator would help solve some problems. The women's program could then make its own decisions, which is what it says under the Title IX, added Thompson.

Steenrod sees the major problem that faces Villanova as student support. The teams need more exposure, especially since most of them are starting to come around.

"Women's organized athletics at Villanova is only five years old," said Steenrod, "I guess it is just going to take time to get the student support we want."

Trustees Delay Zoning Request

Future Of Morris Estates Uncertain

by NANCY ROONEY

Villanova's Board of Trustees has instructed the University to postpone their appeals for zoning variances to use the Morris Estates property as dormitories and playing fields. The appeals were to be presented before the Radnor Township Zoning Hearing Board last evening.

The decision to discontinue the zoning appeal procedure resulted from a discussion of the uses of the Morris Estates at the Trustees' meeting on Tuesday, February 13.

"We went into the Board meeting with the intention of moving ahead. However, someone came up with an idea that requires further thought. Discussion then developed in such a way that we felt it was more prudent to review our position," explained Father President John M. Driscoll, O.S.A.

The Board had approved the University's attempts at a zoning variances for the Morris Estates in the past. While negotiating the purchase of the property, the University had requested rezoning of the land for institutional use. This bid was rejected by a four-to-one vote.

Father Driscoll attributed the Board's sudden reversal of its position on rezoning to their belief that the long-range plans for the property were not clear enough.

"Suddenly, we felt that we had better clarify our own thinking. We are in the process of reviewing the position we had taken before. We just want to explore further and determine finally the uses we intend to make of the land," Driscoll noted.

At Thursday night's zoning meeting, the University planned to present appeals seeking variances to use the Morris-Reeves, Solitude, Dundale, and W.H. Morris houses as residences for various numbers of unrelated persons, which is forbidden by the zoning code. They were also requesting permission to use a portion of the land for playing courts and athletic fields.

Morris Estates: When will we be able to use them?

Father John Deegan, O.S.A., vice-president for student life, noted that all the proper preparations had been taken and the decision on the rezoning request looked "favorable."

The sudden halt to the zoning procedure came as a surprise and a disappointment to those administrators counting on the Morris Estates to ease the campus housing problem. Father Deegan

Snow

The National Weather Service says that Philadelphia got 14.3 inches of snow in Monday's storm, the sixth largest in history for Southeastern Pennsylvania. All most Villanova students know about the storm, however, is that it dumped enough snow to cancel classes for two days. For the complete story on the storm and its impact, see page 3.

Budget Stirs Senate

By BILL CLARK

Last Friday, February 16, the University Senate held its first meeting of the spring semester. Even though many issues came up, the meeting was predominantly a discussion of next year's budget and faculty raises.

"Last Monday, the Administration Budget Committee shared with us their final draft which was in balance," said Senator Alvin Clay, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee. "Most capital expenditures are not included in this budget. All the funds included in the budget are not guaranteed, but have been realized in years past. This is the first time we have ever had to do this."

Senator James Cleary, vice-president for academic affairs, stated the possibility of calling a special meeting of the Senate to present the official budget. He also said that next year's freshman class will be increased from 1450 to 1475 students.

Senator Langran also complained about the plight of the faculty in the budget.

"The faculty are losing the fight against inflation. We are not getting the raise we asked for nor are we getting a better medical plan which was promised to us," said Senator Langran. "I just wish people would give more thought to the plight of the faculty when drawing up the budget."

Another related issue which drew much discussion was a resolution brought forth by the Faculty Affairs Committee in regard to awarding merit increments to the faculty for superior performance. During the discussion of the issue, Senator Langran read a policy statement already approved by the Board of Trustees which basically said the same thing. Therefore, the Senate approved to write a letter to Father President Driscoll informing him of the existing policy and asking him to implement it.

The resolution denouncing cheating and plagiarism drew no discussion whatsoever. The motion passed by a 36-0 margin, with one abstention.

Senator Joseph Cassidy of the Student Life Committee proposed a motion to exclude all vehicular traffic from the area between Sheehan and Sullivan Halls.

"This would create a recreational area for 825 students. This would replace the area between Dougherty and Kennedy Halls, which is being used for the construction of the new University Center," explained Senator Cassidy. He explained that the new Bartley parking lot has sufficient room to handle the extra cars. After a brief discussion, the motion carried 34-0 with 3 abstentions.

The final motion that was passed by the Senate originated in the Student Life Committee as well. The motion, introduced by Senator Beth Dalena, called for the University to give preference to Villanova students in campus employment. Again after a brief discussion, it passed by a 32-0 margin with 4 abstentions.

New Programs To Be Offered

Two new degree programs specifically designed for human service employees will be offered at Villanova University this year.

They will be particularly beneficial to social workers, welfare workers, drug and alcohol rehabilitation counselors, nursing and retirement home professionals, as well as those who have practical experience in related fields but who may lack college certification.

Known as "Human Services" and "Human Services Administration," both programs grant a bachelor of arts degree and are offered through Villanova's part-time division, University College.

Charles P. Bruderle

"These programs are designed to prepare balanced, developed people who understand the broad field of human services work," says Mr. Charles P. Bruderle, dean of University College. "They will possess skills basic to any number of the myriad of possible positions in the vast and ever-expanding field of social services."

Both programs include a series of new courses called human service as well as courses in sociology, inter-group relations, family studies, human psychological development, personality development, and community sociology.

The Human Services Administration course of study will give students an additional dimension. By taking a series of management courses, these students will be trained to direct programs in human and health care services.

In addition, both of the new programs will give students the fundamental preparation necessary to study psychological counseling on the graduate or master's degree level.

Mentzer Award

Each year, for eight years now, the University sponsors a memorial award to honor one student who, from documented services, appears to have contributed most to expanding opportunities for the underprivileged. The award perpetuates the memory of a former faculty member, Thomas J. Mentzer, whose own energies were so generously given to the same cause.

The Villanovan invites students to nominate students who volunteer their time and energy on a regular basis to such programs as social action programs, hospital volunteer programs, etc. The purpose of the Mentzer Award is to give recogition to that individual whose generosity is matched by his/her anonymity.

Nominations must be confined to Villanova students, and it is requested that some particulars about the individuals be given so that documentation of their efforts be obtained. No interviews of candidates are conducted. As to tangible merits, the award is in the form of a cash stipend, individial and University mounted plaques, and a reference credential of which nominees may be rightly proud.

Dr. James Murphy and Dr. Patrick Nolan, of the English Department, also would be pleased to receipt nominations.

Associate Dean of Men Anthony Martin

By STEVE HAGGERTY and BILL ROCK

Since the beginning of the fall semester, six of the 37 student members of the male resident assistant staff have resigned or been dismissed. This amount is larger than any other recent semester.

Associate Dean of Men Anthony Martin indicated that this does not represent an alarming trend. Instead, he sees it as being symptomatic of a growing program.

"Some problems occur every semester," stated Martin. "You have to recognize that it takes exceptional students to be R.A.'s. Not all personalities are suited for such a position. Each of the six students left the program for different reasons."

Tim Kieser, resident assistant in Stanford Hall, resigned his position in January. As a first year law student, he cited the difficulty of studying in a residence hall as the reason for his quitting. Kieser felt a transfer to a quieter dorm would have alleviated the problem.

"I approached Jeff Quinn with a request for a transfer and was told they weren't permitted," Kieser explained. "I was disappointed the problem couldn't be resolved."

Chris O'Neill, former resident assistant in St. Mary's Hall, cited too many requirements on his time as one of the causes of his resignation.

"This year R.A.'s are required to be on duty every other night. You can't imagine the difference this makes," O'Neill commented.

In addition, O'Neill felt that the morale among the staff was low. "I was fortunate to live nearby. The room and board did not mean that much to me. Other R.A.'s couldn't leave as easily as I could."

Another former R.A., who wished to remain anonymous, thought that a lack of communication in the Dean of Men's Office was the root of his inability to discipline students. It was this inability that led to his dismissal. He believed that Dean of Men Allen B. Wechsler and Associate Dean Martin approached discipline in different ways.

"If I sent someone to Wechsler, it was the guillotine; if I sent him to Martin, it was a pat on the back," he declared.

Former Area Coordinator Bernie Taberini also alluded to a difference in philosophies toward discipline in the Dean's office. Taberini felt that this inconsistency was most apparent in the handling of discipline cases from Corr Hall.

Taberini believed that Martin's friendship with many of the residents in Corr Hall interfered with his judgement in disciplining the students.

"There is a gross inconsistency in the disciplining of those who committed offenses from Corr Hall and those who committed offenses from other dorms on campus. This undermined the position of the R.A's," remarked Taberini.

Associate Dean Martin did not see these friendships as an interference but as a constructive aide.

"I'd be happy to get to know most of the students so that I'd be able to help them more," explained Martin. "In a number of places, and I don't mind singling out Corr, I have gone out of my way to get to know people. I can't see criticizing that.

"We in the Dean's office are constantly reevaluating the resident assistant program. We have recently tried to recruit more undergraduates as R.A.'s. This may be causing a few minor problems now, but in the long run, it will be to the resident students' advantage. In general, I see the program growing and becoming more effective," stated Martin.

Campus Blanketed

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

Two feet of snow blanketed campus Monday, cancelling two days of classes and virtually halting maintenance operations. But despite abandoned cars and damaged equipment, the lots were plowed in time for school Wednesday, and the two lost class days will soon be recovered, according to Dr. James Cleary, vice-president for academic affairs.

"I'll make every attempt to make the days up, as we did last year," said Cleary. He will consult with the deans to decide if and when the snow days will be made up, he said.

According to both Maintenance and Security, the biggest problem with snow removal was abandoned cars.

"If we had a car-free campus, we could get the campus plowed in two-thirds of the time," said Thomas Trucks, director of Maintenance.

"The average motorist isn't prepared for this," said Captain Joseph Cunnane of Security. "It's difficult to get the cars off the highway, never mind one of the driveways," he said.

To facilitate snow removal, no cars were allowed on campus Tuesday.

Maintenance began to remove snow Sunday night, using its own equipment, said Trucks. "But when the snow started coming Monday morning, we really couldn't keep up with it," he said.

The contracting firm of Doyle and McDonnell, from Berwyn, plows the parking lots of Villanova. "We tried to get them here Monday night," said Trucks, "but because of breakdowns in their own equipment and because their men were so tired, they could not get here until Tuesday. They kept their promise to be here 9:00 Tuesday morning."

Plowing began Tuesday at the Law School and St. Mary's parking lots. At 1:00 p.m., the plows started work on the fieldhouse parking lot, then moved to the main parking lot at about 4:00, said Trucks. "We decided fairly early that we would be opening school Wednesday," he said.

Trucks said that student cooperation "was pretty poor this time." The jeep used by maintenance to clear sidewalks broke down after it was shoveled full of snow, he said.

"I don't know how many broken windows we had from snowballs at Austin and all around campus," said Trucks.

"We had very few students working with us," he said. "The high point was Monday afternoon, when we had about 13 or 14."

The consensus is that this year's blizzard did not cause as many problems as last year's. "We had to put three switchboard operators in St. David's Inn for the night, and we picked them up at 6:30 the next morning," said Cunnane, "but there were not as many as last year."

"Problems were fewer this year," said Father President John Driscoll. "Last year conditioned us for this year."

Internships Now Available

With continued emphasis on the trend toward relevance in higher education, it was announced today that Villanova University has arranged internship opportunities for students in Washington, D.C. According to Dr. Al Dorley, Coordinator, The Internship Program, internships are available during the Summer and Fall of 1979 in Congressional offices and Executive agencies as well as in many other areas of interest such as the environment, consumer affairs, journalism, communications, the arts, and business, to mention only a few.

Internships have become an increasingly popular component of students' curricula as they provide students with the opportunity to integrate academic theory with practice in an applied situation. In addition, internships have helped to enable students to develop professional skills, explore career options, participate in the professional work "experience", and to discover strengths and weaknesses in their academic background so that they may better prepare for a career.

The internships are being handled by Dr. Dorley and have been developed in conjunction with the Washington Center for Learning Alternatives of Washington, D.C., a non-profit educational agency which develops the individual placements and provides internship placement, supervision, evaluation, academic courses, seminars, housing, and other support services for students from colleges and universities throughout the country. While on an internship for a full term, students remain enrolled at, and received academic credit from Villanova based on evaluations performed by the WCLA staff and faculty in Washington and facilitated by Villanova's faculty liaison with WCLA.

Most interns are juniors, seniors or graduate students but some sophomores have participated in the WCLA program to date. Placements are available in a wide range of interests and are appropriate for majors in any discipline. According to Dr. Dorley students interested in pursuing the possibility of an internship in Washington, D.C. should contact him at 102 Vasey (X-232) for more information. The deadline for the return of applications is March 1 for the Summer '79 program, and March 30 for the Fall '79 program.

Energy Course To Be Offered

You can be sure that the cost of home heating and energy fuels are only going to rise as time goes on. But there are some steps that can be taken, at the very least, to keep those costs at a minimum.

Villanova University is offering a short course of instruction on what those steps are, and will also give an in-depth look at utilizing a very available source of power, the sun.

Divided into eight sessions, the two-hour classes will meet weekly from February 28 to April 18. Homeowners as well as professionals interested in the topic will participate.

The seminar will be led by a leader in energy design, Mr. J. Paul Jones, a research director and consultant to several large corporations. He is the former educational chairman of the Young Presidents, and was an executive officer of a high technology organization involved in the United States space program.

Participants will learn how to make homes more energy efficient, how to evaluate the adaptability of homes to alternate sources of energy, and how to qualify for tax rebates.

The course is being offered through Villanova's Continuing Education program, under the direction of Mr. James Holstein.

The Budget Must Be A Constant Concern

We Should Have Seen It Coming

Remember how nice things seemed to be back in the fall, when the sky wasn't falling and when you could still see the grass?

Remember how concerned everyone — students, faculty and administrators — seemed to be about Villanova's relationship with the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board, promising a University-wide commitment to seek a change in the Commonwealth's drinking laws?

Well, that issue which dominated discussions of campus problems last semester seems to have been placed in a category with the highlights of Villanova football — better forgotten. We are not finished editorializing, however. We have our point to make, and our space to fill.

The students of Villanova made a big mistake in October. Preoccupied with fighting a hopeless cause, we overlooked the University budget for 1979-1980, with its proposed 10 percent increase in tuition and room and board. Although nothing is finalized, if the figures which are currently being discussed carry through, the Villanova resident student could be paying about $500 more to go to school here next year. Try telling that one to Mom and Dad, or the loan office at the bank.

The thing that really hurts, however, is the fact that we're getting little for the money (as our friends in C & F say, "No bang for the buck.") Villanova is treading water, fighting to keep up with an inflationary economy. Sure, the six-figure operating expenses for the Connelly Center are to be included, but don't expect much else new next year.

Why will we be paying a lot more money next September just to cover expenses for the same ol' Villanova? The answer, we believe, lies in a lack of long-range planning and management, an absence of goals and direction. How long can Villanova remain competitive in a rapidly contracting collegiate market while its student fees skyrocket and its attractions stagnate? The University seems to be so overwhelmed by the problem of staying solvent from year to year that no one has taken the time to wonder whether there will be a school for the class of '90 to graduate from.

Could students really have done anything back in the fall, when we were more worried about CATCH-19. One can always argue that until reports of the potential 10 percent increase leaked out this month, no one had any idea that anything was wrong. Maybe that's the whole problem.

We can't face the crisis each February and then forget it for 11 months.

If we cannot face the crisis now, we will pay the price later.

The students made a big mistake... we overlooked the budget...

Regulations

To All Villanova Students:

Are you happy with the campus visitation policy? Of course this question is rhetorical. We all know the answer. But where is all our bitching going to get us? The time for sitting back and waiting for "someone" to do something through conventional red tape has passed. What advances have been made this year? We've been "granted" an extension of visitation hours on Sundays until 11 o'clock. Is this meant to appease us? Are we to be treated as children? We are all old enough to be considered as legal adults — old enough to vote, to be drafted in wartime, to drink in many states, and to get married without our parents' permission. Why should we not have the right to choose who we entertain in our rooms and at what time? Is there any justification for these out-dated rules? If s-e-x is what's concerning the Administration and the Board of Trustees, let me assure their prudish minds that no visitation policy of any kind has ever caused anyone to retain their virginity any longer than they intended to.

One more point I'd like to bring out that perhaps not everyone is aware of. Our visitation privileges are on an experimental basis. They are subject to review by the Board of Trustees who could conceivably revoke them at any time. Of course you can get around the rules, but why should we have to sneak around and be made to feel as if we're doing something wrong when we're actually only being healthy, normal "young adults?"

This issue should concern all of us, residents and non-residents alike. We are being denied basic rights. This is our school, not the Administration's or the Board of Trustees'. We're the ones who are paying — this institution is here to serve us. Let's not sit back and be complacent. Let's bring Villanova out of the dark ages!

Those ready to take responsibility for changing these conditions, drop a line to campus box No. 399 or 3415, or stop by 301 Alumni and we can begin working on a Plan of Action. Remember, no one else is going to do this for you.

Sincerely,
Patricia Brown and Claire Anton

Van Service

To: Robert Adams, Charles Mevichelly . . . et al

As a driver for V.U. security for over six months now, I can say only this . . . the vans are not to be used by students as a taxi service. It was not myself you approached that day because, unless I was on a dispatch from Security HQ, I would have given you the ride requested. But you, as most Villanova students, misunderstand the purpose of the vans.

We are primarily for emergency runs to Bryn Mawr Hospital and the Infirmary, and at night patrol the campus on the lookout for anything amiss (illegal by law, not Villanova University regulations); I am sorry for your inconvenience, but look at it this way: if we stopped to give everyone a ride who wanted one, we would need approximately twenty vans on duty every hour of the day. This is something that Security's budget does not allow. And in conclusion, at the wonderful sum of $2.47 per hour, nobody but nobody has a right to complain about the service the van drivers give to the University.

Sincerely,
Anthony A. Belcastio '79
Security Driver

RA Situation

Dear Sir:

Having been at the enforcing end of V.U. regs for some time, I naturally become concerned when those who enforce the law begin to feel that they are above it. It would be bad enough should I be referring to R.A.'s, but I am not. I write you about a situation far worse, with greater implications.

I write to you about the Associate Dean of Men at this University, about his being above the law of this University and that of the Commonwealth, and about those in power who failed to take action when made aware of the situation.

While R.A.'s are fired for violating the least serious of the regulations, some higher-ups willfully disregard the law as it might only apply to the students. As all know who read this paper the law and regs apply to everyone in the same manner. So, if you're going to enforce the regs, then live them.

Respectively, I remain

Appalachian Benefit

Dear Editor,

During this last weekend, there was a twenty-four hour volleyball marathon held in Butler Annex, benefitting the Appalachian Project, sponsored by Campus Ministry. We, the members of the project, wish to extend our sincere appreciation to the many people who helped make the event a success. Special thanks go to Athletic Director, Dr. Ted Aceto, Ed Geist and Bobby Lambert for their time and efforts in helping us organize the marathon.

To the individual players, the "Chicago Skyliners," and the other groups who came out and participated, we also thank for their spirit and enthusiasm.

Finally, we applaud the sponsors who supported the participants through their pledges.

This week's On Campus dealt with a very topical issue — snow! The questions asked were: What do you think of the University's policy on the cancellation of classes, How do you feel about missing classes?; and What did you do with your time off?

Ellie O'Brien, Freshman: "Well, I don't really think it was necessary. I heard school was cancelled just because the parking lots weren't cleared. I didn't work the first snow day, but I worked the second. I don't want anymore snow days if I have to make up work."

Tom Delaney, Junior: "I think the school closing should have been announced sooner. I could have slept in. Two days was enough, I'd rather go to school in the snow than have to make it up at the end of the year.

Jackie Tolan, Freshman: "I love snowdays! I can do whatever I want — work or play. I definitely want more snowdays, we haven't had enough snow in Philly."

Joyce Piroli, Junior: "I think it was necessary that we had the snowdays off, however, if adequate plowing had been provided we wouldn't have had to miss school. Well, I'm not missing anything . . . junior nurses don't work anyway!"

Jeff Cohen, Junior: "Snow days are good to have once in awhile, but they screw up your schedule. I really eased off on my work and partied. I started to shovel out my car yesterday but I am doing it again today."

Charlie Andreoli and Louis Quintina, Seniors: "We like snow days. It's no problem missing school. First of all, we tried to fix our car, but we couldn't so we were stuck on campus. We didn't do much. We studied all day and worked all night. We don't want anymore snow days. We're tired of the snow and ready for some sun."

Security

Dear Villanovan,

In the last two editions of the Villanovan there have been letters to the editor concerning security guard Frank Cummings. I think it is time we let our proverbial pen rest!

In my dealing with Frank in the last two weeks, I have found a great change in this man. It seems as though he has let down his tough guy image and now greets all with a pleasant hello.

The first editorial served the purpose of pointing out to Frank that the people were not happy with his attitude. I feel, however, there was no need to print the second more radical letter that inferred that Frank studied security under Hitler!

Please don't turn the Villanovan into a Philadelphia Journal class newspaper and print anything that appeals to rednecks and morons. Please remember your duty to fairness and use your objectivity to decide what is and is not right for our newspaper.

Finally I think it is time to applaud the change in Frank and say that I hope his good nature persists!

Sincerely yours,
Chris Arendt

Cheating Correction

Dear Sir:

In the article, "Senate to Discuss Student Cheating," by Bill Clark (Villanovan, Feb. 16, 1979) it is stated that the "Academic Policy Committee" of the University Senate is "chaired" by Senator John J. O'Malley. In the interest of historical accuracy and responsible reporting, I would like to inform you that I presently serve and have for the past year and a half served as chairperson of the aforementioned committee. Incidentally, for over two and one half years, I served as chairperson of the APC Subcommittee on Cheating and Plagiarism. Since a large number of the members of the Academic Policy Committee are also members of the University Senate, it is the APC policy to allow one of its members to present to the senate any motions that result from committee proceedings. Father O'Malley generously agreed to present the APC motion on cheating and plagiarism.

May I also take this opportunity to thank the various members of the Academic Policy Committee and others who were instrumental in seeing this most important motion of policy through numerous hours of serious concern and interest on the part of students, faculty and members of the administration.

Dr. Benedict A. Paparella
Chairperson, Academic Policy Committee

Library Complaints

Dear Editor:

We would like to make a complaint about the library. Last Monday evening, we had some very important research to do, and to our surprise we found that the library was closed due to the snow, as it had been last Wednesday afternoon. This is an extremely inconvenient situation, particularly for off-campus students who stay on campus for the particular intent of using the library.

We realize that the snow creates hazardous driving conditions, and the library staff members wish to leave before the roads get too icy. However, we do not feel that this necessitates the closing of this facility. If the auxilary services were closed, and the on-campus student staff were to man the circulation desk and main door, there would be no need to close the library.

We fail to see the difficulty of such an arrangement; on the contrary, we feel that it is a service Villanova students are entitled to. With afternoon classes cancelled, a snowy afternoon would have been an ideal time to get some work done, and we were annoyed to find that we could not take advantage of this opportuniity.

We have always felt that there should be library hours, at least till 8 p.m., on Friday and Saturday evenings, but this is another issue in itself. It is a shame that a University of this size and quality does not have adequate library facilities to meet the needs of its student body.

Sincerely,
Cathy Belleville '79

Senate Holds 1st Meeting

Budget Still A Problem

On Friday, February 16, 1979, the Villanova University Senate met to conduct their first meeting of the new semester. The first order of business was a presentation by Dean A. Clay on behalf of the Budget Committee. The budget was, as reported, in balance but not without a great deal of difficulty.

Please note that the figures to be quoted are not on the final budget. These are merely projections that have come from work done by the Administrative Budget Committee and presented to the Senate Budget Committee. Note also that these figures will undergo further discussion within the Administration and by the Board of Trustees.

The projections indicate that tuition will be increased by 10% for both undergraduate and law students. This increase will be approximately $300.00. These figures are based on an average under-graduate enrollment of 5724 students. Room and Board at Villanova is also expected to rise 10% or an additional $200.00 depending on room and dormitory. This comes to a total increase of $500.00 for resident students.

After the Budget Committee's report, questions were raised by members of the Faculty concerning their salary increase and the fact that they compromised their salary increase of last year based on the promise that they would receive an increment coming from TIAA (Pension Fund) payments from the University. Thus far they have received no such payment and it was noted that this amount was not yet included in the operating budget which was being presented.

A motion was then introduced by Senator John O'Malley, O.S.A. concerning a policy on cheating and plagarism. The motion itself condemned cheating and plagarism in all forms by any member of the Villanova community. It urged Father President Driscoll that a procedure for dealing with this be developed and implemented by the University at the earliest possible date. This motion was passed unanimously by the Senate and will be forwarded to Father President Driscoll for review.

Two motions were presented by members of the Student Life Committee and subsequently passed by the Senate body. The first dealt with closing the area between Sullivan and Sheehan Halls to all vehicular traffic in order to solidify this area as a social gathering place. It is important to note that this will be implemented by using a movable barrier. The area will still be accessible for moving into and out of the two dormitories at the beginning and end of each scholastic year. A movable barrier would also not inhibit access for fire fighting equipment which may or may not be needed in the future.

The other motion coming from Student Life concerned giving priority to students in Villanova campus employment where applicable. This resolution, if passed by Father President Driscoll, will give priority to Villanova students who need financial assistance to complete their education.

The policy statement on merit increments which was presented by the Faculty Affairs Committee to the Senate was not acted on by the Senate because a policy of this nature was already passed by the Senate and the President. The procedure for merit increments developed by Faculty Affairs Committee will be sent to President Driscoll in order to help facilitate a stable procedure for implementation of this policy.

The next Senate meeting will be held on Friday, March 16, 1979 at 4:00 in the West Lounge, Dougherty Hall.

Election Process Begins

The SGA office has been the center of a great deal of activity during the past week due to the preparation for Student Body President and Senate elections. Petitions for ballot spots have already gone out and the candidates themselves are gearing up for what is shaping up to be a very competitive campaign season.

Positions are open for every student seat on the University Senate. These include seats on both the Rank and Tenure and the Academic Policy committees along with Senate openings in Commerce and Finance, Arts, Science, Nursing and Engineering. Commuter students will be electing a new President, Vice-President and Secretary/Treasurer for the Association of Non-resident Students.

Petitions for Presidential and Senatorial positions were available starting February 19th in the Office of the Vice-President Student life, Room 202, Dougherty. The deadline for returning petitions is February 28th. Positions in the Association of Non-resident students are open to self-nomination (petitions for ballot spots are not required). Candidates should sign up before February 28th in Room 202, Dougherty.

Campaigning officially begins on Wednesday, March 14th and ends March 22nd, Election Day. All students are eligible to vote provided they show a Villanova I.D. and current validation sticker. Ballot box locations will be announced in the Villanovan.

Anyone interested in running for office should stop by the SGA office as soon as possible. There is still plenty of time to get on the ballot.

Your chance to see "Rocky Horror" is here! The Villanova Union's Recreation and Visual Arts committees have teamed up to present "The Rocky Horror Picture Show" trip to the TLA Cinema in Philadelphia on Thursday, March 1, 1979. Show time is the traditional MIDNIGHT. . .

"The Rocky Horror Picture Show" is probably the oddest, most off-the-wall cult film ever made by anyone, anywhere. It is a kinky, rock n' roll science fiction-horror satire that is everyone's favorite midnight show.

The plot begins when a couple stumbles into a castle inhabited by weirdos from the planet Transylvania. At the castle, they meet Dr. Frank N. Furter, a transvestite Frankenstein, who first seduces the girl, then debauches the boy.

The film is produced by Michael White, directed by Jim Sharman. The cast includes Tim Curry, Susan Sarandon, Barry Bostwick, Richard O'Brien, and Meat Loaf.

So come prepared with your rice, newspaper, candles, flashlights, cards, and all the other goodies. Free admission will be granted to the most appropriately dressed pair (Rocky Horror Fashions, of course).

Transportation, in the form of buses, will be provided. The price for admission and transportation is only $4. Tickets can be purchased at the Campus Information Center from February 16 to February 28.

Visitation At Stanford

By MARK GRAVES

The visitation policy is a much debated issue here at Villanova. The student body always seems to be at odds with the administration concerning longer hours, more days, and even the ending of all visitation restrictions. Last semester, Stanford Hall adopted a visitation policy which was accepted by the Dean of Men. A student sits at the front desk at Stanford every Friday, Saturday, and Sunday during visitation hours. This person takes the name, time, and place of destination of each guest who enters Stanford through the front door. The guests don't have to sign out, and their place of destination is not checked. Another person checks the wing doors periodically to make sure they are closed and locked. This simply makes guests enter through the front doors. A different floor handles the desk each weekend. This system enables some of the traffic through Stanford to be controlled and accounted for.

Stanford has unified as a dorm to cooperate with the administration with the hope to get at least extended hours. Before it was installed, Stanford representatives were assured that this goal would be met if the program was successful. The system has worked and has been successful. A few weeks ago, the results of the program were presented to the Dean with the request of extended hours for Stanford Hall. The request was rejected. The program continues at Stanford, but not without frustration. Perhaps if the other dorms also had similar programs, a revised, campus-wide visitation policy would arise from our efforts.

Hall Happenings

Sheehan-Sullivan

Sheehan and Sullivan Hall are planning a joint hoagie party for the week before Mid-Term recess. Residents in both dorms will enjoy hoagies and refreshments in the game room of Sullivan.

Good Counsel

On February 13, Good Counsel held a Valentine's Day party in the second floor lounge. The results are in for the recent T-shirt slogan contest. The winner is: "I'm a Good Counsel Girl — Sometimes." The girls from second floor green are currently sponsoring a Backgammon tournament. The winner of the tournament which began last week will receive a cash award.

In the planning for the Good Counsel girls are a Spring Semi-Formal and a party with Stanford to kick off the Mid-Term Break.

O'Dwyer

In the works for O'Dwyer Hall is a pizza night and a trip to Valley Forge for horseback riding.

Appalachia - A Living Experience

By JOYCE POGGI

For the third consecutive year the Campus Ministry, under the direction of Barbara Haenn, is sponsoring a Spring Break in Appalachia.

From March 3 to March 10, 30 students will be in the North Carolina part of Appalachia volunteering their services to the needy people there.

There will be six teams working at different sites on different projects. Some will be repairing homes, painting and roofing, while others will be contributing their knowledge and manual labor to the development of such places as senior citizen centers, country stores and day care centers. They will be helping the elderly and those who are physically unable to help themselves.

Nadine Colgan, a senior from Springfield, Pennsylvania majoring in sociology, worked as an intern last summer in several areas of Appalachia. She notes that the people there are "very primitive" and that the living conditions are "so backward." She remembers actually rebuilding one man's home which was "about as big as a bedroom. It only had an old black stove and a mattress in it. There was no bathroom." Oddly, yet importantly enough, this man seemed happy to her.

Nadine admits that, at times, she got depressed, wanted to cry and said that eight weeks was enough for her. However, she comments that her social work was rewarding and unforgettable. It gave her "peace of mind" and made her decide to continue social work in the form of counseling after graduation. Nadine is an example of the tremendous dedication needed to participate in an endeavor such as Applachia.

Haenn states that she is very happy with the group who is going this year. They have been meeting and preparing regularly and are "open and willing to take risks."

She further notes the "threefold purpose of the trip. One is to contribute man-hours and volunteer work. Two is to acquaint people with ideas of rural poverty and three is to experience living in a community."

Appalachia helpers paint resident's home.

Plight Of The Snow-bound Student

By TONY CENTONE

Commuters who have had similar experiences will be able to sympathize with what I have to say. It is your tale which I shall attempt to retell. Let us call this scenario, "The Plight of the Snowbound Student."

It begins in the early morning hours of a schoolday.

"Tony, get up. It's snowing real hard out. Looks like you'll have to take public transportation. The roads are horrible. Better hurry, dear."

You crawl to your window to view the damage. A blanket of white covers the neighborhood while the man on the radio tells you the "wind chill factor is 20 below, and your trolley is the only one with delays up to half hour." So you make record time in the bathroom, dress in a flash, and get downstairs to find your problems are just beginning.

"What do you mean, 'Dad took my boots'. What's wrong with his?"

"Can't you wear your blue ones, dear."

"I haven't worn them since sixth grade."

So you struggle into a pair of size 6 boots, decorated with little cowboys, spend ten minutes trying to find two gloves that come close to matching, and run out the door leaving 3 copybooks and your hat behind. You get to your trolley stop just in time to see one flash by. You know the next trolley's not due for another 15 minutes so you prepare to wait ... and wait ... and wait. You are only one of the many unfortunate, however, and you see many faces you haven't seen in you don't know how long, and you greet them with an early morning smile.

"Hey there." You discover you've forgotten his name.

"How ya' doing?" A feeling of relief. He can't remember yours either.

"Long time no see, how's school?"

"Not bad. How's school for you?"

"Not bad, what's new?"

"Not much. What's new with you?"

"Not much."

And you wait ... and wait ... and wait. Finally in the distance, a glimmer of hope. It's trolley, and it's empty. And there's just enough people on your stop to fill it. That's exactly why it goes past your stop full throttle and it leaves the trolley behind it, which has two seats open, to pick your stop up. So you cram into the cattle car and prepare for the slaughter.

"Excuse me, excuse me, Miss."

"Hey, watch it buddy, you wanna lose that hand."

"I ..." There's no sense in explaining.

The trolley surges forward, packed 100 people over capacity. The trolley driver speaks:

"Move to the back, please."

"Hey man, you gotta be kiddin!" someone replies.

"There's room in the back," he returns.

"In the back of what?"

And a new group of 20 push their way on. You find the only four smokers on the trolley have you surrounded. Every time the trolley brakes the crowd sways back and forth, back and forth, you get a slight feeling of dizziness and nausia. Finally, the first part of your excursion draws to an end. The doors open and the crowd begins to file out. Suddenly, panic! You realize you're smack in the middle of the trolley. Your right leg is being dragged to the front door in the midst of two fat old ladies, while both your arms are finding their way to the back. The friend whose name you can't remember rescues you by karate-chopping your leg. Now you're free but you can't walk. You suddenly remember why you can't remember his name.

You've arrived just in time to see your transfer trolley pull out of the station. The next one leaves in 15 minutes. You calculate that it's a 25 minute ride to school and by the time your trolley gets there you should be just about 55 minutes late for your 8:30 class, which happens to be only 50 minutes long. You realize that it will be your sixth cut in three weeks and it just happens to be the class you're failing. And you wait ... and wait ... and wait.

Eventually, you board your transfer trolley which isn't quite as bad as your previous expedition. This time you even get a seat. So you sit and wonder if it's all worth it. Finally, you get to the Villanova stop. Surprisingly, you're the only one getting off. You look around and feel there's something missing.

THERE'S NO CARS IN THE PARKING-LOT!!!

The first thought that enters your mind is suicide. You pass it up, however, as being a little too drastic. You decide instead to just sit and cry. You check your trolley schedule and the next inbound's not due for another hour. And so you just sit and wait ... and wait ... and wait.

Who knows, who cares

Well, here we are, back after a week's break, and did anyone miss us ... evidently, from all the dead Villanovans littering the Pie Shop ... better yet, has anybody missed Joe Cassidy? ... if not, maybe we should, after all, at the last Senate meeting he proposed a playground between Sheehan and Sullivan ... complete with sandboxes and monkeybars ... at least Senator John Bachus has the right idea ... in a feat of legislative diplomacy he motioned for adjournment ... way to represent your constituents, guys ... and what do you think of the new centerfold supplement ... after getting it last week, did anyone pull it out (the supplement, we mean) ... even if you didn't read it you could have used it to start the fire to keep you warm in the middle of the blizzard that cancelled classes this week ... you know if they got the lots and walks cleared by Tuesday we would have had classes ... I'll never complain about how slow Maintenance is again ... in fact, I think I went traying with half their staff ... and thanks to all those traying fanatics everyone is eating out of their laps in the Pit ... I hope no one bumps me while I'm eating my soup ... it would be awfully embarrassing to explain the stains ... the only things that stayed open Monday were the beverage stores ... and speaking of partying, congratulations are in order to all those seniors who obeyed the strict alcohol regulations at their 100 Days Party ... I'm sure you both had a good time ... and the Nurses and Engineers got together last week for their annual dinner dance ... black tie and calculator were optional ... So, Billy G. you're 20 years old ... when are you going to start shaving ... We were sorry to hear that our favorite moderator broke three ribs being hugged by her Valentine ... Fixit ... now that the Morris Estates zoning has been tabled again, what will we do for a front page next week ... did everyone hear the rumor that Clarence Tillman is transferring to VU from Kentucky ... if Reggie Jackson and Gene Banks would only come along for the ride ... maybe we could win a few games ... if the boy comes, at least he knows he won't be living in O'Dwyer ... after visitation hours, that is ... why does the Villanovan always take a week off for mid-terms ... after all, us secnd floore Dockerty tipes don't gotsta study ... editors need a tan, too ... but who knows ... who cares ...

CENTER FOR CONCERN

A Plea To Free Sasha

By ELLEN KEMEZA

Sasha Yakir is a student like any other. He has exams, he parties and he likes to enjoy himself. Sasha, however, is denied the freedom to express his thoughts, practice his religious beliefs, and the freedom to emigrate to another land as guaranteed by international law. It is because of this injustice that the Center For Concern in cooperation with the Jewish Union, Amnesty International, and the Campus Ministry adopted Sasha, a student refusnik from the Soviet Union.

Alexander Yakir, fondly known as Sasha, applied for an exit visa so that he may emigrate to the free world. This basic human right to emigrate from one border to another which was agreed to by the Soviets in the Helsinki Accords of 1975 was blatantly denied to Sasha and many other freedom seeking refusniks.

In particular Sasha's case history is quite interesting. The Yakir's of Moscow have had more than their share of trouble from the repressive Soviet regimes. In 1938, Sasha's grandfather, a Soviet air force general, was executed during the Stalin purges; so was another family member — a famous army general. His grandmother, now in her 70's spent 15 years in a harsh labor camp. Eight more close relatives have suffered death, imprisonment, exile, deprivation, or loss of civil rights.

In October 1973, Sasha and his parents applied for exit visas. They were refused on the basis of his father's secret classification as a mechanical engineer, even though his job was entirely routine. The father promptly lost his job as a result and has since been making a living doing technical translations. When Sasha applied for a visa for himself in 1976, he was refused on the "humanitarian" grounds: "We do not split families."

Now that Sasha is completing his studies at Moscow Technical Institute, he has been notified that he will be called into the army next autumn. This is a serious threat in that it could mean a delay of emigration for him of at least seven years and possibly longer.

In describing the Yakir family, journalist Reuben Ainsztein observed: "Revolutions, it is said devour their own children. But for people called Yakir, in the USSR, the process is already entering the third generation."

On behalf of the Committee to Free Sasha we ask each and every member of the Villanova Community to write a letter or post card to Sasha or your legislator expressing your concern for Sasha's welfare. Other than derogatory statements concerning the Soviets, you may write anything you wish. Beginning on February 28, post cards will be available in Dougherty Hall to facilitate your writing.

Let us act so as to bring honor and recognition to our University and more importantly to bring freedom to Sasha, for it is a matter of social justice and is a cause that warrants the support of all people who cherish freedom. Sasha's address:

EARN OVER $650 A MONTH RIGHT THROUGH YOUR SENIOR YEAR.

If you're a junior or senior majoring in sciences like math, physics or engineering, the Navy has a program you should know about.

It's called the Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate-Collegiate Program (NUPOC-C for short) and if you qualify, you can earn as much as $650 a month right through your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you'll get an additional year of advanced technical education. This would cost thousands in a civilian school, but in the Navy, we pay you.

It isn't easy. There are fewer than 400 openings and only one of every six applicants will be selected. But if you make it, you'll have unequaled hands-on responsibility, a $24,000 salary in four years, and gilt-edged qualifications for jobs both in the Navy and out.

Ask your placement officer to set up an interview with a Navy representative when he visits the campus, or contact your Navy representative at 800-841-8000, or send in the coupon. The NUPOC-C Program. Not only can it help you complete college. It can be the start of an exciting career.

Zoning

noted that the Morris property would probably not be available for housing next year.

"We need housing badly," stated Deegan, "and now we have to go into the lottery with 50 less beds."

The cost of renovating the houses for student occupancy, however, was suggested as one factor in the Board's decision to postpone the zoning appeals.

"Finances are always a major consideration," Driscoll noted. "To what extent can we renovate in a way that has minimum impact on the budget? We must determine how to use the property most economically."

Commenting on anticipated student disappointment with the loss of additional housing, Driscoll stated, "I doubt the students would be happy with the 50 extra beds now if it meant the loss of a more substantial number of beds later."

Asked if the Board was considering other uses for the land, such as the building of new dorms, Driscoll maintained, "There is always the possibility of other plans. The land is over there and it can be used for any number of things. Possibilities exist but the probability for other uses are slim."

Driscoll emphasized that the zoning appeals were only postponed and a continuance, allowing the appeal to be pursued in the future, would be sought.

Clarifying the present position of the Morris property, Driscoll stated, "As of the moment, we have no plans for the land. It is possible, however, that we will submit the appeals again in a matter of months.

"The Board is obviously trying to develop a position in the best interest of the University and the township," Driscoll concluded.

Spectrum Outlawed

By STEVE COMBS

On Friday, February 16, I was dispatched to the Spectrum to write an intelligent, articulate review of the Outlaws and Molly Hatchet concert. In lieu of that, I submit all I remember.

The subway ride was a wild experience. Two hundred Outlaws fans screaming in the tunnels, jumping over turnstiles, drinking, smoking, anticipating . . . Waiting for the show to start . . . Foreigner is playing in the background, but that was last time . . . Somebody waves a banner — "Disco Sucks." A spotlight and much applause . . . Now Skynyrd is piped in. Even dead they're the best . . . I wonder if people at the hockey game tomorrow will get a contact high? . . . Lights are dimming. The sellout crowd goes spastic . . . Molly Hatchet is no warm-up group. They're a hot, nasty, shoot em up group . . . lead singer Danny Joe Brown, running on Redneck Power . . . "Thunder is the horse I ride" . . . the music is driving, compelling . . . days before he died, Ronnie VanZant said that this was the sound he hoped to progress to . . . Three men on lead guitar . . . comin' at ya . . . "There's a gator in the bushes, Lord, he's calling my name" . . . There is a less-than-real quality to all of this . . . the air moves in warm, soft waves of pulsating guitar rhythms . . . a wall of speakers . . . trembling shock fronts of electric screaming . . . love it loud.

The harmonica talks to the soul . . . "you done run out of rope, son" . . . Molly Hatchet (in case you forgot) . . . they're active on stage . . . running, leaping, dancing the crazed ballet of rock and roll . . . Thank God for intermission . . . I'm beat.

Maybe Molly was too rowdy? . . . nobody's got any energy left for the Outlaws . . . lights dim . . . or is it me? . . . theme from Star Wars . . . everyone's flicking their bic . . . I'm in the Milky Way. Floating freely past whirling galaxies . . . Why do I hear the roar of the ocean? . . . oh yeah . . . The Four Guitar Army has arrived.

Hurry Sundown . . . "hear the gypsies call" . . . there are more cowboys here than horses . . . The music builds a fantasy world . . . a world of prairies, cactus, and stars, ' lots of stars . . . four guitarists and two drummers . . . notes fly from the guitar, arcing through the night sky . . . the Spectrum walls cannot confine us . . . the music travels unhindered by physical laws . . . In Kilgore Trout's novel Venus On The Halfshell, spaceships suck energy from beings in the fourth dimension. At sixty nine times the speed of light, the screaming of dying intelligences becomes unbearable. We are there and gone.

Water hole is a bright flash of country jamming . . . every song I like, they play . . . Holliday . . . Cold and Lonesome . . . the set ends, the show continues . . . or does it? . . . it takes forever for them to return for an encore . . . Stick Around For Rock and Roll . . . a second encore . . . a lot of preliminary crap . . . it's coming . . . sure, the anticipation exceeded the event but still . . . it comes . . . Green Grass and High Tides . . . someone hand me a cigar . . . the Outlaws forever jamming . . . searing solos race through time, each one a phoenix that hurdles into the fire of a collapsing star only to rise from its own ashes . . . the world is translucent and beyond touch . . . I'm in a goddamn Levis' commercial . . . the guitar is relentless . . . the song is lost . . . I am lost . . . a drum solo strikes with soft, leaden bullets . . . we fall to earth . . . too worn out to cheer.

Coming Show

On Monday Evening, February 26, West Chester State College will host David Bromberg.

Born in Philadelphia on September 19, 1945, David Bromberg grew up in Tarrytown, New York. Inspired by the music of Pete Segers and the Weavers — among others, he began studying the guitar at age 13.

Drawn to Greenwich Village's flourishing coffeehouse folk music scene in the mid-1960's, Bromberg opted for performance combined with his studies; he left school in the middle of his second year, however, to devote full time to his music. Shortly thereafter, his extraordinary guitar picking and exceptional stylistic range brought him to the attention of many other musicians: Bob Dylan, Ringo Starr, John Hurt and Chubby Checker are only a few of the notables who sought Bromberg out as back-up artist for recording. In all, he has played as sideman on over 75 albums.

In 1970, Bromberg decided to go on his own. Since then, he has recorded seven albums including David Bromberg, Demon in Disguise, and his latest, on Fantasy Records, Bandit in a Bathing Suit. Band members include: Dick Fegy: fiddle, mandolin, acoustic and electric guitars and banjo; John Firmin: saxophone, clarinet, pennywhistle and percussion; George Kindler: mandolin and fiddle; Curt Linberg: trombone; Lance Dickerson: drums; Dave Schallock; bass.

Also on the bill Monday evening will be talented musician John Hartford.

THE DAVID BROMBERG BAND

Travelin' Music

The Traveling Music Show is a joyous integration of three art forms: music, dance and drama featuring dancers from The Great Chazy Dance Company, a soprano, finalist in the regional Metropolitan opera auditions, and actors from the classical and Broadway stage.

The program is innovative, varied and articulate with the current show including: Samuel Barber's "Knoxville: Summer of 1915" excerpts from William Walton's "Facade," and characters from Edgar Lee Master's "Spoon River Anthology"; there are originally choreographed dances to music ranging in style from Bach and Bartok to "You Made Me Love You" and "Frankie and Johnny" as well as prose and poetry from Edith Sitwell to James Agee. All this integrated into a professionally performed, costumed and lit production.

The Traveling Music Show performs with professional orchestra or piano and tape. Childrens shows are available as are seminars and workshops.

On Thursday, March 22, the Villanova Union will present The Traveling Music Show in the Field House. The show is slated to begin at 8:00 p.m., and tickets will go on sale after mid-term break.

New In Sound

THE DOOBIE BROTHERS

The Doobie Brothers

By THOM STYLES

The Doobies have always struck me as being a band that time has treated with kid gloves. Always a tight, coherent band with a style that was instantly recognizable, whether the song was 'China Grove' or 'Black Water' you always knew who you were listening to. Even though they were able to squeeze at least one hit out of every album that they released, the meteoric stardom of an Elton John or Earth, Wind & Fire seemed tantalizingly close, yet just beyond reach. "Minute By Minute" should change that trend: the album should reach the epic popularity of Steely Dan's "Aja.

On "Minute By Minute," the band continues its previous softer trend, with only the faintest vestiges of the earlier, somewhat wilder days of the Doobie Brothers. Indeed, the only song remotely comparable is on the second side, a country & western based instrumental called 'Steamer Lane Breakdown' written by guitarist Pat Simmons.

The bulk of the disk is structured around the well-matched vocal harmonies of keyboard man Michael McDonald and Simmons and meshed musicianship of the entire band. And they seem to have a producer whose head is tuned to what the Doobies were looking for qualitatively. The result of this happy union can be heard in the songs, such as 'What A Fool Believes' (which is bulleting airplay charts nationwide), and 'Minute By Minute' (the other hit on FM), both of which were co-written by McDonald.

Before this turns into a litany in praise of Mr. McDonald, consider the tune 'Dependin' On You' which features the writing and singing talents of Patrick Simmons and sounds quite like Jefferson Starship at first (I thought it was Starship the first time I heard it) but melts back into Doobiedom later on . . .

"Minute By Minute" will fit easily into your collection, unless you're a real rock diehard.

Stealing a phone call isn't a game.

Most students play by the rules when placing a long distance call. They take advantage of bargain rates and make their calls during the discount periods. If you're not sure when you can call at discount rates, check your phone book.

A few students think it's O.K. to break the rules by stealing their telephone calls. They're not beating the system, they're taking advantage of all of us, because it drives up the cost of providing telephone service.

Students who break the rules also run the risk of paying a large fine. Spending time in jail. And getting themselves a permanent police record.

It's just not worth it!

Cats Clip Panthers

By BETH WHITE and LOU FRITZ

The Villanova Wildcats pulled a last-minute surprise 75-73 upset victory over the Pittsburgh Panthers Tuesday night at the Fieldhouse. The Cats, down 31-34 at halftime, were behind by ten points for most of the second half. The win came via a scoring streak in the last two minutes, during which the Cats scored 11 unanswered points.

"God gave this one to us," remarked a thankful Rollie Massimino. "Pittsburgh is a good team and they played us well, especially in the first 37 minutes of the game." Tom Sienkiewicz scored the winning basket with a 13-foot bank shot from his hot spot on the floor and Aaron Howard iced the victory, sinking one of two free throws.

Coach Massimino called an extra shooting practice Tuesday afternoon because of the snowstorm layoff, and it obviously worked. Free throws and outside shooting were the name of the game. Villanova scored on 76.5% of their free throws, compared to Pitt's 67.9%. The crowd's noise level in the Fieldhouse and shaking the curtains behind the backboard caused Pittsburgh's Sam Clancy to miss two crucial one-and-one free throws, either of which would have put the Panthers ahead.

However, only 13 of Villanova's points came from the stripe. The remainder came from outside floor shooting and over one-third of those from point-guard Sienkiewicz, the team's leading scorer (26 points) again this week. The Wildcat victory was aided by freshman Aaron Howard, who scored on three of four free throws and all seven of his attempted field goals. Howard nabbed five rebounds, second only to eleven by Alex Bradley. Bradley was third leading scorer with 11 points.

Coach Massimino had a hard time keeping up with the constantly changing Pitt defense. "In the beginning," said Massimino, "the team wasn't aggressive enough," so the Wildcats changed intermittently from a three-guard to a three-forward offense.

Defensive strategy became crucial at the close of the game. During Pittsburgh's last time out (12 seconds remaining), Massimino asked the team whether they wanted to use a man-to-man or zone defense. The team chose man-to-man guarding with Massimino's warning that they must "play even more aggressively," which they did — forcing two fouls and one turnover.

The Panthers scoring was led by sophomore forward Sam Clancy with 20 points, junior Sammie Ellis with 15, and seniors Terry Knight and Wayne Williams with 12 and 11, respectively.

The Wildcat victory over Pittsburgh certifies that their first round EAA tournament opponent will be UMass, a repeat of tomorrow's challenge. If the Cats win in the first round, they will travel to Pittsburgh to face probably either Duquesne or Pittsburgh again.

WKVU Sports Staff Expands Coverage

By PETER J. RYAN

What WKVU Sports Director Phil Skender and his crew have done to meet the demands of the campus community can be summed up on one word: expand. In the four years that this senior Accounting major from Harrisburg has been associated with the radio station the quality and scope of sports broadcasting has vastly improved at Villanova.

Phil and his associates have introduced such innovative ideas as halftime interviews, broadcasting hockey games (as well as the baseball) and adding their own personal touch. "We strive for a higher level of professionalism which is why we make all freshmen go through a learning process to become more familiar with the job and the equipment. . . ." Phil continued on the present state of WKVU by stating; ". . . we broadcast the play by play for football and basketball and air four shows a day Monday through Friday."

Since his freshman year the size of the radio-based staff from five to its present group of fifteen. "Gentleman" Phil Skender as he is commonly called spends an average of six hours a day in the station working on various jobs ranging from ordering telephone lines for a particular broadcast to setting up travel arrangements for the crew and himself. "I always try to be prepared so I take an engineer along to take care of any technical problems." added Phil.

We have had a great relationship with Ted Wolff (Sports Information Director) and he has been very kind to us by supplying vital information . . ." continuing " . . . we have also gotten phenomenal assistance from Mark Rinaldi and Jerry Vasa in the sports department to keep us going." Reflecting on the financial situation of the radio station, Skender and company are pleased with the support they receive from Miller Beer and Budweiser (as sponsors) to supplement their budget.

At the moment Phil also works as an intern for WCAU (a CBS affiliate) and is involved with talk shows. Plans for this senior include employment was an accountant or hopefully a career in radio " . . . either as a producer or a director or something behind the scenes." In any event the "Gentleman" is prepared.

Tom Sienkiewicz is interviewed by announcer Dana Shelton for WKVU sports after Villanova's 89-80 victory over the Penn Quakers. WKVU's sports department, managed by Phil Skender, has broadcasted play-by-play and commentary of Wildcat basketball throughout the season.

Sienkiewicz Breaks Three Records

By BETH WHITE

"After the first few jump shots go in, the rest just fall into line," according to Tom Sienkiewicz, a modest sophomore guard who scored an amazing 39 points against the Penn Quakers, breaking three records simultaneously.

Connecting on 21 of 23 free throws (the last 13 straight), Sienkiewicz broke a Villanova record as well as a Penn opponent record. He whizzed past Alex Bradley's high scoring 33 points against Rutgers and his own 26 points versus George Washington. The shooting sophomore remains atop the EAA standings for accuracy, and holds the record for the most points scored in a Big Five game.

"Everyone (on the team) was pretty happy," according to Sienkiewicz, "especially since this was our first Big Five victory."

Coach Massimino was "very happy with Tom's performance. He's an intense young man and a very hard worker." Sienkiewicz puts in overtime practicing his shooting, up to an extra hour after each practice. "The key to the game is practice," says the sophomore guard.

During the summer, he practiced ball-handling and dribbling. Sienkiewicz notes, "You always need confidence when you're dribbling or else the defense will steal the ball." Sienkiewicz has also worked considerably on improving his defensive game.

Villanova utilized their sharp-shooting guards in a three-guard offense, which "keeps the ball outside like a four-corner stall. This allows the forwards to pick off their defenders inside the key and remain free for rebounds," explains Sienkiewicz.

There wasn't much chance for offensive rebounding, since Sienkiewicz made nine of his 14 shots from the floor and 21 of 23 from the stripe. Sienkiewicz's mother and sister, who were at the game, were "pretty excited." His sister, who keeps his personal statistics, "just told me about the shots I missed, not the ones I made. I don't mind," said Sienkiewicz, "it keeps me on my toes."

The sophomore guard is always kept "on his toes" with competition from the other guards, expecially Rory Sparrow, Steve Lincoln and freshman Tom Bethea. "There's competition for every position," according to Sienkiewicz. "Coach (Massimino) tries to get a good combination among the players. He puts in whoever is on a streak."

Straccia Reaches 1,000 Mark, As Women Down Ursinus

By TONY PANGONAS

Kathy Straccia hit for 12 points to become the first woman in Villanova history to score 1,000 points as Villanova ripped Ursinus 85-54 to break the Wildcats four game losing streak. Earlier in the week the Wildcats lost both to LaSalle 67-60 and Princeton 65-58. Their record now stands at 13-8.

Against Ursinus, Villanova was able to combine great shooting (52%) and superior rebounding to take a 42-27 halftime advantage. The Wildcats then opened the second half by scoring the first 23 points to assure the rout.

The leading scorers for Villanova were Karen Hiznay with 19, Lisa Ortlip with 15 and Susan Stroud with 12 points. Ortlip and Stroud controlled the bounds by grabbing 9 and 7 rebounds respectively.

In a Big Five game, the Wildcats lost a tight game to LaSalle 67-60. After leading 31-28 at intermission, the Cats' poor shooting (32%) proved fatal and were out scored 39-29 the second half. Kathy Straccia led the way with 17 points, followed by Ortlip with 13 and Lu Ann Krothe with 10.

Villanova's lack of rebounding proved to be their downfall against Princeton. Again the Wildcats were ahead at halftime 31-29 but Princeton wore down the Cats in the second half to pull out the win. Princeton's C.B. Tomasiewicz scored 24 points and pulled down 12 rebounds while holding the Cats' Lisa Ortlip to only five points. High scorers for the Wildcats were Karen Hiznay with 18 points, Straccia with 15 points and Mary Beth Gibson with 10 points.

The Wildcats close out their regular season this week, playing Wednesday at Lafayette and then back to the Fieldhouse with Big Five rival Penn on Thursday.

Women's Two Mile Relay Is Still Hot

By MARYELLEN BORKOWSKI

The women's track team ventured to Jadwyn Gym on Sunday to meet some of the most formidable competition they have seen this year. They came away with three new school records and left many people amazed at the talent that Coach Jim Thompson has gathered on this year's team.

The two mile relay continued its dominance of the indoor circuit with an impressive 9:11.8 clocking. They defeated second place University of Maryland by over twenty seconds. Jennifer Whitfield (2:18.0), Sue Shea (2:23.8), Brigid Leddy (2:16.6) and Doriane Lambelet (2:13.4) were members of the relay that broke the school record for the second time in as many weeks. This team has not been beaten yet been defeated on an indoor track, nor has any team come within fifteen seconds of beating this foursome.

The mile relay team also gave a tremendous performance as they finished fourth in the event. Jennifer Whitfield (57.7), Amelia Cain (60.4), Mary Ellen Borkowski (61.5) and Doriane Lambelet (57.5) took two seconds off the old school record of 3.59.1 set earlier this year at Princeton. Both the mile and two mile relay teams have qualified the AIAW Championships.

The team also ran a new relay at Princeton. The foursome of Carol Gilsinger (440), Cindy Walicki (220), Pat Robinson (220) and Eileen Downey (880) set a school record in the sprint medley with a time of 4:46.6.

Other highlights of the meet included an 8.8 clocking in the 60 yard hurdles by Amelia Cain in the semi-finals.

This weekend Doriane Lambelet will represent Villanova in the AAU National Championships at Madison Square Garden. Doriane will be running the 880 yard run. On Sunday the team will travel to the East Stroudsburg Invitational for a last chance to qualify for the EAIAW and the AIAW Championships.

Hoopsters Fall To DePaul

By MARK RINALDI

The Wildcats traveled to the windy city of Chicago last Saturday and came away frostbitten. Villanova and DePaul squared off for one of the finest games of the season.

The Cats surged to a 42-32 halftime advantage due mostly to the inspired play of sophomore gaurd Tom Sienkiewicz. The sink shot an incredible 9 of 11 from the field and 1 of 1 from the foul line for a first half total of 19 points.

The second half began with both teams trading baskets in succesion. Alex Bradley scored 8 of Villanova's first 10 second half points. Unfortunately for the Wildcats, Bradley was held scoreless for the remainder of the half as he finished with a game total of only 14 points.

Rory Sparrow, like Bradley, did not have one of his better games. The talented junior from Patterson, New Jersey failed to score as he took only two shots the entire game. Coach Massamino commented after the game, "We cannot win if Rory does not play well."

Midway through the second half coach Ray Meyer of DePaul ordered his team into a full court press. The crowd at Alumni Hall, where the Blue Demons had won 23 consecutive home games prior to Villanova, sensed their team coming back. The noise was almost deafening as the usually poised Wildcats appeared shaken. Coach Massamino commented that his team was not aggressive enough and "overly cautious."

DePaul's press accounted for most of Villanova's game total of 16 turnovers compared to 5 Blue Demon turnovers. This statistic was perhaps the most significant, considering that Villanova's shooting percentage was far superior to that of DePaulis's. The Cats even outrebounded DePaul making the turnover statistic more significant, but not quite as significant as the final score; DePaul 69, Villanova 66.

Intramural Basketball Strong Competition

By JERRY VENTRESCA

The Intramural Basketball League continues to be exciting this season with at least one undefeated team in each of the nine leagues, including the fraternity league. Many teams, with only one loss have also proven to be very competitive in their respective leagues.

In the 3:30 league, Bomb Squad's 60-31 victory over Zeus put them in a tie with the Cougars for first place, both with 3-0 records. Trailing at 3-2 are the Z-Men.

In the 4:30 league, Bang Gang (3-0) regained sole possession of first place when the Super Stars II, now 3-1, were defeated by Assembly, 47-43. Meanwhile, the Sun Kings remained at 2-0.

Express and ANS, both 3-0, are tied for first in the 5:30 league, with the 69ers slipping from second place with a 2-2 record.

The 6:30 league is led by one of the four teams with a 4-0 record, Simple Dreams. The Rags moved up to second at 3-1 and trailing them are the Wildmen and Ice Men, both 2-1.

SPOA and "Gimme-The-Ball," both 3-0, remain tied for first place and the Fighting Irish and Black Cultural Society are now tied for third, at 2-1, in the 7:30 league.

The 5:30 league at St. Mary's is led by The Express, 4-0. Home Grown, 3-0, trails in second and Fedigan Pub, 3-1, follows in third.

First place is tied in the 6:30 league between Stampede and Beasts of Burden, both 3-0, after Beasts of Burden 41-39 overtime victory against The Running Rebels, now 2-2. The Sons of Italy remain 2-1 in third place.

On Tap (4-0) continues to dominate the 7:30 league with a secure hold of first place and Saco East in second with a 2-0 record.

The fraternity league is still led by undefeated DTD. SPE remains in second with a 4-1 record while LKD fell into third. LXA ran its record to 3-2. Monday and Tuesday games were cancelled due to the school closing.

Cats Capture Nationals

Edge UTEP For Title

By JEFF CARTY and TED WOLFF

While the vast majority of the student body was enjoying a turbulent spring break, the track team recorded a stunning upset at the NCAA Indoor Track Field Championships in Detroit's Cobo Arena 52-51.

Down by a seemingly insurmountable 25 points at the end of Friday's competition, the Cats fought back for three first places and totaled 50 points to capture the team championship from the University of Texas at El Paso. Auburn followed with (27), while Tennessee (24), Kansas (24) and Maryland (22) rounded out the six teams.

Villanova and its Determined Dozen NCAA entries, started off sluggishly. Keith Brown, who upset the field in capturing the IC4A 440 title the week before, tied for the final spot in the quarter-mile final, forcing an extra race among nine, instead of eight contestants. Brown ran a 49.32 for fifth place, the Wildcats only two points of the first day. Nate Cooper, Villanova's only other hopeful on Friday, bowed out of the triple jump final with a best of 49 feet, seven inches.

Blaze Guts Sullivan Room

By STEVE HAGGERTY

At approximately 5 p.m. on February 24, a fire broke out in a ground floor room of Sullivan Hall. There were no injuries but extensive damage was done to the room.

The three occupants of the room, Tom Degnan, Rob Redmond, and Chris McCauley were not in the room when the fire alarm was sounded. Redmond was in a nearby room and was one of the first people on the scene as the hallway filled with smoke.

A resident notified the Bryn Mawr Fire Company. Other residents, led by Redmond and Degnan, began to fight the fire.

The actions of Redmond and Degnan, along with the other residents were instrumental in bringing the fire under control.

Three fire trucks arrived several minutes later. Deputy Chief Kelly of the Bryn Mawr Fire Co. inspected the room and found there was little for his men to do. He was pleased with the actions of the residents.

"The students who fought the fire did an excellent job. They kept their heads and managed to contain this fire," Kelly explained.

Fire Chief Bernard S. Quinn arrived in a few minutes. He praised the residents' level headedness.

"These guys did a great job. They shut off the electricity which was smart. Then they used the equipment located in the dorms to fight the fire. I wouldn't be surprised if some of these guys had

SGA Elections Thursday

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

A close presidential race, a Senate-mandated split of the Arts and Science constituencies, and an absence of write-in candidates will mark this year's Student Government elections, to be held Thursday, March 22.

"I can't think of a time when we had this many candidates running for the presidency," said Sue Lyons, chairperson of the SGA Election Committee. While three students usually run for the office, this year, four presidential candidates are slated: Ray Bauso, Ken Fody, Michael O'Connor, and P.W. Winterhalter.

Of these four candidates, one must capture 40 percent of the vote to win. "This will probably mean a run-off election," said Lyons, "It's going to be very, very close. If one of the candidates should fail to win the 40 percent plurality, the two candidates with the highest vote percentage will run against each other," she said. If necessary, the date of the run-off election will be March 29.

Under a new prescription from the University Senate, the four Senate seats formerly reserved simply for the College of Arts and Sciences will be separated. Six candidates are scheduled to run for the three Arts seats, and two students will contest the one seat for Sciences.

Four candidates will attempt to fill the two vacant senate seats for the College of Commerce and Finance. Two candidates will enter the race uncontested, one from each; the College of Nursing and the College of Engineering.

Unlike last year, no write-in candidates will be permitted this year. "The University Senate constitution does not allow for write-ins," said Lyons. "Candidates must be nominated by 10 percent of their constituencies. This year the decision was made by the SGA Election Committee to follow the mandate of the Senate Constitution," she said. Last year two students conducted a write-in campaign from the College of Commerce and Finance. One of them, Carol Boris, gained a seat in this year's Senate.

Meanwhile, changes are taking place in the Senate membership before the election. John McKenna, of Arts and Sciences, has resigned from the University Senate, said Joe Cassidy, Student Body President. McKenna received his diploma in December and is no longer a full time undergraduate student, though he is taking graduate courses, said Cassidy.

Apparently, a student who is graduating early can still run for the Senate. The only constitutional regulation for an undergraduate candidate is that he or she be of at least junior status.

McKenna sat on the Senate for the February meeting, but will be replaced by Michael O'Conner, Arts and Science runner-up from last year's election. O'Conner is also running for this year's presidency.

The Association of Non-Resident Students (ANS) will hold its elections along with the SGA.

Pro-Life Seminar

On Saturday, March 24 the Villanovans For Life will hold their third annual Pro-Life Education Seminar. The 1979 Seminar will be directed towards high school students in the Philadelphia area and will include workshops and presentations on various aspects of the pro-life movement. The program has two major goals: to make students aware of the facts surrounding pro-life issues and to help schools to organize their own pro-life groups.

Also, in conjunction with the Union's Spring Fever Week activities, to be held in the first week of April, the Villanovans For Life are planning a project to help raise funds for a water well project in Africa. The goal is to raise at least $300 for this charity, and the event is to be a three-mile jog-a-thon, RUN FOR (YOUR) LIFE! There will be a $2.00 registration fee for all participants, and runners will be asked to obtain pledges for the distance which they expect to complete. Details have not yet been finalized, but pledge sheets will be available soon in the VEL office, Dougherty 206.

Vandalism:

The Costs Mount

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

Vandalism figures compiled by the maintenance department for the first two months of 1979 show a marked increase over figures compiled for the period spanning September to December of 1978.

Acts attributed to vandalism from September to December of 1978 cost the University $17,520.22. This figure includes cost of equipment to be replaced and labor employed in repairing both dormitory and public facilities.

Figures released for January and February 1979 totaled $7,661.86.

Should vandalism continue at this rate, cost for repairs could reach $20,000 by the semester's end.

"Vandalism could cost the University anywhere between $15,000-75,000 this year," stated Thomas Trucks, head of the maintenance department.

Last year (January 1978-December 1978) total cost of vandalism was $38,537.38.

Trucks detailed several incidents which contributed to a $3,012.49 and a $4,649.37 figure for January and February 1979, respectively.

Lampposts between Stanford and Good Counsel Halls were recently destroyed one week after having been replaced at a cost of $5,000.

"W will be installing new types of lights (with new coupling devices to enable repair while salvaging maximum material) between the two halls," continued Trucks. "We cannot afford continual replacement of recently installed lights."

A more serious act of vandalism occurred on February 27 of this year when a jeep trudged over the field behind Stanford Hall causing an estimated $3,000 worth of damage.

Also, on the evening of January 19, 1979, a window in the Chemical - Engineering building was broken, apparently a result of an outside light being thrown through the window. Estimated cost of repair and purchase of the special thermal window is $350.

Damage attributed to vandalism during January and February also include tampering with elevators (Stanford and Sullivan Halls), destroying fire equipment, breaking windows, and smashing doors.

Regarding the elevator problem in Stanford, the State Elevator Co., was called in several times in January for repairs totaling $817.

Villanova has a contract with State Elevator; however, incidents, such as those mentioned above, have been labeled as vandalism by the company and as such are not covered in the terms

"The acts of vandalism are senseless," declared Fr. Patrick Rice, vice-president for Administration. "In some way students must say "no" to such acts. They must realize that willful destruction of property ultimately means increase in costs to the student.

"It's their school," stated Fr. Rice. "Continued time and money devoted to repairs due to vandalism takes away from improvements."

The University adminstration has been sensitive to the problem and a fining system (where dorm damages are the responsibility of the hall area) is in effect.

Assistant Dean of Men Tony Martin described the process: "Documentation of vandalism is a detailed and necessary method to

Orientation Reorganized

By MARGUERITE ESMONDE

Several changes have been planned for the Freshman Orientation in the fall of '79, including an additional day of Orientation, an increase in small group workshops, and a reorganization of student staffing.

"Our goal is to create more of that small group, personalized experience," stated Steve Steckler, assistant director of Student Activities.

Orientation will begin on September 2 and continue through Wednesday, September 5, a full day longer than last year's program. As a result, students will have more free time and more free choice in activities.

A variety of small group workshops are being planned, covering both academic and campus life issues. These programs will be conducted by faculty members, and will "allow the students to see professors in a more informal setting," Steckler remarked.

The fall program will be directed by a combination of students, faculty, and professional counselors. An administrative coordinator and assistants will oversee a steering committee made up of 18 paid students.

"Explicitly, we're charging the steering committee with helping in the selection, training, and supervision of the orientation counselors," said Steckler.

Students on the committee will undergo two weeks of training, later acting as paraprofessional trainers for the orientation counselors. Committee members will not have their own freshman groups as in the past, but rather will concentrate on supervising the other counselors.

Counselors will number from 70-75, with groups of 20-25 freshmen each. A more formalized, systematic selection process has been set up, requiring applications and recommendations. Former orientation counselors will not contribute to the selection process, as was done in past years.

"We all are very excited about the fall program," commented Barbara Oesterle, student coordinator of the program. "We feel it will be the best for the University."

"It's a University-wide program," Steckler remarked. "The schedule will be a composite of the concerns, goals, and hopes of Vice-President Cleary, Vice-President Deegan and the academic deans, as well as the student life deans and directors. Everybody has committed themselves enthusiastically to the fall."

C&F Prof. Dies

By BILL GUERIN

"He had great integrity and was one of the most honest people I have ever met."

These words of admiration were offered by Commerce and Finance Dean Alvin A. Clay in praise of Charles F. Kelly, an assistant professor in the accounting department who died February 27.

Born in 1923, Kelly was a native of Stratford, Pennsylvania. During World War II he served in the United States Army Air Force, where he was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Following his outstanding military service, Kelly entered Villanova College, from which he graduated in 1949 with a Bachelor of Science degree in economics. He later earned a CPA license for the state of Pennsylvania and joined Villanova's faculty in 1959.

"He was the best informed tax man in the accounting department," stated Clay. "He always had good common sense and was one of my closest advisors.

"Professor Kelly was a great friend among both the faculty and students. His courses were always the first to be filled during registration," Clay continued.

Kelly is survived by his wife, Margaret McGarry, and by his five children. Two of his children have graduated from Villanova and two are currently enrolled here as accounting majors.

In assessing Kelly's value to the Villanova community, Clay stated, "He will never be replaced."

Tenure Evaluated

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

Tenure is a highly debated issue, as evidenced by previous lengthy discussions on the Senate floor. Today the Senate will again breach the topic, when one of the two committees, charged last March to assess the present tenure policy, gives its report.

Generally, when a faculty member serves at Villanova for seven years, and passes evaluation, he is granted tenure, "appointment without specified expiration date, except for retirement." About 70 per cent of the Villanova faculty are tenured, according to Dr. James Cleary, Vice-President for Academic Affairs.

The Senate charged its Rank and Tenure and its Faculty Affairs Committees to prepare separate evaluations of this tenure policy, and to report at the March 1979 meeting. "Each committee is to provide in its report the arguments for and against the present policy as well as any pertinent recommendations."

"I'd be surprised if they would recommend a drastic change in the tenure policy," said Dr. Angelo Armenti, Senate Chairman.

"I'd be amazed," said Dr. Bernard Reilly, who worked on the report of the Rank and Tenure Committee. "For all practical purposes, tenure is THE system in higher education."

Cathy Pelesky, Arts and Science Senator, expressed the major complaint against tenure, that "the possibility of teachers productivity to decrease" is greater after tenure. She suggested a series of evaluations of all teachers as an alternative.

Joe Cassidy, Student Body President said "tenure insures job stability, but once a teacher gets tenure, there is no incentive for him to continue performance." He, too, suggested renewable contracts and evaluations for teachers. He added, however, that "it might not draw the quality teachers you want to the University, because people want job stability."

Were the University to shift from tenure, according to Dr. Reilly, it could either not grant tenure to new faculty, or take tenure from all faculty. In the first case, he said, "soon, the people would not come to the University." The second case, could "create a legal revolution," said Reilly, since courts have defined tenure as a property right.

The Faculty Affiars subcommittee reporting at today's Senate meeting began work in late October, according to chairperson Eleanor Fenol.

"We initially reviewed current literature on tenure and tenure alternatives," said Fenol. The subcommittee then developed questionnaires and sent 402 to full-time faculty members in December. 49.3 per cent of the questionaires were returned.

A sub-committee chaired by Father John O'Malley conducted the assessment from the Rank and Tenure committee. This report still must be approved by the entire committee, and is expected to reach the Senate floor by next month, according to Armenti.

O'Malley said the subcommittee interviewed "all pertinant administrators and deans," and received "many and varied comments."

The sub-committee asked faculty members to submit their opinions on tenure policy, said O'Malley, and it received "fifteen or sixteen very thoughtful responses."

Each student senator was asked to submit a personal response, said O'Malley. Only one senator, Cathy Pelesky, responded.

O'Malley said the sub-committee also researched articles and periodical literature on tenure and studied policies of 25 colleges and universities "similar and dissimilar to Villanova, mostly east coast schools." O'Malley stressed, however, that the sub-committee did not compare and contrast tenure to other systems. "We were not charged to consider alternatives and we did not," he said.

Budget Absence To Highlight Senate

by MARIANNE LAVELLE

Today's Senate meeting will feature four motions from the student senators, a report on rank and tenure from the Faculty Affairs Committee, but still no budget.

The first of the student motions states the opinion of the University Senate, "that the Board of Trustees is obligated to pursue alternate sources of income which would reduce the percentage of operating costs of the University presently incurred by students."

"The thrust of the motion is to point out to the Board that they are not raising enough money and we are sensitive to it," said Joe Cassidy, Student Body President.

Another motion states that the Senate recommend to Father President Driscoll "that the University Budget be in compliance with President Carter's voluntary wage and price controls with maximum increases of 7 per cent.

"This probably will not have too much effect on the budget," said Cassidy. The projected increase in tuition is 10 per cent, while the raise of faculty salaries is predicted to be 5 per cent. Cassidy said the purpose of the motion will be to "express the opinion of the Senate."

Also on the floor will be a motion "that the University be fully supportive of the actions of CATCH-19." Cassidy said this motion would be "to inform students that the University is behind them."

Senate

A motion that the Connelly center include a theatre in its physical structure will also be presented. "The original plans of the center incorporated a theatre," said Cassidy. Presently, however, there is no plan for a theatre, he said.

Last March, the Faculty Affairs and The Rank and Tenure Committees of the Senate were charged to prepare separate reports evaluating Villanova's Rank and Tenure System for today's meeting. Only the Faculty Affairs Committee will report today, however.

"Because of the diversity of people in the Rank and Tenure committee, they can only meet on Friday nights and Saturdays," said Dr. Angelo Armenti, chairman of the Senate. "I understand that the Rank and Tenure subcommittee working of the report hasn't presented it to the whole committee yet," said Armenti. "The Rank and Tenure Committee is scheduled to meet tomorrow, in fact, and is expected to discuss the Senate report at that time. The Rank and Tenue report will probably be scheduled for the next meeting," said Armenti.

Also on the agenda is a motion that "there be a question and answer period at the beginning of each Senate meeting, with questions to be submitted to the Executive Committee two weeks before a Senate Meeting. The Executive Committee will screen the questions and direct them to the appropriate administrator, allowing him a week to prepare an answer."

The University budget is not yet prepared for the Senate. "I fully expect we will schedule a separate meeting for the budget," said Armenti. The budget will probably come before the Senate sometime in April, according to Armenti.

Diamond Cats Open

By JOAN BARNISH

The Wildcat Baseball team takes the field on Sunday at the University of Delaware for their opening game of the 1979 season.

Delaware, a usually strong ball club is just one of the Cats toughest competitors this season. Although the Cats are playing an easier season than usual, they still have to face such power houses as Temple, Catholic University, Seton Hall and Glassboro State.

Coach Larry Shane in his seventh year as head coach at Villanova is very optimistic about the team. "It should be a winning team with our strongest area being the pitching staff."

"We have five experienced pitchers and two freshman who will help out in the future," said Shane.

After coming off a fall exhibition record of 11-4, the Cats are looking forward to a condensed 31 game schedule in seven weeks.

Returning in the infield are; Jim Abromitis at first, Tom Hank at second, Chris Nurse at shortstop and Kevin Cooke at third base. Other returning infielders include; Bill Duryea, a replacement at short or second and Mark Armelino backing up first base.

The outfield situation sees senior Dom Melillo handling left-field, with center and rightfield positions a toss up between juniors; Tom Harrison and George Kroculick and; freshman Stan Luongo.

The pitching features five returnees; juniors, Joe Ruth, Ed Szymanski and Mike Venezis; and sophomores, Phil Sartori and Steve Skammer. The strongest starters being Venezis with an 8-5 record and 5.82 ERA; Szymansi, 3-8 and 7.49 ERA and Skammer, 1-2 and 7.05 ERA.

Two sophomores Bob Sullivan and Dave McHugh share the catcher position. Both players finishing their freshman year with Sullivan batting .235 and McHugh batting .265.

Freshman newcomers include two righthanded pitchers, Manny Alas and Bill Sellers; infielder Mike Cudemo, who is battling for a starting position at shortstop and outfielders Bob Loscalzo and Stan Luongo both the only left-handed hitters on the squad.

At the end of the fall season the team was hoping for the formulation of the Eastern Atheletic Association League, but do to lack of funds the league has been postponed.

assure fairness in assessing fines."

Martin explained that many acts of vandalism aren't charged to anyone (insufficient evidence or lack of knowledge) and are assumed by the University.

Trucks confirmed this information, adding that approximately $28,000 remained uncollected for the 1978-79 academic year.

As to a possible solution to the problem, Turcks, former head of maintenance at Bryn Mawr College, advocates a strict fining system which was put into effect during his stay at Bryn Mawr.

"After instituting a fining system at Bryn Mawr things began to change," continued Trucks. "Although it wasn't noticeably successful in the first three years, the time following that period was one characterized by a marked decrease in the amount of vandalism."

"Vandalism is still a serious problem," stated Martin, "but there are some signs of improvement."

Martin explained that some students must be communicating the concern over vandalism to fellow students as a number of residents have come forth and assumed responsibility for acts they committed rather than allowing friends or other residents to bear responsibility.

Martin confirmed that considerable vandalism exists outside resident halls (classrooms, public grounds, etc.) and he labelled the problem as "distressing."

previous fire fighting experience, Quinn explained.

Degnan and Redmond, who did most of the fighting, had no previous experience fighting fires. Degnan was just glad no one was hurt. He was sorry about the damage the fire caused.

"Everything was wrecked; albums, books, stereos, but it could have been worse," Degnan said.

The three residents have been put up in other dormitories. They hope to be able to move back in soon.

The exact cause of the fire has not yet been determined. It is under investigation by the Maintenance Department.

The Horrors Of Amityville

By CAROL GOLDFARB

Are there really such things as ghosts and haunted houses: Jay Anson, author of the best seller, "Amityville Horror," came recently to Villanova to discuss the myths and truths of demonology.

George and Kathy Lutz fled their Amityville, N.Y. home after 28 days of terror. Lutz, an ex-marine was ready to fight whatever was in the house. But after 132 separate psychic events occurred, he left all personal possessions behind and took his family to California.

The haunted house of Amityville had known terror before. Ronny DeFeo murdered his family there. Ronny, known as a "wild kid," was said to hold animal sacrifices in a "secret red room" of the Amityville home.

Lutz, who happened to bear a strong resemblance to DeFeo, would wake up at 3:15 every morning, with a strong urge to go out to the boat house. Coincidently, the DeFeo's were murdered between 3 and 4 p.m.

Many unexplained events occured in the month the Lutz' lived in Amityville. An unexplained green slime came out of the woodwork.

Fifteen hundred dollars, left in Lutz' raincoat pocket was missing. It has never been established what happened to it.

An apparition seen by the Lutz' little girl, "Jody the pig" claimed to be an angel. yet, according to Anson, excretement and pigs are demonic symbols.

A priest called by Lutz went to the house the first day. The smell of excretement and an unseen voice telling him to "get out" caused him never to return.

The priest suffered for weeks from raw, blistered hands. He is still suffering mentally and physically from his one traumatic visit.

Psychics and mediums observing the house said "they felt ill, felt the feeling of death and a feeling of an evil presence in the house." They wouldn't go into the sewing room for "everything evil hovered around that room."

Jay Anson, author of The Amityville Horror.

Anson claimed the most difficult thing for him to believe was "Kathy Lutz claiming to levetate off the bed several times."

"You can force demonic spirits to come on you. I think Lutz brought it on himself. He was the prime target. There are no rational explanations for all that happened there."

Lutz agreed to write the book because he wanted to give people a message: "There are things out there you cannot handle."

Although not a parapsychologist, Anson has a wide range of knowledge about the occult. "I believe the Lutz believed what they say they saw."

In the middle of writing Amityville Horror Anson suffered a heart attack. Two people he gave the manuscript to read died in a fire after finishing the first three chapters.

A photographer and reporter from "People Magazine" went to investigate the bizarre happenings in Amityville. Their car caught fire soon after leaving.

According to Anson, the Catholic Church didn't fail the Lutz' by not performing an exorcism. The guidelines of the Church say "only people are possessed, not houses." They suggested parapsychological studies.

Anson wrote the screen play for "Amityville Horror." The movie, due to be released July 27, stars James Brolin and Rod Steiger.

What Is It All About

By PAUL VIGGIANO

Philosophy asks the simple question: What is it all about?
Alfred North Whitehead

Not many individuals study philosophy as a career. The average student usually takes a course or two in the subject and brushes it off as one of "those" courses, not to be taken too seriously. One man on the Villanova campus has a different opinion when it comes to the subject of philosophy. He is Professor Hilary Armstrong, who is visiting from Canada for the Spring semester.

Armstrong was born and raised in Sussex, England and attended Cambridge University to study his favorite Greek philosopher — Plotinus. "My specialty is later Greek philosophy, especially Plotinus. He determined the shape of European philosophy for a good many centuries. He was a great philosopher and a great writer and has written the most difficult Greek that has ever been written. I have spent a good bit of my time just unraveling the meaning."

As for Plotinus the man, he was basically a Platonist. He believed in a transcendent spiritual world which gives its meaning and reality to this world. He also developed the idea of a source of origin and a father of the spiritual world that he called "the one" or "good" who transcends all our talk and thinking. According to Armstrong, this is what attracts people to Plotinus.

"He is a great psychologist. His descriptions of the spiritual world are also descriptions of human experience and descriptions of many people who are not attracted by

Female Awareness At Villanova

By JOYCE POGGI

Too frequently, the Office of the Dean of Woman at Villanova University is associated exclusively with the functions of enforcement of rules and regulations. In the contemporary world of higher education, however, the office has expanded to include the active promotion of student growth and development.

Janet Schmidt, assistant to the Dean of Women, feels there is a "need to expand the awareness of female students on campus." Thus, the Office of the Dean of Women is sponsoring a Spring lecture series entitled "What Every Woman Should Know." The series includes seven programs presented by both on and off-campus resources..

The first topic, presented February 26, focused on the issue of "Security and Rape Prevention." The Director of Security at Villanova and a representative from Women Organized Against Rape emphasized precautions and useful security tips. On April 19, a separate program on karate will serve as an introduction to self-defense techniques.

An "Assertiveness Training" program, presented March 14, featured a film illustrating the differences between aggressive, passive and assertive behaviors and their possible consequences.

Next in the series on March 20 will address health concerns of women stressing the importance of proper gynecological care.

Fr. Deegan, vice-president for Student Life, will present "Decision-making and Values" on March 26. Fr. Deegan believes that a thorough knowledge of one's self precedes sound decision-making.

On April 4, in "Women and Work," a panel of professional women with a variety of career patterns and lifestyles will discuss their encounters with the world of work.

"What Every Woman Should Know About Her Car" will highlight auto maintenance basics, such as how to read an oil dipstick, check tire pressure and learn the terms used by garage mechanics.

Janet Schmidt, assistant to the Dean of Women, feels there is a "need to expand the awareness of female students on campus."

It is the hope of the Office of the Dean of Women that its lecture series on "What Every Woman Should Know" will prove to be both informative and stimulating and that all women will play to attend. Also, any personal feedback of the series would be greatly appreciated.

Prof. Involved In Public Agenda Foundation

By DIANE M. MISKEL

Do you ever feel as if nobody really listens to you or that no one really cares what you think? A fairly young organization called the Public Agenda Foundation (PAF) hopes to change all that.

The PAF, based in New York City, was founded by Cyrus Vance and Daniel Yankelovich in 1975, and originally set up as a mixed group of scholars, executives, educators and private citizens to communicate to the 1976 presidential candidates the public's view on key national issues.

At that time they presented a concise discussion of the public's point of view on some vital issues namely, inflation and unemployment, moral leadership and their view of how national interest should be defined in foreign policy.

Following the election, many felt the PAF served a great purpose and saw a need to establish its permanence. A feasibility study was done to determine the public's reaction to such an organization. At the outset, the response was favorable.

In June of 1977, Villanova's own Dr. John Immerwahr, assistant professor of Philosophy, became involved with the PAF and worked with them through the fall semester of this school year. He currently works for the Foundation part-time while teaching Philosophy at VU.

While the issues may have changed somewhat, Immerwahr suggests that we need that communication between the government and the people. "The mechanisms are there to let the government know what the public thinks. We have tremendous tools in market research and communication. People just aren't in touch with the decisions that effect their lives and that is a definite problem."

Repeatedly, when the country confronts an important national issue, it seems the nation's leaders consult among themselves disregarding public opinion. The public is never afforded the opportunity to think through the choices because the real choices are never thoroughly presented.

The Foundation feels the public's right can only be insured through a four-step process. First, they must deal with a limited number of complex issues, both domestic and international.

Second, these issues must be communicated so clearly that the public is able to "work through" how it really feels about the alternatives.

Third, these feelings can only be discovered through in-depth interviews and surveys. Lastly, the public's value choices must be conveyed to the policymakers so they will avoid considering only the advice of technicians and special interest groups.

The PAF feels the public is entitled to at least as effective representation in public policy-making as the technicians and special interest groups.

If the setting is right for a true dialogue between the American public and our leaders, the public will carry on its side of the dialogue intelligently.

Do I Have A Story!

By DAVE DEAR

By now you have probably spotted some of us around campus, we're pretty hard to miss. Don't worry, there is no need to be alarmed of a rare skin disease infecting scores of students. And the rumors of our bodies being snatched by aliens are altogether false. Rather we are those hardy souls who either braved traffic on I-95 or flew the friendly skies in search of the ultimate tan. The basketball team travelled to Pittsburgh, the track team ran to Detroit, but in order to keep one of Villanova's longest traditions alive, some of us trucked off to the Sunshine State, to bask in the sun along the sandy shores and imbibe in the local saloons.

Once again the Florida stories grapevine their way through the classrooms and dining halls about such cultural activities such as chugging, wet tee-shirts, basketball shootouts and banana eating contests. But there are more tales than these, for instance, the art of "gatoring" was introduced to poor young things who happened across the territory of carnivorous gators, which lurked the shallows. And seniors actually tossed their fellow classmates into swimming pools, a heretofore sophmoric prank certainly. The most scandelous of all, and don't tell the Board of Trustees, was that some of us shared the same hotels with members of the opposite sex. Horrors! And what about grown men eating beer bottles, and others lathering themselves with shaving cream just to win a few bottles of magic party juice. I tell you it's amazing what a spring break can do to otherwise studious college minded young men and women.

Having been a veteran of the Fort Lauderdale excursion of last year I was well aware of what was to come. Seven-footer bouncers asking for one, two, three and even four dollar cover charges. Happy hours that last two hours. And no-room-to-disco discos. Tow trucks that steal your car for $60 just because you park in the hotel owners space. The Poop Deck, A buck seventy-five for Miller. And policepersons that enforce such rules as, "Groups of four or more are not allowed to congragate."

Let me tell you it's tough keeping up a tradition. The track and basketball teams think they had it hard. Did they get sunburned? Did they get sand in their beer? I seriously doubt it. And while their contests are a single event we had to endure a week long battle. Let's hope that by next year those same souls will be rested enough to keep a very important tradition going.

Project: Sunshine Lights Up Campus

By SANTO D. MARABELLA

After a few semesters absence, Villanova's volunteer program is beginning "to make-the-scene" here on campus. And what a scene! The program has been given a face-lift that includes a new name, and a new enthusiasm, which is strong enough to revive it, permanently.

Officially established as Project: Sunshine, the volunteer program has its headquarters in the Office of Social Actions Program, Tolentine 121. The purpose of Project: Sunshine is to involve the students of Villanova in an experience which results in both spiritual and personal growth.

Quite simply, Project: Sunshine works like this, a student expresses an interest in going out into the community and working with, or for, the shut-ins (the physically or mentally ill, the elderly, the imprisoned), and any others in the community who are in need. The prospective volunteer is interviewed to determine where and when he can work as a volunteer. After deciding what he will do as a volunteer, the volunteer is then placed in an institution or organization which guarantees him the "ideal atmosphere" for whatever type of volunteer services he will be performing.

Project: Sunshine was introduced to Villanova students last month via an information table in Dougherty. It was a three-day effort to recruit volunteers by having students sign-up for an interview. Despite negative reactions from some of the students, like "Are you kidding, me a volunteer? I don't have time!," over thirty students did sign up. For those who jeered the idea of becoming a volunteer, Social Actions says, "No, we're not kidding. You, a volunteer. TIME is not the important factor. It's, what you do in the time you give, that counts."

The first major activity that will be sponsored by Project: Sunshine is one that requires involvement, cooperation, and people-power from, the entire Villanova Community. This activity is the First-Annual Sunshine Day, Saturday, April 28, a planned "day of fun" for one hundred, or so, handicapped, mentally retarded, and orphaned children of the community. Perhaps, next semester, the aged will be Villanova' guests for a day. The important thing is that Villanova University is actively taking part in bringing some sunshine to the shut-ins of the community.

Many of the social and academic societies on campus have already been approached for their assistance in this endeavor, and have been very positive in their responses. To date, the Villanova associations which have, in some way or another, pledged their support are the ANS, RSA, ASCE, LXA, APO, and the Union.

This is where this article brings us: SUPPORT. Sunshine Day needs you. One hundred children, less fortunate than yourself, need you. People-power is needed to serve as partners for the children, work the refreshments, entertain, and recreate with the kids. It's funny, how in recruiting volunteers, it is always the girls who are the first to sign up. In fact, few guys sign up at all. It must be taboo, or "uncool" for a guy to volunteer some of his time for others. But, it's the contrary that is true. The best way for a guy to "cruise successfully" with girls and friends, in general, is to take off the "tough-guy" mask, and let people know what is really in his heart. After all, is it "uncool" to admit that you care about others?

So, before you start to think of all the reasons why you cannot help with Sunshine Day, think of one reason why you SHOULD help with Sunshine Day. If you find you're stuck for words, there are about a hundred kids who would certainly be willing to help you out!

For more information, contact: Santo D. Marabella — Project: Sunshine Co-ordinator, Social Actions Program (121 Tolentine/Ext 378), before Friday, March 23.

It's not too late to sign up with your Placement Office for a personal interview with our recruitment staff. We will be on campus MARCH 21-22 with the latest on available Peace Corps & VISTA assignments. We look forward to talking with you and answer the questions you may have. Our recruiters were at one time Peace Corps & VISTA volunteers.

VISTA VOLUNTEERS IN SERVICE TO AMERICA

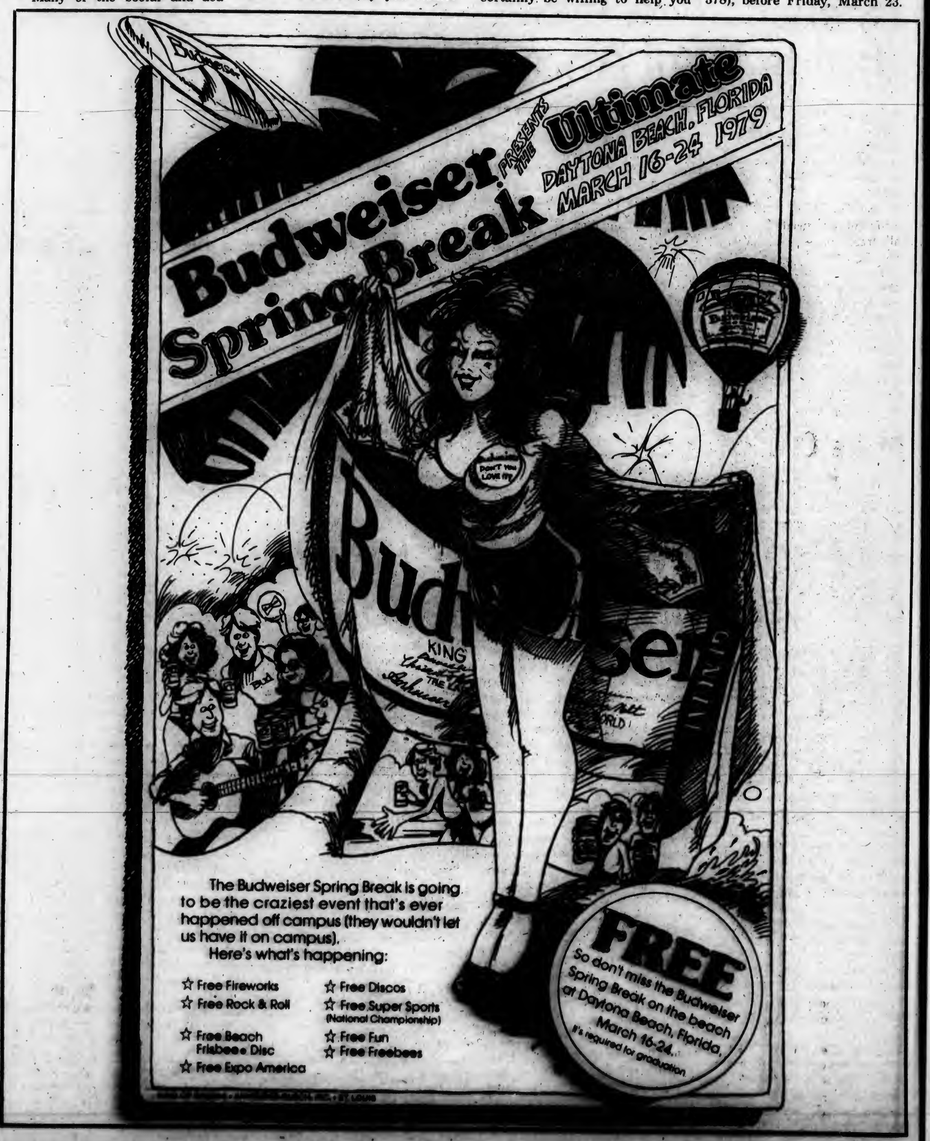
English Dept. Conf

On Saturday, March 10, in the Law School complex, Garey Hall, the Villanova English Department and the Delaware Valley Writing Council co-sponsored a full day's conference on writing titled, "A Workshop Conference on the Teaching of Writing: Grade School Through Graduate School."

Donald Murray of the University of New Hampshire delivered the keynote address, "Why Teachers Should Write," later Joseph McGowan, English Department Chairperson, welcomed the audience of over one hundred teachers of writing from the Delaware Valley. Murray, a Pulitzer Prize winner for editorial writing in the Boston Herald and author of A Writer Teaches Writing, also led three different workshops on the theme, "The Composing Process."

Seven themes, each composed of three one hour and fifteen minute workshops, were handled by speakers who mixed theory with practice by sharing handouts, assigning writing topics and moderating discussions involved with various aspects, modes and functions of writing, writers and teachers of writing. George Murphy and Thomas Martinez from the English Department conducted two such workshops on "Functional Writing" and "Evaluating Compositions" respectively.

Martinez, one of three co-ordinators for the proceedings, said that the day went smoothly and the participants seemed to appreciate the ideas and materials they gathered from each workshop. He also indicated that the visitors were quite impressed by Garey Hall's facilities and the luncheon. Joseph Blimm, Olive Ledlie, Joan Phelan and Paul Wood from the English Department were in attendance and ably assisted Martinez throughout the day.



Election Supplement '79: Candidates Redux

Introducing Your Next S.G.A. President

P.J. Winterhalter

There comes time when problems of the past must be carefully analyzed and acted upon. However, for a complete analyzation, one must have an understanding of just what the problems are, and the proper means of finding answers to them.

Next Thursday the students of Villanova will be asked to choose those whom they think will best fulfill the leadership positions of our University, those who will guide us around these problems.

My name is P.J. Winterhalter, and I am running for the office of Student Body President. As previously mentioned, in order to achieve success in combating the problems which face us one must know the proper roads to take. I know the roads, I am aware of the obstacles they contain, and I know how to get around them. I am the only Senator from this year that will be returning. I have the experience not only through being on the Senate, but also through the various committees on which I have served: Academic Policy, Executive Committee of the SGA, Chairman of the Subcommittee Reconstruction of APC, and I have recently been working on developing the A & S Council, only to name a few. The President of our University should not come out of the cold, he must have experience. I have the experience prerequisite for the job.

As President I will strive to improve the areas of concern which are lacking attention at our University. This year the budget is a big question; next year again it will be the same. This year I will work hard with Senate to combat the enormous 10% tuition increase imposed upon the students; next year, as a leader, I will guide the student representatives into an assault prepared still more efficiency against this annual headache.

I feel the Board of Trustees, which holds all the strings to pull, must be dealt with in a different way than in the past. Communication must be greatly facilitated; past efforts for this have come up short. This must be a top priority issue — if anything is to accomplished this line of communication must really work. The other problems, such as visitation, the entire student life package, alcohol policy, etc., will fall into place thereafter.

I have the experience to do the job, and, furthermore, to do a good job. But more importantly, I will stand tall and speak out for the ideas that we believe in. This is our University, we make it what it is. You need my help, but first I need yours.

Vote P.J. Winterhalter on Election Day, Thursday, March 22.

Ray Bauso

In the upcoming election, the student body of this university will have the opportunity to elect the same lackluster, bland government which has represented us for such a long period of time, or we can elect the Student Government officials who have the attitude and ideas to put some movement into the Second Floor of Dougherty Hall. For too long the students of this university have been settling for second-best, and, at times, for leadership which has been far below par. It is my contention that the student government of Villanova should not be the complacent lacky of the administration. The student government here needs fresh ideas, fresh faces, and most of all, fresh concepts of the way the student's ideas and needs should be brought out and listened to by an administration which is deaf to the students' ideas when it wishes not to hear it.

As a political science major, I find myself most capable to deal with the administration in a political fashion. I am an active member in politics in Philadelphia, and I believe that my political experience has taught me what it takes to deal with the administration in making the students' ideas become reality. I focus my attention on the needs of the student as a commuter and as a resident. I find it incomprehensible that a commuter, after spending a total of $3500.00 tuition money, must spend an additional $25.00 to $30.00 for parking which is non-existent, and during the winter becomes a skating rink. I find it incomprehensible that a resident, after spending $1500.00 to live in a dormitory of this major university, must live in an unkempt, security-less building, which proves that our money is going other places besides for student services. My main thrust is to find out how every cent of our tuition money is spent, and to make more services available to the student so he can see some signs of an increase in our heretofore non-existent student service.

I find the lack of communication to be an area which needs considerable attention by the president. It is the president's responsibility to inform the students of the progress of their S.G.A. officials. This is something which has been lacking for the past two years in our student government. I wish to break that archaic barrier and report to the student body, in every Villanovan issue, the progress of your elected officials.

It is impossible for me to list all of my objectives as your Student Body President. However, I feel as if I have given you a brief synopsis of the ideas that I have, and the motivation which my administration would have. I feel that with the help of my friends, the students, we can work in harmony to make the voices of the students heard. I intend to change the concept of the S.G.A. into the Student Body Association, where every students' voice will be heard. When we vote, I hope that each student will vote for a Man of Action; A Man for all the Students.

Mike O'Connor

Student Body President is a position of tremendous influence and authority. From it the university can be made to respond to the various needs of all the individuals who compromise the Villanova community. It is a selection which must not be taken lightly, (as it unfortunately has been in some of the past years).

The government of Villanova has been notoriously inefficient! This is due not entirely to the student representatives, however some of the blame "is" theirs. Some fault also lies with the student body in general; it has not always seen a need or felt that the SGA was a worthwhile organization. The SGA however has come of age.

Villanova is presently faced with more vital and controversial issues than it has ever seen before. This year the Board of Trustees will act on visitation once and for all. A new student center is being erected in the midst of our campus, yet if we do not act on it we will lose control of this center to the administration. Also, the budget again surfaces as a major issue, why is this? Why does the budget take precedent over all other aspects of student life? Because student representatives never take sufficient time to resolve its needs.

This is also a time when we the students must plan for the future and part of our future lies in the Morris Estates. Yet, just two weeks ago the Board of Trustees told the university to no longer seek a zoning ordinance for those buildings. The result, the housing situation is as bad as it ever was, while its answer lies right on our campus.

Finally I will seek to unify the self defeating branches of student government into a single manageable and efficient unit. To do this I want to bring the various aspects of student government such as the RSA and Assembly together. By doing so, the senate will be more in touch with the needs of the students and more responsive to their desires.

My leadership and organizational skills have been developed through experience in the RSA and as a member of the Board of Trustees Development and Public Relation Committee. With this background I feel certain that I can help the students of Villanova make it all it could be, but first I need your help so, Vote With Honor, Vote O'Connor, No. 2 on the Ballot.

Ken Fody

I'm running for President because I'm sick and tired of some of the things that are occurring, here at Villanova. I'm tired of hearing about student apathy. I'm tired of the bad attitudes, and cliquishness which exist. And I'm tired of seeing my tuition go up, and not being told why.

All of these can be changed quite simply with a little communication. Student apathy exists because the S.G.A. has not, in the last three years, made any serious attempt to enlist student support. Nor have they had any communications with the students, outside of comments in the Villanovan. If the tuition goes up, the students deserve to know why it's going up, and what they are getting for their money. The students deserve a chance to accept or reject the increase, and fight it if they wish. And the only way that the S.G.A. can do this, is to get out of their office and meet the students that they are supposed to represent.

Inherent with this need for communication, is a need for other changes to come about. For one, the S.G.A. has to emphasize serving the students more. And it has to be realized that there are more ways to do this than just sitting in the University Senate. The Student Government will have to realize that, it has to do whatever it takes to get a problem solved, even if it has to do the work itself. This will require an active, innovative, and hard working S.G.A. And it requires student support.

I'm tired of people telling me that there is nothing we can do. That's a lot of garbage. When I meet freshmen who tell me that they don't even know that the S.G.A. is, I tend to think that there is not a lack of support, but a lack of effort. We can get just about anything we want if we all work together. But first, we need some leadership from the student government. I think that I can provide that leadership. I think that together we can get things done, and if we can't it won't be for lack of effort.

VOTE FOR KEN FODY — HE'LL WORK FOR A CHANGE.

Election Supplement '79:
Candidates Redux

For Arts Senator . . .

Tony Cofone

I am prompted to run for Arts Senator for a number of reasons. Chiefly because I am capable of initiating the change and following through with the legislation and leadership that was intended to be part of the senate from its inception. Instead of serving as the active responsible body it was designed to be, the senate has fallen to be nothing more than a sounding board to give approval to administrative policy. This must end.

The key to solving the problems of the senate lies in the area of communication, especially communication between the student body and its representatives. It is time for the student leaders to stop guessing what our needs and desires are. I propose that student senators go out to the students and ask what they want, and not sit back and guess..

Far too long student representatives have fallen back on titles and have been content just to have something for their resumes. I want to change this attitude because there are too many critical areas and issues which must be dealt with.

— Visitation will be voted on in September by the trustees.

— A line must be held on the budget now, let's get the administration used to a fight.

— We need an alcohol policy to stimulate campus life.

— Let's have the students running that Center, and not some dean.

So on election day, VOTE TONY COFONE for Arts Senator and together we will get things done.

Jerry Dougherty

A candidate's platform statement usually contains promises to accomplish goals or eliminate evils. My platform shall not because it cannot.

Political promises are in theory based on one's power to make or participate in making policy decisions; yet if I am elected to the University Senate the only power available to me will be that of suggestion, of persuasion, since with the exception of the University budget the Senate has no constitutional power to determine policy.

The Senate's almost total lack of decision-making power is a problem of paramount importance; senators who take office with the belief that they can in some way determine a range of University policy often leave disillusioned. Promises of change made by candidates are impossible to keep. Student apathy is the inevitable result; but apathy only leads to the weakening of our already feeble voice.

I propose that there should be formed an organization of persons interested in having the constitution of the Senate amended to give it more power to formulate policy.

As a commuting student who drives twenty miles to and from campus, I know Villanova must move to reflect its position as a university which has more commuters than residents enrolled; commuters and residents should be integrated into a feeling of one community. For now, commuters need a voice in the Senate.

My platform embodies the beliefs I hold, beliefs that I will express as a senator who is soberly aware of the realities of the University Senate.

Mark Zappy

It's election time again and I would venture the guess that the majority of Villanova students don't care. It's fair to say this because only a small majority of students voted last year. Why is this? How can it be that the majority of students don't care what goes on with the most important link between themselves and the administration? Answer: The students feel alienated from most of the decisions that affect them. The decisions are made by other students who are supposed to represent them, but if you or your friends have never been asked for an opinion, how well is your student government representing you?

I can't make any promises to you regarding major changes in Villanova's social and academic policies because we all know they've been made before and never kept. What I can promise you is to represent you not by sitting in an office waiting for you to come see me, but by coming to the students when a decision regards them. If the decision concerns the occupants of a particular area or the student body as a whole, I will go to them and ask them how they want me to vote. I will do this by conducting a survey in the particular area involved or in places where large numbers of students congregate.

In my opinion, one of the most important responsibilities of a senator is to remain a student in the flow of student life. To me, being a senator is not hiding on the second floor of Dougherty but relating directly to the students whose feelings I represent. Remember, a vote for me is a vote for yourself.

Jim Agnew

The office of senator in the College of Arts and Sciences is a position of leadership, pride and duty. It takes someone with experience in student goverment, to step in and take charge. Jim Agnew is the candidate with the positive ideas and the know-how to turn these ideas into university policy.

Jim is a junior Political Science major, is a member of the University Senate Budget Committee and Board of Trustees Standing Committee on Investments, Jim Agnew has a solid background in universities financial affairs.

"The Budget is the cornerstone of the University, everything revolves around it, student life, academics, sports and tuition. The budget must meet the needs of the students. Students should not be programmed to meet the needs of the budget."

Tuition must not be allowed beyond astronomical proportions. How many of us can afford another increase? Student tuition pays for too high a percentage of the university operating expenses. Some of this money must come from outside sources, local industry and business can be a good place to start. "Much of my time will be spent working on school financial matters to make sure we get the best education possible."

In the coming year we must strive to break down the communication barriers between students and administrators. Student organization must work together in a joint effort to increase student involvement. Campus organization such as R.S.A., Villanova Union, Fraternities and sororities can stimulate student interest and increase social life on campus. Programs such as Catch-19 must keep going strong, along with the Connelly Center Development.

Jim Agnew is the leader Arts and Sciences needs now. Positive ideas grow from student feedback. Speak your mind. Vote for JIM AGNEW A & S SENATOR "LEADERSHIP NOW."

Dave Dear

While campaigning for Arts Senator a number of students asked me, "What does the Senate do?" This seems to be a fair question considering the little progress ole V.U. has made over the past 100 years.

To inform those that aren't aware of the Senate's functions, I'm going to fill you in. The Senate consists of twelve faculty members, twelve administrators and two alumni representatives. This 38 member group formulates policy and designates future directions which the school will take. These decisions are forwarded to the President and the Board of Trustees for approval or veto.

Therefore, the University Senate is one of three most important branches of University politics. This is the organization where student voices should be heard most emphatically. Since students hold twelve very significant votes their opinions must be outspoken and their voting representative of their peers. I wonder how often they are willing to voice their gut feelings.

It seems they haven't done the job when you hear of tuition and room increases. This is the same organization that can't seem to balance the budget. Students can't sit and accept these incidents as facts of life any longer. I certainly can't tolerate them. If the school wants more from my wallet and at the same time lacks quality education, extra-curricular and resident facilities, they're going to hear about it first. If you feel you're missing out on a superior education, a visitation policy, a social life then place your vote for Dave Dear, For Arts Senator, because I'm just about fed up, and I'm willing to shout about it.

Nancy Rooney

The position of Arts Senator involves two major responsibilities: to provide student representation in the formulation of University-wide policies and to serve the Arts constituency in particular.

On the university level, several important issues will be confronted in the coming year: the University's means of raising revenue; budget priorities; the renewal of the current visitation policy; and the effectiveness of the present governmental system. Sudents must contribute their imput for any new policies to be viable. The key to student effectiveness lies in articulate, well-researched, and specific proposals formed through consultation with faculty and administration. Senators must recognize their duties to carefully study proposals, to faithfully perform committee work and to combine assertiveness with conscientiousness.

In the Arts area, student leadership has been markedly absent. Since the Arts College is not bound by the definitive standards imposed by a professional accreditation agency, student imput is essential to give direction on academic issues, such as the curriculum, grading policies, and the quality of teaching. An Arts and Science joint council is currently being formed and it will be the new senators responsibility to lead this organization. In addition, I would propose more student participation on the departmental level. Student leadership is essential to provide impetus and promote unity within the Arts College.

Several specific issues demand immediate attention in the Arts area. I would recommend an examination of the content of the core requirements to insure the quality of an Arts education. The academic advisement process, especially for underclassmen, requires drastic improvement. On the more practical level, the Career Development Center must increase career counseling and job opportunities for the Arts graduate.

Effective student government is possible at Villanova. Initiative, not reaction, and well-reasoned proposals, not protests, are the means for change.

Election Supplement '79:
Candidates Redux

For Science Senator . . .

Paul Reuscher

The position of Science Senator is a new one, though promised to science students for some time it is only now being implemented. As such it is vital that you, the science students of Villanova, start this new program with a loud and clear voice.

As a third year BSG major I have seen the areas of change that are required to elevate the life of science students at Villanova. My attendence at senate meetings has shown me that there is a general disregard for really important issues and time is rather wasted on trivial matters of rules and order or the creation of committees to look into matters that will never get decided.

As the new science senator I would like to see the granting of business concentrations opened to the entire school. Also I would like to see an expansion of the University's computer facilities, eventually leading to a major in computer sciences.

Aside from these I am also anxious to make headway in the struggle for a clear and workable visitation policy for the entire campus. I also feel that it is time for the student senators to start questioning the allocation of money and the areas of waste in the budget.

I firmly believe that together we can make these goals a reality, but first I need your help. So remember on March 22nd to vote for responsible leadership and a new era for the science student VOTE PAUL REUSCHER NO. 2 ON THE BALLOT.

Hugh McNally

The Student Government Association at Villanova University has the potential to be a strong and influential body within the school. However, this goal can not be fully attained until a certain amount of cooperation within the school is established. This entails cooperation between the Administration, faculty and the student body. As your senator, I will be in contact with all these groups, but especially the students, so that your ideas, opinions, and complaints may be heard by our Student Government Association.

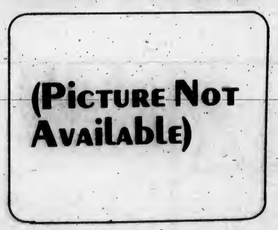
Having had experience both as a commuter and a resident student, I feel that I will be more suited to serve the diverse student body here at Villanova. This is especially important because the entire student population will be represented, rather than a small, select group being heard while the majority's opinions go unheard.

There are immediate and long-range problems within the university which need to be addressed. The most pressing problems seem to be increasing tuition, the alcohol policy, visitation, increased parking and the lack of social life, for both on and off campus residents. While most students are aware and concerned, one may feel helpless in fighting the situation. I hope to help remedy the problems as your senator.

Villanova University is not perfect and probably never will be so. However the prime purpose of the SGA is to initiate constructive change without sacrificing the existing quality of life here at school. Make sure you vote on March 22nd. I need your help to aid me in the bettering of our school, Villanova University.

For C&F Senate . . .

Henry Amoroso



I am running for C&F senator with the hope of challenging and changing a much too bureaucratic system. It shall be my underlying goal to return to the students of Villanova their university. This task shall be a difficult one, but with persistance and determination it can be accomplished. Some of the areas I shall address myself to are:

Visitation — visitation seemingly should be a simple issue, but it isn't. It is a vital part of our education and most certainly a vital part of our lives. I plan to propose a policy that would extend visitation hours on the weekend and into the week. This effort to change visitation shall be difficult, however with student support and unification it will be accomplished.

Commuters — The alienation between commuter and Villanova is a gap much too large. It shall be a continued effort to establish increased commuter input and to provide commuters with a more social atmosphere. We must insist that the administration and senate recognize this alienation and address it. I favor a package that would put forth increased representation for commuters.

Our goals are high but they are within reach. We must challenge the red tape and our bureaucratic double-talk and set forth the facts as they are. We must no longer permit the administration to deny us our college years nor permit them to legislate our lives. We all reserve the right to freedom of speech and we must exercise it untiringly. We are a silent majority and time has come for us to be heard. I shall represent the students and not the administration. I ask that you help me so that I can help you. Please vote HENRY AMOROSO for C&F senator.

Cathy Olanich

One campaign platitude I'm sure everyone is tired of hearing is the ever-popular lament, "We need more student participation in the SGA." After all, everyone knows that more participation is needed — not just in the SGA, but in all aspects of Villanova student life. Yet the question of why this participation is lacking seems to receive little serious attention.

I have served on the SGA's Lobbying and Opinion Poll Committee and the RSA's Organization and Development Committee. I have acted as coordinator of the RSA's Communications Committee. I have attended Senate meetings, and discussed various issues with several student senators. The observations I've made of our student government in this manner have convinced me that student apathy is largely the product of a sense of helplessness — a feeling that nothing can be changed. Small wonder, when you consider the number of necessary restrictions the University places on our social and academic activities. Visitation policy is the obvious example; but others abound, such as the lack of alternative meal plans and the limits on double majors, a definite obstacle for an ambitious student.

You can count on me to wholeheartedly support any change in policy that will result in an increased number of choices for the Villanova student, such as the expansion of commuter facilities or the establishment of an M.B.A. program. But most importantly, I will always stand for increasing student clout; a reform that would diminish all other problems, including that of the budget.

Give me a chance to work for YOU, the student. VOTE CATHY OLANICH FOR C & F SENATE.

Emilio Dilorio

Hi, I'm a sophomore Accounting major, and I would do anything to get my picture in the paper. Before I say anything or make any promises, I have to admit that this position will be quite frustrating to me, because of all the rules and regulations that limit all of us at Villanova in one way or another.

To tell you the truth, I really don't want to talk out of my ass in this letter, but I have a few tricks up my sleeve. Tops on my plans to help the social life and character at Villanova is the future student center — there is a lot of room for student action in this area. I feel that since the student center is not complete yet, quite a few things could be maneuvered towards our direction. Besides the student center, there are still many loopholes to work through, as a Senate member here at V.U., because I know that there are always complaints.

See, now I cannot eliminate all complaints, but there is nothing to lose by trying to, as a Senator.

I have experience here and there in University organizations of all kinds, and I realize that I am "into" this school pretty much. That's why I would like to satisfy people here, so you can all enjoy Villanova and get your money's-worth here by all means.

I could ramble on here, but I'll cut it before I get in trouble for something I write.

Another thing, the college of Commerce & Finance has a lot to offer — better information systems would be a key here. That is just one point.

I have a lot of ideas, but what good are ideas? They take a lot of work to implement: I'm willing to work.

Perhaps we will have a more radical voice on issues next year, I'm going to lean that way. Thanks for your time in reading this nonsense. I will talk to you during my campaigning.

Dean Valente

My involvement in student affairs has covered the many facets of student life. Through exposure to a broad spectrum of student activities I realize the numerous problems that exist within the Villanova Community. My experience includes, among others, Vice-President of the Student Government Association, Area Chairman of the RSA in Stanford and a Representative on the University Senate Social Action Committee.

Election Supplement '79:

Candidates Redux

As Vice-President of the SGA I strongly supported the development of a comprehensive commuter meal plan. I have also initiated the reintroduction of Grievance Hearings, so that all students may have a forum to voice their problems with the University.

As a member of the Board of Trustees standing committee on student affairs, I am strongly concerned with student representation on such committees. I believe it is essential to the University Policy making process that the students maintain a voice within the Board of Trustees. This representation should not be denied students. I am extremely concerned with the attempts of some Board members to stop visitation at Villanova.

As Senator, student and Committee member I will always fight for more student privileges. Those privileges not only include visitation, but also a workable alcohol policy for both the University and the State.

Currently I am actively involved in formulating a new Student Bill of Rights.

This Bill of Rights strongly reflects my belief in the need for a more independent and well informed student body.

I feel it is imperative that more students become involved in Student Government. As a Senator, my experience and efforts will be focused on these problems and with cooperation solve them.

On March 22, vote for DINO VALENTE for C&F SENATE.

Dave Blachly

Student Government has had the potential to become an effective force within the structure of Villanova University. The SGA has proved that it can unite the student body as a whole, and address itself in an effective manner to some of the issues that are of concern to all of those in the University community. Yet, somehow it has failed in its mission to sustain this interest.

My name is David Blachly, and if elected Commerce and Finance Senator, I will work to my utmost ability to promote student involvement in all areas of decision-making at Villanova and to raise the awareness of the student body in regard to political, social and educational issues within our University.

As a current Vice-President of the SGA and member of the Student Life Committee of the University Senate, I have become acutely aware of the problems and hardships which individuals within Villanova encounter in regard to tuition, room and board, and problems with Student Life.

I think it is important that the Villanova community encourage the Board of Trustees to take a more active role in helping to relieve the unjustified financial burden placed on the student body, and faculty. I also support an active expansion of the visitation policy to include weekday visitation rights as policy.

With my experience in the SGA and as a Dorm President, I feel that I have gained the experience that will prove to be valuable in dealing with Senate matters. I want to encourage the realization among students that they are a distinct group with common interests and that they have the right to be heard, and I hope that you will vote for DAVID BLACHLY AS YOUR C&F SENATOR.

For Engineering

Senator . . .

Martin Badewitz

I am running for Engineering Senator because there is a job that needs to be done, and up to now no one has done it. Every year promises are made and people elected and inevitably nothing is accomplished. I believe I can change this. I am convinced that the senate can be made to work and function responsibly for the students it is designed to represent.

I plan not only to work for the college of engineering but rather to help the University as a whole and attempt to integrate the school of Engineering more fully in the day to day life of Villanova. I want to see an expanded curriculum for the engineer, especially in the area of business electives. Also I would like to see the involvement of commuters expanded, they represent the largest single block of students at Villanova yet they receive the least of all. This is not to say that the residents don't have areas of need also. In their favor I want to see a comprehensive and reasonable alcohol policy go into effect next fall at the latest.

But to accomplish these goals I need your help, not just in making me your senator but by electing other competent, responsible and dynamic representatives. I ask everyone to look to the new faces this year, turn out the old ineffective leaders and usher in a new age. Help me make it work VOTE NO. 2 ACROSS THE BALLOT.

For Nursing

Senator . . .

Mignon Miller

Students, you and I make Villanova. Therefore, we must be aware of what is being done in all areas of our University. Many of us feel we are knowledgeable of the working of Villanova, but we should expand our knowledge and offer our ideas for change.

As a nursing student I realize that you, my fellow students, may have busy schedules which may not allow you to actively seek out the details of the changes taking place. I would like to help in expanding your knowledge. Communication, as we all know, is important and I hope to make the channels more open to you.

Student input and involvement in the growth of Villanova is a paramount issue which needs much improvement. The College of Nursing is a valuable segment of Villanova and our input, as students, would be of great value. We have already shown that by working together we can initiate positive changes. Each of us has a contribution we can make at Villanova to better it as a whole. Together, we can work to solve the problems which exist.

Having been involved in the S.G.A. for two years and the University Senate as a member of the Social Action and Academic Policy Committees, I have seen changes in the making. The University Senate has the responsibility of initiating changes which affect all of us. Issues such as visitation and tuition are areas we all, in some way, are involved in. We owe it to ourselves to let our voices be heard.

With your ideas and support I hope to be able to make a meaningful and significant contribution to the University Senate as well as to Villanova.

ANS Elections Approach

Attention all commuters! Elections for the Association of Non-Resident Students are coming up. Every commuting student is eligible to vote for their representatives and have a say in who will be elected to fill the offices of President, Vice-President and Secretary Treasurer.

Running unopposed for President is Laura Stecklair who has reigned as Vice President for the past two semesters. Laura has initiated programs into the ANS that has helped the organization to grow and expand.

Charles Poznek and Bob Uberti are running for Vice-President. Charles, a sophomore has been a member of the ANS for the past two semesters and led the way for the tee shirt sale. Bob, also a sophomore, has been a member of the Communications Committee and sits in on the Executive Board Meetings where he helps to initiate ideas and future ANS events. Bob showed his dedication for the ANS by helping to put the newsletter together that had taken weeks to do. (Zip code order, Bob?)

Running for Secretary Treasurer are David Barry, and Mary Foti. Both have been members for two semesters. Dave, a sophomore has been actively involved in the ANS while Mary, a junior, has been Chairperson of the Communications Committee for the past two semesters.

Voting is open to all commuters from freshmen to seniors. Commuters do have a say in whom is going to represent them. The balloting will coincide with the SGA's elections. So when you vote for your representatives in the Student Government, you can also vote for your representatives in the ANS.

Meet The ANS Candidates . . .

Laura Stecklair - President

As President of the Association of Non-Resident Students I intend to follow and expand the charter of this association to operate for the benefit of all commuter students. Some of the areas of operation are social functions, alleviating commuter problems, representation in student government and most importantly to make the commuter student feel that they are an intregal part of Villanova's campus life.

The campus functions which have been provided and will continue to be provided are intramural sports, social gatherings and coffee and donuts during finals.

We will continue to address the various problems faced by commuter students. Paramount among these are parking, eating and lounge facilities. Every aspect of these problem areas will be brought to the attention of the Administration. Our dialog will include suggestions to alleviate the annoyance and inconvenience the condition of these services cause the commuter student.

The ANS is dedicated to the service of the commuting students and ask for your support.

Charles Poznek - Vice President

The ANS has awesome potential. With a possible active membership of almost 3000 students, just about any goal can be realized. However, this organization is in its formative years. It needs leadership, direction, and overall organization of its members. I feel that I can provide the ideas and leadership qualities needed to bring the Association of Non-Resident students to prominence within the Villanova community.

As Vice-President, I would work diligently with the President on key matters such as recruitment and retention of new members, satisfying the needs of commuter students in all aspects of commuter life, and in general, setting the foundation for organizational involvement in years to come.

You, the commuter, hold the baton. Pass it to me and I will run the Vice-Presidential Office of the ANS for you.

Bob Uberti - Vice President

As an active member of the Association of Non-Resident Students, I have seen the organization's potential to reach for the commuters of Villanova University. With the proper guidance, this organization's voice can be directed to solving many of the problems faced by commuters.

As Vice-President of the A.N.S., I plan to guide this organization to a status where it will be both recognized and respected. Being a majority, we commuters do deserve this status.

Many people seem to think that commuters merely come to school, go to class, then go home. As a sophomore Mechanical Engineering student, I know that many off campus students spend a lot of their free time on campus; socializing, studying, and participating in activities. The problem is not that commuters are inactive, it is simply that our efforts are not joined together. As Vice-President of the A.N.S., I plan to organize our efforts and show the Villanova community that we do care, we do have ideas, and we do want to be recognized.

Mary Foti - Sec. - Treas.

The ANS is a vital student organization which provides the necessary link between the commuting student and the University. Being involved in the ANS the past two semesters will aid me greatly if elected. At present, I am the chairperson of the Communications Committee, which brings with it the responsibility of all forms of communication between the ANS and the student. As chairperson, I also sit on the Executive Committee, where policy formulation for the ANS takes place.

With the experience outlined here, I have gained an insight which has helped generate new ideas that I hope can improve the ANS. Some of these new ideas include better communications between the ANS and the student, more self-generated funding for the organization, and growth — controlled growth that will keep the ANS in pace with the University and the commuter student population.

David Barry - Sec. - Treas.

Here, at Villanova the Association of Non-Resident students is changing and growing. Change and growth must be encouraged in order to fulfill the needs of the commuting students.

The best interest of the commuters should be at the priority of this organizations activities. Their opinions should be heard, then acted upon by this organization. This action will give the commuting populations voice in the university, a voice that they need very much.

Changes in the ANS

By MARY FOTI

The Executive Committee of the ANS, led by President John Garbarino has been working on various changes in the organization as well as planning the upcoming events and initiating newer and better programs. One of the biggest changes in the charter will be seen by next semester. The Association of Non-Resident Students will be known as the Association of Commuter Students or ACS. This change has been made at the request of many of the members as well as the non-members. Many commuters feel that the term "non-resident" is more of a derrogatory term than a descriptive one. So, to initiate more positive feedback and to increase the membership, the name has been changed. In September 1979, the ANS will be known as the ACS.

From an athletic standpoint, the ANS intramural basketball team continues its winning ways. With a record of 5 wins and 0 defeats, the team is led by Don Meade, Mike Logue and high-scorer Jay Enten. Plans for the formulation of an intramural softball team to compete in the Spring are under discussion. If interested, contact Don Meade, Chairman of the Athletics Committee.

As winter has begun to leave us and spring begins to creep up, the members of the Board have lasting memories of the January's and February's when they could not get their cars started (a very common problem). The ANS will now have on hand a car repair kit for the do-it-yourself mechanic.

Fund raising has been a topic all semester. The biggest fund raiser has been the sale of tee-shirts in Bartley and Dougherty during the lunch hours. The shirts are red and white with the wildcat in a car on the front and the slogan "Villanova Commuters Do It On Wheels." They are great for the beach and make good gifts too.
